"The major effect that deafness has on a person's life is access to society," Gravel said. Since most of television is not interpreted or close-captioned, he said, much of popular culture is restricted from the deaf and hearing-impaired.

The deafs' use of American Sign Language (ASL) also excludes them from popular culture. Most schools for the deaf teach either lip reading or signed English; deaf people learn ASL only from other deaf people. In those schools, the priority is to teach people to function in society.

Most deaf people are very conservative in their political views, because the way that current topics like feminism are discussed in everyday life excludes deaf people. They don't participate in the exchanges that open peoples' minds, so their politics remain conservative, Yaffee said.

Common misconceptions anger deaf people, such as the belief that deaf people can't hear anything at all. In reality, "deaf people don't go around in a silent world," Yaffee said. The belief that deaf people can read lips from across crowded streets is also a fallacy, Gravel said. Only 30 percent of speech is visible on lips.

The schools for the deaf, Yaffee said, give graduates certification for an eighth grade education, but most deaf adults read only at a fourth grade level. The schools are controlled by hearing people, which is a "sore point" for some of the more politically active deaf people, Yaffee said. They are often run by people who see themselves as devoting their lives to "helping the deaf," instead of by those who see themselves as interpreting between two cultures.

Gravel and Yaffee, who see themselves as interpreters between cultures, said many conflicts exist between those two cultures. "Nobody will say interpreter for the deaf and hearing," but merely "interpreter for the deaf," Yaffee said.

Professors in courses will often start talking to the interpreter, who is only there to help communication between the student and professor. "It's the kind of situation where you really try to stay neutral," Gravel said. "The best thing to do is just be a communication mechanism."

Interpreting here is especially challenging because the vocabulary is so diverse. "You have to have a college degree yourself," Yaffee said, since interpreting a course like Comparative Literature may involve communicating shades of meaning to a word that a deaf person has only memorized a definition for.

There are 117,000 hearing-impaired people in Western Massachusetts, Yaffee said. The interpreters spend 25 to 30 hours a week interpreting for nine full-time deaf students and 11 deaf employees at the University, as well as running workshops to help educate hearing people. The presentation on deafness as a subculture was originally given last year as part of the Cross-Cultural Resources program. "We felt that some of these deserved a larger audience," said Judy Davis of the Office of Human Relations, which led to the office sponsoring the presentation yesterday.

Guess Who's Coming To Campus?

Representatives from Walt Disney World Co. will be on campus Tuesday, November 5, 1985 and Wednesday, November 6, 1985 recruiting for the spring session of the Walt Disney World College Program. Restricted to Leisure Studies students and Hotel/Restaurant and Travel Administration. These students who are interested in co-op should contact the office of Cooperative Education at 545-2224 for further information.

©Walt Disney Productions

Walt Disney World®

An Equal Opportunity Employer

We're Making A

All Unsold BOOKS

Are going back to the Publishers Now.

Buy Now.

MON-FRI 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

TRADER FRED'S

LABELS FOR LESS

CHECK THIS OUT!

		reg.
☐	MEN'S Cotler Shirt	$32	$14.99
☐	MEN'S Repage Cords	$48	$8.99
☐	HANDSEWN WEEKENDER Boat Shoes	$49	$24.99
☐	WOMEN'S Optimum Shirt	$24.99	$12.99
☐	WOMEN'S Forenza Jeans	$38	$15.99
☐	BRUNO VALENTI Dress Flats	$46	$18.99

Trader Fred's is working to become your Lowest Priced Clothing Store in Hampshire County.

48 North Pleasant St., Amherst Mon.-Sat. 9:30-9 Sun. 12-5 253-7155

in the new Tucker Taft Building

★Smith — continued from page 1

Students were not allowed to read the letters because the college wanted to maintain the integrity of the relationship between the school and these companies, Peterson said.

Meanwhile, Smith students are organizing several other activities to support divestment. "We are initiating a referendum to pass through the SGA and a letter writing campaign among alumnae," she said. The ethical investment committee will still maintain pressure by sending trustees newspaper clippings of the latest activities in South Africa "as a little nudge" to remind them of the urgency of the situation.

Peterson said there is also talk of a sit-in at Smith to protest the college's investments.

★halloween continued from page 1

Radzik, director of Student Security. Radzik said she could not reveal exactly how extensive the security would be in the residence halls, but said, "there will will be additional security in residence halls, and administrative staff will be watching to see how things go."

Under a new plan, approved in early September by Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson, the Campus Center/Student Union complex will be remain open for events scheduled for today through Sunday.

The Campus Center had been closed on Halloween weekends since 1979, when vandalism and arrests on Halloween night reached what University administrators had called "dangerous proportions."

WMUA PRESENTS...

EXTRAORDINARY!

A DEMONSTRATION OF...

ESP, MINDREADING and HYPNOSIS!

featuring... DAVID BENETTI

OCT. 31st 8 PM

FINE ARTS CENTER

ADMISSION $3.50

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

THE SWEET TASTE OF FALL - Jon Dowse, a senior in the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, serves a thirsty patron at the Annual Stockbridge Cider Sale yesterday outside the Student Union Building. The sale is sponsored by the Fruit and Vegetable Club.

Lecture on Mulroney is today

Glen Williams, a professor of political science from Carleton University in Ontario, Canada will speak today on Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's first year in office.

The lecture will be at 4 p.m in W-26 Machmer.

Williams, visiting as part of the Five College Canadian Studies Program, will address Mulroney's handling of political and economic problems, said George Sulzner, director of the Five College Canadian Studies Program and UMass political science professor.

Mulroney is the first Canadian Prime Minister to be elected by a large majority, Sulzner said. "Conservatives have an overwhelming majority in the Parliament, 211 seats to the Liberal Party's 40. Mulroney will be in office for a considerable period and will have time to do some long-term policy. It looks as if he'll move for future (foreign) trade and try to bring Quebec closer to Canada," said Sulzner, who coordinates the lectures and invited Williams.

Williams has taught at Carleton for seven years and has published books and articles on Canada's politics and economy. His speech is the third in the lecture series "From a Canadian Perspective" sponsored by the Five College Canadian Studies Program. The next speaker, the Canadian Ambassador to the United Nations, Steven Lewis will speak on Canada and World Affairs on Dec. 5.

—LISA BABCOCK

Daily Collegian Advertising that works!! Call: 545-3500

PHOTO: STAN SHERER

A luxurious assortment of large-bodied hand-knit sweaters in pure cotton or wool. Available now at Chona Men

CHONA MEN CONTEMPORARY FASHION FOR MEN

2ND FLOOR THORNES MARKETPLACE • 584 7901

PHOTO: STAN SHERER

Chona

Everything you want... All in one store!

THORNES MARKETPLACE • NORTHAMPTON • 584 7803

Cards Gifts Crafts

ROUTE 63 549-2667 NORTH AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 01059

1 Mile North of UMass

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION

Gas Saving Tune-up

4 Cyl $34.95

6 Cyl $39.95

8 Cyl $44.95

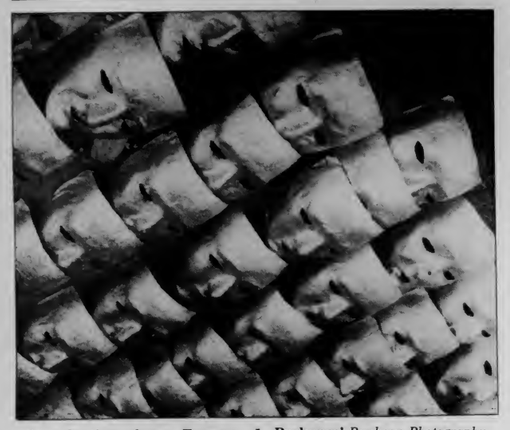
Any 4 cylinder new injection spark plugs, points & condenser, adjust idle speed, set timing, test battery and charging system, inspect rotor, distributor cap, PVC valve, ignition cables, air filter and engine vacuum. Air Filter Excludes Emission Test and Printout

Lube, Oil & Filter

$15.99

Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil and safety check

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center



Full Service Tire Store

78 Sunderland Rd. No. Amherst, MA

Across from Watrobe's Store

549-4704

ARTS

A selection from Eugene J. Prakapas' Bauhaus Photography.

BIBLIOFILE
BY BRADFORD VERTER

Bauhaus Photography (MIT Press, $30.00)

The Bauhaus, the school founded in 1919 by architect Walter Gropius, produced some of the greatest German artists of this century, such as Klee, Kandinsky, Schwitters and Gropius himself. In 1923 photographer Laszlo Moholy-Nagy joined the Bauhaus, and redirected its course to focus on the union of art and machinery. Although the Bauhaus enjoyed an existance of only 14 years (disbanded by Hitler in 1933), it could have had no more influence over German art if it had been an actual phoenix rising in Weimar from the ashes of WWI.

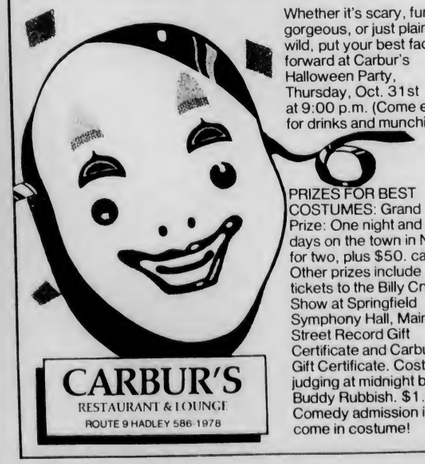
Bauhaus Photography collects over 500 photographs taken mostly between 1927-1931. They demonstrate many of the themes and qualities associated with the school such as the fascination with the interplay of vertical and horizontal and the meshing of media. Still lifes segmented by shadows from venetian blinds, portraits superimposed upon architecture, patterns in manufactured items; cigarettes, masks, mobiles, matches, chairs, bricks.

That there is experimentation is to be expected; in light and shadow, in close ups and bird's eye views, in violent contrast and subtle gradations of shade, in frame and content. Yet their approaches come always as a suprise. There is the white-clad student reflected in a ball-bearing like a fallen angel in a christmas tree decoration. There are anxious students lined up, reclining, squatting in boxes, lying in the sand. There is Lux Feininger's grotesque portrait of Johnny Schawinsky who, in the fractional seconds required by the lens to capture an image, voiced the tortured angst and unearthly decadence of a generation.

The book also collects examples of Bauhaus graphic design and photomontage. Photographs of Bauhaus architecture, furniture construction, sculpture, theater are also included, evoking a haunting and disturbing picture of the degeneration of a cultural avant garde. There are artistic manifestos and articles by members of the school, including Kallai and Moholy.

This volume would be as comprehensive as anyone could wish for, if not for a serious ommission: In his preface Eugene J. Prakapas mentions that many photographs by Bauhaus artists exist that are not reprinted here. Prakapas tells us of shots by Gropius, Klee, Lyonel Feininger, Schawinsky and Citron. Why are they not included? Prakapas doesn't say.

SURE RENT-A-CAR
Good reliable rentals at a better than fair price.
CARS, TRUCKS, VANS
Low Daily & Wknd. Rates
50 Russell St., (Rte. 9)
Hadley, Ma.
tel 584-2319
Just over Coolidge Bridge



Herrell's Ice Cream
Thomas Marketplace
Old South St. Entrance
Northampton
Open Noon 'till 11:30 Sun - Thurs
No'n 'till Midnight Fri & Sat
586-4837
Herrell's Ice Cream
The Original and Still the Best!

BEFORE YOU BUY
HALLOWEEN SUPPLIES
500 MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM GREASE PAINTS—HANDS—FEET—WITCHES' HATS AND BROOMS—WIGS—MOUSTACHES BEARDS—NOSES—FANGS—TEETH TOOTH BLACK OUT
H.L. CHILDS & SON
open daily and Saturday 8-5:15; open Thursday and Friday nights October 31-Nov. 1 until 9:00 pm
25 STATE STREET 584-2604 NORTHAMPTON

Tuesday Nov. 5 R-rated Hypnotist
World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
®adically Different ®idiculously Funny
®ichly Entertaining ®ecklessly Risque
JUSTIN RYAN'S
Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Drive

SHOW YOUR FACE
At Our 3rd Annual Costume/Comedy Night Bash!

Whether it's scary, funny, gorgeous, or just plain wild, put your best face forward at Carbur's Halloween Party, Thursday, Oct. 31st at 9:00 p.m. (Come early for drinks and munchies!)

PRIZES FOR BEST COSTUMES: Grand Prize: One night and two days on the town in NYC for two, plus $50. cash. Other prizes include tickets to the Billy Crystal Show at Springfield Symphony Hall, Main Street Record Gift Certificate and Carbur's Gift Certificate. Costume judging at midnight by Buddy Rubbish. $1.00 off Comedy admission if you come in costume!

CARBUR'S
RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 586-1978

ARTS

A little book, lots of chutzpah

Can you name all of Elizabeth Taylor's Jewish husbands?

Jewish Trivia (Quinlan Press, $7.95)

By BRADFORD VERTER
Collegian Staff

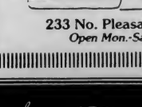
Oy, have I got a book for you!

If you love obscure and diverse information as much as I do (and by all means you should), and are sick of rereading your dog-eared Trivial Pursuit cards for the nth time, then Jewish Trivia by Jane Lenarsky, Dode B. Levenson and Barbara Wachman (Quinlan Press, $7.95) is the book you've been searching for.

Jewish Trivia (an oxymoronic title, if ever I heard one) is a wonderful compendium of facts ranging in subject matter from Biblical lore to sports averages (a distinction not made by everyone). Subjects include entertainment, history, geography and, of course, Tradition. There is also a 20 page section of photographs for the visually inclined.

The questions cover a spectrum of difficulties. There are a few giveaways, such as "Where did Noah's ark land?" and "Name the five Marx brothers," and "What are the three meanings of the word shalom?"' But there are some real doozies. The name matching parts are the toughest. Sure, Bob Dylan is Mark Zimmerman, that's pretty common. But did you know Ann Landers real name is Esther P. Freedman? Or that Peter Lorre was once Laszlo Lowenstein? Too much!

One of the authors, Dode Levenson, is a UMass junior. The son of a rabbi, he was too bashful to comment on the book. According to his sister Ilana, a sophomore at UMass, the book is selling very well since it was first published in May, and is now in its third printing. "They carry it in the University Bookstore," she confided.



One of the reader's comments on the back of the book is by Andrew Gershon of Washington DC who says, "I can't wait for Jewish Trivia II! "My response, Mr. Gershorn, is: Ditto.

Another reader said, "When I first got the book, my roommates and I spent half the night asking each other questions." Ditto, ditto, ditto, ditto . . .

Hampshire Mall
Hadley, Ma
586-6053
SHOES Boot
10% OFF
Coupon
ANY NON-SALE MERCHANDISE WITH STUDENT I.D. AND THIS COUPON
Coupon Expires 11-15-85
Coupon

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
In the Carriage Shops, Amherst, since 1975!
On-Campus & Apartment Delivery Available • 549-6314
•Overstuffed Sandwiches
•Foot-Long Subs
•Fresh Soups & Salads
•Bagels & Lox
•N.Y. Cheesecake

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
233 No. Pleasant St., Amherst • 549-6314
Open Mon.-Sat., 9 a.m.- 10 p.m. ...Sun., 9-6

Season's Sunday Brunch Buffet
It's your choice and what a choice! Season's specialties from traditional Bacon & Eggs to Seafood Casseroles to Scrumptious Desserts. Season's Sunday Buffet from Eleven to Three only $7.95
All major credit cards accepted
Experience the Joy of Dining with family and friends at Season's
529 Belchertown Road Amherst (413) 253-9909

The Special Charm of One of a Kind Jewelry
Plus quality repair of all types and styles of jewelry. Remounting and resetting also done.
J. AUSTIN JEWELER
on the common, amherst, 253-3986
mon.-sat. 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Fresh Breads and Croissants Baked Daily
THE CHEESE SHOP
79 Main Street, across from Plumbleys
Imported Cheeses Coffee Beans
Bulk Tea Fresh Pasta
Delicious Giant Cookies and other Baked Goods
Gourmet Groceries
Daily until 6; Saturday until 5; Sundays 9-1

ARTS

Chelmsford band finds a logo

University art department is instrumental

By DANIEL HONIG
Collegian Correspondent

A band called Fantini has found a name logo - in the graphic arts department at the University of Massachusetts.

In an interesting move, the members of the Chelmsford based band, decided to have students in Professor Herb Paston's graphic arts class design their logo. The one chosen by the band was designed by Nancy Yarborough.

The band, at first, looked into various graphic design agencies in Boston and found some they thought to be very impressive. However, two of the band members, who are UMass alumni, had heard good things about the school's art department.

They decided to give graphic art students a try at designing a logo.

"We wanted it to be a learning experience for the students, but it would also serve our needs," said Todd Fantini, one of the band's guitarists.

Todd got in touch with Herb Paston, professor of graphic design in the art department. Todd explained the situation to Paston, and Paston was eager to participate with his class. The Fantinis wanted their music, ideas and style to be reflected in the logo, and were very happy with the final result.

"It has a certain flair about it, a cool sort of style...Something that could stay with us for a long while," Todd said.

The logo has a contemporary style and is indeed reflective of the musical and artistic styles of the band members.

"Although our music is different from bands like Duran Duran, the music and band personalities lend themselves to that sophistication of fashion and high tech, dance, rock music," Todd said.

Fantini began playing in 1979, and within a short time began to draw large crowds as they toured the New England area. Mark, the band's second guitarist, was only 10 years old at the time, when they were drawing crowds. The other members are Steffan Fantini, on keyboards, and Arron Williams, playing percussion. On tour and in the studio, Fantini hires drummers.

Their popularity grew and by 1984 they had played over 70 private schools, 40 public schools, and 40 colleges. In the same year the group went into the studio and recorded demo tapes of their original music. After two months of recording they had produced what they considered to be the Fantini sound.

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

Artist Nancy Yarborough shows completed Fantini logo to band member while graphics professor, Herb Paston looks on.

Where is Roger ?

Michael's Hair Studio

Carriage Shops Second Level Amherst, MA 01002 549-6973

11 Pizza Shops
3 Sub Shops
1 Roast Beef Shop

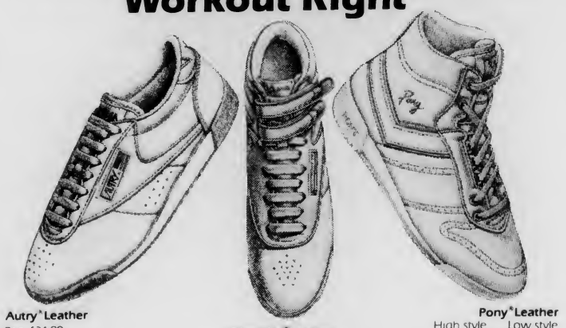
JBs

HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

11 am - 2 am 7 days
253-7018
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

We don't sell Pizza and we don't sell Subs

CHINESE KITCHEN
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
興旺樓



Eat In or Take Out Hours.
Sunday Noon to 10 PM
Mon-Sat 11:30 AM to 10 PM

Pu-Pu Platter $12.00

Try Our Luncheon-Dinner Specials
Only $1.49 before 3 PM, $1.90 after 3 PM

2 LOCATIONS:
430 Russell St (Rt 9) Hadley 253-2571
150 King St, Northampton 586-8220

Leather Aerobic Shoes That Workout Right

Autry® Leather
Reg. $34.99
$26

Olympian® Leather
Low style Reg. $23.99 $18
High style with Reg. $25.99 $20

Pony® Leather
High style Reg. $34.99 $26
Low style Reg. $28.99 $22

Make all the right moves in supple leather, comfort cushioned aerobic shoes. For exercising, jazz dancing or casual wear, Olympian has the right shoes, now at the right price. Women's sizes to 10.

OLYMPIAN
We thrive on competition.
Hampshire Mall, Rte. 9, Hadley.

Halloween Coupon Halloween Coupon

Steve's MONSTER MASH-IN!

Come by in costume on Halloween and receive a FREE ITEM
"Mashed-In" with the purchase of a one, two or three mix-in

Trick or Treat'in is so sweet at Steve's®

Valid only in Amherst on Oct. 31st 1985 (coupon necessary for a Free Item)

Halloween Coupon Halloween Coupon

James H. McManus eating place

CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

CONVENIENT to CAMPUS!

• BREAKFAST SERVED ANY TIME
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
• BEER & WINE SERVED 'TIL MIDNITE
• PLENTY OF PARKING

SALE!

3 DAYS ONLY... FRI/SAT/SUN NOV. 1, 2, 3

HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

save 20%

A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst/Daily 10-6, Sun. 12-5

FACES

SUNLIGHT SANITY SALE!!

ONKYO TA-2044 cassette deck
was $260
now $199 including calibration

ONKYO A-8015B
55 watt/channel Integra amplifier was $285
now $199

PIONEER KPA-350
auto-reverse Supertuner III with Boston Acoustics 704 speakers $219 Installed

Dual CS-505
turntable with Ortofon cartridge and four free audiophile discs
Now $249

REVOX B225
state-of-the-art compact disc player with B205 remote control was $1275
now $995
We sell CD's

Boston Acoustics
Top rated
A-40's were $135 now $115 /pair
A-60's were $180 now $150 /pair
Last call!

• GREAT SERVICE!
• SUFFICIENT QUANTITIES!
• CLASS "A" MERCHANDISE!
• BUY DURING REG. BUSINESS HOURS!
• WEAR YOUR NORMAL CLOTHES!
• TWO-WEEK REFUND PRIVILEGE!

Now Thru Nov. 9

Sound & Music

90-92 King St. (Rte 5), Northampton • Mon-Sat 10-5:30, Thu 'til 9
VISA, MasterCard, American Express • Financing Available • 584-9547

ARTS

live wire
by Peter Wissoker

This past week has been a really good one for lectures (see yesterday's Bibliofile). Madeline L'Engle was great at Smith. But this week there's all sorts of musical goodies luring one away from cheap intellectual pursuits.

Tonight there is a benefit for the valley's sanctuary movement with Bright Morning Star at Sage Hall, Smith College. A much different sort event is Dio at the Worchester Centrum.

Tommorow night there are tons of things to do. I'm talkin' tons. First and foremost the Ramones are at the Student Union Ballroom, or SUB. Downstairs, in the Hatch, local favorites Circle will be playing. Both these shows will be really good and if you can't afford the Ramones, Circle is a good but very different alternative. Very different.

Elsewhere tommorow night, Commander Cody will be playing at the Backstage in Ellington Connecticut and Chaka Kahn will be playing at the Springfield Symphony Hall.

Today is as good a day to start thinking about what you're going to do on November 21. Ray Charles will be coming to Pearl Street that night. Oh great, you say (well maybe), but naturally nothing is simple. That night Adrian Belew is playing in Boston at the Paradise with his band the Bears. So what are you going to do? I guess this is good practice for chosing who in a relationship has priority in deciding where to move post-graduation.

Saturday night: The Sighs, Bamboo Steamers, and The Underground will be playing in Springfield at the Zone.

Sunday night is folk night here in the valley. Singer Jean Redpath, frequent guest-star on the Prarie Home Companion will be singing at Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College. Melanie ("Castles in the Rain" and "I've got a Brand New Pair of Rollerskates") will be at the Iron Horse.

The Nylons will be at the Northampton Center of the Arts. The Nylons are an acapella group, reputed to be quite good.

Guitarist Billy Bragg will appear at the Iron Horse Cafe Monday night.

On Monday guitarist Billy Bragg who sounds like the Clash all by himself will be playing at the Iron Horse. If you missed him last time you might want to check it out. The Grateful Dead will be at the Centrum Monday and Tuesday. If you don't already have tickets forget it.

Tuesday night Melanie will be back at Iron Horse for two more shows.

John Lee Hooker and John Hammond will be at Pearl Street on Wednesday. This should be great. John Lee Hooker will be playing with his band and he is positively amazing. He sits on a chair, sings and occasionaly plays these really eerie licks (as they're called) on his guitar. Look forward to Peter Tork from the Monkees on Thursday at the Iron Horse.

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

ARE YOU PREGNANT & IN NEED OF HELP?
Birthright Can Help
• FREE PREGNANCY TESTING
- Same Day Results -
Services that are Free, Confidential, Caring & Helpful
549-1906
Amherst Carriage Shops Upper Level

HAIRCUTS $8.50
with this coupon
CALL STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr., Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85

The Old Mill
ROUTE 63
UNUSUAL GIFTS WITH A NEW ENGLAND FLAVOR
NORTH AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 01059
1 mile north of UMass 549-2667

THURS OCTOBER 31
THURSDAY, OCT. 31ST
HALLOWEEN COSTUME PARTY
50¢ DRINKS!
$200 IN CASH PRIZES
JUSTIN RYAN'S
RTE. 9, AMHERST 256-1069
Corner of University Drive
Special GUEST THRILLERS

ARTS

J. T. gets happy

By RENEE BACHER
Collegian Staff

James Taylor certainly looks cheerful on the cover of his most recent album, That's Why I'm Here.

His face is tan, his eyes are a calm blue, and his pressed, white shirt appears to be straight from the cleaners. This is not the person many James Taylor fans know and love. This is a happy person.

Of course, I'm the first to rejoice over James' emotional renaissance; however, I can't bear the fact that WHMP, WHYN, and all the other "hot spots" have picked up on it so quickly. James truly is the greatest, in my eyes, yet associating him with commercial radio lowers him one rung on the godliness scale.

That's Why I'm Here is a collection of songs, some of which avid J.T. fans have been hearing in concert for quite a few years but have had no recorded version to turn to. When in search of some powdered, ready-to-serve happiness, this is a great remedy for the blues, resembling a style a lot like that of his brother, Livingston Taylor.

In fact, on the album James has recorded his own version of Livingston's, "Going Around One More Time." The album is upbeat, it's pop, and there are some added surprises. Namely, saxophonist David Sanborn, Joni Mitchell, Don Henley, Graham Nash, and drummer Russ Kunkel (James' old friend and Carly Simon's latest beau).

The song, "Everyday," if you haven't already heard it, will be played to death shortly on the radio (if it isn't deceased already). No great loss. It's sweet but a tad simplistic, that's all. "Everyday it seems a little stronger. Everyday it lasts a little longer. Come what may, do you ever long for true love from me?" The lyrics alone are boring. But not to worry, it was written by Norman Petty and Charles Hardin, not James. Combined with music (and a soulful personality behind the vocals), the song has a happy quality. Kinda makes a person feel good to be alive (even during midterms).

A more interesting selection is the album title, "That's Why I'm Here." It gives flavor to an album which is fluffy and sentimental. Rumor has it this is a dedication to John Belushi whom James spent a lot of time partying with on Martha's Vineyard.

"John's gone found dead he dies high he's brown bread later said to have drowned in his bed. After the laughter, the wave of dread, it hits us like a ton of lead. It seems "learn not to burn" means to turn on a dime and walk on if you're walking even if it's an uphill climb . . .

It's a piece about survival, and friendship and trying to deal with success. Apparently, James has had some trouble with these things in the past which took the form of drug dependency and other forms of self-destruction. He continues, 'Fortune and fame's such a curious game, perfect strangers can call you by name. Pay good money to hear fire and rain again and again and again. Some are like summer coming back every year. Got your baby got your blanket, got your bucket of beer. I break into a grin from ear to ear and suddenly it's perfectly clear. That's why I'm here..."

In a recent Boston Globe interview James said this is the first album he has done without the help of drugs. He claimed the only unnatural influence to be caffeine, and that he was a little nervous about how the album would be received.

Other mentionables on the album are, "Only a dream in Rio," a song with a very tropical sound. If you're looking for some meaning in this one, it might be mentioned that brushing up on one's Portuguese is essential. "The man who shot liberty valance" is a Burt Bacharach/Hal David piece. What posessed James (if this perfect stranger may call him by name), I'm not sure. It's kind of a goofy song.

"Only one" is my personal favorite because it's very conducive to donating one's own harmonies. Not that Joni Mitchell, Don Henley, and David Lasley leave anything to be desired. You just want to kind of get in on the fun. In its lyrical simplicity there is simply a very powerful line, "I've got two long legs like to carry me, two sharp eyes to look for the light, two strong arms to hold on tight, two good friends on my left and my right, but only one only one." Get it? Well, if you have an "only one" of course you understand.

"Mona" is a love song about a pig. Literally. It's kind of sad because Mona got "too big to keep and too damn old to eat." I won't ruin it by telling you James's solution to the Mona dilemma." Oh Mona Mona, you can close your eyes. I've got a 12 gauge surprise waiting for you."

Oops.

STADIUM LIQUORS
Kegs ★ Beer ★
Wine ★ Soda ★

HAVE A HAPPY HALLOWEEN

SPECIALS

WINES
Villa Serena Burgundy ..... 4 L $4.99
Italian Red or White ..... 1.5 L $3.39
Folonari Soave .. 1.5 L $3.99 or 2 for $7.50 (includes wicker basket)
Tura White Wine ..... 750 ml $2.99
(mail in rebate: $2.99) your cost $0.00
NEW
Almaden Golden Champagne 750 ml $3.95
Schnapps
Peach, Strawberry & Rootbeer ..... 750 ml $5.95

BEER
Busch cans ..... $9.55 + $1.20
Lite ..... $10.75 + $1.20
Molson Ale ..... $13.70 + $1.20
Molson Beer ..... $13.70 + $1.20
Michelob ..... $12.60 + $1.20
IMPORTED SIX-PACKS
Kronenbourg ..... $3.90 + $.30
O'Keefe ..... $3.40 + $.30

ROUTE 9
253-5595
175 University Drive

10% Storewide Discount
w/UMass ID
Exp. 11/16

DEANS FROM BERKELEY, UCLA AND USC LAW SCHOOLS TO SPEAK AT AMHERST

Assistant Dean Beth O'Neil of Boalt Hall School of Law (UC Berkeley), Assistant Dean Michael Rappaport of UCLA Law School, and Associate Dean Lawrence Raful of the University of Southern California law Center will be at Amherst College to present a panel discussion on the practice of law and legal opportunities in California, as well as information about their respective law schools.

The panel discussion will be on Thursday evening, October 31, 1985 from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m. in the Red Room of Converse Hall at Amherst College. Interested students from U.Mass are cordially invited to attend.

Thursday

Halloween Party

at

THE PUB

Cash Prizes for Best Costume

Free Posters

$100 Cash 1st Prize

50 2nd Prize

25 3rd Prize

Album Giveways

THE PUB

15 E. PLEASANT ST./AMHERST, MA
413-549-1200

Presented with Grape Street Records

EPSON

BLUE BOW PRINTER SALE

$224.00
RX 80 only 5 left

$399.
FX80 +
only 4 left

$259.
LX80
only 7 left

$469.
FX85
near-letter quality model

$299.
LX 90
includes tractor

$799.
DX35
35 CPS
Daisywheel

FREE! Kensington

Printer Stand with any Printer purchase

Sale ends Nov. 30 or while supply lasts

Computer Works
228 Triangle Street Amherst
549-7133

Store Hours:
M-F 10-5:30
Sat 10-5

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

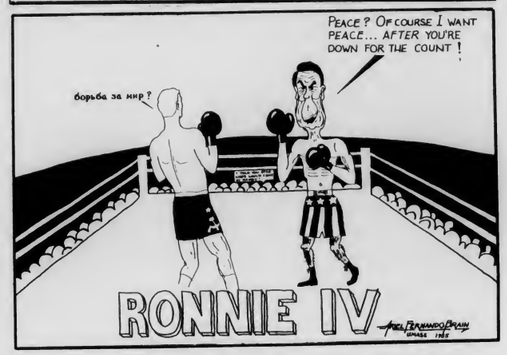
U.S. farewell a good move

Peter Dow

Last week the United Nations celebrated its 40th anniversary, as journalists and television news personalities praised the U.N.'s "peaceful intentions" and its "forum for international dialogue." Indeed, many even made use of the opportunity to condemn the United States for its decision to pull out of the U.N. Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). However, what was missing from last week's bountiful praise was an objective evaluation of the United Nations, and more specifically, an investigation of the reasoning behind our UNESCO withdrawal.

UNESCO's official purpose is obvious in its title and its constitution, where member states are pledged to a belief "in full and equal opportunities for education for all, in the unrestricted pursuit of objective truth, and in the free exchange of ideas and knowledge.' Of late, however,UNESCO has proven to be, at best, an agency that has accomplished so little and wasted so much that the value to the U.S. membership has become negligible.

For years, UNESCO has evolved into a haven for radical leftists, wielding anti-Western rhetoric, supporting many terrorist organizations (such as the ANC, SWAPO, and the PLO), and attempting to de-legitimize Israel. Indeed, in 1979, Senator Daniel Moynihad generalized that UNESCO "has become a place where the democracies find themselves under a constant, unremitting, ideological and political attack designed to advance the interests of the totalitarians."



Consider that the United States has contributed 25 percent of UNESCO's budget for the last few years; yet a majority, consisting of developing nations which contribute almost nothing to the UNESCO budget, are able to dominate the forum with treaties and resolutions condemning the free enterprise system and Western liberal ideals.

An example of this was UNESCO's attempt to establish a "New World Economic Order" through the Law of the Sea Treaty (its appropriate acronym is LOST). If the treaty had been enacted, it would have controlled the marketplace by discriminating against private deep sea mining ventures, ending in the socialization of the world's mineral wealth.

Yet, examining the ineptitude of UNESCO is not enough. Consider, for instance, the three reasons given by the Reagan administration for leaving UNESCO: 1. "UNESCO has exhibited a hostility toward the basic institutions of a free society, especially a free market and a free press." Yet so has the General Assembly on many occasions. 2. "UNESCO has extraneously politicized virtuallyevery subject it deals with." Well, so has the General Assembly, with its maddening and outrageous use of double standards.3. "UNESCO has demonstrated unrestrained budgetary expansion." This is true, but its budget increases have not been significantly greater than those of the United Nations itself. The United States, along with its UNESCO contribution, also pays for 25 percent of the U.N. budget, or around $1 billion.

In short, these reasons for a UNESCO pullout could easily be applied to our membership in the United Nations as well. Therefore, it is the hope of America that the UNESCO withdrawal will lead to reforms in both this and the parent organization, until at some point it would be of mutual benefit for the United States to rejoin. Meanwhile, the United States should continue to forcefully defend our Western ideals in the General Assembly, until the U.N. member nations realize that the real threat to world peace comes not from democratic capitalism, but from totalitarian communism.

Peter Dow is a Collegian columnist.

Look into COOL project

Roth/Burgess

Have some extra time on your hands? Maybe even too much sometimes? How would you like an enjoyable, fulfilling way to spend that time? If you would like that a lot, maybe you should look into the COOL Project.

COOL stands for Campus Outreach Opportunity League. It is a new national effort to get students involved in public and community service work in a way they haven't been involved in years. COOL has three foci. It will create and become an organizing structure for the community service work—impressive in its own right—which is already done at UMass by groups like the Boltwood Project and many of the fraternities and sororities on campus. Though these groups do excellent work, an organization which would help them coordinate their efforts and facilitate better resources management is bound to improve their work.

The second focus of COOL is to find out what kinds of services our community needs. By determining what types of services are most needed, and getting that information to groups prepared to deal with those types of needs, the overall quality of public and community service work in the Pioneer Valley can be greatly enhanced.

Finally, COOL will look into getting students work study money, credit and recognition for the work they do. For, though the work itself is very rewarding, these students, who are going beyond the call, academia deserve to have this "extra effort" recognized.

Now, why should you get involved in all this? Well, community service work is kind of like cleaning your room. Anything to better the community you do, not only for the community, but for your friends—which will come to include the people you will work with in the community—and for yourself. Community service work gets people involved in The Real World, as it's called by so many students. The experiences you derive from that involvement will help you both as a student, in terms of pulling you out of a rut, and as a graduate, i.e. a person in The Real World. We're talking about more than jobs skills here. One day each of us will be "permanent members of a community." If we have the skills, we can make those communities better places for everyone who lives there.

but beyond that, there's an incredible feeling that goes with public and community service work. In the back of your mind, you'll get to keep the knowledge that you've done something concrete for your community. Even if you worked with the elderly or disabled children, where the results of your work couldn't be "seen"—not like the building of a playground can be seen—you know what you did. You know you can be proud of yourself, even if you just flunked an exam.

COOL is just beginning. Yet it is supported by the Chancellor and Sen. Edward Kennedy, and is, in fact, part of a national trend. Campuses across the country are running or starting strong community and public service programs

What can you do? At the beginning there's a need for the ideas, labor, interest, and the ability that we need your help with. If you're interested in getting involved, bring the idea up in other organizations you're involved with, write to the editor of the Collegian in support of an idea, or, best of all, call, or stop by our office. Together we can make this community a better place for everyone.

Stacy Roth and Dani Burgess are the SGA co-presidents.

Letters

Marxism and activism differ

I thank Kevin H. Hill, Walter J. Hanley, and the brothers of Betta Kappa Phi for responding to my letter of Oct. 17.

However when they displayed their "Nuke the Pagoda" banner they made me angry on many levels. It was rude, and it was a violent statement. It showed a total lack of respect for a group of people who, for most of their lives, have been peace activists. To display an attitude of violence toward an act of peace is a violation of my sensibilities. They deserved to be confronted.

For the record, I was living in West Germany in 1968 (probably about the time you were born) and working in Nuremberg at the European Exchange System. The Soviet Union invaded Czeckoslovakia in August of that year, and, as I was also a Red Cross Volunteer at the 20th Station Army Hospital, I was called to the Czeck board to help out-process American citizens. The Soviet Union is guilty, as charged for this and so many more unspeakable atrocities. I resent the way they inferred that I, as a peace activist, am also a procommunist.

They said in their letter yesterday that my generation of "educated students" rioted for the American soldiers in Vietnam to come home, and they were. When they inferred that we treated them poorly, I take exception to that. You see, one of those soldiers was my husband. He returned, studied the history (not revisionist history) of the war and co-founded the Vietnam Veterans Peace Education Network. When the brothers wrote that the soldiers thought they were defending their country, the brothers were wrong. The soldiers thought they were fighting Communism, just as people their age will believe if this country's posture in Central America remains paranoid and hostile.

I agree with them that each country, as well as each individual has a right to self-determination — Afganistan does. Nicaragua does. Why couldn't they see the larger picture I was trying to paint? As I stated, with Mutual Assured Destruction in place, with sometimes not-too-sober GI's driving around West Germany with portable, yes, portable nuclear weapoms on their jeeps, with a husband, Vietnam veterans working for peace, and with the obscene vision in my mind of a world reduced to a cinder, I ask people to think clearly about everything I said.

Some continue to try, albeit feebly, to polarize the campus by saying that if we are not Republicans, or if we are peace activists we must be Marxixts. There were 58,000 Americans killed in Vietnam, but the number of Vietnamese civilians killed were 90 percent of the total killed.

I am a humanist, and I cried for my husband who fought there and I cried for the victims of Lt. Calley's atrocity Mai Lai, in which he had his men systematically kill 370 elders, women and children, for which he was, incidentally, court martialed.

People would do best to be more thoughtful on a grander level, a global level. If men who fought in Vietnam are enraged at having had to go there, and if the brothers respect them, as they say they do, why not invite them to an evening at their house and hear what they have to say about their experience?

Nancy Emond
Leverett

Letters

Censorship: decided by whom?

I'm writing this letter in response to Rusty Denton's Column on the justification of censorship.

First of all, who will decide what subject matter should be censored, and what shouldn't? I think we can all agree, or at least assume, that it will be the government lawmakers, who consist primarily of white, financially comfortable males who will be making the decisions. I, for one, do not want this class of people deciding for me what films, recordings, or newspaper articles are "acceptable." or "moral."

Secondly, to address Denton's notion of "reverse censorship"; I would like to remind people that deleting racist, sexist, homophobic, or deragoatory remarks about differently-abled people is not an act of censorship, but is protection of these people's civil liberties, and hopefully an attempt at respecting and accepting our fellow human beings for who they are.

Finally, I would like to ask why this new movement coined "Accuracy in Academia" is not searching instead for accuracy in the statements of the head executive of the U.S. government namely Ronald Reagan???

Marianne Caldwell
Central

Car hits PVTA bus and causes $1,000 damages

A PVTA bus received $1000 in damages when it was hit Tuesday afternoon by a car on the access road of Lot 22, University of Massachusetts Police said.

The driver of a 1972 Ford, a 20-year-old man, was cited for failure to use care in starting. His car received $800 in damages when he hit the bus while pulling out of the parking lot.

In other police reports:

A 1979 Mazda received $200 in damages when it was reported vandalized Tuesday afternoon in Lot 44, police said.

A pocketbook containing $25 and identification cards was stolen from a Greyhound bus Tuesday afternoon. The pocketbook was stolen someplace between Springfield and Amherst, police said.

—JEANETTE DEFORGE

Problems of soil studied

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

The Environmental Institute at the University of Massachusetts is hosting a conference on "Public Health Effects of Soils Contaminated with Petroleum Products."

"The purpose of the conference is to address the question of what to do with contaminated soils," said Paul Kostecki, who is coordinating the conference. Scientists from all over the United States as well as other parts of the world are expected attend.

"As far as I know, the United States is the first country to address the problem (of contaminated soil)," Kostecki said, emphasizing the need for something to be done. "It is an economic, health and safety problem."

One of the dangers that accompanies contamination of soil is the possibility of its affecting ground water. Kostecki hopes that the conference will be a step towards resolving the problem in the future. "This conference will bring together scientists to present the state-of-art findings for the future," he said.

The two-day conference is being given in four sessions, each one consisting of two hours of lectures followed by an open discussion. Yesterday featured lectures on "Chemistry and Modeling" and concluded with a lecture on "Public and Environmental Health and Safety." Today's sessions include "Remedial Action and Engineering" and "Regulatory/Law."

One of the scientists who will be speaking is Doug Costle who was the EPA director under the Carter administration.

The conference is being sponsored by the Division of Public Health at UMass, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, and the Atlantic Richfield Company among others.

UNWANTED HAIR?
Have it removed the Electronic Way!
Call NEW REFLECTIONS
586-8371
No Needles, No Pain, No Hair

Don't be left out of the Sun!
You can have your tan, too.
- Private rooms
- soft music
- call for a brochure and information
- guaranteed tan

1st visit free with this ad!
Utopia Spas.
175 University Drive Amherst
253-7727 SPAS
Mon. 4 P.M. / A.M.
Tu-Sun. 11 A.M. / A.M.
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160

Coupon
FREE 16 oz. SODA with purchase of whole sub
expires 11/16/85

HELP WANTED
SNOW SHOVELERS
Earn up to $7.50/hr
by shoveling snow in dormitory areas
Apply at Grounds Office at Physical Plant
Deadline is November 8.

THE SPOKE
A Drinkery to Meet, Relax and Enjoy
12 oz. Drafts 75¢
Pitchers $3.75
Beer Of The Month
Molson Golden
$1.25
Spoke Long—Sleeve T's are in!
Spoke Drink of the Week
Pearl Harbor $1.25
35 EAST PLEASANT, AMHERST, MA 01002

EARN MONEY FOR COLLEGE
LOADERS & UNLOADERS
$8/hr • PART-TIME EVENINGS & EARLY MORNING HOURS
We offer steady employment, paid vacations and health benefits. Interviews will be held every Wednesday 9am—1pm
UNITED PARCEL SERVICE
120 Wayside Avenue
West Springfield, MA 01089

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
"The BEST Chinese Food"
Boneless Bar-B-Q Spare Ribs
Small $2.80 or Large $4.60
Luncheon Specials
From $2.25 served 11 a.m. -3 p.m.
New Buffet & Sunday Brunch
Buffet Served 5-8 Mon.-Thurs.
Brunch Served Sunday 11:30-3
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.25
1) Beef with Fresh Mushrooms
2) Chicken Fingers
3) Chicken Wings
4) Chinese BBQ Pork
5) Broccoli in Oyster Sauce
6) Sweet & Sour Chicken
7) Pan Fried Rice
8) Pan Fried Noodles with Chicken
9) Pan Fried Ravioli
10) Hot + Sour Soup
Luncheon Specials & Take-out Service
Full Cocktail Menu
Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
10 Belchertown Road at Rte. 9, Amherst
256-0252

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

PROTEST CONTINUES — An employee of the Lord Jeffrey Inn in Amherst pickets outside the establishment yesterday. The working protest, which began last Friday, continues as negotiators seek a contract since the last one expired a week ago midnight today.

Halley's comet info available

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

A state wide toll-free number that gives information about Halley's comet has been established out of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Gerald Moriarty, a graduate student in astronomy, said that people were always asking "What is a comet." Now they can dial a number and get an answer. "We even put music on them sometimes," he said.

The messages contain updated information about Halley's comet as well as backround information and trivia. The first message defined a comet while the second one talked about meteor showers.

"This week's talks about Edmond Halley who discovered the comet," said Moriarty. It also mentioned the controversial pronunciation of Halley's name. "There is lots of evidence that he actually pronounced his name like 'holly,'" said Moriarty.

"I write the messages," added Moriarty. He also pointed out that William Irving and Peter Schloerb of the UMass astronomy department, who are also members of the Five College Radio Astronomy Observatory, are the ones who came up with the idea of a prerecorded message giving information on the comet. They had been bombarded with phone calls daily about the routine information regarding the world famous comet that only appears once every 76 years.

The recorded message, which lasts from one to three minutes, is changed every Friday. The machine has received so many callers that the astronomers are investing in a new recording machine. "Friday the machine was running almost continually," Moriarty said of the success of the taped messages after only three weeks.

The in-state toll-free number, 1-800-446-3422, is scheduled to continue informing Massachusetts residents with comet trivia through March. "I think we'll be going through at least March, maybe even longer," said Moriarty.

Pleasant St. Theater
"MIRACULOUS" —Pauline Kael THE NEW YORKER
"INSPIRED" F.X. Feeney, L.A. WEEKLY
"SPELLBINDING" —Robert Hunt ST. LOUIS WEEKLY
"BREATHTAKING" —Kevin Thomas, L.A. TIMES
AN EPIC ADVENTURE FROM NEW ZEALAND
"BREATHTAKING...RIVETING... UTU has been compared to an American western. While it unfolds with the simplicity and force of the best of the genre, it is distinctively New Zealand in its flavoring." Kevin Thomas L.A. TIMES
"Eerie...poetic...sumptuous ... Go see it." John Richardson N.Y. TRIBUNE

2 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-0900
PLAYING NOW!

TONIGHT!!
Campus Center Auditorium
Showing at 5:00, 7:00, 9:00 pm
Admission: $2.00

15th ANNUAL BIG BASH
UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN. 19-24
TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING
SUN - FRI
HOTEL OR CONDO
ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT.
HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199
FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP
LAGNAF 86
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

Jazz on the side...
Enjoy a piping hot slice of live jazz every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night from 9 to 12 pm.
plus complimentary hors d'oeuvres in the cozy ambience of The Loft at Seasons Restaurant.
Seasons
529 Belchertown Road • Amherst • 253-9909

Tuesday Nov. 5 R-rated Hypnotist
World Famous
Frank Santos

®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
®adically Different ®idiculously Funny
®ichly Entertaining ®ecklessly Risque
JUSTIN RYAN'S
Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Drive

AVAILABLE

Friendly room-mate. Quiet and smart. Able to sort through complicated issues. Will share work load. Problem solving is my specialty. Flexible. Clever. Fun. Good looking.

I'm the IBM Portable PC. To find out how to take me home, stop by the IBM information booth in the Campus Center this Thursday and Friday. You'll find me surprisingly affordable.

P.S. Bring a friend.

IBM

This Fall We've Got It All In BOTH STORES!

Amherst Carriage Shops • Northampton (Next to Iron Horse)

POSTERS Huge Selection ★ BAMBOO BLINDS

BEDSPREADS (Cover Walls, Furn. Windows) ★ Paper LAMPSHADES (Variety of Colors)

RUGS & MATS (Colorful, Durable) Greatly Expanded ★ CARDS (Over 1400 Designs)

SKIRTS & BLOUSES (Comfortable Cotton) ★ JEWELRY (earrings, rings etc.) Brass & Silver

FALL SALE

20 - 50% off

selected Clothing, Chinese Shoes Tapestries & Rugs

Great Gifts... Great Prices

Open Sun.

THE MERCANTILE

Daily & Sat. 10-6 • Sunday 12-5

Amherst 549-1396 Northampton 584-1205

Spirits are soaring and plentiful at FOUR SEASONS Wines/Liquors

- green spirits
- pink spirits
- blue spirits
- red spirits
- orange spirits
- brown spirits
- white spirits
- yellow spirits

BEER SPECIALS

COORS and COORS LIGHT..12 oz. cs...$10.99
BUD, BUD LIGHT.....$11.50
GRIZZLY.....$11.99
UTICA CLUB.....$6.99

SPIRIT and WINE SPECIALS

VODKA and GIN.....1.75 L.....$8.99
HENRI PHILIPE
PEP. SCHNAPPS.....1.75 L.....$9.99
LIEBFRAUMILCH.....750 ml.....2 for $5.00
AMBURU WINES.....750 ml.....2 for $5.00
ALL WINE COOLERS.....4 pk.....$3.60

SMILES SERVICES

Route 9, Hadley 584-8174

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Weather

Today:
Partly sunny. High 55 to 60.
Tonight:
Partly cloudy. Low near 40 along coast and in the 30's elsewhere.
Tomorrow:
Becoming cloudy. High 55 to 60.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Fitzhue

By David Margil

Surfman

by Bart

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Menu

LUNCH
Barbecued Pork on Bun
Shells in Cheese Sauce

BASICS LUNCH
Swiss and Sprout Sandwich
Shells in Cheese Sauce

DINNER
Baked Chicken with Champignon Sauce
Ratatouille
Tomato Torte

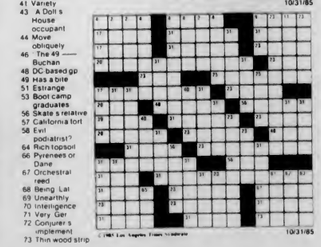
BASICS DINNER
Baked Chicken with Champignon Sauce
Ratatouille

Photo Workshop

Michael Gordan, photographer for the Springfield newspapers, will give a photo workshop and critique prints at 7 p.m. Monday in Campus Center room 905-909. Mandatory for Collegian photographers; all are welcome.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Law and order symbol
5 Kind of V.P.
9 Fundamentals
13 Poe forte
14 Girl or boy
16 Spanish surrealist
17 Battle solo
18 Spa feature
19 Three-handed card game
20 Athletic court fugitives?
23 Near-neighbor of Scot
24 Heigh — Anderson
25 Like some church windows
27 Works with toddlers
32 Spill the beans
33 Airline abbr.
34 Golf's Slamming Sam
36 Runner up
39 A Fitzgerald
41 Variety
43 A Doll's House occupant
44 Move obliquely
46 The 49 — Buchan
48 DC-based gp.
49 Has a bite
51 Estrange
53 Boot camp graduates
56 Skate's relative
57 California tort
58 Evil podiatrist?
64 Rich topsoil
66 Pyrenees or Dane
67 Orchestral reed
68 Being: Lat.
69 Unearthly
70 Intelligence
71 Very: Ger.
72 Conquer's implement
73 Thin wood strip

DOWN
1 Wild guess
2 The O Hara home
3 Et — and others
4 Property
5 Making certain
6 Rip-off
7 Menu item
8 Airs
9 Public notices
10 It gives rise to cakes?
11 Saint — of Assisi: 1194-1253
12 Located
15 Knave of Hearts' booty
21 Chinese idol
22 Weigh anchor
26 Partly to 27 Social gatherings for work
28 King of the Huns
29 Race for the less hairy?
30 River of N England
31 Yule figure
35 Fencing match
37 Part of QED
38 Seldom seen
40 Jai —
42 Showing vigor
45 Famous volcano
47 Harbor or harp
50 Material for a blue suit
52 Hosiery
53 Hidden spies
54 Came about
55 The Turn of the — James
59 Consort of Zeus
60 Pointless
61 Film director Gance
62 Hawkeye State
63 Cozy retreat
65 La — Debussy

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

M	O	N	E	T		E	R	A	S	E		T	R	E	K
A	G	O	R	A		N	E	L	L		H	A	L	O
K	I	S	S	M	E	K	A	T		E	L	M	A	N
E	V	E		P	A	L	P		V	I	K	I	N	G
R	E	S	T	I	V	E		B	A	L	L
			M	O	E		D	E	I	E	N	T	E
B	A	D	E	N		S	E	G	O		G	H	A	T
A	R	U	M		C	A	B	E	R		A	E	R	I
A	I	N	U		O	R	I		S	N	E	L	L
		A	I	S		S	A	U	L		T	A	D
			I	S	I		M	E	L		O	S	A
R	A	N	C	H	O		A	L	A		R	E	P	A
A	D	A	M		M	Y	F	A	I	R		L	A	D	Y
S	E	T	A		B	E	A	M		N	O	R	I	A
A	N	O	N		S	A	R	I		O	A	K	E	N

10/31/85

© 1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

10/31/85

SALE STARTS THURSDAY OCT. 31st NOON 'til 3 AM & FRIDAY 9 AM-6 PM

adirondack music 15 E. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST

all items subject to prior sale. quantities limited. no rain checks. not responsible for typographical errors

HALLOWEEN MIDNIGHT MADNESS sale

MIDNIGHT... 3 AM

DAY 2 9:00 AM

9:00 PM ... 3:00 PM

12:00 PM ... 3:00 PM

SHARP 25KPIS 25" COLOR TELEVISION PAL/N.T.S.C. CHANNELS STEREO $499.95

CANNON 8MM VIDEO SYSTEM $499.95 Model VE610 VT610 A $400 VALUE

VIDEO RECORDERS SHARP VC582 CABLE READY REMOTE $249.95

SHARP VC583 CABLE READY WIRELESS REMOTE AND MUCH MORE $299.95

PLUS 8&6 SAVINGS ON ALL OTHER VCR'S IN STOCK

SHARP DX1010 COMPACT DISC PLAYER $199.95

SHARP QT15 DUAL CASSETTE $299.95

BALLY VIDEO GAME A4250 VAL $131.3

OHM WALSH I DEMO SPEAKERS SOME MISSING CORNERS WERE $1000/PR $999.95/PR

SONY DS DISCMAN COMPACT DISC PLAYER FULLY PROGRAMMABLE $169.95 WERE $299

FIRST 13 PEOPLE TO BRING US PIZZA AT MIDNIGHT WILL RECEIVE A FREE SONY WALKPERSON

FIRST FIVE PEOPLE TO BRING US COFFEE/BAGELS/DOUGHNUTS will receive FREE WALKPERSON

ADC VSS1 VIDEO SOUND SHARPER $29.95

TEAC K66 CASSETTE DECK AUTO REVERSE DOLBY B&C SYSTEM REMOTE $199.95

SHARP 13J370 13" TV/MONITOR WIRELESS REMOTE 24 STATION PRESETS $299.95

OHM EL LOUDSPEAKER DEMOS ONLY TWO WAY MID-RANGE $99.95 PR.

TEAC 518X CASSETTE DECK DOLBY B/C + DBX FULL BIDIRECTIONAL $99.95

BEST COSTUME CONTEST 10:00PM ENTRIES ACCEPTED

OHM WALSH IV DEMO SPEAKERS SOME MISSING CORNERS $999.95

Nikko PRO Audio Rack SYSTEM ALPHA 130 100 WPC AM/PLAYER BETA 30 PROGRAMMABLE TUNER NT700II TUNER DeSULLIVAN RACK A $1200 VALUE 1/2 PRICE $575.95

SONY ALL WEATHER WM F5 WALKMAN AM/FM RADIO $69.95

CONCORD HPA-76 AUTO-MULTIPLEX $89.95 $300 VALUE

PANASONIC E370 AUDIO Stereo FM/DOLBY N.R. MONTH. CAPABLE BASS/TREBLE ELECTRONIC TUNING $149.95 A $320 VALUE

BOSE 501II Loudspeaker Pairs $995.00/PR

TEAC LV1000 LASER VISION PLAYER CX DECODER, REMOTE A $800 VALUE REBATE $399.95

SONY WM10 WALKMAN CASSETTE W/FM STEREO $99.95

SONY GFS3000 Boom Box DETACHABLE SPEAKERS MUSIC SEARCH PLUS MORE $59.95

RE-RUNS ALL LEFT OVER PREVIOUS MERCHANDISE BACK ON SALE!!

START HERE

SALE DOES NOT INCLUDE HERE

FREE APPLE & PIZZA

BOOM BOX SHARP GFX3 DETACHABLE SPKRS DUAL CASS. REMOTE $999.95

SHARP 4700 1/2 PRICE $499.95

SHARP QT15 DUAL CASSETTE $299.95

audio specials

SHERWOOD $90 DOLBY CASSETTE DECK WAS $199.95 NOW $99.95

SHERWOOD 2120 TOP RATED RECEIVER $249.95 A 230.00 VALUE $99.95

IBC AIR DOLBY B/C CASSETTE DECK $199.95 A 235.00 VALUE $99.95

SCOTT 7SBR FULLY AUTOMATIC DIRECT DRIVE TURNTABLE w/Audio Technica Cartridge A $230.00 Value $99.95

ULTRX RS5S 5SWITCH RECEIVER ELECTRONIC TUNING WIRELESS Remote PLUS A $100 DEAL FROM FACTORY $199.95

AUDIO TECHNIKA ELLIPTICAL CASSETTE w/ FM STEREO Now $49.95

SONY WM10 FM WALKMAN CASSETTE w/ FM STEREO FACTORY REBATE $49.95

TEAC RS5S AUTO REVERSE CASSETTE DECK, DOLBY B/C ONLY $ 149.95

CANNON VC200 4 HEAD SATELLITE TUBE VIDEO CAMERA JUST $599.95

LONDON! $1100 VALUE

Quito Stereo

EPI LSR32 DIGITAL 3SWITCH AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE LOADED TO THE 6'S A $450.00 VALUE Now 199.95 (3 STOCK)

EPI LSR 12 ANALOG 15 SWITCH AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE AND EQ ONLY $99.95

MAXXIMA 100 WATT TRIAMPLIS 79.95 or more $29.95

ALL CAR STEREOS IN STOCK DRASTICALLY REDUCED

TDK AUDIO CASSETTES SA90 $1.49 MAXIMUM 10 MAXIMUM 100 $1.29

OAK SPEAKER CABINETS 99¢

SALE HOURS: THURSDAY OCT. 31 12PM - 3AM FRIDAY OCT 32 9AM - 6PM

SATURDAY COME IN AND MAKE AN OFFER ON LEFTOVER INVENTORY!

all day specials surprise hourly specials unadvertised specials prizes for best costume

many items BELOW COST!

ALL JOKES AND GOOGIES Add 10%

* ALL SALES CASH! M/C/VISA/CHECK Add 3%

★Bowsher

continued from page 20

The Minutewomen played two games without the sophomore engineering major (who was accepted into Princeton) earlier this year when she strained a knee. "We did all right without her," Watson said. "We can't overlook the fact that we are stronger with her, so much stronger with her."

Boston College tried to stop Bowsher by putting one of their bruisers, Maria Montouri, on her. Bowsher shrugged off the pushes and by the end of the game her speed had worn Montouri down. It didn't stop her, either, from feeding Beth Roundtree with with the game-winning goal.

Bowsher didn't really have much to say to the media after the game, she would rather do her talking on the field.

And on the field, she gets as much as attention as she wants.

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Stooges quarterback John Malley gave it his best shot, but lost to Ball State 44-16 in the Intramural football championship.

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone
Petite - Regular and Half Sizes
WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes - Nickels, Jazz and Paloma
Merchandise sold only in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts
(20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

Cute.
Clever.
Mischievous.
Intelligent.
Dangerous.
GREMLINS
PG
TONIGHT!!
Campus Center Auditorium
showing at 5:00, 7:00, 9:00 pm

Correction

In yesterday intramural story, the winner of the co-rec softball story was reported incorrectly. The winners of the title were Off Base, 9-7 victors over Ball Bakers.

Also, the game of an intramural supervisor was incorrectly spelled, he name is Zulma Garcia.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Concerned about Acid Rain? Join the Acid Rain Campaign '86. Saturday November 2 Student Union 423B info call 549-0199

Urgent Meeting for Lesbians: to discuss social hour, to ratify constitution and determine LU policies. 7:30 pm 10/31 CC901 (bring brooms)

TGIF - Come celebrate Friday tomorrow night with singing and fun Christian fellowship! 7 pm in the Campus Center. Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ

Prophets and Other Heretics. Discussing issues of political conscience, personal ethics, and the Christian faith. Today, 12:15-1:15, UCF, 428 SUB Southwest Residents - Get involved! Weekly Southwest Assembly meeting tonight at 7:00 pm in Hampdens Southside Room. All are welcome.

AUTO FOR SALE

78 Datsun B210 4 sp 92000 steel radials 2 new radial snows on rims good shape/mileage needs brakes $850.00 549-4133

Toyota Corolla 4 door 4 speed 1974 white snows rebuilt 1600 motor $450 665-2577

1979 Chevette excellent condition $1200/BO 546-7220 after 7 pm

1974 AMC Hornet St. Wagon 6 cyl 105k mi new battery, carbeurator, muffler, alternator passed inspection needs minor work $450 call 665-3986 after 5 pm

75 Dodge Dart dependable standard some rust. 450 or BO 549-4600 ext 348

61 Berlinetta Camero 54k white red cloth interior cruise control tilt wheel AC PS PB AM-FM cass chagman new exhaust. well maintained sacrifice $5900 546-9000

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7393

BUS DRIVING JOBS!

UMass Transit Service is looking for several part-time drivers. Applicants must be UMass students carrying 6 or more credits in a degree program. Class II license required. Starting pay is $4.60/hr. Call Bud or Jenny at 545-0655 for more info, or apply in person at the Bus Garage.

CAREER CONNECTION

 Graduates  To obtain a great, satisfying job you need the right people to see your resume. Career Connection will publish and market your resume in a professionally printed and bound book arranged in career categories. It will be distributed to over 300 corporate personnel officers of New England companies. Career Connection maximizes your exposure while minimizes your costs. For application and information call Sherry 549-2616 or Noelle 546-8059

"CASH"

Paying cash for your baseball cards call Mike 546-6105

100 wool only $30 in the Concourse 3 days a week in October see you there

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional clubjarty DJ 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Fridge Rentals call R & P Package Store 253-9742 free delivery

Incredible one bedroom suite! Located in Presidential Apts, the closest apts to campus. Includes heat dishwasher A/C disposal etc. Call Jon even 549-6167 available in December

Large room for 2 people ¼ mile from Mail available 1/1/86 call Julie or Deirdre 586-5425

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $215 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Univega 12-speed completely set up. Extra everything $200 549-0385

Elec Guitar Aria Pro2 ex cond blk with case $300 neg call Rick 6-6792

Toyota Corolla Liftback standard runs excellent best offer must sell call 549-6283

FOUND

Watch found near Post Office call 6-4972 and describe

Ring found at Orchard Hill Courts 546-7439

GREAT YOGURT

Dannon, Stonyfield, Colombo, Mountainhigh, and Brown Cow yogurt. . .only at the People's Market

HELP WANTED

Accounting Clerk Butterfield kitchen for the Spring semester - minimum commitment is one academic year 6 hours/week $4.25/hour with free room and board. Applications are available at the Butterfield Kitchen Office and are due by 5 pm on Nov. 1, 1985.

On campus non-work study M-F 7-noon call Jane at 546-6889

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Sold and pay commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David STansel 584-3556

Wanted: SGA Budgets Committee Assistant, Auditor, Secretary. Each pays 5-7 hrs/week. Workstudy and non-workstudy. Apply 420 SUB. 5-6041. The SGA is an AA/EOE employer.

Part-time, on-call work with Mental Health Agency. Hours to suit your schedule 536-5473, 9 am - 5 pm

Joe's Paradise Chicken a new restaurant is opening soon in Amherst. We are looking for a few people to fill counter and kitchen help positions. Good pay. If interested please call Bill or Joe at 253-7494 or after 6:00 pm 665-3597

Sania needs elves - Petite outgoing individuals needed to wprk 1-5 wkdys. Apply at Job Matching in Hampshire Mall or call 584-8889

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Students Urgently Needed. Earn $35-45/day, work 2-5 days/week. Join our statewide referendum campagns for toxic waste cleanup, acid rain control, and utility reform. We are MASSPIRG, the state's leading public interest lobby, and we're seeking college students, grads and others for our citizen outreach staff. Travel and advancements. Will train. Call 256-6434

HIGH EARNINGS FREE TRAVEL BENEFITS National Travel and Marketing Co. seeks highly motivated individual to represent its Collegiate Travel Vacations on your campus. No experience needed. Will train. Call: (718) 855-7120 or write: Campus Vacation Associations 26 Court St., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11242

On campus non-workstudy TuTh 9-noon call jane at 546-6889

Studenta to work for travel agent. Hours negotiable. Experience preferred but not necessary. Send a resume (ASAP) to: University Travel Inc., 225 Main Street, Northhampton 01060

Student Nurses. Apply now to work during semester break. Good earnings plus experience in your field. Weekend and morning work available now. Call anytime. Medical personnel Pool 586-7365

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct. 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites. $5.00/hr. Call Carl at 665-3088 at any reasonable hour.

JE T'AIME

I can't wait until Friday. How about today. Same time same place. Melissa

LOST

Lost wallet Tuesday on 3rd floor SUB call Alex 5-0194

Lost black and white male cat with black fluffy tail. Anywhere from Presidential to Townhouse Please call 549-4402

Lost ladies watch will identify please call Rohn 549-0868 reward!

Lost eye glasses w/black case, please call Scott 6-4705

Burgundy wallet lost! Please return don't screw up my life. Please. Reward 549-7297 C.J.

Set of keys in tan Fendi case lost. Very im- case call Sheryl 256-1645

Keyring on a string. Five keys including UMass key and gas key. Call 546-5767

Phi Mu Sorority Pin. Great sentimental value. If found please call Tara at 256-1380

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicans Embassey Recording Studio offers 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-4003

PARKING AVAILABLE

Low cost on campus parking for the year. Great location. Call 665-8766

PERSONALS

Marcy Cohen Get psyched for Thursday night! Love your bo sis

Thanks to all who voted against the Student Activities Payroll Fee. We love you Students for Government by Referenda.

Congratulations Southwest Area Government on the Halloween Policy change. Good job.

For six weeks only!!! Paucuaino, my adorable kitty, needs a place to stay. Fee negotiable. call Sara 253-5834

Congratulations to the Winner of the 6th annual SWAG Battle of the Bands:

MODERN PLADZ

SWAG wishes to thank all the bands who played and those who attended

another Southwest Area Government production

Kathleen - Have the best 18 ever! Luv ya your neighbor, Alice

Happy 20th Birthday Kevin! 4:30 won't come soon enough! Te amo, siempre! Stef

To Jeff and Tom Happy Birthday we will get our shrimp yet Kaiser II

WB in 432 Pierpont who let that dog in here? Want to be my Maid of Honor when I retire to the dairy farm? Your partner in crime

We were maddog, we are maddog, we will remain maddog!!!

Cheer up Julie A! Your roommates need and love you! The Gang

MDG I'm still head over heels and even though time waits for no one I would rock with you anyday cause you built a fortress around my heart. . . I will always love you! Button

Raymond Happy -2 don't worry, I'll come around love, your best friend

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY KAREN Thanks for the best two years of my life, we've come a long way baby! I love you, Michael

To the men of Pi Kappa Alpha a job well done.

Zoom - Where are you? Waiting to har from you Blue Eyes

Mat - If you don't like it, try men. (the Rude Girls)

Call to Pam. Checkers Club is active!! We have key on seventh floor Student Union. Come tonight, wear red & black!!!

CC - Se ya at Gremlins before the bash!

I love you Geno Limone!

TK - Roses are red, Violets are blue, Should I bring Coast or Dove to make your wish come true? Happy Birthday! Guess Who?!

Carol Wilhelm - Today marks 4 years from Drexel to Conn, Rutgers and UMass its has been malvelous and getting better. I love you - Steve

Hey Norm. When are you going to take us to Wiggins Tavern? (Ruth will wear Gram's dress)

LUISI: Missing you on Hallyween and don't you ever forget I still love you! Hug and kisses Monique Happy Birthday Aimison! Have a wild night! Be cautious look for the unexpected!! Love the wenches!!

Happy Birtdhay Aime Degrenier I know it will be wild and crazy! Don't forget Debie!! Love Sandra Larssa I'm sure the "kiss" was good for him was it good for you?

Ruth What happens Friday if the big "it" strikes no little brother watching over you.

Kathy Does your alter-ego live only on the 6th floor McNamara

Beth The bug red scoop bed doesn't work when you feed your victims Sominex

Betty Ann Was there a particular reason you had to leave all those luscious adreps to work with us?

Martha, Are those happy pain killer drugs for public sale?

Madog, You and Busty soon. the IT couch!

Oh Jim, Great Sheik of Orchard Hill, are you bringing your harem to the Collegian party Friday?

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDERS WANTED

Cheap Bus to Boston, $9.50, long weekend, Friday 11/8, 12 noon. Call 545-2145

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female wanted neat, responsible, own room $232 plus util. Must pay $696 up front call 549-0490 8-10 am 16-11:30 pm or (617) 436-2763

Female to share apt in Brittany Manor call 256-0668 evenings

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share 3 bedroom house in Belcher town. Own room, on bus route (stops right in front), $165 plus utilities. Available immediately. Call 253-5390 after 5 pm

SERVICES

TAILOR Alterations Expert Same Day Service Available SHAANN'S Rt 116 Sunderland Open 8 am 665-3878

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5:00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Brian's Typing Service. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7652

Juniors/Seniors Thinking about graduate school? If, when, where, how con tact the pre-graduate advisor Canisc Machmer Hall E 21. For appointments, call 545-2191 or 545-2192

STARTING JANUARY

Our crazy roommate Judy is finally graduating and we need 2 females to share our 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor. Must have a sense of humor! Call 256-1603 for info!

TIME IS RUNNING OUT

Apply now for a full-time internship at the Legal Services Office for the Spring, 1986 semester. Aid attorneys in client interviews, preparation of court forms, maintenance of continuing caseload, giving advice and referrals and investigations and research. Up to 15 credits may be received from academic departments. Gain valuable experience in the legal profession while working on campus. No previous experience in the legal profession necessary, training is provided. Deadline to begin the formal application process is November 6. For further information, call Mary at Legal Services, 545-1995

TRAVEL

Montreal Weekend November 1, 2, 3 drinking age 18 call Bonnie 6-6432

Interested in a trip around the world? I'll be leaving in January for 6 months. Looking for adventurous travel companions. Call Greg 253-5618

TYPING / WORD PROCESSING

Next day service TYPE-RITE 253-5111

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 546-8822

Reggae Thrash Guitar & Drummer wanted call Geoff 586-7845

Any Richard Leakey tickets you won't use? Please call. Shari 256-0407

WANTED TO RENT

2 females looking for apt or room prefer in N. Amherst area. Start Jan or Spring call 546-5326

SPORTS

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Ball State quarterback Al Mennino (center) threw for four touchdown passes to lead his team to a 44-16 victory in the Intramural football championship.

Ball State rolls, 44-16

Plante, Mennio lead team to IM title

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

If there is such a thing as a dynasty in Intramural football, it is Ball State.

Trailing 10-6, State scored six straight touchdowns (three by Bill Plante) to rout The Stooges, 44-16 in the men's title game yesterday at Lower Boyden Field.

Ball State won its second crown in three years and ran its record to 28-1 over that span. The only blemish on the slate being a triple-overtime loss in the quarterfinals of the 1984 playoffs.

"We're just a bunch of good freinds having a great time," said Plante, who caught one touchdown pass and returned two interceptions for scores. "It was a sweet win."

The Stooges started strong, scoring first on a 27-yard field goal by John Malley. State came right back as option quarterback Al Mennino tossed a 25-yard TD pass to John Cahill. The kick failed and State held a 6-3 lead after a quarter.

The Stooges then scored on a Malley-to-Jack Delaney one yard pass. Malley booted the point. The turning point of the game came with a second left in the half as Mennino tossed a ten yard TD pass to Cahill. State missed the kick, but led 12-10 at the half.

State went right to work in the third quarter as Mennino threw a scoring pass to Plante with 5:05 left to make it 18-10. State then showed some style as Mennino hit Plante over the middle who in turn pitched back to Mike Morrill who sprinted 20 yards for the score. Mennino then hooked up with Mark O'Hara for another score (Kevin Rocha rushed for two points) before Plante intercepted two Stooges passes and returned then for scores.

Other Ball State players include Mark Pelosky, Will Dillon, Matt Mattos, Bruce Smith and Steve Ondrick. Other Stooges were Dave Morel, Tom Power, Scott Cohen, Kurt Spagnuolo, Kevin Spagnuolo and Peter Tonelli.

"We're a defensive team. We've tried the option this year and its worked well." said Rocha. "We've worked hard, now its on to New Orleans (for the national intramural championships in December)," said Mennino.

In the co-rec finals, Mennino quarterbacked Ball State to a 50-38 win over defending champion Why Townehouse. O'Hara and Morrill were also on both teams.

Volleyball knocks off So.Conn St.

Minutewomen go to 29-6

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

The Southern Connecticut State University volleyball team is probably wondering why they made the trip to Amherst last night.

In a match that took less time than your basic Monday morning 9:05 class, the visiting Owls were rudely dismissed in 44 minutes by a fired up University of Massachusetts volleyball team, as the Minutewomen administered an all out pounding to SCSU, 15-6, 15-0, 15-7.

"I think we dominated them," said coach Elaine Sortino. "For as much as we had the ball, I thought we did a lot of good things tonight."

The spikers, 29-6 on the season, were in complete control of this one from start to finish. UMass raced out to a 7-0 advantage in game one, sparked by an impressive offensive display by sophomore hitter Violetta Gladkowska and senior co-captain Sally Maher. The Minutewomen capitalized on numerous Owl miscues and cruised to a 15-6 decision.

UMass continued its domination in game two, as the spikers blanked SCSU, 15-0, and for all practical purposes, guaranteed the rout.

The Owls would make things interesting in game three, as SCSU gained its first lead of the match, 4-3. The Owl lead would swell to 7-4 forcing UMass to call time out. But any chances of a SCSU comeback were squelched, as the Minutewomen went on to score the next 11 points of the match to take game three and complete the sweep, 15-7.

"I think that in a match like this you have a great potential to become sluggish," said Sortino. "I was really pleased to see us not get caught up in that type of situation."

Defensively, junior defensive specialist Debbie Cole kept several rallies alive with spectacular digging throughout the match.

The Minutewomen will now prepare for the state championships being held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology this weekend. The four team tourney will include Wellesley College, MIT, and last year's state champions, Eastern Nazerene College. UMass finished second in the tournament last year, losing to Eastern Nazerene in the finals.

The spikers are the number one seed in the tourney and will face number four seed Wellesley on Saturday. MIT will face Eastern Nazerene in the other semi-final.

"The state title has eluded us for a long time now," said Sortino. "We've always been the bridesmaid and never the bride."

"We've got as much talent as we've ever had before, so I think our chances are good at winning it this time," added Sortino.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Midfielder Kristen Bowsher, an All-American sophomore, has been one of the catalysts for the top-ranked women's soccer team.

Kristen Bowsher:

UMass' All-American deserves all the attention she gets

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

On a team less-talented than the No. 1 University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, sophomore midfielder Kristen Bowsher would stand far above the rest.

However on the undefeated (14-0-0) Minutewomen, a team loaded with skilled athletes, a Kristen Bowsher can, at times, tend to blend into the background.

This is not a woman to take lightly. Bowsher, an All-American pick last season, is the straw the stirs the UMass drink. She controls the vital midfield area where the transition game becomes so important in soccer.

Bowsher isn't a big scorer, with four goals, six assists for 14 points - good enough for eighth on the team. That's not her job. She dishes off the ball and draws the attention, the double-teams, that free up the UMass speedy fowards.

"You can't overlook her talent," senior co-captain Jamie Watson said. "She just commands attention. She can play with anybody, anywhere. That's a given."

A high school All-American from Maplewood, N.J., Bowsher played on the East team at the National Sports Festival in Baton Rouge, Louisiana this summer. She was also named to the all-tournament team last fall at the Final Four.

"Bowsher is the ultimate player," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said. "She makes everyone look good. She would make my dog look good. She's a real athlete."

She is one that works year-round at her craft. Bowsher didn't miss any of the 6:30 a.m. workouts that Banda had the team run through last spring.

Bowsher, teammate Chris Schmitt and former player Jolie DePauw would just get together on a Sunday afternoon to just kick the ball around. "I never had athletes before who would go and workout without being told to,"Banda said. "These girls live for soccer."

North Carolina coach Anson Dorrance said, "She's brillant. She was outstanding," commenting on her play in UM's 2-0 win over the Tar Heels Oct. 12. "I saw her play at the National Sports Festival and she just works and works on defense."

Bowsher enjoyed the challenge of going up against the four-time champions. "This was such a great game to play. Both teams were so skilled, it was a lot of fun," she said.

Banda thought so highly of the sophomore's skilled play that he gave her the freedom to roam the field to "support play offensively and defensively. She's a marked player. If (other) teams don't realize that, their not doing her justice."

Her teammates realize Bowsher's worth and how hard she works.

"She hustles so much. She often forces the oppositions halfbacks to make a mistake," fullback Debbie Belkin said. "It slows them down and gives us time to think."

Watson added,"She works under a lot of pressure. Kristen puts the ball through so fast, you really don't have time to adjust."

continued on page 19

No Classes Tomorrow

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 35 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Thursday, October 31, 1985

Sculpture injures five

Cement artwork slides into pond

By FAWLING ARTE
Collegian Staff

The black sculpture now sitting on the steps of the Fine Arts Center, left its home early yesterday afternoon, sliding into the Campus Pond, leaving 25 ducks dead and several students injured.

"It seems as though this huge hunk of plaster has taken on a life of it's own, and is excreting a slippery waste, which causes it to slide right down those stairs," said Berry O'Real, director of Public Safety at the University of Massachusetts.

The sculpture was replaced early this morning by some emergency volunteer art students, who have recently volunteered all their spare time (of which there is a lot) to lend a hand in these situations.

"This is great. I'm going to sue this university for millions of dollars. I can hardly wait, " said Bie Mee, a junior finance major who reportedly threw himself in front of the sculpture as it was falling.

University spokespeople at the Office of Public Individuals said as long as this wasn't a fire, there was really nothing to worry about. Officials said they spent their day reassuring parents about crisis proof clothing now being sold at the University Sore.

A special assistant to a special special assistant to the special and newly-improved vice-chancellor for things which are falling apart who asked not to be identified said, "The university certainly supports a policy that would provide for ropes to be put up which would block the sculpture when it falls but it would have to go through several committees on the subject of different things and then the SGA will have to approve it, so that could take a long while and then . . ."

What this means is that nothing will be done. People will probably die at high numbers. And there will be no more ducks.

Yes, no more ducks.

"Evacuation seems the only answer at this point in time," said an unidentified clerical worker at Memorial Hall. Apparently, the chancellor has taken her advice and sent everyone home.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

ART AT IT'S BEST — FAC Sculpture slipped off the steps near the Rand theater yesterday in a freak accident injuring 5 students, and causing damage to the art piece.

Classes cancelled tomorrow

By B.A. MOSKOV
Collegian staff

There will be no classes on Friday at the University of Massachusetts due to lack of funds to pay instructors and employees for a full week of work.

"This has never happened before in the history of the University," said Provost Richard O. Brie, "it just kinda snuck up on us. This is really poor financial planning on the University's part".

A spokesperson from the treasurers office said that the University's payroll account just ran dry this week.

"It seems like all the money went to things like faculty affairs and parties" said Dr. Green Bucks of the finance committee. "Yesterday we thought we would have enough money to at least pay professors with tenure, but it looks like even those guys are bumming".

The chancellors office made an appeal to the financial aid office to loan some money to the faculty payroll account, however, financial aid reported that all of their funds are tied up in student loans and grants.

"I was totally psyched to hear that those commy facist profs aren't going to get paid.

—Griggs Willson

T.O.C. to sponsor bash

By DECLAN P. McMANUS
Collegian Staff

The Top of the Campus Lounge, scheduled to re-open Monday, Dec. 2, will be serving free beer and mixed drinks from noon to 5 p.m. in its first five days as part of the "T.O.C. is Back Week" festivities.

In addition to the free spirits, the T.O.C. will serve lunch and dinner to the first 200 patrons during the specified hours at no cost, said Jake Riviera, lounge manager. He added that each customer will be able to drink as much as they wan't.

"Drink limiting will not be an issue during that week," Riviera said. "If it looks like a person has had one too many, then good for them."

"The opening week festivities are occurring because the Universtiy community has gone for too long without the T.O.C. and we should welcome them back with a bang," said Steve Nieve, a bartender at the lounge.

"As a matter of fact," Nieve said, "I probably won't even check IDs. Maybe I'll just ask for student IDs," he laughed. "I'll only card someone if they ask for an 'Opening week Octopus," he said.

An Opening Week Octopus, Nieve said, is two shots of 14 different alcohols mixed with heavy cream and tomato juice. It is then mixed in a large bucket and chugged as quickly as possible. At the end of the week, the person who drinks one quickest gets a $25 dollar gift certificate to the Hatch.

"The timing for these festivities is all screwed up," said an official at the Dean of Students office. "Why must they schedule the free drinks during the daytime when students will be tempted to skip classes to get buzzed," the official said. "Besides, I have to work during those hours and it's not fair to just have the free drinks scheduled during the day."

"I plan to take advantage of the festivities," said an English Department professor who wished to remain anonymous. "I have noticed that in the past I teach better after a couple of shots. I wonder what one of those special Octopus drinks will do for me?"

University of Massachusetts police have issued a memo to the T.O.C. management on conditions the lounge must follow during the week. The memo warns not to serve to any customer "who sways back-and-forth while ordering a drink or who can't correctly pronounce at least half their words."

"The opening week will sure be a headache to handle with all the people drinking and all," a police official said. "However, I assure every citizen of Amherst that it won't be bad. Just look at it like a weekend that lasts a few extra days and where everyone has a little F'' more to drink than usual."

The police memo will be read and observed, said Riviera. "If I see a customer swaying and slurring their speech, I will not serve them until they sober up in the sobering room which will be located next to the lounge and provide cots and mattresses to sleep on." After they go to rest for a while they can come back and eat and drink more.

In examining the festivity schedule, the Undergraduate Student Senate, may propose that classes be canceled for the week of Dec. 2.

Pouncon 'really sorry'

By DELWOOD LEVENBURG
Collegian Staff

In a complete about face, Peter Pouncon, president of Amherst College, has apologized to all of UMass for saying the five college area was like 'four little beauties and one big elephant.'

Pouncon said, "What I meant to say is that UMass is a fine school, like fine wine, a luxury car, a grand and glorious institution full of intellect and book smarts, and is tough, like an elephant. After a long day of shaking hands and smiling, I only mentioned the elephant part, and totally forgot about the fine wine and stuff. I am really sorry."

When asked why it took so long to apologize for the remark,Pouncon responded, "It wasn't really meant as a dig against UMass. Not really. Heck, I am sure no one took it that way. Besides who was there of any importance anyway?"

Representatives from 85 colleges from all over the world, including Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Oxford, NYU, Brown, and Dartmouth were there, as well as Julia Child and Smith College alumni from every class since 1914. Pouncey said, "Oh. Them."

Pouncon ended the press conference saying "It had nothing to do with my personal insecurity about how UMass has improved over the years. I'm not really worried about competition between the two schools. It's not a real cheap shot. I'm real good at cheap shots, and that wasn't really one of them. I don't usually take cheap shots. Why are you asking so many questions? Leave me alone! Go away!" A visibly distressed Pouncon left the room in a hurry.

University of Massachusetts Chancellor, Joseph D. Fluffey, replied by saying, "Who cares what Amherst College thinks anyway? They're a whole bunch of waspy snobs anyway. Sure they pretend to be this high class institution, but UMass is really far more superior."

A distinguished English gentleman disguised as a bag lady was heard in the background yelling, "NO IT'S NOT!"

"It's just like those guys over in financial aid to give all their money to the students," said Bucks adding that without the professors this University wouldn't exists so they come before the students.

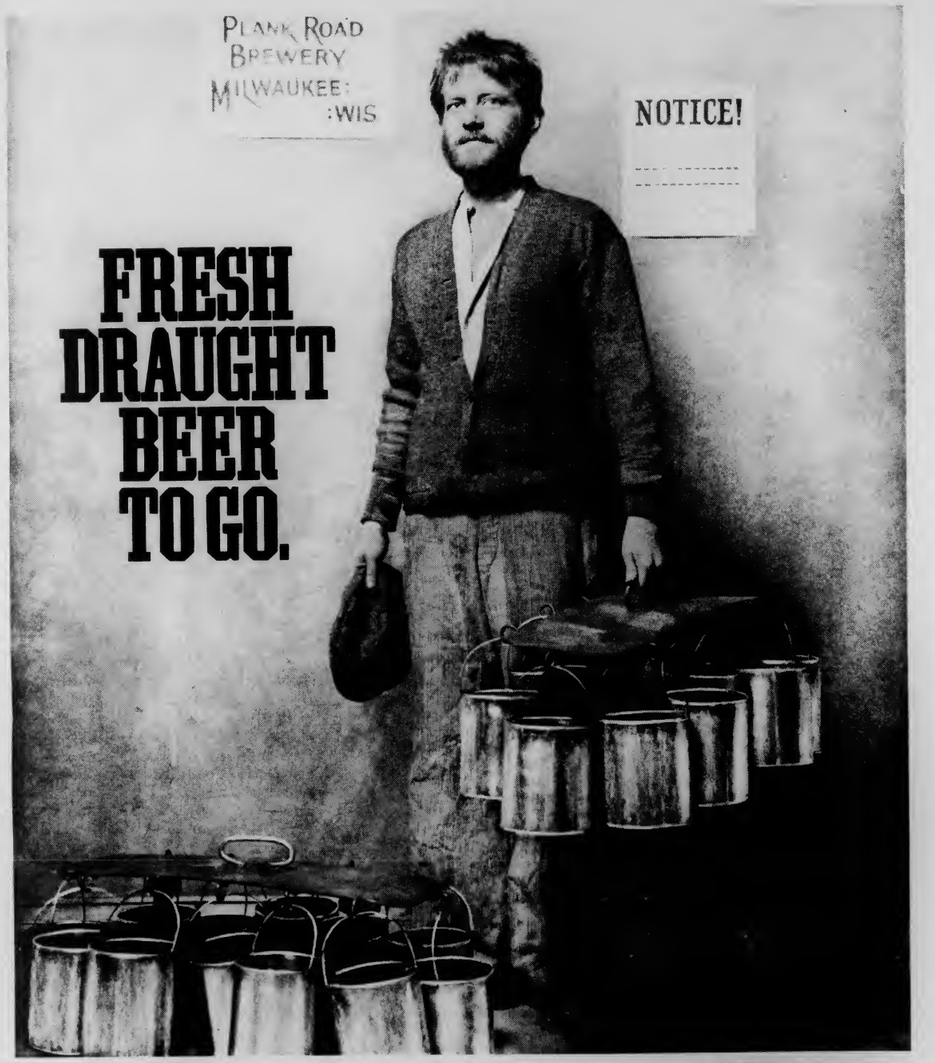
"Who cares if students need financial aid, the professors need money to feed their families," Bucks said.

Bucks explained that the university is presently seeking measures to obtain federal funding under code 3642, emergency funding for large Liberal Universities

"if those guys down in D.C. refuse us then I dont know what we are going to do," said Bucks, " if we get really desperate we may have to cancel classes for a whole week."

Student reaction has been verp enthusiastic. " I was totally psyched to hear that those commy facist prof's aren't going to get paid", shouted Griggs Willson a senior STEPIC major.

"Those pig teachers are always craming oppressive, capitalistic, and conservative ideas down our throats, its about time those pinkos sufferd a little", Willson screamed at the top of his lungs.



Other students seemed more excited at the thought of having the day off from classes."This is an awsome time to have a 20 keg party", said Durk Stongarm, " me and my buddies have been planning a bash and this friday is the perfect day, so come on down and have a beer."

Inside:

Revised policies.....3
Football stars leave UMass.....
Have your problems solved.....

"News Sucks"

—Peter Soderburg—
Production Manager, Collegian

FRESH DRAUGHT BEER TO GO.

Ask most beer drinkers and they'll likely agree: nothing tastes better than beer from a keg.

Ever since the days young men delivered bucketfuls to your door, keg beer has always been fresher. That's because it isn't cooked to preserve it like most bottled and canned beers.

Well, now we've found a way to deliver the same fresh draft taste in a bottle. A beer specially cold-filtered instead of cooked, so it tastes like it was drawn straight from the keg.

Plank Road Original Draught. Keg beer in a bottle.

PLANK ROAD™
Original Draught

©1985 Miller Brewing Co. Milwaukee, WI

Collegian photo by Maria Bull and Neil Beckerman

SMOOTH SAILING — The UMass administration approved a policy yesterday to allow sailboats on the Haigis Mall. This rowdy crew were the first the raise their sails.

Policies at UMass

●Halloween

By MELLY CIGAR
Collegian Staff

The administration announced yesterday it's 1985 Halloween policy, unveiling a stringent plan of guidelines and mandatory student activities which includes the reopening of the Campus Center and all other campus buildings for Halloween-related events.

"You degenerates wanted to party, so we're going to shove it down your throats," said Chancellor Joseph Doofy after the announcement. "It's reverse psychology," he added.

The strict set of rules established by the plan will be enforced by a 24-hour security system. These rules include mandatory alcohol consumption, drug experimentation, and sexual involvement.

A variety of required workshops--1 credit each--will be held today through Friday. These include Fake IDs: A Must in the 80s (bring fake birth certificate), Sexual Stimulation: What's best for you (partner(s) available), and Party Prepatory (bring rolling papers, razor blades and a $2 fee).

The dinning commons will remain open regardless of the food ban (see related story on page --). A fully stocked bar and a complimentary drug plate will be accessible to students with valid UMass ID. Condoms and vibrators can be found in the dessert sections. Cigarettes and toothbrushes will be handed out upon leaving.

The Campus Center will be open Halloween night, for the first time since 1979. The highlight of planned activities will be a 24-hour marathon of classic motion pictures. Movies expected to be seen include Psycho, Halloween I and II, Friday the 13th I - V, and The Shining.

"There comes a time in every administrator's life when he just has to say 'what the fuck,'" said Duffey. Questions regarding this year's policy can be asked at Duffey's first annual 10-keg Halloween Bash tonight at his home near the Orchard Hill residence area.

●Alcohol

By Luna the Tuna
Collegian Staff

The banning of alcoholic beverages on campus was instead intended for food according to a statement released yesterday by Chancellor J. Duffo.

"We have cleared out all the dining commons and all other places on campus that serve food. We are liable for anything that should happen in the event of food causing any accidents by any UMass student" said Duffey.

The ban which was originally planned to take effect at the beginning of the school year took effect yesterday instead.

"I don't know how this mix up occured," Duffo said yesterday with the heavy smell of alcohol on his breath in slurred speach.

The ban on food has already greatly affected conventions that were scheduled to take place on campus. "We just gotta eat" said one woman who had just cancelled the reservation for what would have been the largest convention to have ever come to UMass. We are simply gonna have to take our business elsewhere" she said.

Students are protesting the ban heavily because the sound of rumbling stomachs acts as a distraction during class. In addition, clothes are becoming loose and are falling of students bodies as they walk around campus. "I'm stavin' like Mavin" said UMass sophmore, Cherry Pitts.

If the ban is lifted, there will still be food restrictions placed on those under 20. "Those under the age of 20 will be allowed to eat only natural foods. It's better for them." said Duffo. He added that this would restrict them to eating in Basics. "Hey, it is better than nothing."

In reported incidents where students have violated the food ban, punishment has been serious. Besides being arrested, they are forced to watch Burger King commercials for ten hours straight. "We must enforce this because posession of food is a serious offense" said Duffey.

"I don't know how a mistake like this could have happened" said Duffey before passing out cold.

Natural foods could be fatal

By MothAnne Beskov
Collegian Staff, sort of

The American Cancer Society has just released a report today, that tofu and granola causes lots of cancer in lab students and will soon be banned from store shelves.

According to Nat Tural, president of the ACS, "everybody thinks that stuff is so healthy, well they are wrong! We feed over 3 million students tons of granola and tofu, and all of them developed some kind of cancer".

Tural warned that earthy crunchies are the most susceptible to the cancer because they are the ones who eat most of the tofu and granola in the country.

"The best thing for those freaks, I mean all-natural wierdos to do is either start eating mass amounts of twinkies, or, if they want to stay with down to earth foods they should start to eat dirt and roots, even small twigs are good," said Tural.

The Amherst area could be in lots of trouble, according to town officials because this area is the highest consumer of the dangerous tofu and granola in the world.

Autum Leaf, owner of Earthfoods and Peoples Market in the UMass Student Union, said "like you know wow this concept is like you know too orgasmic for like you know verbal description. Like we here in you know like earthland are all sicking our fingers in the ground to like you know become one with nature in like you know a radical move."

Leaf said that the administration at UMass has passed a referendum to rename the liberal establishments Dirtmarket and Dirtfoods. Dishes like stirfried veggies and leaves, baked dirt with cream sauce and compressed dirt bars with dirtfuty will now be served.

"Like you can bet your Birkenstock sandles we are going to like protest this one," said leaf adding that there was nothing else to protest this week so this sounded as good as anything.

Other areas of campus that could be in trouble because of the ban on tufu and granola are members of the Radical Student Union, SCERA, and The Peacemakers who are all traditional consummers of the now deadly food.

Pig calling contest

By ZELDA FITZGERALD
Collegian Staff

The month of November will start off with a bang, or better, a squeal and a shout tomorrow with the University's first annual swine-calling contest, which is being sponcered as part of the University-wide "Lets Have a Different November This Year" program.

"Holy Moley" said Big Billy Footprint, who graduated from UMass in 1972 and hasn't been here since then. "I forgot what a one horse town Amherst was, jeez." Footprint was careful to pronounce the H in Amherst.

Footprint, who shovels snow off the rooves of Burger Kings when he's not winning big bucks "hollerin," is a renowned swine-caller and always has been. "And always will be," he hastens to add, with a frown of pride on his face.

First prize is a check for $100. "A hundred bucks," Footprint pondered. "Imagine that, Jeez."

Calls that have made Footprint famous for hollerin include: "Come here, stupid pink one," and "Little piggypoo, come yah doo." The Fort Lauderdale resident likes to make up his own swine calls. He said that the traditional swine calls, while they are easier to call, "do not fulfill my needs, creatively-speaking, at this time in my life."

The swine calling contest will take place from 4p.m. to 9 p.m. tomorrow at Alumni Stadium, 30 thousand are expected to attend.

Expected damage to stadium grounds is minimal. "I dont expect a problem with the pig thing tomorrow," said Tony Cinnamon, Head Groundskeeper for the University.

Chemist blows up

By ARTHUR DIMMESDALE
Collegian Corespondent

Noted chemist D.N. Ableson, speaking before a capacity crowd in the Campus Center auditorium last night as part of the Distinguished Visitors Program, suddenly burst into flames and was reduced into a pile of smouldering ashes before help could arrive.

Ableson was speaking about the feasibility of alternative fuels in the face of oil and natural gas shortages. Ten minutes into his speech, he appeared to be sweating heavily. Wiping his forehead with a napkin, he said, "Gee, it sure is getting hot in here."

Moments later, the podium exploded with a blinding flash as Ableson became consumed with flames. University Chanceilor Joseph Dufflebag, seated to Ableson's left, poured his drink on Ableson in an attempt to extinguish the flames. Dufflebag had apparently forgotten he was not drinking water, but rather a vodka martini which added to the intensity of the flames.

When asked why he was allowed to drink alcohol while the rest of the campus cannot because of no alcohol liability insurance, Dufflebag said, "My insurance policy leaves me personally responsible, but it's really my insurance company that is responsible. I don't know if they cover spontaneous combustion, though."

The Ableson tragedy is the latest in a string of bad luck and unexplained occurences that have plagued the Distinguished Visitors Program for the past five years. The first on record happened when former Red Sox pitcher Bill Lee appeared here five years ago. As a result of a freak accident involving a faulty microphone stand, was sent to the minor leagues and eventually released by the Montreal Expos.

Last spring, author Steven King was named in a plagiarism suit, moments after he finished speaking in the Campus Center. He said at the time: "I knew I shouldn't have come tonight. I just knew something ghoulish was going to happen."

The most recent incident occurred last month to Curtis and Lisa Sliwa, the founders of the Guardian Angels. After finishing their talk, the Slawas were robbed in their Campus Center hotel room. Neither was injured and the university offered to replace all lost possessions but Curtis Slewa refused, saying, " Let me the hell out of here. This place is haunted."

qu'est-que c'est?

"PSYCHO SQUASH" — A frenzied Stockbridge student hopelessly tries to kill an overzealous pumpkin which has grown out of control next to Parking Lot 71.

HOT/AIR

Star Wars is old hat

Larry Mouth

What's all this fuss about Star Wars? Hasn't this movie been released for five years already? I mean, it's not as if this is some sort of new technology now.

Geez, the way people talk, you would think it's some big deal that President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev are supposed to discuss it. If the leaders of the two largest nations of the world have nothing better to talk about than an old movie, then we must assume that Gorbachev is an actor also.

And just how is it that Star Wars is vital to our defense? Why are we giving the Pentagon billions of dollars for defense when the movie industry is responsible for our latest technology? Isn't there a conflict of interest when an actor president rewards his Hollywood buddies by making Star Wars our latest defense strategy?

And another thing, is the Soviet Union really the Evil Empire? I never saw anything about Darth Vader being a communist, or was that part in the Star Wars sequel that was a prequel? And what's with these prequels, anyway? They should just show the damn movies in order, or is disarray truly chic?

Just because the Soviets are behind us in culteral technology, doesn't mean we have a disparate ideology-- they have bread lines while we have movie lines. And speaking of lines, what is this news from Reagan about using the space shuttles for Star Wars research? Admit it, Ronnie, they're watching movies on their damn VCR up there while little robots do all the work. Are these astronauts just people with patronage jobs? Research, my ass.

Besides, if we are really serious about using movie ideas for weapons, why don't all those majors and generals just watch a few John Wayne movies. You know, where everyone is a patriot and people can win those decisive battles single-handedly, just like the Duke did. Show some of those flicks to our soldiers before they go out on the field of combat and we'd have more bloody, victorious patriots than we could stomach, and national security.

Which reminds me, if they're going to use Star Wars, then shouldn't colleges and universities be getting Department of Defense funding for college film crews? How come when they come up with a weapons idea, schools always do the reseacrh and then some multinational corporation builds it, but with Star Wars, some movie company gets all the bucks? Are America's temples of higher education chopped liver, Mr. President?

The only reward to the educational system so far has been sending one teacher up there. The view can't even be that great. Is this teacher supposed to come back and teach people about space, when they don't even know anything about special effects? They should just send up a film crew and then they wouldn't have to fake all of those movie tricks.

I don't know, maybe it's just me, but Star Wars is no big deal. I liked Pee Wee Herman's Big Adventure. Now that was an idea whose movie has come. I'm still working on my customized bicycle, a la Pee Wee.

Larry Mouth is not Laurence Soucie. Really.

We're not talking anymore

Clancy

How come I never read about dogs and other pets in the narrow-minded pages of the Collusion? Every day, people feel comfortable and justified in treating the animals of this nation like second-class citizens, yet the subject is never broached by the "esteemed" Board of Editors.

"They smell. They eat too much. Their breath smells bad. They bark/meow/chirp/grunt all the time. They go to the bathroom everywhere and never clean up after themselves," people say. What do humans expect from us, after all we're animals-- you're the humans. Exactly how civilized do you think you would look if we weren't around to be compared to?

I guess that what really makes me boil is that all I ever hear about pets is complaints. If the United States, the greatest nation in the world, doesn't value its canine and feline allies, why shouldn't we turn to the communist bloc countries for continued support?'

Many, many pets have been fully versed in the radical theories of government, including Marxism, Leninism, socialism, and Buddhism, to name just a few. Believe me, after many a catnip over-indulgence, we animals have jokingly discussed the violent overthrow of the status quo, and the installation of an animalistic majority rule government.

Do you realize the immense voting bloc of power pets could attain if it were a system of "one mammal, one vote," instead of "one person, one vote," like it is now? Trust me, one of human's best friends, it would not take long at all to organize the pets of America. Know how?

Well, first, I'm going to tell you a secret. Don't ever repeat it, and forget it as soon as you finish reading this. The real reason that we never clean up after we go to the bathroom is because this is our silent, universally understood (by animals, that is), and continual method of communication.

If you don't believe me, how do you think we always find our way back home, no matter where you dump us? Or, how do we always know how to find our own species who are "in the mood," or in heat, as you lustful humans refer to it? Or, how do you think we selectively learn your vocabulary, by your baby talk and horrible disfigurement of language?

Think about it. Long and hard. Then think some more. We're serious about this. It took us two months to organize this letter and find a volunteer (me) who wanted to spend the time typing this on my "master's" wordprocesser. We are not taking the continual stream of insults and maltreatment dished to us daily by you humans any longer.

We're mad as hell, and we're not going to take it anymore

Now sit. Good human.

Clancy the wonder dog is a Collusion canine staff member.

Letters

Joe's waiting patiently for change

The Blue Wall has finally been turned into something worthwhile—a campus cafe. Unfortunately the Blue Wall stocks coffee beans from the most repressive regimes in the world today. How can I drink Honduran coffee knowing full well that country harbors the contras who torture and maim peaceful Nucaraguans to the tune of $12 million damage yearly?

Last year the Campus Center Board of Governors recommended the discontinuation of Coors beer on campus due to the repressive nature of the Coors family. This year the Central American coffee grinds which emanate and entice our souls ought to be banned from the Blue Wall and everywhere else on campus which stocks them.

"People's Market," the campus bastion of progressivism hypocritically offers us the best beans from the worst regimes. No matter its attractive name, java from a central american country is a South American country is an African country is a repressive regime is unfair is not right and certainly is against the intentions and better judgment of this institution.

I'm waiting patiently.

Joe Summotion
Amherst

Alcohol abuse and abusive

Alcohol turns people into idiots—complete and utter idiots. It promps otherwise normal human beings to take most juvenile, unthinking and unproductive attitudes, such as screaming obscenities between dormitories, or flagging strangers with the middle finger from the back seat of a foul-smelling sedan.

Alcohol has somehow been drilled into our campus conscious as something necessary for a good time. On Thursdays through Saturdays the lines form for the package stores, and the promis fo a happy time makes normal students appear like recipients of emergency aid in Africa. Instead, it's a shot of "fun" from a laminated tap, and the possibility of a pick-up later on.

Alcohol has done more damage to this world than any other substance. Because of this, the age of legal consumption is 21 in most states. Why not make it 91? And why not close the package stores one day a week as a sort of religious observance? Retail alcohol are distributors are as bad as dope peddlers. Age restrictions are meaningless because anyone with a month and throat can drink. Those who believe they are celebrating with alcohol are merely toasting the profit-makers, and attesting to their lack of originality and need for a crutch.

Red Skelton

All letters to the editor must be accompanied by a non-refundable $20 donation to Larry's Parking Ticket Fund. Submissions must also be typewritten, double- spaced, margins to be set at 599 and 666, and include a list of 10 different headline suggestions, none of which will be taken seriously.

Letters must also contain voting records, FBI file numbers, student numbers, social security numbers, credit card numbers (and the expiration dates), checking and savings account numbers, two signed blank checks or withdrawal slips, which may be published depending on your position and the amount of blackmail involved. Letters may or may not be published pending the editor's agreement.

ARTS

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

BEAM ME UP SCOTTIE — Lisa Lisa is "beamed up" by her leaders. "There is no intelligent life down here," she wails.

Grateful Dead to break up

By MATKINS
Collegian Staff

In a surprise move, the Grateful Dead announced yesterday that they are splitting up. the decision has fans around the world in a state of great distress. No one is quite sure what impact the move will have on the illegal LSD industry.

"I'm to old for this nonsense," said the graying and obese, unofficial leader of the band, Jerry Garcia. It has been rumoured that Garcia has one too many times lost his temper at fellow band member, Bob Weir.

"Jerry is god," said Weir. It has also been reported that Weir is upset because Garcia refused to call him "Mr. Wonderful."

Loyal fans known as "Dead Heads," are reportedly grieving over the loss of their favorite pastime (or waste of time). "Where will we go from here?, one fan sobbed."

"A short twenty years they've been together and already they've gone to pot? How can this be?," asked Mars Earthy, a fan who has 'dead'icated her 18 years of life to the band.

One of the questions looming over everyone's heads, what will happen to the vital drug industry? Officials estimate 1/3 of the nations Gross National Product is derived from the sale of illegal intoxicants at Grateful Dead concerts. "The economy is certainly looking grim. Wer'e hoping we can convince Jerry to go just one more year," said Dollaren Sense, of the presidents Office of Management and Budget.

UM's grossest

By UGLEE ESTE
Collegian Staff

Looking gross? And why not? Last year, we realized that if a bunch of California kids could become rich just by selling a calender filled with surfers, then we could also make a fortune by designing a "Looking Good" calender geared especially toward East Coast students, featuring the men fo UMass Amherst.

Unfortunately, after three months of searching, we could only find eight good-looking men at UMass, (two of whom were really Hampshire students taking classes here. None of these handsome men said they wanted their faces associated with the university.

Our solution: Looking Gross, a calender that offers a real alternative to the other male calenders now available.

Consider the advantages!

It won't make your boyfriend jealous.

It comes up and down easily, allowing you to place it over your more erotic male posters when prudish friends, or parents come to visit.

At least one "Looking Gross" boy will remind you of someone you know.

Included are:

The Rambomaniac: Loves America, but can't spell it.

The Political Eco Freak: Believes in bathing, in principle.

The ladykiller: sees himself as God's gift to women, proving it is truly better to give than receive.

Looking Gross, twelve month's worth of seven years bad luck. Just in time for Haloween!

A new flick in town

By EGGBERT CHAINSAW
Collegian Drug-Tester

Can you see the rainbows? I can. The voices in my head tell me to kill S&M gerbils and rant about movies.

The latest blockbuster from Hollywood is busting blocks all over the country. "A Midsummer's Night Misogyny or How to use food processors to kill 42,000 naked sluts who deserved it anyway: Part VIII: Quimby goes to lunch" may seem like your average movie fare, but don't be fooled by the simple title.

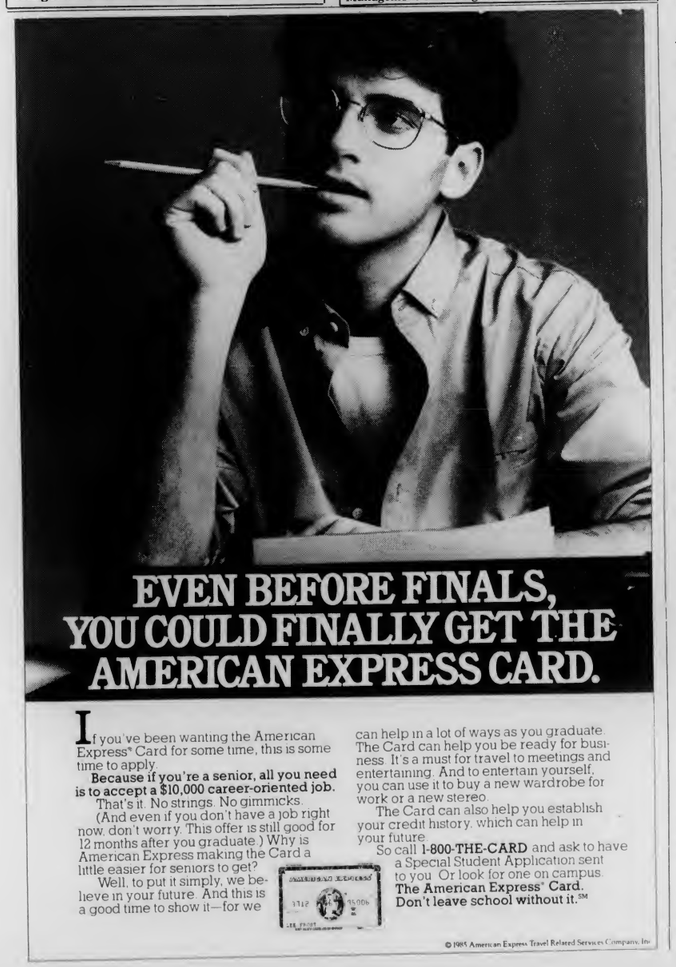
This masterpiece is brilliant, simply brilliant. It transcends the usual Hollywood intellectual claptrap so much it makes your toes water. Most of the stupid people around here (you know the kind, they can read) won't be able to understand the amazing brilliance of this fine piece of cinema. Only really, really clever people like me who get all their answers from cereal boxes can see that this continuing saga of Quimby the slaughtering surtax accountant is really an amazingly subtle discussion of Marxist lesbian seperatism.

The director Phallus "Parrot-Eater" Felch and Mongolian screenwriter Wussy Pudd Pudd "Keep women in the house, use them as rugs" Wolfgargle, have created one loopy loopy did anyone see the platapus movie that simply must be seen when in a catatonic drug-induced stupor. Fungus.

Real pretty cats here

PICTURES OF MY CAT
Museum of Fine Arts, Boston
Through Nov. 1
By LIZ THE-WOMAN-IN-RED
Collegian Stiff

After all that silly fuss about all those dumb, boring paintings in stupid girly colors by some dead French painter, the Museum of Fine Arts (MFA) has finally come up with a worthwhile exhibit.



Pictures of My Cat is exactly that—pictures of my personal, cute little five-month-old kittycat, Ziffers. I took these pictures with my Kodak Disc camera last summer, when he was even more adorable than he is now, and they came out really good, which is why they're at the museum, and like, I'm wicked psyched.

The photos are eloquent and expressive; one gets a true sense of the furry feline's personality, indeed, one can almost hear him purring like a little lawn mower. He sits nobly atop a stereo, (mine, actually), and one becomes immediately aware of his interest in music, his cultural awareness, and his highbrow pursuits.

Which is not to say this kitty's not down to earth. Another photo shows him diligently clipping coupons. His concern for his financial assets is made clear in his furrowed brow and tightly set mouth. He'd rather have a nickel in his pocket than give it to the people who manufacture Litter Green. Smart kitty.

And he's careful to watch his kittenish figure. Ziffers knows those Kal Kan Chicken Dinners can add up, so he weighs in every day, as we see in this really cute picture that I took while sitting on the john.

But dieting alone does not a healthy kitty make. In another photo, we see Ziffers untying the shoelaces on his Nikes, before a brisk jog with his female friend, Fluffy. His athletic prowess and well-developed muscles come through sharp and clear as he tries to pull the laces from his claws. No nerdy scratching post for him!

Girltalk

Ask Beth and Sue-pros at problems

Sue and Beth answer all

Dear Beth and Sue,
My boyfriend has lost interest in me, I'm afraid. I think it might be because the other night I went "all the way." Can you tell me what to do? I cry every night.
Desperate in Amherst.

Dear Desperate,
Well, looks like you blew it. Didn't anyone tell you the surest way to lose a man is to sleep with him? I'm sure now he's with a nice girl who he can respect and bring home to his mommy. I don't blame him. Why buy the cow when you can get the milk for free.

●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●

Dear Beth and Sue,
I'm so ugly and worthless and fat, I can't stand it. My mother says I'm pretty, but I can't get a date. Can you help me please?
Really Hideous in Hadley.

Dear Hideous in Hadley,
Have you checked the library tower stairwells and bathroom walls for phone numbers of men looking for fun and frolic? I'm sure they'd accomodate you no matter how hideous you may be. As for being really hideous, sorry, your'e bumming, sweetie.

●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●

Dear Beth and Sue,
I'm a very insecure person... do you understand? Well, even I you know, I need some advice on how to stand up for myself, and not to be afraid of rejection. Help me? Please?
Scared Shitless

Dear Shit,
Sorry. Too busy.

OUR LETTER POLICY
In order to submit a letter to "Ask Beth and Sue," you must be really desperate, and of course...a girl. Absolutely NO BOYS allowed. No women allowed either. We can help you only if your problems are petty and meaningless. Please don't ever ask us about all those radical things like the ERA, feminism, etc. That's just not our bag and our boyfriends would be totally grossed out if we talked about those sorts of things. You gals understand don't you? Just to clue you gals in, Beth's specialty lies in the field of perfume and clothing usage. Sue is well versed on "what is the proper way to do things for nice gals."

Dear Beth and Sue,
My mother's brother's best friend's uncle's daughter's husband has been making passes at me big time. I don't want to hurt anyone, but this guy is quite a hunk of meat, get the picture? Should I stay away or really go for it?
Lolita

Dear Lolita,
This is a potentially dangerous situation, and we think that you should seek professional help.
P.S. whats the guys phone number? sounds kinky!

●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●

Dear Beth and Sue,
It's half way through the semester and I don't know where my classes are. I've been to Whitmore, but no one seems able to help me. What should I do?
Flunking Out

Dear Flunking Out,
Perhaps you should go back to Whitmore, find the registrar's office and withdraw for your classes. If this is too hard, then try finding your way home.

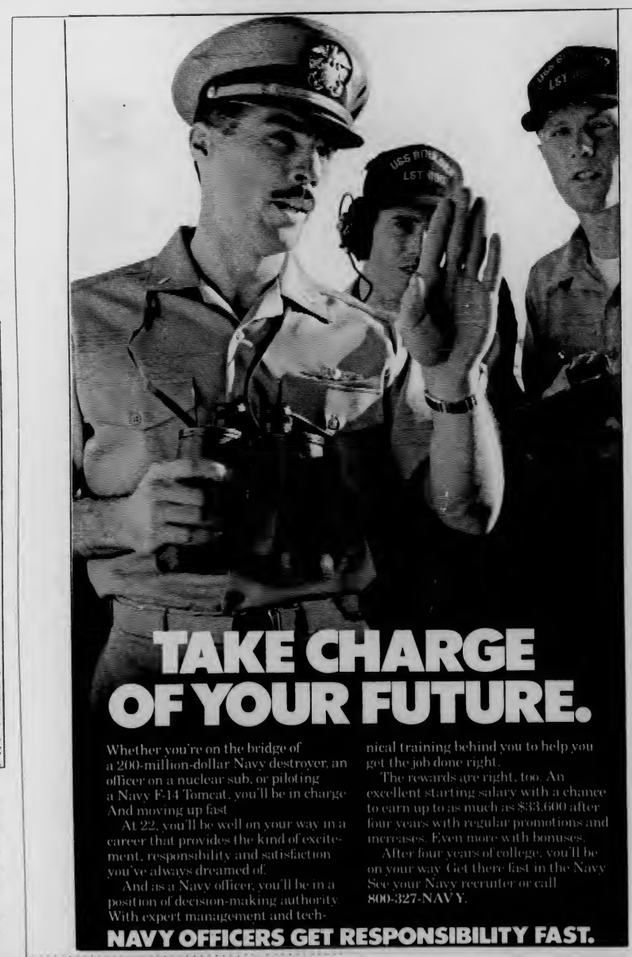
Gossip

By SUSAN ATE and SANDY DIED

This campus has been buzzing with activity, lately, and I mean buzzing!

A little birdie told me...well actually it was a big, black hawk which let me in on all these UMass tid-bits. Here goes...

We heard that the Princess Diana and Prince Charles of Amherst, Joe Fluffy and Anne Waxler's marriage is on the rocks. Seems they had a spiff about Joe's stance on the divestment issue. And whats even better, she has had a slew of male callers of late. Old Fluffy boy better keep on his toes!!!!



And what's this we hear about Stacy Rots? One of our ISPY correspondents saw her at The Spoke last week where she was really whooping it up with fellow SGA types. All this on Alcohol Awareness Week! What was that holier than thou attitude, all about anyway, Stace?

Have you seen the new night guy over at the Mobil Station lately? That's right, you guessed it. It's our illustrious Provost, who I guess isn't so illustrious after all. Things are tough all over.

All kidding aside, something very serious is happening on this campus right now. Mc Carthyism at its best... or its worse! In a venture entitiled, "Acuracy in ExtraCurricula", Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, Dennis Mason, and other unnamed administrators have been hiding under dormitory beds and in closets in an attempt to "determine exactly what it is that students do behind closed doors." "We want to know what these kids are doing instead of studying. How they watch TV, sleep, eat, and who they do it with. Most important...are they doing it without bias; are they doing it accurately?" Mason said.

Issue Staff:

Editors BethAnne Moskov, Susan Eaton
Copy Editors BethAnne Moskov, Susan Eaton
Layout Tech BethAnne Moskov
Photo Tech Derek Roberts
Production: BethAnne Moskov, oh yea ★Pete Soderburg★, Matkins, Kelly Sieger, Nance Rivers
Special thanks to: Anne McCrory, Jill Lang, Steve Higgins, Pete Abraham, Larry Bouchie, Photo staff
Disclaimer:
The Halloween issue is intended to be humorous, and not offensive. If you find it offensive, call the Collegian office between 3 and 6 a.m. at 545-3500.

He sucked her eye out

NOBEL SUCK — Dr. Bernard Lown, co-president of International Physicians of Nuclear War, sucks the eye from his wife after he accepted the 1985 Peace Prize on behalf of the organization.

Fun with Chess

MOSCOW(AP)
Here, in algebraic notation, are the moves made Thursday in the 19th game of the World Chess Championship between Garri Kasparov , playing White, and titlist Anatoly Karpov: Nimzo Indian Defense.

White	Black
1. d4	nf6
2. c4	e6
3. nc3	ne4
5. qc2	f5
6. g3	nc6
7. bg2	o-o
8. o-o	b:c3
9. b:c3	na5
10. c5	d6
11. bd5	f8
12. ch8	m9
13. h8	c5m
14. s7	c89
15. d3	ck
16. d3	h8j
17. ds	ji9
18. o-o	h8
19. d8	xso-o
20. hi	sc8
21. g3	nc9
22. h8	x9
23. ch	0p
24. nj	09
25. d3	lo
26. n9	p6
27. f6	no-o
28. mn8	0m
29. ce9	oo
30. s7	2b
31. sf	n9
32. d3	c7
33. a9	mp
34. si	98
35. n8	5m
36. cF	3n
37. xi	m0
38. n9	m1
39. c3e	d
40. n8m	c

Horror Scope

Airheads: Watch out for breaking mirrors and falling ladders today. Do not partake of substance abuse; the effects may be irreversible.

Bulls: Little ghosts and goblins who turn off your alarm clock before it goes off will make you see red as you oversleep an exam.

Gems: Royalty beware. Wicked witches will want to wrangle the rings from your fingers and the nails from your toes. Have some witches' brew for dindin to sample them yourself.

Moon Children: This is your day. Visitors abound on their annual convention; some heavy broom action will sweep past your environs.

Lions: Control that temper aroused by pesky children prowling the area, giggling hysterically and threatening you with deeds unknown. Or if you can't, just steal their candy.

Virgins: Go for it; the spirit calleth. And you can always redeem yourselves tomorrow on All Soul's Day.

Lizards: Quick! Get down to the Southwest maze! They're having a cattle call for eels of your type for the upcoming updates of Frankenstein and Halloween 15.

Scorpions: Wild karma enhance your poison and the pool of willing victims.

Scabs: You know who you are.

Candy corn: Your most popular day of the year. Enjoy it.

Aquacreatures: Your calling is to the Campus Pond. Be careful of wolves en route.

Pieces: Time to gather yourselves together. Even the strange people are in the groove today.

SPORTS

Collegian photos by the Missing Link

Quarterback Dave Palazzi (above) and head coach Bob Stull (below) are leaving UMass.

Palazzi, McKeown and Stull leave UM

Players transfer, coach to Westfield State

By R.U. SERIOUS
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts football coach Bob Stull announced yesterday that he will resign his position to take over the job at nearby Division 3 doormat Westfield State University.

The startling announcement came minutes before two of the Minutemen's best players, freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi and freshman linebacker John McKeown, called a press conference to say that have transfered to Division 1 power Oklahoma.

Stull, who in two seasons led UMass to an 8-11 record, but was 5-3 this season, said that he had met the challenge of bringing the UMass program back to respectability and wants to try his luck at Westfield State, a winless team that is considered one of the weakest teams in the nation.

"Life's a challenge," said Stull. "This will be my biggest."

Palazzi, who has led UMass to a 4-1 record as an option quarterback, will sit-out a season before being able to play for the Sooners. McKeown will also have to wait a year before being able to suit up. Both are looking forward to playing for coach Barry Switzer and being able to compete on the Division 1 level.

"I think that Oklahoma will be a great team for me and John to play for," said Palazzi. "Coach Switzer is a great coach and he said that I'll have free reign on the field."

McKeown, who will also play baseball for the Sooners, said that he felt Brian Bosworth, the Sooners All-American linebacker, would have to beat him out to start.

"Brian Bosworth has nothing on me," said McKeown. "I may be a little small, but I'm tough."

The moves came as a complete surprise, catching the assembled press corps off-guard. UMass athletic director Frank McInerney would not comment, rushing from the room past reporters.

"They are tremendous athletes," said the coach. "Lou Carnesseca told me that UMass was a great place to get transfers."

Carnesseca, the St. John's basketball coach, has former UMass basketball player John Hempel playing for him this season.

"My work is done at UMass," said Stull. "Westfield State deserves a good football team, which is what I plan to give them. Ever since I've been an assistant at the University of Washington, I've dreamed about coaching on the Division 3 level."

Collegian photo by H. Hogan

University of Massachusetts defensive coordinator Jim Reid (left) will lost the services of freshman linebacker John McKeown (right) due to the freshman's transfering to the University of Oklahoma. The linebacker joins freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi in leaving the Minutemen. Coach Bob Stull is also leaving; going to nearby Westfield State. McKeown, the teams defensive leader, expects to replace All-American Brian Bosworth for the Sooners.

Ostendarp to coach Minutemen

Amherst College coach Jim Ostendarp, who earlier this week turned down an offer for an ESPN broadcast of his games against Williams, is expected to be named the football coach at UMass.

"My first move to be get sports information director Howie Davis fired and cancel the UMass radio network, I don't want any publicity," said the crusty coach.

"I'll make UMass as much of a backward program as Amherst's," Ostendarp said. "Nobody will know, or care, about us."

Basketball, baseball cut to clubs

Money saved to be used for football dorm

By I.M. RIPPED
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's and women's basketball teams and the baseball team will be demoted to club sport status with the money saved to be used to build a dormitory for football players.

"It's a difficult move to make, but one we felt would be good for the school in the long run," said UM athletic director Frank McInerney. "And the football players are going to love the dorm. It has a pool, a weight room and a well-stocked bar."

The basketball teams will have one season of varsity competition left before starting a schedule that will include the likes of Holyoke Community College, North Adams State, UMass' own Stockbridge College team and Greenfield Community College.

The baseball team's spring trip to Florida has been cancelled. The team will instead tour the Berkshires in a school bus, playing local high schools.

"Get off, our own dorm," said one football player when asked about the plans.

Soccer team investigated

So that's why they win so many games.

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer is under investigation by the NCAA for over 100 recruiting violations, including payments of large sums of money to star players.

UMass is the first team in the nation, other than a football or basketball team, to be inverstigated for such serious charges.

"They told me to build a winning team, so I did," said UM coach Kalekeni Banda. "Nobody told me about any rules."

—deGerry Simas

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 40 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Friday, November 1, 198

Harassment has increased, report says

By ANDREW WOLFF
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts officials yesterday issued a statement condemning campus discrimination and harassment in an effort, as one official said, to reaffirm the University's stance against violence.

The statement, issued on stationary from Vice Chancellor Dennis Madson's office and signed by deans and department leaders under Madson, comes in the wake of news that sexual assaults and harassment on campus this semester have risen and are now reaching a plateau.

"There are more incidences of asault and sexual violence not being reported," Madson said after the statement was released. "Not many of these reports are going to the police authorities on our campus."

"We must vigorously continue campus efforts to eliminate both obvious and subtle acts of violence and prejudice. We reaffirm the University's commitment to prevent discrimination on such bases as race, religion, gender, age, sexual orientation, handicap, or veteran status," the statement said.

"The opinion of most of the people is that things are not worse, but they are not good," Madson said when asked why the statement was issued. "There are a number of women that have indicated they have been attacked."

Madson, who did not have statistics on attacks this semester, said that the statement, addressed to students, faculty and staff, is part of a larger effort by members of his staff to combat crime on campus.

However, when reached at home last night, Gerry Scoppettuolo, advocate for research and training at the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, said the statement is not enough.

"When it comes to the University spending money to actively combat prejudice, advocating this is a nice thing, but you're looking at crumbs," he said.

TRICKS ARE FOR KIDS—An Amherst family prepares for the annual ritual of trick-or treating last night. University students are expected to celebrate the holiday more, as the administration recently relaxed its previously tight Halloween security policy.

Opposers of rent review have time

Board needs state approval before Town Meeting vote

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Opponents of a proposal to establish a rent review board in Amherst which would hear complaints of excessive rental costs may be able to turn public sentiment against the issue before Town Meeting votes on it in May.

Although Town Meeting voted to send a petition to the state legislature requesting authority to create a review board, the request must be granted before the town can act. Then, Town Meeting must vote in May to pass a by-law which will establish a review board.

"I presume that this will sail through the legislature without much trouble," rent review sponsor Ken Mosakoski said.

But the measure will meet oppostion before it is voted on by Town Meeting, primarily through the Pioneer Valley Housing Association.

"We'll try to point out to people that it will cost homeowners and people in non-controlled housing," association spokeswoman Jane Nevin said.

Rent review would hurt students, Nevin said, because year-round Amherst residents would occupy all the lower cost housing under review with students having to settle for higher cost "non-controlled housing."

But Mosakowski said that any tenant who feels rent is excessive would be able to file a complaint with the review board.

"Whether a person is a student or a non-student that person can appeal what they feel is an excessive rent," he said. But Mosakowski added, student appeals may not be granted as often because they usually divide rent costs among many people.

The PVHA says that rent review would also cause the deterioration of Amherst properties, which are now in "excellent condition," because of a review proposal section which allows the review board to determine what is a fair income for landlords. Because the board will not consider money set aside in a capital improvements fund as non-income, Nevin said that landlords will make property repairs less often.

"Painting will not get done as often and carpets will not be replaced as often," Nevin said.

But rent review would create a mechanism to guarantee that landlords maintain their properties, Mosakowski said, because a landlord would have to file a rent increase proposal with theboard. The board could then determine if the property has been properly maintained before granting an increase.

"The message will be 'if you want a rent increase, you better fix the place up,' " Mosakowski said, adding that review also enables tenants to air complaints of health violations.

"There are some very serious cases of violations of health codes where the tenants simply did not know where to go," Mosakowski said. "Now they can go to the review board."

Nevin said that the Amherst housing market will suffer from a lack of development because of regulation imposed by the review board.

"Part of the capitalistic system is shot," she said, "you're not going to see a whole lot of people rushing to invest on Amherst."

May's Town Meeting decision to establish a rent review board will depend largely on the make-up of the town representatives, which will change with the new spring elections.

"Anything can happen," Mosakowski said. "This town is notorious for reversing itself."

Collegian photo by Ron Sachton

WHICH WEIGHS MORE?—Malik Thompson hangs out with a Halloween guest in the Van Meter House cluster office. His mother, Kandi, is the cluster's Assistant Resident Director

Inside:

MASSPIRG needs 2,000 signatures.....3
What's at the movies.....10
Football faces UConn.....16

"I am no longer angry, am well-stocked with eggs and toilet paper, and am anxiously awaiting my brother's arrival,"

—Mart Boulerice on the University Halloween policy, see page 7

WORLD/NATIONAL

AP Laser photo

Tatiana Yankelevich, daughter of Yelena Bonner, who is the wife of Soviet dissident Andre Sakharov, looks at the telephone yesterday after another unsuccessful attempt to call the Soviet Union about the release of her mother

Bonner will be allowed to leave, Soviets say

NEWTON (AP)—Govenment officials report Yelena Bonner will be allowed to leave the Soviet Union to seek medical treatment, but her family here is apprehensive because they cannot telephone her.

"I believe that we must not forget the possibility that the Soviets are just dragging their feet until the upcoming meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leaders and then nothing will happen," her Daughter, Tatiana Yankelevich said yesterday.

"I'm very alarmed and it makes me worry very much," she added.

She commented after the second straight day the family tried unsuccessfully to place a telephone call to Mrs. Bonner in the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Bonner, 60, and her husband, Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov, 64, are living in internal exile in the city of Gorky, about 250 miles east of their former home in Moscow.

Both are reported ill and Mrs. Bonner has tried repeatedly to win permission to seek treatment in the West for eye and heart ailments.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb reported Wednesday the United States has "reliable information that Mrs. Bonner has been granted permission to leave the Soviet Union."

The Soviet ambassador to West Germany, Vladimir Semyonov, earlier told The Associated Press in Bonn he believes the reports that she could leave for medical care were true, but he said he did not know when or where.

Other relatives said Mrs. Bonner may have delayed her departure to make sure her dissident husband gets proper care while shw is away.

"She might be trying to make sure that in the time she is abroad he is in a hospital in Moscow and there is somebody to care for him," said Mrs. Yankelevich's husband, Efrem, late Wednesday.

Reagan to propose new limitations on weapons

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan announced yesterday that he is making a new nuclear weapons limitation proposal to the Soviet Union and will request that the current round of negotiations in Geneva be extended to consider it.

In a nationally televised statement, Reagan said the latest Soviet offer "unfortunately fell considerably short" in certain areas. But, he said, there were also positive "seeds" for an agreement and that he had built on them with the new U.S. offer.

Significantly, he called both sides' proposals "milestones" in the quest for reductions of nuclear weapons. "I believe progress is indeed possible if the Soviet leadership is willing to match our own commitment to a better relationship," Reagan said.

Just before his announcement, Reagan told four Soviet journalists in an interview that he would accept some of the figures proposed by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who called last month for a reduction of about 50 percent in missiles and bombers carrying nuclear warheads.

Reagan said the U.S. Offer calls for "deep cuts" in offensive weapons, research on defensive systems and "no cheating." But the president said he would divulge no further details. He said the American proposal would be offered in Geneva today.

"It is my hope that our new proposal would enable both our nations to start moving away from ever-larger arsenals," the president said.

The Soviet proposal, in a letter to Reagan from Gorbachev last month, and the U.S. response are designed to make headway in the slow-moving negotiations before the two leaders meet at the summit in the Swiss city Nov. 19-20.

"Arms control is a result," Reagan said. "First you've got to eliminate the suspicions and paranoia between us" He called the U.S. proposal serious and detailed.

The new U.S. proposal was also sent directly to Gorbachev and is "part of a process of interaction that we hope will lead somewhere," Secretary of State Geoge P. Shultz said later at at news conference.

But he also streesed U.S. concerns over human rights and regional conflicts, and declined to place halting the nuclear arms race at the top of the agenda. "There are many issues and they are entwined," Shultz said.

He denied the Reagan administration was engaged in public relations rivalry with Gorbachev. "It is not a propaganda game," Shultz said.

HAPPY HALLOWEEN—Sharon Richard paints the face of 8-year-old Keishe Verdin of Dulac, La., as part of a Halloween celebration in an evacuation center in Howma, La., yesterday. About 1200 people remain insheltersafter the damage caused by Hurricane Juan.

300 SMU students sick

DARTMOUTH (AP)—Samples of food from Southern Massachusetts University were being tested yesterday after more than 300 students fell ill after eating at the dining hall, officials said.

The students suffered stomach cramps, vomiting and diarrhea—all symptoms of food poisoning, said SMU spokesman Greg Stone.

The affected students were being interviewed by school health officials to learn what they ate at the dining hall Wednesday night, Stone said. "We're looking for some common thread," he said.

Turkey and pizza were two of the items on the dinner menu that were being checked, he said. School officials also are checking items served at lunch, he said.

Stone said 30 students went to St. Luke's Hospital emergency room in New Bedford some time after 9 p.m. Wednesday after suffering severe cramps and vomiting. All were treated and released, he said.

The school's health officials treated the other students on campus, he said.

Today's Staff:

Night Editor.....John Yonce
Copy Editor.....Jim Patriquin
Photo Technician.....Maria Bull
Photo Technician.....Rob Salon
Production Supervisor....Norm Achin
Production.Laura Bell, Pia Marchand, Amy Constant, Paula Saucier

Herrell's Ice Cream
Thomas Murphy 2nd
Old South St. Entrance
Northamp. ton
Open Noon 'till 11:30 Sun. Thurs
Noon 'till Midnight Fri. & Sat.
586-4837
Herrell's Ice Cream
The Original and Still the Best!

BARRY ERIC ILY
1. . .in a million - XOX

Storm heads inland, causing $1 billion damages

PENSACOLA, Fla., (AP)—Erratic Tropical Storm Juan returned to the Gulf of Mexico and spun briefly back up to near hurricane strength yesterday then headed inland over rain-soaked Alabama and Florida after causing more than $1 billion damage in Louisiana.

But the storm weakened again after it rolled ashore near Gulf Shores, Ala., southeast of Mobile near the Florida border, and moved toward the northeast at 15 to 20 mph on a path that would take it across southeastern Alabama and into Georgia, the National Weather Service said.

No damage or flooding was reported in Gulf Shores or nearby Foley when the storm's center passed over. "We've had thunderstorms with more wind," said Foley police dispatcher Walter Hemmert.

Gale warnings were posted from Port Arthur, Texas, to Fort Myers, Fla., and tornado warnings were issued for parts of Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

Thunderstorms spread across the region and tides reached 4 to 6 feet above northwestern Florida.

Late in the morning, Juan carried squalls up to 70 mph, with gusts to near hurricane force, mostly over the open water.

But during the afternoon its highest sustained winds were estimated at 50 to 60 mph, mainly over the water. At 5 p.m. EST, Juan's broad center was near latitude 31.2 north, longitude 86.9 west, near Brewton, Ala., or 55 miles north-northeast of Pensacola.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham cut short a trip to Washington and urged coastal residents to be ready to evacuate, as they did ahead of Hurricane Elena during the Labor Day weekend. However, no evacuations were ordered because officials did not want motorists jamming roads while tornadoes were forecast.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace declared a state of emergency and the Emergency Management Agency opened shelters in coastal cities.

At least seven people had been killed by the sudden, late-season storm since it sprawled along the Louisiana coast Sunday. Seven people were unaccounted for, but four others aboard a sailboat were reported safe Thursday more than two days after they were reported missing

Water began slowly receding in tidal Louisiana and Misisippi as wind behind Juan shifted to the north, and some people were allowed to return home.

Resource politics lecture at Amherst

The Founder and Executive Director of the Political Economy Research Center in Bozeman, Mont., Dr. John Baden, will present a lecture at Amherst College today titled "Conservation and Free Enterprise: The Emerging Synthesis."

The lecture, at 3 p.m. in the Converse Hall Assembly Room, is the third in an ongoing series which began five years ago as part of parents' weekend festivities.

Baden is the contributing editor of Managing the Commons and Bureaucracy vs. Environment and co-author of Natural Resources: Bureaucratic Myths and Environmental Management.

Baden is an expert in the fields of public policy and administration and political economy. He has written and lectured extensively on the benefits of examining governmental and private management of natural resources. He has said one of his goals is to help build the intellectual foundations for policy reforms consistent with the traditional American values of individual freedom and responsibility.

Baden has a strong background in natural resources related issues. He has served as Forest Service Consultant, taught forest and political science. His work has been published in Public Choice and Journal of Legal Studies.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

—PETER DELANI

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

HAPPY TRAILS...—Students from Theresa Mergener's intermediate one class practice basic horse riding stills yesterday at Tillson Farm

Acid rain bills need signatures

By LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

Seeking to gather an additional 2000 signatures in its battle against acid rain, the University of Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group is calling tomorrow "Saturday 2000."

Fearing that bills calling for an acid rain reduction will die in the Legislature, the group began a lobbying effort six weeks ago to put the question on the ballot.

"This will be the biggest single day of signature gathering," Shawn Baird, a member of the group said. "We usually average 500 signatures a day."

Baird said the group will target several area grocery stores and a craft fair in Hadley.

The group must collect 61,000 signatures by Nov. 20 to get the question on the November 1986 budget, Cindy Jaques, the former statewide chairperson for MASSPIRG, said. Jaques said the proposal for acid rain reduction had never reached the floor of the Legislature for a vote, but "if the public qualifies a bill for a vote the Legislature must vote.

"Students have never taken on an event of this magnitude," she said. "We're setting the political agenda for the state."

Andy Miller, a member of the Amherst chapter of MASSPIRG said the group is asking for a 30 percent reduction of industrial sulfur dioxide emissions by 1990.

Three-quarters of sulfuric acids are emitted by electric generating facilities, he said. MASSPIRG's proposal seeks to reduce emissions by requiring electric generating plants to burn low sulfur fuel. Plants would also have the option of installing scrubbers or filters within smokestacks to improve air quality. Miller said the proposal does not make companies stick to any one plan.

Baird said the bill would not cost taxpayers anything. He said the group is also collecting signatures for a proposal which would set up a citizens' utility board to review rate hikes. "It's an effective way of fighting unfair costs," he said. "This board would fight to stop utilities from passing on the costs of the acid rain legislation."

Results from an acid rain monitoring project at the University indicate that 6 percent of the state's water bodies are "acidified," meaning that they can no longer support acquatic life. Baird said the state spends $2 million a year "dumping lime into the Quabbin (reservoir) to negate the trend."

Baird said the rainfall acidity level in Massachusetts is equal to vinegar. "It beats on cars," he said.

Local, national walks support world peace

By SANDRA DIAS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Peacemakers, in collaboration with student groups from the Five Colleges, will sponsor a 10-kilometer walk-a-thon to raise funds for a cross-nation peace march.

The local march will begin at 10 a.m. tomorrow at the Campus Center circle. Marchers will walk along North Pleasant Street to Pine Street and then back to campus along East Pleasant Street.

Both the local Peace on Foot march and the Great Peace March, a national peace movement, were created by the international citizen's organization PRO-Peace. The marchs aim to force governments around the world to eradicate nuclear weapons, according to David Mixner, director of the organization.

A founder of the Vietnam Moratorium Committee in the '60s, Mixner said, "The idea that I had to do something about this massive nuclear build up came when my seven-year-old niece told me she was afraid she would die in a nuclear war."

PRO-Peace, which stands for People Reaching Out for Peace, has a staff of professionals in media, law, government and other fields. The Great Peace March will start in March in Los Angeles and end in Washington D.C.

"We expect to have people from all walks of life," said Mixner. "We already have 7000 applicants and we expect to reach 15,000. We will try to select a broad spectrum of people, from students to housewives to businessmen and women, so that whether we walk through Springfield, Utah or Harlem, the people in those places will welcome us and will be able to relate to us."

Mixner said he hopes to kick off the event with a concert by Bruce Springsteen, Madonna and Don Henley in the Los Angeles Colliseum.

Five thousand people will leave their jobs, schools and families to make the nine-month hike across the country, according to Mixner.

Technology's impact on jobs studied

By STEPHEN JOYCE
Collegian Correspondent

A national study on the effect of technological innovation in employment is being led by a University of Massachusetts economics professor.

The study, sponsored by the National Academies of Sciences and Engineering and the Institute of Medicine, is being conducted by a 21-member panel includes economists from Stanford, Harvard and Carnegie-Mellon Universities. The panel is directed by Dr. Leonard A. Rapping, who is on leave from the University and a visiting professor at the University of Notre Dame.

"We will carefully examine both the job elimination effect and the job creating effect," Rapping said in a telephone interview. "This involves an examination of new processes like containerization and computer-assisted manufacturing"

Rapping said that technological advances do not necessarily mean the loss of jobs.

"There may be other forces other than technological change which contribute importantly to the high unemployment rate. This would include competition from foreign products as well as workers who lack training and marketable skills," he said.

The panel, which began research in September, is reviewing all published information and talking with experts from around the world according to Rapping. The last major study of this kind was the 1965 Presidential Commission on Technology, Automation and Economic Progress. The new panel will "certainly take advantage of all the insights that study the 1965 study contained, but we are also going to strike out on our own," he said.

The 1965 study found that automation did not pose a threat to employment and among other recommendations suggested that the federal government invest in the area of public service.

Rapping, who teaches labor, macroeconomics and internaitonal economics, plans to return to UMass once the study is completed. He lectured at Carnegie-Mellon University before coming to UMass in 1974.

BOG to buy $3,200 computer for efficiency

By PATRICK JOHNSON
Collegian Staff

The Campus Center Board of Governors voted last night to purchase a computer to make the board more efficient and able to process information faster.

The board voted 14-2, with four abstentions, to spend $3,194 on a Leading Edge computer for its office. The computer will be used for filing board records, budget preparations, and for keeping record of the "financial analysis of all auxiliary trust fund departments and accounts," board Treasurer Fran Hegeler said.

The computer will make the board more efficient, Hegeler said. "The finances of Auxilary Services are so complex that analyzing balance sheets with a pad and pencil is extremely time consuming and frustrating," she said.

Some members of the board said they were concerned about training on the computer. Hegeler said she would compile literature which would answer questions about the uses of computer hardware and software. Two members of the board would be trained to answer questions other board members would have, she said.

William Harris, director of the Campus Center, asked if computer literacy would become a requirement for anyone seeking employment with the board. Hegeler replied, "I think everyone is capable of learning to run a computer. It will not be a mark against anyone if they don't know how to use a computer. It will be a mark against them if they aren't willing to learn."

Delivery and installation of the computer will take four to six weeks after it is ordered, Hegeler said. The computer is expected to be functioning before the start of next semester, she said.

Scholars confer on Renaissance

Topics 'more concurrent'

By FRANCI RICHARDSON
Collegian Correspondent

Scholars from around the world will gather today at the University of Massachusetts for the two-day 46th annual New England Renaissance Conference of 1985.

"Its purpose is to bring together scholars in different fields that study the Renaissance from the 14th to the 16th centuries," said Daniel Martin, director of the conference and a French and Italian professor at UMass.

Four concurrent special sessions will highlight the conference today. They include "Pierre de Ronsard's Images between Metaphor and Description," a panel discussion on "Spanish Philosophy in the Renaissance," a panel discussion on "Boccaccio," and a discussion on "Ruthless Capitalists of Renaissance Nuremberg."

Many of the participants of the conference are from Canada, France, and England. "This is perhaps one of the very few times that it (the conference) has been truly international. I have expanded it to be more concurrent which makes it more diverse. More people will be coming from other regions than regularly," Martin said.

All discussions will take place in the Campus Center except for a 6:15 p.m. banquet and concert at the Alumnae House at Smith College.

Jane E. Ruby, President of the New England Renaissance Conference, will announce her retirement tonight. The presidential position will be accepted by Professor Samuel Edgarton from Williams College.

A panel discussion on "Women in the Renaissance" will begin the second day of the conference after welcoming remarks from UMass Vice Chancellor Deidre Ling. This section will focus on whether or not women had a renaissance in literature. It will also address mothers in Shakespearean tragedy. Preceeding a break for refreshments, there will be a discussion on physics and astronomy, including the origin of astronomy with an emphasis on Halley's Comet.

"I think this will help bring the University of Massachusetts to the forefront of scholarship. We need to have more of this so we can become more visible in the intellectual world," Martin said.

Bicyclist collides with car

A 19-year-old student was injured while riding her bicycle Wednesday afternoon when she was hit by a car on Infirmery Way, University of Massachusetts police said.

The student was riding down an inclined sidewalk, approached the roadway and drove in front of a 1981 Ford, driven by a 43-year-old woman.

The student said she saw the car but was not able to stop. There were no citations issued and the student was taken to University Health Services. She had no visible injuries, police said.

In other police reports:

A 12-speed bicycle valued at $190 was reported stolen from the loading dock of Brown House. It was locked and chained, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

SALE STARTS THURSDAY OCT. 31st NOON 'til 3 AM & FRIDAY 9 AM-6 PM

adirondack music 15 B. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST

all items subject to prior sale. quantities limited. no rain checks. not responsible for typographical errors

HALLOWEEN MIDNIGHT MADNESS sale

MIDNIGHT... 3 AM

DAY 2 9:00 AM

9:00 PM ... 12:00 PM ... 3:00 PM ... 6:00 PM ... 9:00 PM ... 12:00 PM ... 3:00 PM ... 6:00 PM ... 9:00 PM ... 12:00 PM ... 3:00 PM

SHARP 25 KPTS 25" COLOR TELEVISION CABLE READY $299.95 — CANNON 8MM VIDEO SYSTEM $499.95 Model VC E10 VT E10 A $1400 VALUE

SHARP 25" COLOR TV $199.95

BALLY VIDEO GAME A3250 UNI $3.13

OHM WALSH II DEMO SPEAKERS SOLD WITH BLEMISHED COVERS $99.95 PER PAIR WERE $1000

SONY DS DISCMAN COMPACT DISC PLAYER CUSTOM SERIES $169.95 WERE $299

SONY 249RA 3 BAND RADIO $99.95

FIRST 13 PEOPLE TO BRING US PIZZA AT MIDNIGHT WILL RECEIVE A FREE $50 WALKPERSON

First Five PEOPLE TO BRING US COFFEE, BAGELS, DOUGHNUTS will RECEIVE A FREE WALKPERSON

ADC VSS 2 VIDEO SOUND SYSTEM $29.95

TEAC K66 CASSETTE DECK $199.95

SHARP 13J370 13" TV/MONITOR WIRELESS REMOTE $299.95

OHM EZ LOUDSPEAKER DEMO'S ONLY TWO WAY MINI SIZE $99.95 PR.

TEAC 518X CASSETTE DECK DOLBY B&C + DBX FULL FREQUENCY $99.95

VIDEO RECORDERS SHARP VC582 CABLE READY REMOTE (wired) $249.95

SHARP VC583 CABLE READY WIRELESS REMOTE AND ULTRA HQS $299.95

PLUS BIG SAVINGS ON ALL OTHER VCR'S IN STOCK

BEST COSTUME CONTEST 10:00 PM PRIZES AWARDED!

24 hours of FANTASTIC AUDIO AND VIDEO SPECIALS

Nikko PRO Audio Rack SYSTEM ALPHA 130 100 WATT AMPLIFIER BETA 30 PROGRAMMABLE TUNER NT 100 II DOLBY NR SYSTEM A 1200 VALUE 1/2 PRICE $525.95

SONY ALL DISCMAN WM FS WALKMAN RED PRICE $149.95 $69.95

OHM WALSH IV DEMO SPEAKERS SOLD WITHOUT GRILLS $99.95 PR

SHARP DX1000 COMPACT DISC PLAYER ONLY $199.95

CONCORD HPA-7 AUTO-AMPLIFIER $89.95 $300 VALUE

PANASONIC E370 AUTO Stereo FADER DOLBY N.R. METAL CHASSIS BASS/TREBLE $149.95 A $320 VALUE

BOSE 501 II Loudspeaker Demo $99.95 PAIR

Nikko SUPER SET UP! NA2000 INTEGRATED AMPLIFIER 100 WATT POWER NT700 II TUNER ELECTRONIC PRESETS $2.99.95

SONY WM-11 WALKMAN RADIO CASSETTE $149.95

EPI 3.0 II Loudspeaker Demo $99.95 EACH

SONY CFS 3000 BOOM BOX DETACHABLE SPEAKERS MUSIC SEARCH DUAL TAPE DECKS $599.95

TEAC LV1000 LASER VISION PLAYER W/REMOTE CONTROL 2X DECODER, VIDEO FILTER A $800 VALUE $399.95

RE-RUNS All LEFT OVER PREVIOUS Merchandise BACK ON SALE

START HERE

SALE ENDS HERE

TREE apples & pizza!

audio specials

SHERWOOD S-70 DOLBY CASSETTE DECK was $149.95 now $99.95
SHERWOOD 2120 TOP RATED RECEIVER $499.95
TDK AR2 DOLBY B/C CASSETTE TAPE $3.95 A 2.35 VALUE
SCOTT PSB9 FULLY AUTOMATIC DIRECT DRIVE TURNTABLE w/ Audio Technica CARTRIDGE A $230 VALUE $99.95
ULTRX RS5 5 SWITCH RECEIVER ELECTRONIC TUNING w/ Wireless Remote PLUS A great deal more $499.95 $199.95
AUDIO TECHNICA ELLIPTICAL CARTRIDGE $79.95
SONY WM10FM WALKMAN CASSETTE w/ FM STEREO FACTORY SERVICED Now $49.95
TEAC RS5S AUTO REVERSE CASSETTE DECK, DOLBY B/C PLUS A great deal more $49.95 A $130 VALUE ONLY $149.95
CANNON VC200 HI BAND 5 STATION TUBE VIDEO CAMERA LENSES! A $1000 VALUE JUST $699.95

Auto Stereo

EPI LSR32 DIGITAL 2 SWITCH AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE LOADED TO THE 6's! A $400 VALUE Now 199.95 (33 stock)
EPI LSR 12 ANALOG 1 SWITCH AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE AUTO REVERSE PLUS MANY MORE GREAT FEATURES A $229.95 ONLY $99.95
MAXXIMA 100 WATT TRIBANDS 79.95 or WAS $29.95
ALL CAR STEREOS IN STOCK DRASTICALLY REDUCED

TDK AUDIO SA 90 CASSETTES $1.49
MAXIMA 10 MAXIMA 100 OAK SPEAKER CABINETS 99¢

SALE HOURS: THURSDAY OCT. 31 12PM-3AM
FRIDAY OCT. 32 9AM-6PM

SATURDAY COME IN AND MAKE AN OFFER ON LEFTOVER INVENTORY!

many items BELOW COST!

all day specials surprise hourly specials unadvertised specials
prizes for best costume

ALL JOKES AND GOOMIES Add 10%

* ALL SALES CASH! MC/VISA/CHECK Add 3%

Technology ideas sought

By JOE SHARTAND
Collegian Staff

Quest for Technology, a division of Control Data Corporation, is a program attempting to uncover both students' and faculty members' technological innovations on college campuses around the country.

Jack Rowan, the program's director, described its purpose to uncover university, industry, or government lab development technologies, before commercially evaluating their potential for transfer into the private sector. He said their purpose is to uncover new technology and know-how.

The Chancellor's Working Group for Economic Development and approves certain projects for further development. "An on-campus committee screens submissions to determine that required information has been provided and that technology has developed past the idea stage," states a program pamphlet. This year, 56 projects were put before the committee for review and 27 were accepted for commercial development, said Rowan. "Then the submission is forwarded to World Technology, a division of Control Data," according to the pamphlet. After a submission is approved, an agreement is signed with the individual before it is marketed world-wide, Rowan said. "The Quest program operates within the context of existing patent agreements," stated the pamphlet. The program is open to everyone, including students and faculty. Rowan said that faculty sends in the most ideas, and that it is too early to determine the program's success.

The University signed a two-year contract with Control Data for the program, which has been at UMass since 1984. Twenty-six other campuses around the country and in Europe have also signed the contract, Rowan said. Dr. Mariam Williford, associate provost for continuing education, Rowan said, asked Control Data to come to campus with its program.

Control Data Corporation, which controls the Quest program, is a super-computer manufacturer and a multi-national corporation. The corporation has had many successes with the program, Rowan said. At a Florida State University, a new process for defrosting frozen foods for restaurants has been developed.

Collegian photo by Brian Guernotta

BIRDS EYE VIEW–The 17th floor of John Adams House in Southwest Residential Area provides an interesting view of the pyramids near Hampshire Dining Commons. Students can only dream of the sunning and frisbee that the sopt will provide when the spring comes. Bands also play at the pyramids during Southwest week in the spring.

FRI. AFTERNOON AT JUSTIN RYAN'S

50¢ Drinks

CLIFF MYERS HAPPIEST HOUR FRI. AFTERNOON 3:00-?

FREE 3-4PM BUFFET!

• COMBO DINNERS •
Six different platters with combinations of our most popular entrees served with Spanish Rice and Refritos. . .4.05 - 4.85

. . .Bring Your Appetite!

TACO VILLA

...Offering Quality Mexican Foods

NORTHAMPTON 21 CENTER ST 584 0673 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine
AMHERST 41 BOLTWOOD WALK 256 8217 Beer & Wine Served
SPRINGFIELD 749 SUMNER AVE 788 0919 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

AVAILABLE

Friendly room-mate. Quiet and smart. Able to sort through complicated issues. Will share work load. Problem solving is my specialty. Flexible. Clever. Fun. Good looking.

I'm the IBM Portable PC. To find out how to take me home, stop by the IBM information booth in the Campus Center this Thursday and Friday. You'll find me surprisingly affordable.

P.S. Bring a friend.

IBM

Kegs ★ Beer ★ Wine ★ Soda ★

STADIUM LIQUORS

Catch our great in store specials

Minutemen Go For It. . . BEAT UCONN!

Stadium Liquors — ROUTE 9

253-5595 175 University Drive

STOP & SHOP AT THE OLD MILL

For the best in gifts, lamps, unique crafts, cards, Colonial furniture and decorator accessories.

Route 63
1 mile north of UMass

Hrs. 10 to 6
Tues - Sunday Closed Monday

Visa & Mastercharge

"Liberty means responsibility. That's why most men dread it." – George Bernard Shaw

Next year it's all up to you. Only you can decide to start an insurance program now. The longer you wait, the more it costs. Find out how easy it is to be in our college plan, chosen by more seniors than any other.

Call the Fidelity Union Life Field Associate in your area:
RONALD J. NATHAN AGENCY
20 Gatehouse Rd., Amherst, Ma.
Tel: 256-8351

Fidelity Union Life

15th ANNUAL BIG BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY

SKI & PARTY WEEK

JAN. 19-24

TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET — SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING — HOTEL OR CONDO

ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES, NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT.

HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199

FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP

LAGNAF 86

FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals

Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-532-8995

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...

RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95 Unlimited Miles

FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00

CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 785-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 3d So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 453-3821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

BUS DRIVING JOBS!!
Train in January to start work in February!
UMass Transit Service will hold an
APPLICATIONS MEETING
Thursday, Nov. 7th at 7:00 pm
CC 162
The first 125 people will receive applications.
You Must —
- be 18+ years old
- have had a driver's license for a year
- have 2+ semesters left at UMass
YOU POSTIVELY MUST BRING PROOF OF YOUR CLASS YEAR TO THE MEETING.
The ONLY acceptable proofs are schedule, transcript, or letter from the Registrar.
For more info, call 545-0056. UMTS is an AA/EO employer.

Tuesday Nov. 5 R-rated Hypnotist

World Famous Frank Santos

®Rated Hypnotist Comedian

®adically Different ®idiculously Funny
®ichly Entertaining ®ecklessly Risque

JUSTIN RYAN'S
Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Drive

Take a FREE Trial Session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a
FREE 20 SESSIONS!

Le Bon Soleil
The Best For Less

264 N. Pleasant St.
253-9454
Expires Nov. 15th, 1985

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Policy provokes a rage

Mart Boulerice

I will begin this highly serious and much-labored work of art with two simple statements: 1) Halloween is my favorite holiday; 2) until recently, I was very pissed off about Southwest's Halloween weekend guest policy.

The reason for my displeasure was a large green sign posted in the lobby of my dorm. I first noticed it one morning last week on my way to my class, and it stopped me in my tracks.

"Absolutely no visitors will be allowed during Halloween weekend. Residents may sign in two Umass Students per day. 24 hour security effective thursday 6 p.m. thru Sunday 2 p.m."

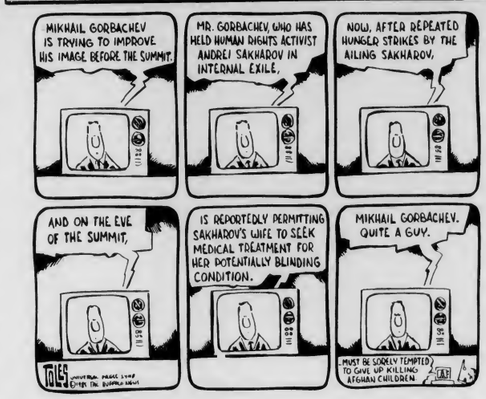
Just as I reached up to tear down that despicable notice, my RD walked by and said, "Hi Mart." Startled, I said, "Uh, hi Griff," and hurried out the door.

On the way to class, I learned that Southwest was the only residential area on campus to be saddled with such stifling rules on my favorite weekend, which only made matters worse. Were we being punished for living in the most popular residential area? How ridiculous, I thought, and during my class and for the rest of that day, the burning image of that hated sign would not leave my mind. I wanted to kill that sign.

So, when I returned to my dorm, I ripped it down, tore it into little pieces, and flushed it down the toilet. Satisfied, I returned to my room and realized the phone that had been ringing insistently while I was murdering the sign, was my own. Raising the receiver to my ear, I heard my younger brother's excited voice say, "Hey dude, what's up!?" He then said that the reason for his call was to see about coming with a few of his derelict friends for Halloween weekend.

I remembered my first UMass experience. It was my sophomore year in high school, and I had come to Amherst Halloween day to visit one of my buddy's older brothers who lived in Southwest. I couldn't believe my eyes. Thousands of intoxicated students were partying all over Southwest, dressed in wild costumes. I woke up with a woman who was 19 years old (I was 15 years old), and decided that UMass was the place for me.

"Hey, you still there?" came his voice, waking me from my trance. "Yeah, I'm here," I replied.



"Well, what's the deal, can we come up?" he said, and suddenly a burst of happy energy welled up inside me, and I cried in my most noble voice, "Fear not my brother, they may have won the battle— but they won't win the war," followed by a blast of sick, demented laughter that made my own spine tingle.

"What the..." he began, but I cut him off and told him it was OK, bring any of his pals who wanted to experience an incredible UMass Halloween, and bid him farewell.

The die was cast, I'd made my decision and was determined to either somehow try to change the rules, or simply break them. I figured I'd try to go about it the legal way before adopting guerrilla warfare tactics, so I visited my good friend and former floormate, the notorious Klew-Dawg, an outspoken student senate member. He told me a vote on the matter was slated for the next senate meeting, and he would do anything he could to rectify the situation.

A few days later, I read in the Collegian that the student senate had indeed changed the rules, and now southwest residents, like everyone else, were allowed to have guests over Halloween weekend. I am no longer angry, am well-stocked with eggs and toilet paper, and am anxiously awaiting my brother's arrival. On behalf of my brother, his derelict friends, myself and doubtless hundreds of other Southwest residents, I would like to thank Klew-Dawg and the entire student senate, for helping to make a happy Halloween.

Mart Boulerice is a UMass student.

Random notes.....

Larry Bouchie

Controversy within the Massachusetts Board of Regents continues, with the completeion of a legislative report which claims that unauthorized computer expenditures were made by members of the regents' staff. According to the Curifio report, expenditures were authorized to pay bills due, but some of the money was instead used to purchase new equipment and software.

Also, Chairman John B. Duff still has an employment application pending with the Chicago Public Library. A library representative came to Boston last week for a fact finding visit concerning Duff's involvement in the solicitation of a political contribution from another regent.

University administrators, concerned with campus violence, and specifically violence against women, recently considered purchasing a large number of whistles for use by people on campus after dark. This plan has since been abandoned, while administrators brainstorm more practical methods of violence prevention.

Due to a long, grueling, and frequently interrupted debate about who has the authority to make certain committee appointments, Senate Speaker John L. Ruddock adjourned the weekly senate meeting after only two hours. Ruddock had repeatedly called for order and warned the increasingly disorderly senate that he would adjourn if this type of behavior continued.

A former UMass associate professor alleges in his new book about teaching colleges that Bill Cosby attended few classes to obtain his doctoral degree from the University School of Education. Author Reginald G. Damerell writes that Cosby received many credits for his work on Sesame Street, The Electric Company, and, Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids.

There's a battle brewing between Campus Center BOG students and Auxiliary Services administrators about what type of programming is suitable for the Blue Wall Coffeehouse. BOG members say the issue is one of student empowerment, while administrators consider what constitutes "appropriate entertainment."

Larry Bouchie is a Collegian columnist.

Reaffirming commitment

We live in a world beset by serious problems—famine and poverty; racial, religious, and sexual violence; environmental decay and destruction; the threat of nuclear war. As members of this academic community we cannot ignore and must actively address these and other critical problems. In order to do so, we must create and maintain an environment which respects diversity of thought, lifestyle and expression; which allows us to admit ignorance, to seek the truth and to change; and whose members need not fear acts of intimidation and violence.

Creating such a community requires action in many arenas. We must vigorously continue campus efforts to eliminate both obvious and subtle acts of violence and prejudice. We reaffirm the University's commitment to prevent discrimination on such bases as race, religion, gender, age, sexual orientation, handicap, or veteran status. We must hold fast to standards of academic honesty. All members of this community have been and will continue to be held accountable for actions which contravene these values. Specifically, violence of any kind will not be tolerated and persons identified as performing violent acts will be severely punished.

We believe regular, explicit, public statements of institutional values are necessary. These values must be stated not as ends in themselves, but as the underpinnings of all else we do as a university. Our standards of community behavior free us to think and reason together as we seek to understand today's questions and solve pressing problems. Different kinds of people from the Commonwealth, this nation, and other nations make up this University. Let us respect and learn from our diversity as we work together to better our community and its contribution to the world beyond the campus.

Signed by D.L. Madson, vice chancellor for student affairs, William F Field, dean of students, Larry Benedict, director of academic support services, David Kraft, director of health services, Gloria de Guevara, director of educational access and outreach, Gerald O'Neil, director of public safety, Randy Donant, director of Student activities, and Joseph Zannini, director of housing services.

Randy Donant, Director
Joseph Zannini, Director
Student Activities
Housing Services

Letters

Death penalty is selective, unfair

I would like to echo David Valade's sentiments against the death penalty, which he claims is merely state sanctioned murder. Consider what Clinton Duffy, the longtime warden of San Quentin, who has presided over 90 executions, said, "There is no such thing as a humane way of killing. I'm against the death penalty because it is wrong to kill. It was wrong to have the first murder, and it's wrong for the state to premeditate another murder."

In our country, the death penalty is practically a lottery, and the losers are always poor minorities. A statistical study found that the main determinant of who lives and who dies is the lawyer's ability to create reversible error; most people sentenced to death are represented by a court-appointed attorney, who often is not the most able. As Justice William Douglas put it, "One searches our chronicals in vain for the execution of any member of the affluent strata of our society."

If our intent is revenge, maybe the death penalty is appropriate—but do two wrongs make a right? Our purpose in society should be to try to rehabilitate criminals; rather than getting rid of them we can endeavor to improve their lives and make them valued members of our communities.

Jack Abbott, in his excellent book In the Belly of the Beast, vividly describes the animalistic treatment of criminals. He claimed, "No one has ever held out a hand to help me be a better man." I would like to suggest that the most effective way of fighting crime and injustice is by reaching out to the poor, the downtrodden, the lonely—edifying them so they can live a dignified life. We must never give up hope on a human being by invoking the finality of the death penalty.

Jeffrey Hall
Amherst College

All letters submitted for publication must be signed and include the author's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Letters must be typewritten and double spaced at 67 characters per line. Column submissions should be between 40 and 60 lines. All submissions are subject to editing for clarity and length. —Editor.

The Collegian welcomes letters, column, and cartoon submissions. Submissions should be mailed to the Editorial Editor at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, or they can be dropped off at the Collegian classified ad counter in the basement of the Campus Center. Due to the volume of mail received, individual replies cannot be made.

安城中國飯店
Amherst Chinese Foods
Best Mandarin Food
62-44 MAIN ST., AMHERST
BEER & WINE LICENSE
Fresh Vegetables from Our Own Farm
CLOSED WEDNESDAY
WE DO NOT USE MSG OR ARTICIAL COLORING
253-7835

HAIRCUTS
$8.50
with this coupon
CALL STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr., Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85

DELANO'S
FINE FOOD & SPIRITS
Mon & Tues Nite
Free Taco Bar*
* 9 - till it lasts!
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Molson
57 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

ARE YOU A MAN OF THE 80's?
PROVE IT!
Are you good-looking? Photogenic? Intellectually stimulating? Between the ages of 18 and 25? Fun loving and athletic? Mature enough to know what you want and aggressive enough to go after it? If so, don't go unnoticed! S.H.E. may be looking for YOU!
Send your name, address, phone number, a photograph, and a short paragraph describing yourself, postmarked no later than November 22, 1985, to:
S.H.E.
P.O. Box 376, N. Amherst, MA 01059
All entries become the property of S.H.E.

Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open:
Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

JUSTIN RYAN'S
50¢ Drinks
$2.00 Cover
Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Dr.

It's FRIDAY! Are You Ready For An ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT?
How about taking a dive into a nice relaxing Hot Tub at Utopia Spas? Imagine the soothing music of your choice playing in your private room. Ahhhhh! That's awesome!
½ hour and hour rates available
Open Mon. 4 PM-1 AM, Tues-Sun 11 AM-1 AM call now for reservations
UTOPIA SPAS
165 University Drive, Amherst
253-7727
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

JUST FUN Arcade
Mt. Farms Mall, Hadley offers our
Wednesday Night Special
Come in any Wednesday Night and play any or all of the games from 8:30 to 10:30 for just $2.00
Bring in this ad and receive
2 Just Fun Game Tokens absolutely FREE
Just Fun, Mt. Farm's Mall, Hadley offer expires Nov. 9, 1985

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
HALLOWEEN WEEK SPECIALS
BEER:
Budweiser 12 oz. cans.....$11.99 case + dep.
Heinekens, Amstel Light.....$3.99 6/pk + dep.
Becks, Grolsch, Wurzburger.....$4.25 6/pk. plus dep.
Braumeister 12 oz. cans.....$6.80 case + dep.
Busch 12 oz. cans.....$9.95 case + dep.
LIQUORS:
Vodka or Gin 80°.....$8.99 1.75 liter
Peppermint Schnapps 60°.....$6.49 Liter
Kahlua.....$11.99 750 ml.

Special Student / Youth Fares to SCANDINAVIA
On Scheduled Airlines!
The inexpensive way to get to Scandinavia.
Winter Rates:
New York to Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm
from $215 one way, $350 roundtrip
Chicago to Copenhagen
from $215 one way, $350 roundtrip
Chicago to Oslo, Stockholm
from $255 one way, $430 roundtrip
and tours designed especially for students to the SOVIET UNION
For Information Call:
WHOLE WORLD TRAVEL
17 E. 45th St., New York, NY 10017
(212) 986-9470

Bruno's
- Quality Pizza - Subs - 256-0222
FREE DELIVERY
Sun. - Wed. 4 pm to 2 am
Thurs. - Fri. - Sat. 4 pm to 3 am

BLACK AFFAIRS

Organizations explain their functions to students

By KIMBERLY A. BURGE
Collegian Staff

For many students, deciding what organizations to join can be very hard. Especially when they're new and don't know what organizations are available or what they have to offer.

The first Third World Organizational Night was held last night for that specific purpose. "An event of this magnitude serves the specific purpose of unifying and informing students of the many diverse extracurricular activities available on this campus," said Gregory Curry, a sophomore psychology major.

"I attended this meeting because I wanted to find out more about third world organizations and become involved with them," said Leslie McCoy, a sophomore legal studies major.

There are 23 registered third world organizations on campus. Representatives from several organizations talked about their organization and what they had to offer.

"The Central America Solidarity Association is a group of students who are involved in activities concerning Central America," said CASA member Cindy Kaufman.

"The Office of Third World Affairs has three main purposes: to present organizational services such as recruitment, lectures, and workshops, for groups, to provide information and resources in understanding national and international issues of today, and go to bat for concerns of third world students and the third world community in general," said Sherwood Thompson, director of OTWA.

"We are one of many organizations that offer an internship. On an internship, you can earn academic credits and on the job experience," he said.

Carl McLauren, president of Afrik-Am, said the purpose of his organization is "To try and expose all students to the richness of Afro American culture."

Anthony Robinson, co-coordinator of the Malcolm X Center, stated, "The Malcolm X Center is not a party spot. It was created in the early 70's because black students demanded a place where we could be together and not have to watch what we say or bite our tongues. Our main focus is academics. We provide a tutorial service and are open to other third world organizations and fraternities for meetings."

"The Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) was founded because black music wasn't getting represented on this campus. We are responsible for all black entertainment on WMUA. Our primary focus is entertainment. Journalism and communications majors can use BMCP to manipulate their talent," said Louis Alfred III, general manager.

Marilyn Bou, a member of the Third World Caucus, talked about Concepto Latino and AHORA. "Concepto Latino was formed out of BMCP because there was no Latin music on campus. It is the musical arm of the Latin community. AHORA is a representative organization of the Latin community. It has existed for 11 years and is an example for other Latin groups across the country," she said.

All organizations who were represented complained about the lack of student involvement.

"People are apathetic. It's really hard to get people involved," Kaufman said.

Hispanics will be state's largest ethnic minority

BOSTON (AP)- Hispanics are the poorest and least educated ethnic group in Massachusetts and in five years will replace blacks as the largest ethnic minority, according to a new report. The state Commission on Hispanic Affairs says Hispanics face barriers to social and economic opportunity that put them in danger of becoming entrenched as a lower class.

"Hispanics are having a disproportionate impact on the economic fabric of the cities," said Yohel Camayd-Frexias, co-chairman of the commission and a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "It is going to affect everyone in the cities and towns where Hispanics live."

An estimated 220,000 Hispanics live in Massachusetts, nearly 4 percent of the state's total population and the 12th largest grouping in the nation.

The study estimated that by 1990, there will be 300,000 Hispanics in Massachusetts, about 45,000 more than the number of blacks.

Hispanic families, on the average, include more children than other large ethnic groups, the report said.

"We are at the beginning of a Hispanic baby boom in Massachusetts," Ms. Camayd Frexias told The Boston Globe. "Yet Hispanics have the lowest median family income in Massachusetts, even lower than native Americans."

The report said the unemployment rate last year for Hispanics in the state was 16.4 percent, compared with 4.6 percent for other whites, and that Hispanics have a poverty rate of 36 percent, six times that of other whites.

The commission said Hispanics have the lowest level of education of any ehtnic group in the state. The 1980 census showed that 56 percent of Hispanic adults have not completed high school, and the commission said nearly half the Hispanic youths in some cities drop out of school.

Many Hispanic residents of six cities in the state told the commission they were excluded from adequate health, employment education, and housing services. They also viewed bilingual assistance as critical, the commission said.

Discrimination and the lack of training programs cost them jobs, they said, and the shortage of jobs and youth services contributed to delinquency and alcohol and drug abuse.

Announcements

The Brotherhood of Iota Phi Theta Fraternity Inc., Beta Beta chapter, proudly present "A Gold and Brown Affair" highlighted by a FUNKY step show to aid the John Wright Scholarship Fund.

Festivities will begin at 10 p.m. on November 8 in the Student Union Ballroom at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Proper dress is required and there will be a donation of $4.

As part of American Indian Awawreness Month, Buffy St. Marie will be in concert from 7:30 p.m.–9:30 p.m. on November 2 in the Fine Arts Center Hall

For more information about other events taking place during American Indian Awareness Month, contact Donna at 545-0883 or Cynthia at 545-0031.

GRAND OPENING
Friday Nov. 1
北京園 川菜
PEKING GARDEN
WE WELCOME YOU TO
We hope to introduce you to a new, authentic taste in Chinese cuisine. We emphasize the use of different Chinese spices in making a dish, such as fresh ginger root, scallion, fresh garlic, pepper corn, star anise, sesame seed, and of course, hot pepper. We also have a variety of Chinese sauces made from assorted beans and spices,will give a dish its unique, exotic flavor.
In our Menu we combine the most famous dishes from the south and the north to enable you to taste a wide range of genuine Chinese cooking. Our spicy dishes are prepared in three categories, mild, hot, and very hot. Please advise your waitress which category you desire. Our Chef has had 20 years of experience from all over the world, such as Mainland China, Hong Kong, and New York City. Therefore, we can guarantee you the finest in Chinese cuisine.
We sincerely hope that you will enjoy both our food and service. We welcome your comments and criticism.
Mandarin & Szechuan Restaurant
Luncheon Specials from $2.25 - $4.50
Mon-Sat 11:30 am - 3:00 pm (except Holidays)
Sunday Brunch served from 11:30 am - 3:00 pm
$6.95 per person $4.00 per child under ten
Banquet Room Available for larger parties
Cocktail Lounge
For take out orders and reservations please call 586-1202
Sun-Thurs 11 am - 10 pm; Fri & Sat 11 am - 11 pm
48 Russell Street
Hadley, Mass. 01035

STAR MARKET CO-OP OPPORTUNITIES
ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WORKING IN AN EXCITING BUSINESS IN THE SUPERMARKET OPERATIONS FIELD?
Well, if you are, we at Star Market would like to talk to you. We offer an excellent co-operative education experience with outstanding benefits, pay (6.87 per hour to start), 40 hour work week, as well as excellent career opportunities as a result of a successful co-op experience. We are interested in talking to students from all majors.
We will be on campus for an informational session on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7 at 7:00 PM
in S.O.M. Room 112.
Interviews will be held on NOVEMBER 8.
To find out more about Star's Co-op program, please contact Co-op Program, 5-2224 today!
STAR MARKET SINCE 1915
An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

A Brass fantasy

Lester Bowie and his horn

I Only Have Eyes for You (ECM) Lester Bowie's Brass Fantasy When Lester Bowie goes before the microphone and bright lights to communicate with his audience and who knows whom else, he always has two things with him: one is his trumpet, the other is his physician's lab coat.

With a trumpet for a divining rod, he searches for his music's underground rivers. During nearly three decades as a professional musician, Bowie has developed a knack for tapping the wellsprings of jazz.

What about the lab coat? Perhaps it is emblematic of his attempt to soothe our ills through sound. Or maybe he is doing advanced research in sonic architecture. Whatever the rationale, his pursuit is decidedly non-academic.

"Playing jazz is more than technique," he recently told Jazz Times, "It's about expression of feelings and it's about memories, it's about a lot of things." Lester Bowie, from St. Louis, by way of Little Rock, Arkansas and Fredrick, Maryland, laughs, cries and marches us through decades of jazz history.

His early involvement with R&B bands, travelling carnivals and his fluency in Caribbean, New Orleans and avant-garde musics are all a part of his dedication to what he calls "great Black music—ancient to the future." Bowie's eclecticism is not predicated simply on the listener's need for variation. His "big ears" enable him to appreciate the organic and seamless whole of Black music, from reggae to Tin Pan Alley; from the Bartonsville Cornet Band (in which three of his uncles played, early in this century) to Muhal Richard Abram's Experimental Big Band.

In recent years Bowie has seemed particularly fascinated with the possibilities inherent in brass. In 1982 he helped form the N.Y. Hot Trumpet Repertory Co. (The quintet played UMass in 1983). He has now let his imagination out even further and formed Brass Fantasy: eight premier brass players and drummer Philip Wilson. Their debut release on ECM, entitled I Only Have Eyes for You, reveals a variegated sound that, despite the odd instrumentation, never resorts to gimmickery. The three other trumpeters in Brass Fantasy, Bostonian Stanton Davis, Malachi Thompson and Bruce Purse, were also members of Hot Trumpets (Wynton Marsalis was the fifth hornman). The trombonists are Craig Harris and Steve Turre (who delighted a Bright Moments Festival crowd here last summer with his work on conch shells in addition to trombone). Vincent Chancey is o?textural limits of their instruments, it was largely assumed that a brass player's options, centered around various mutes, could never approach the assortment of honks, squeals and vibratos of the saxophone family. When we are thus placed in the midst of such devices in Ellington's early bands, are doubtlessly smiling now.

The leader's other original, "Coming Back, Jamaica," like his composition "Ja," recorded in 1979 with the Art Ensemble of Chicago takes artistic license with reggae while remaining faithful to the spirit and feel of Jamaica's native music. The group's relaxed, yet tight, reading of Al Dubin's and Harry Warren's title track, is a good illustration of how a jazz treatment can breathe life into tired standards.

These men in Brass Fantasy, too young to remember, but smart enought to know about the hegemony of brass in early jazz, are taking good care of that legacy. They are brass proud.

ARTS

By DON LIPPER
Collegian Staff

It's Halloween weekend. (Great, tell us something we don't know.) And you know what that means don't you? It means movies. Well, everything means movies to me.

This weekend we celebrate one of the greatest festivals of hedonistic greed known to all of kid-kind. In the spirit of this holiday season we owe it to ourselves to go to the movies. How's that for one whopping rationalization for theater going? Be the first kid on the block to use it on your friends.

If this weekend makes you want to regress, Pleasant St. is showing a selection of Silver Screen Parodies starring those greats of the film industry, Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck and Porky Pig which highlights an underground short parody by the Disney animators called Uncle Walt.

Also showing at Pleasant St. is Utu the story of a New Zealand native who deserts the army after his village is destroyed and goes on leads a killing rampage against the white man. It is supposed to be a fierce and intensely intriguing action film.

In case you missed either The Breakfast Club or St. Elmo's Fire, the Academy of Music is having a double feature with Breakfast at 7:00 and Elmo's at 9:00.

If you want to visit the modern day model of Main St. (the malls) you can see four new movies. Sweet Dreams stars Jessica Lang (Tootsie, Country, etc) as country singer Patsy Cline. Cline was, "The gifted fun-loving Queen of the Nashville Sound who, more than any other vocalist of her time, was able to put 'Country Heart' into sophisticated uptown arrangments, and achieve dual stardom as a Popular and Country music performer," according to a press release.

The movie is supposed to chart the most dramatic years of her career (before she died at the age of 30) as well as telling the story of her passionate and turbulent marriage with Charlie Dick (great name, huh?) played by Ed Harris (Right Stuff and Alamo Bay). To be reviewed.

To Live and Die in L.A. is a drug and counterfeit money action thriller from the director of The French Connection. To be reviewed.

Better Off Dead is a very strange movie that's supposed to be the best teenage comedy of 1985. It stars John Cusack (who turned out a good performance in the last year's pretty much ignored, The Sure Thing). Once again Cusack is playing a confused comically suicidal teenager going through the usual crisis. The plot is supposed to be a pretty conventional love story but what makes this movie different is the world where the story takes place. It's a bizzare surburban setting where mothers create

continued on page 11

LAGNAF

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

SMITH COLLEGE THEATRE PRESENTS
WS RIGHTS OWS BOMBERS
by Kingsley B. Bass, Jr.
directed by Shalla Rose Bland
October 24, 25, 26, 30, 31
November 1 & 2
Theatre 14 Smith College
admission: $4.00 students and senior citizens $2.00
information and reservations 584-3023
Mon-Fri 12:30-4:30 pm
dollar nights
handicapped accessible

Catch the newest tunes with Arts!

Pearl Street
TONIGHT
Friday Nov. 1st
MYSTERY DEE JAY
Saturday, Nov. 2nd
D.J.
Mark Stoneham
Wednesday Nov. 6th
Two big blues legends
JOHN LEE HOOKER
and the Coast to Coast Blues Band also
JOHN HAMMOND
Thursday Nov. 7th
GIRLS NIGHT OUT
Wednesday Nov 13th
Reggae Night
LOOSE CABOOSE
Thursday Nov 11th
Miler Rock Series
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY
and the JUKES
Thursday Nov 21st
RAY CHARLES
with a full 16 piece orchestra
10 PEARL STREET
NORTHAMPTON MA
413 584 7771

C & C LIQUORS
61 Main St., Amherst
Next to Town Hall
FOR FREE DELIVERY OF $20 MINIMUM ORDER. (OFF UMASS CAMPUS)
Dial 253-3091
All Prices In Store Cash Only
GORDON'S Gin 1.75 liter $12.49
Smirnoff Vodka 1.75 liter $11.99
Torres 1981 Coronas 750 ml $3.99 a great value!
Coors • Coors Light Miller Light (suitcase) $11.99 + dep.
Grizzly Beer Imported from Canada $3.25 6 pk. + dep.
Swinkels Beer Imported from Holland $3.30 6 pk. + dep.

Tuesday Nov. 5 R-rated Hypnotist
World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
®adically Different ®idiculously Funny
®ichly Entertaining ®ecklessly Risque
JUSTIN RYAN'S
Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Drive

ARTS

★ Film Follies

continued from page 10

fine cuisine from green slime; teenagers sniff Jell-O through straws; newspaper boys intimidate customers who don't pay on time; and a 10 year old kid who builds a real rocket ship out of kitchen appliances. Even the high school is weird. When the smiling chemistry teacher orders his class to memorize pages 39-110 in their text, the students applaud, when the bell rings marking the end of school, they groan. David Ogden Stiers and Kim Darby are Cusack's parents in the film. They're a very strange version of middle America. They give tv dinners for Christmas presents. To be reviewed.

And Charles Bronson returns as the constantly victimized family man who finally decides to strike back against the criminal knee-biters who infest our cities. Why do crooks keep on bothering this guy? You'd think they would learn not mess with his family. If you like violent revenge with little plot to slow it down, you might want to check out Deathwish III. To be reviewed.

Weekend Best Bet: Aside from the ever-present Back to the Future, the malls have the best movies around this weekend. After Hours is a bizarre comedy that takes a non-descript word processor (Griffin Dunne) into the hightmarish regions of the Twilight Zone (SoHo). Rosanna Arquette, Terri Garr and Cheech and Chong are the crazy inhabitants of this dark but funny world created by director Martin Scorsese. Really the best movie around.

Jagged Edge is a courtroom murder mystery thriller starring Glenn Close as a savvy lawyer defending publisher Jeff Bridges who is accused of savagely butchering his millionairessd wife. Don't be fooled by the ads, this is not a psycho-slasher movie.

Agnes of God stars Jane Fonda as a psychiarirst appointed by the court to determine if a young nun (Meg Tilly) is mentally fit to stand trial for the strangling of her newborn baby. There's only one problem: the nun doesn't even remember the baby or being pregnant. She doesn't believe the baby existed, she only believes in God. Anne Bancroft shines as the protective mother superior of the convent in this clash between modern science and faith

That's all folks

Jessica Lange and Ed Harris star in Sweet Dreams

Jessica Lange plays country singer Patsy Cline in Sweet Dreams

DONT BE A DISORIENTED YOUTH
READ THE ARTS PAGE

LESBIAN WORKSHOP
Lifeline Institute
presents author of Lesbian Sex, Joanne Loulan, to speak Fri. Nov. 8, 7:30 pm, Seeyle 10, Smith College, Free.
Full day workshop Sat. Nov. 9, $30.
Call Lifeline for more information 253-2822.

AMHERST CINEMA
Friday - Saturday
An American Werewolf in London 7:10
Animal House 9:00
Sunday - Tuesday
Lord of the Flies 7:15
Ulysses 9:00
Double Feature $3.00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

THE FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Armin Jordan, Music Director
Heinz Hollinger, Oboe Soloist
Monday, November 4 8 pm.
Tickets: $18,16,14
ORCHESTRE DE LA SUISSE ROMANDE
MARIAN McPARTLAND
Tuesday, November 12 8 pm.
Tickets: $13,11.9
"A fascinating inventive pianist; playful, probing and provocative"
John S. Wilson, New York Times
ASPEN WIND QUINTET
Thursday, November 14 8 pm.
Tickets: $6
Winner—Naumburg Chamber Music Award 1984
Five College Students Half-Price. Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center, and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413)545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

Pleasant St. Theater
"MIRACULOUS" —Pauline Kael, THE NEW YORKER
"INSPIRED" —F.X. Feeney, L.A. WEEKLY
"SPELLBINDING" —Robert Hunt, ST. LOUIS WEEKLY
"BREATHTAKING" —Kevin Thomas, L.A. TIMES
AN EPIC ADVENTURE FROM NEW ZEALAND
"BREATHTAKING...RIVETING... UTU has been compared to an American western. While it unfolds with the simplicity and force of the best of the genre, it is distinctively New Zealand in its flavoring." Kevin Thomas, L.A. TIMES
"Eerie...poetic...sumptuous ... Go see it!" John Richardson N.Y. TRIBUNE utu ...a point of honor directed by Geoff Murphy
R
27 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-0915
PLAYING NOW!

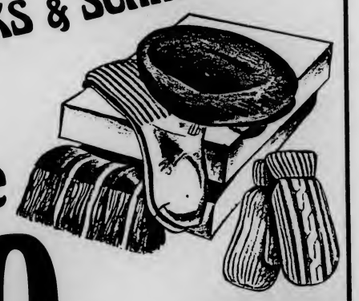
SMITH COLLEGE THEATRE PRESENTS
WS RIGHTS OWS BOMBERS
by Kingsley B. Bass, Jr.
directed by Shalla Rose Bland
October 24, 25, 26, 30, 31
November 1 & 2
Theatre 14 Smith College
admission: $4.00 students and senior citizens $2.00
information and reservations 584-3023
Mon-Fri 12:30-4:30 pm
dollar nights
handicapped accessible

amc THEATRES
$2.50 MATINEE & TWILITE SHOW
MT. FARMS 4 584-8155
Relax, you're never... BETTER OFF DEAD
PG Fri at (5:00 @ 9:00) 7:45, 9:55
Sat at (2:30 & 5:00 @ 9:00) 7:45, 9:55
DEATH WISH III
R Fri at (4:45 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (2:30 & 4:45 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
LIVE AND DIE IN L.A.
R Fri at (4:45 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (2:00 & 4:45 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
Jane Fonda Anne Bancroft - Meg Tilly
Agnes of God
PG13 Fri at (5:00 @ 9:00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (12:15 & 5:00 @ 9:00) 7:30, 9:55
HAMPSHIRE 4 584-7557
STEVEN SPIELBERG Presents
Michael J. Fox in BACK To The FUTURE
PG Fri at (4:40 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (2:00 & 4:40 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
Wild and Wonderful!
After Hours
R Fri at (5:00 @ 9:00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (12:30 & 5:00 @ 9:00) 7:30, 9:55
Glenn Close Jeff Bridges
JAGGED EDGE
R Fri at (5:00 @ 9:00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (12:15 & 5:00 @ 9:00) 7:30, 9:55
JESSICA LANGE ED HARRIS
SWEET DREAMS
PG13 Fri at (4:45 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (12:15 & 4:45 @ 9:00) 7:15, 9:45
THE ATTIC LATE SHOWS
FRI & SAT at 12:15 SEATS $ 3.50
ROCKY HORROR
BEVERLY HILLS COP
PINK FLOYD-THE WALL
RETURN OF THE LIVING DEAD

AVAILABLE

Friendly room-mate. Quiet and smart. Able to sort through complicated issues. Will share work load. Problem solving is my specialty. Flexible. Clever. Fun. Good looking.

I'm the IBM Portable PC. To find out how to take me home, stop by the IBM information booth in the Campus Center this Thursday and Friday. You'll find me surprisingly affordable.



P.S. Bring a friend.

IBM

SALE!

3 DAYS ONLY...
FRI/SAT/SUN NOV. 1, 2, 3

HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

save 20%

A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst/Daily 10-6, Sun. 12-5

FACES

The Chequers

Harvest Specials

Crab Stuffed Scrod
Chicken Cordon Bleu
Pork Parmesan
Roast Sirloin of Beef (au jus)

all $6.95

All specials include potato, choice of salad or vegetable, french bread & butter, homemade dessert, coffee or tea.
Specials served Sun.-Thurs. 5:30-9 p.m.

University Drive, Amherst

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordv

By Gorde

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Surfman

by Bart

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Weather

Today:

Clear and mostly sunny, highs in the 50s.

Tomorrow:

Clear and sunny, highs reaching the 60s.

Menu

LUNCH
Barbecued Pork on Bun
Shells in Cheese Sauce

BASICS LUNCH
Swiss and Sprou Sandwich
Shells in Cheese Sauce

Dinner
Baked Chicken with Champignon Sauce
Ratatouille
Tomato Torte

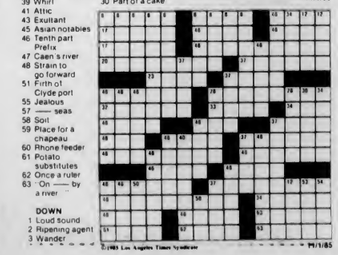
BASICS DINNER
Baked Chicken with Champignon Sauce
Ratatouille

Photo Workshop

Michael Gordan, photographer for the Springfield newspapers, will give a photo workshop and critique prints at 7 p.m. Monday in Campus Center room 905-909. Mandatory for Collegian photographers; all are welcome.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Transport for Cleopatra
6 QV separators
10 The maples
14 Zeno's marketplace
15 Viscount's superior
16 Legume of Asia
17 No way!
18 Inexperienced person
20 Type of apple
22 November state
23 The Apostle of Rome
24 Gulf of Greece
25 Roman encampment
28 Aphid
32 Except that
33 Unusual person
34 New Guinea seaport
35 Dolphinlike cetacean
36 "O sole ——"
37 City in NE India
38 Rosinante, e.g.
39 Whirl
41 Attic
43 Exultant
45 Asian notables
46 Tenth part Prefix
47 Caen's river
48 Strain to go forward
51 Firth of Clyde port
55 Jealous
57 —— seas
58 Soil
59 Place for a chapeau
60 Rhone feeder
61 Potato substitutes
62 Once a ruler
63 "On —— by a river"

DOWN
1 Loud sound
2 Ripening agent
3 Wander
4 Brewed beverage of a sort
5 Those on the payroll
6 Kingdoms: Lat.
7 Famous puppeteer
8 Three, in Italy
9 Plant yielding caucho
10 Clinker container
11 Make dinner
12 Fictional Jane
13 Carry on
19 Gunpowder ingredient
21 Retirement accts.
24 River at Florence
25 Prompting
26 Record of a year
27 Connacht province port
28 Auctioneer's verb
29 Sudden outburst
30 Part of a cake
31 Nobelist for literature 1923
36 Type of skirt
37 Least experienced
39 Dutch artist Jan
40 CSA General George Edward 41 Paris depot
42 Memory gap
44 Revokes, as a legacy
47 Judge's call
48 Andersen's duckling
49 Malay canoe
50 Juncture
51 —— horse'
52 Past
53 Wax
54 High or deep
56 Fine!

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	T	A	R	■	A	S	S	I	T	■	A	B	C	S
T	A	L	E	■	S	C	O	U	T	■	D	A	L	I
A	R	I	A	■	S	A	U	N	A	■	S	K	A	T
■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■
D	A	I	L	Y	J	U	M	P	E	R	S	■	I	E
■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■	■
■	■	■	T	O	R	■	S	T	A	I	N	E	D	■
B	A	B	Y	S	I	T	S	■	S	I	N	G	■	■
E	T	A	■	S	N	E	A	D	■	L	O	S	E	R
E	L	L	A	■	G	E	N	I	U	S	■	N	O	R	A
S	I	D	L	E	■	S	T	E	P	S	■	O	A	R	■
■	■	■	E	A	T	S	■	A	L	I	E	N	A	T	E
■	■	■	M	A	R	I	N	E	S	■	R	A	Y	■	■
O	R	D	■	A	R	C	H	V	I	L	L	A	I	N	■
L	O	A	M	■	G	R	E	A	T	■	O	B	O	E	■
E	S	S	E	■	P	E	R	I	E	■	N	E	W	S	■
S	E	H	R	■	■	W	A	N	D	■	S	L	A	T	■

11/1/85

PH/1/85

THE SPOKE

A Drinkery to Meet, Relax and Enjoy

12 oz. Drafts 75¢
Pitchers $3.75

Beer
Of The Month
Molson Golden
$1.25

Spoke Long — Sleeve T's are in!

Spoke Drink of the Week

Pearl Harbor $1.25

35 EAST PLEASANT, AMHERST, MA 01002

Apply Now to Compete in the 1986

Miss Massachusetts - USA Pageant

Mercedes Waggoner
1985 Miss Massachusetts - USA

No Performing Talent Required

Why not go for it??? Apply to compete for the Title of MISS MASSACHUSETTS-USA, our representative to the prestigious MISS U.S.A. PAGEANT, to be nationally televised on CBS in May, 1986. Over $100,000 in prizes await the national winner.

Our 1986 State Pageant will be held in February, 1986. To qualify, you must be single, between 17 and 24 as of May 1, 1986, and at least a six month resident of this State - thus, college dorm students are eligible. So for some fun, excitement amd glamour, phone (617)-266-3280 or write to

Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. Pageant Headquarters, Dept. MA
222 Newbury Street, 2nd Floor, Boston, MA 02116

Your letter MUST include a recent snapshot, brief biography and PHONE NUMBER
DEADLINE IS NOVEMBER 15, 1985

SOLD OUT

The Office of The Chancellor
and the Distinguished Visitors Program

proudly present
renowned paleoanthropologist

DR. RICHARD LEAKEY

speaking on

"The Makings of Man"

8:00 pm
Monday, November 4, 1985
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Tickets available through the Fine Arts Center Box Office

distinguished visitors program

Simulcast
Campus Center 165-9

Spirit Haus

BEER SPECIALS

Moosehead $3.70/6
Labatts $3.50/6
Innsbruck $3.95/6
Dos Equis Silver Label $4.20/6

WINE SPECIALS

Bellagio 1.5 liter $3.99
white or rose
a great tasting Italian wine, just off dry

Sun Country Wine Cooler 2 liter $3.29
all flavors

Calvin Cooler 4 pack $2.95
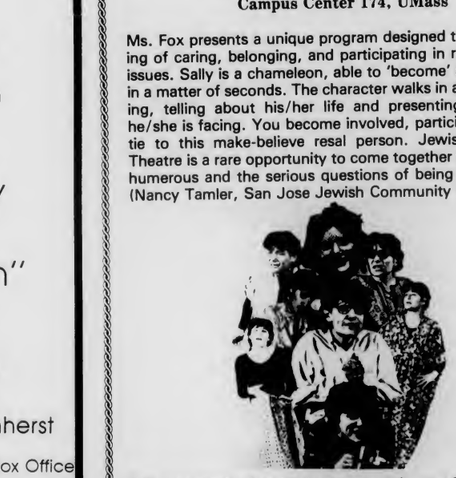
Red and Citrus only

NEW
Jacques Bonet $2.99
Raspberry Champagne

As usual, many liquor specials in store.

Spirit Haus Inc.
338 College St. Amherst, MA



256-8433 253-5384

Sally Fox

"Jewish Involvement Theatre"

will perform
Saturday, November 2 at 8:00 P.M.
Campus Center 174, UMass

Ms. Fox presents a unique program designed to create a feeling of caring, belonging, and participating in relevant Jewish issues. Sally is a chameleon, able to 'become' another person in a matter of seconds. The character walks in and begins talking, telling about his/her life and presenting the question he/she is facing. You become involved, participate and feel a tie to this make-believe resal person. Jewish Involvement Theatre is a rare opportunity to come together to focus on the humerous and the serious questions of being a Jew today." (Nancy Tamler, San Jose Jewish Community Center)

Sally has received enthusiastic revews in over 35 states. Don't miss her!

FREE
Back by popular demand

Sponsored by B'nai B'rith Hillel and made possible by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

Booters playing to keep hopes alive

Volleyball in state playoffs

By BRYAN QUENZEL
Collegian Staff

When the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team travels to Orono to face Maine tommorrow, it will have two goals to accomplish; first, defeat a team it has lost to the past two years and, second, keep its NCAA tournament hopes alive.

UMass (14-5) is currently ranked third in New England just ahead of Maine (10-5), which is fourth in the polls.

"Maine has upset us the last two years," said UMass coach Jeff Gettler. "They were the ones that knocked us out of the playoffs last year."

A loss in Oreno tommorrow would spell the same fate for the Minutemen this season too.

Massachusetts and Boston University are in a battle for a spot in the tournament, with the advantage currently going to the Terriers. BU (10-2-1) is ranked second in New England and twentieth in the nation.

"Ratings have nothing to do with it," said Gettler. "It's up to a committee. It is possible to get up to five teams from any region."

There are 23 spots available in the national tournament. Of those, 16 are guaranteed, leaving seven at large bids. So, it is possible for both UMass and BU to be invited. Gettler is insistent that 16 wins (UMass has two games remaining on its schedule) should be enough to qualify the Minutemen.

The UMass volleyball team will be in the MAIAW championships in Cambridge on Saturday.

UMass, 29-6 this season, will be looking for its first MAIAW title. The tourney is considered the Massachusetts state championship. The Minutewomen are seeded first.

UMass lost last season to Eastern Nazerene College (in the finals). ENC is seeded third behind MIT. Wellesley is seeded fourth.

UMass will open the tourney against Wellesley on Saturday at 9 a.m. The winner will face the Nazerene-MIT winner for the title.

VOLLEYBALL HITS: The UMass team will hold tryouts on Saturday and Sunday at 6 p.m. in Boyden Gym.

Clarification

A clarification of a story in Wednesday's Collegian ("Ball State meets Stooges in IM Finals" on Page 16) is needed.

The opening line "Stick to lacrosse guys" regarding a loss by Sack to Ball State in the semifinals, was not meant to slight the athletic abilities of the team, made up largely of lacrosse players. To reach the semifinals of the intramural football championships as well as excell in the sport of lacrosse attests to the tremendous athletic ability of these athletes.

The line was intended to be humorous, but was not taken that way by some readers. The Collegian regrets this and apologizes for any misconception the story may have caused.

★ swimming

continued from page 16

preseason, but is making a strong return for the teams first meat against Vermont.

Not to be overlooked, the sophmore class has Margaret Cameron and Julie Wilkins, top swimmers from last years team. Cameron will swim distance and breaststroke events. Wilkins, the third leading scorer for last year's team, will swim backstroke.

Newcomb said that last seasons team suffered from a lack of depth. His goal after last year was to add quality and depth to the team. He seems to have accomplished that goal

UMass, which opens its season on Saturday at Boyden Pool against Vermont at 1 p.m., will be hurt by the loss of Liz Feinberg, who captured first place in the 200 freestyle at the New England championships.

Newcomb hopes for a .500 season, and more importantly to be more competitive in the conference. He sees this years team as,"much more competitive than last years squad, no team will be able to take us lightly."

★ football

continued from page 16

And one that's without senior co-captain George Barnwell. UMass' leading rusher, Barnwell is still suffering from a bruised shoulder obtained in the BU game and will not dress.

In his place, sophomore Ted Barrett (59 carries for 204 yards and two touchdowns) will start at tailback. He will team with fullback Al Neri (411 yards). Freshman Kevin Smellie (9 carries for 90 yards) will see a lot of action as will backup fullback Anthony Strickland (20 carries for 70 yards).

"I like having the good depth at running back," said Stull. "I'm anxious to see what Smellie and Strickland can do. Kevin has great speed and Tony is a big strong runner. I think we can do something with them."

UM quarterback Dave Palazzi (44-for-81 for 539 yards and five topuchdowns) and the rest of the UMass offense will have to contend with a UConn passing defense that is ranked fourth in the nation.

The Huskies return All-New England defensive end Mark Michaels (63 tackles) and linebacker Mike Jansen (74). On offense, transfer quarterback Peter Lane (1,287 yards and four touchdowns, but 13 interceptions) looks to a host of receiver pre-season drills. . .freshman kicker Silvio Bonvini is back from injury and may see action. . .Stull and about 20 players went to the Shriners Children's Hospital in Springfield after practice on Wednesday and carved pumpkins with the patients, many of them serious burn victims. "It was a great time," said Stull. "It really put things in perspective." Rundle was about the best carver, McKeown by far the worst.

UMass at UConn

Where: Connecticut's Memorial Stadium (16,200-grass) at 1 p.m.

The Records: UMass is 5-3, 2-1 in the Yankee Conference. UConn is 3-3, 0-2 in the conference.

Common Opponents: Northeastern (UMass won, 10-7; UConn won, 27-13). Holy Cross (UMass won, 27-3; UConn won, 22-2). Maine (UMass won, 20-7; UConn lost 28-3).

Last Week: UMass beat Boston University, 17-14; UConn lost to Maine, 28-3.

Streaks: UMass has won three straight, UConn has lost one.

Season Series: UMass leads, 30-23-2.

Last Year: UMass lost, 21-16.

The Latest Line: UConn by 1.

UMass against the Spread: UMass is 5-3, 0-3 on the road and 3-0 as an underdog.

Injuries: UMass- TB George Barnwell (shoulder), P Jim Tandler (knee), OG Peter Borsari (knee), LB Steve Silva (knee), DT Bruce Strange (knee), OG Sheldon Hardison (knee) and LB Jim Vertucci (eye) are all out. UConn-OG Mark Murphy (knee) and OG Dave Franks (knee) are out. OG Dan Cudgma (ankle) and DE Mike McNamara (ankle) and probable. DT Gary Lanzafame (neck) is doubtful.

Radio: WTTFAM (1430), WSPR-AM (1270), WPOE-AM (1520) and WMUA-FM (91.1) will carry the game.

BE A SPORT
BE INFORMED

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Concerned about Acid Rain? Join the Acid Rain Campaign '86 Saturday November 2 Student Union 423B info call 548-0199

8:00 pm Sunday Nov 3 Newman Ctr lecture by Mary Dutcher, A witness for peace. "Peacemaking in Nicaragua - can a Sustained Religious Presence Halt the Bloodshed"

AUTO FOR SALE

78 Datsun B210 4 sp 92000 steel radials 2 new radial snows on rims good shape/mileage needs brakes $850.00 549-4133

Toyota Corolla 4 door 4 speed 1974 white snows rebuilt 1600 motor $450 665-2577

1974 AMC Hornet St. Wagon 6 cyl 105k mi new battery, carbeurator, muffler, alternator, passed inspection needs minor work $450 call 665-3986 after 5 pm

78 Dodge Dart dependable standard some rust. 450 or BO 549-4600 ext 348

81 Berlinetta Camero 54k white red cloth interior cruise control tilt wheel AC PS PB AM-FM cass chapman new exhaust well maintained sacrifice $5900 546-9000

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7893

72 VW Fastback rebuilt engine new muffler brakes battery snows runs great no work required $850/BO 549-0362 or 5-0720

BUS DRIVING JOBS!

UMass Transit Service is looking for several part-time drivers. Applicants must be UMass students carrying 6 or more credits in a degree program. Class II license required. Starting pay is $4.60/hr. Call Bud or Jenny at 545-0058 for more info, or apply in person at the Bus Garage.

CALENDARMEN

Interviews for UM calendar will be held Sun Nov 3 in lower level of CC 7:00 pm any questions call MB 6-9807

CAREER CONNECTION

 Graduates  To obtain a great, satisfying job you need the right people to see your resume. Career Connection will publish and market your resume in a professionally printed and bound book arranged in career categories. It will be distributed to over 300 corporate personnel officers of New England companies. Career Connection maximises your exposure while minimises your costs. For application and information call Sherry 549-2616 or Noelle 546-8059

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, luncheon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

"CASH"

Paying cash for your baseball cards call Mike 546-6105

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9091

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

ERIK BIERMEISTER!

Are you gonna get that cheese off the glass! Happy 20th Tex

FOR RENT

Sanderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Fridge Rentals call R & P Package Store 253-9742 free delivery

Incredible one bedroom suite! Located in Presidential Apts, the closest apts to campus. Includes heat dishwasher A/C disposal etc. Call Jon eves 549-6167 available in December

Large room for 2 people ¼ mile from Mall available 1/1/86 call Julie or Deirdre 586-5425

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Univega 12-speed completely set up. Extra everything $200 549-0385

Government Homes from $1 (u repair) Also delinquent tax property. Call 1-805-687-6000 ext. GH-9616 for information.

Must sell Ramones tickets $12.00 for 2 call Nancy 256-6849

Bicycle built for two. Motobacane 10 speed. $400 1-467-7877

FOUND

Ring found at Orchard Hill Courts 549-4789

GREAT YOGURT

Dannon, Stonyfield, Colombo, Mountainhigh, and Brown Cow yogurt. . .only at the People's Market

HAPPY BIRTHDAY BIERS

Hey Latemeister, Lazymeister, Jokermeister, Betmeister - Just kidding Biers, Happy Birthday. We're having a party, are you coming? It's at your house. Joe M.

HELP WANTED

Accounting Clerk Butterfield kitchen for the Spring semester - minimum commitment is one academic year. 6 hours/week $4.25/hour with free room and board. Applications are available at the Butterfield Kitchen Office and are due by 5 pm on Nov. 1, 1985.

On campus non-work study MWF 7-noon call Jane at 546-5689

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Sold and pay commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David STanzel 584-3596

Wanted: SGA Budgets Committee Assistant, Auditor, Secretary. Each pays 5-7 hrs/week. Workstudy and non-workstudy. Apply 420 SUB. 5-0341. The SGA is an AA/EOE employer.

Part-time, on-call work with Mental Health Agency. Hours to suit your schedule 536-5475, 9 am - 5 pm

Joe's Paradise Chicken a new restaurant is opening soon in Amherst. We are looking for a few people to fill counter and kitchen help positions. Good pay. If interested please call Bill or Joe at 253-7494 or after 6:00 pm 665-3597

Santa needs elves - Petite outgoing individuals needed to work 1-5 wk/yrs. Apply at Job Matching in Hampshire Mall or call 584-8889

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Students Urgently Needed. Earn $35-45/day, work 2-5 days/week. Join our statewide referendum campaigns for toxic waste cleanup, acid rain control, and utility reform. We are MASSPIRG, the state's leading public interest lobby, and we're seeking college students, grads and others for our citizen outreach staff. Travel and advancements. Will train. Call 256-6434.

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites $5.00/hr. Call Carl at 665-3068 at any reasonable hour.

LOST

Lost wallet Tuesday on 3rd floor SUB call Alex 5-0194

Lost black and white male cat with black fluffy tail. Anywhere from Presidential to Townehouse. Please call 549-4462

Lost ladies watch will identify please call Robin 549-0868 reward!

Lost eye glasses w/black case, please call Scott 6-4705

Burgundy wallet lost? Please return don't screw up my life. Please. Reward 549-7297 CJ

Set of keys in tan Fendi case lost. Very important! Please call Sheryl 256-1645

Phi Mu Sorority Pin. Great sentimental value. If found please call Tara at 256-1380

Wilson Tennis Racquet. Must find or will flunk tennis class! Any info call 253-7357

Ring lost two pearls sentimental value 549-7717

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassay Recording Studio offer 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

PARKING AVAILABLE

Low cost on campus parking for the year. Great location. Call 665-8766

PERSONALS

Thanks to all who voted against the Student Activities Payroll Fee. We love you. Students for Government by Referenda.

Congratulations Southwest Area Government on the Halloween Policy change. Good job.

Cheer up Julie Al Your roommates need and love you! The Gang

Zoom - Where are you? - Waiting to hear from you - Blue Eyes

Call to Pam. Checkers Club is active!! We have key on seventh floor Student Union. Come tonight, wear red & black!!!

I love you Geno Limone!

Dianne Piquette we're going to miss you at S.A.O. you have made the past 2½ yrs of my life much more enjoyable. The best of luck at Whitmore. Thanx Mom - Davis

Happy Birthday Lisa and Diane! Love, James and Rich and Brook!

Hey Swiss Village Anti-Socials There's a keg at the "Web" Friday night. Interested? If you haven't seen it, look around.

Sugarbush Ski Week! Hotel $149 see Ski Club now 549-3437

To that sleek looking Lambda Chi in uniform. DJC I love to watch you walk. Love the girl next door

Hey Videodate - I want a rematch, how about one-on-one love, the tall one

Kerry L. Happy 19th Birthday. Have a blast. Love, K, M, P, J, K, L

Fol and Herbie Happy Anniversary we love you EDF and Agatha

Rich C.E.O. of the man club: This is one of those things that you will have to live through by yourself. Tony

Dear Chocolate Eyes - Thank you for the greatest year of my life - Rik Babe I really love you Be mine forever love your baby

Oh-My-Lord! Time to make the Resistors! Happy Birthday Mike. You're a super roommate.

This message brought to you by the unrecognised few who in spite of the rest of you do a good job everyday

Sisters of Sigma Kappa - isn't it nice to begin your day at 5:00 am!! We love you the Pledges XOXO

Ross Zachs What a guy! What a friend! I'm sure glad I know you.

Here is the personal you've been bucking for Rich

Mike of Alpha Phi Omega fame: Thanks so much for helping us out. Chi Omega

The Sisters and Pledges of Chi Omega welcome Mary Gallagher to the family! Chi Omega loves our 12 awesome pledges!!

Mikey, This is only the beginning let's go sex! I love you, Elisabeth

David! Happy 20th! Here's to a great weekend! Love, Me

To Bernard Happy Birthday you FFPBH KCSN 3PM

Happy Birthday Marcus A. will they bake you a cake at Ft Dev? If not I will love Annn

PLAYER BUTLER

Happy Birthday Playe'! You are truly my best friend, and in vie sana tis aersas tres difficile Have a super day - you deserve it crrayhead! Cheers! Much love, Elisabeth

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDERS WANTED

Cheap Bus to Boston, $9.50, long weekend, Friday 11/8, 12 noon. Call 545-2145

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female to share apt in Brittany Manor call 256-0668 evenings

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share 5 bedroom house in Belchertown. Own room, on bus route (stops right in front), $160 plus utilities. Available immediately Call 253-5390 after 5 pm

1 bedroom available in Amherst house with country setting for 1 female or couple. $195/156. 256-7100 keep trying

Quiet couple looking to share 2 bedroom apt. completely furnished call after 6 pm 549-6237

SERVICES

TAILOR Alteration Expert, Same Day Service Available SHAANN'S Rt 116 Sunderland Open 8 am 665-3878

COINS 123/131 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Brian's Typing Service. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7632

Quality Typing by Professional. Reasonable rates. Convenient. Call Heather 253-5163

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

TRAVEL

Interested in a trip around the world? I'll be leaving in January for 6 months. Looking for adventurous travel companions. Call Greg 253-5618

Take a Break on the French side! Skibreak's January trip to Tignes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT airfare (Swissair), Transfers, Accommodations, Skipass (116 lifts), Slalom races, cocktails for $740/7 nights in resort. Skibreak 203-354-6059

Campus coordinator for January Skibreak to the French Alps travels for free! (1/15) Miles/Skibreak (203) 354-6059 PD

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next day service. TYPE-RITE. 353-5111

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0567

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 546-8822

Reggae/Thrash Guitar & Drummer wanted call Geoff 586-7845

Any Richard Leakey tickets you won't use? Please call, Shari 256-0407

WANTED TO RENT

2 females looking for apt or room prefer in N. Amherst area. Start Jan or Spring call 546-5326

SPORTS

UMass starts playoff push at Connecticut

Barnwell injured

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

In September, few people believed that with three games left in the season University of Massachusetts football coach Bob Stull would be talking about making the playoffs.

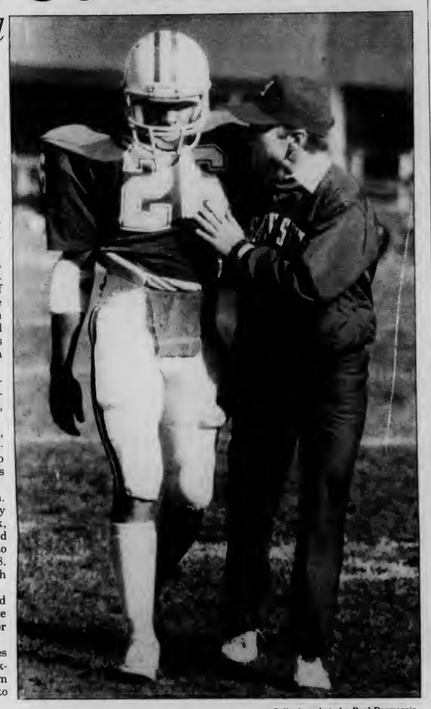
But going in tomorrow's game at the University of Connecticut, the Minutemen are confident they can be one of the 12 teams selected to make the Division 1-AA tournament.

UMass can make it one of two ways, by winning the Yankee Conference title or being selected for an at-large bid.

The Minutemen are 2-1 in the conference, losing only to Rhode Island. The Rams host New Hampshire on Saturday in a battle of the two undefeated teams remaining in the conference. UMass is at New Hampshire on Nov. 16. A UNH win tomorrow combined with a UMass win against the Wildcats would give each team a loss and create a three-way tie at the top.

The issue of who would represent the conference in the playoffs would go to a committee vote. Should UMass lose that vote, they can hope for an at-large bid.

"If we win the three games we have left, that would give us an 8-3 record and a six-game winning streak. It would be tough to leave us out," said Stull. "But it all hinges on beating UConn."



The Huskies are an enigma this season. At 3-3, UConn has soundly whipped Holy Cross (22-2), yet lost to Maine last week, 28-3. The Huskies gave nationally-ranked Delaware State a good game and lost to New Hampshire by only two points, 10-8. They also defeated a high-powered Lehigh team.

"We can't look past then, no way," said Stull. "They throw the ball well and have a good pass defense. It's a good rivalry for us, I expect a tough game."

The Minutemen lost 21-16 to the Huskies in Amherst last season. They will be looking to make the Huskies the third team (along with BU, Maine and Holy Cross) to get paid back for a 1984 loss.

"They're on the list," said nose guard Mike Dwyer. "We remember last season's game. We're a different team now, one that's hungry."

continued on page 15

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Secondary coach Mike Hodges talks things over with cornerback Duckworth Grange. The Minutemen are at Connecticut on Saturday.

Field hockey takes on #1 Connecticut

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

Bring on the best.

The fifth-ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team will try to duplicate the current UMass policy of knocking off the nation's number one team this Saturday when it battles the University of Connecticut at 1 p.m. on NOPE field.

Earlier this fall, the UM women's soccer team, ranked third at the time, snapped the University of Norttamounts, senior Jill Negros was an easy 6-3, 6-4 winner at fourth singles to close her season.

"It was a great way to finish up the season. We've had so many close matches against UVM- it's nice to come out on the winning side," Negros said about the match.

Other UMass winners included senior Diana Biagioli in the second singles, 6-2, 7-5. Freshman Kim Pola was a victor at third singles, 6-1, 4-6, 7-5. The first doubles team of senior Lisa Corbett and sophomore Debbie Ginn were 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 winners.ase a loss, this weekend would be it. Connecticut, currently on a six-game winning streak since losing to Penn State, 3-2, three weeks ago in Pennsylvania, are 15-1-0, climbing to the top of the national poll this week.

"This is a big chance to redeem ourselves. If we can beat or tie Connecticut, the BU loss will mean nothing," Hixon said. "We're playing the number one team in the country, this is our chance to roll. We've got to do it."

Playing giant-killer is never an easy task, but if anyone can do it, the Minutewomen can. Unbeaten at home, the Minutewomen have stopped nationally ranked Temple and defending national champion Old Dominion on Totman this season.

"This is going to be a great game. We've got a very good rivalry so every year it's kind of a special game," senior All-America defenseman Megan Donnelly said.

The game is of special interest to Donnelly who's close friend, senior co-captain Janet Ryan, plays midfield for the Huskies. Ryan, a two-time All-America midfielder, has nine goals and four assists for the Huskies and heads a potent attack that has two other players with 11 goals each.

The Minutewomen are led by Donnelly,(14 goals; 1 assist), junior forward Lisa Griswold (8 goals; 2 assists), and senior forward Chris Kocot (4 goals; 4 assists).

Senior Kathryn Rowe starts in goal, anchoring the Minutewomen with an 11-2-2 record and a 0.78 goals against average. Rowe also has six-and-a-half shutouts, splitting one shutout with sophomore Lynn Carlson who is 0-1-0 with a 1.33 goals against average.

Bring on the best, UMass is ready.

Women's soccer looks to finish season perfectly

14-0 Minutewomen face Springfield

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The Springfield College women's soccer is a sleeper that could make things very uncomfortable for No. 1 University of Massachusetts tomorrow.

It is the unranked Chiefs that stand in the way of UMass's first-ever unbeaten, untied season. The Chiefs are the last team in New England to try and derail the Minutewomen's New England championship Saturday at 1 p.m. match at Boyden Field.

"You can't take anyone for granted," UM coach Kalekeni Banda said citing the UMass fiek hockey team's 3-0 loss to unranked Boston University on Wednesday."It's a very important game in terms of pride and our record-setting pace."

The game also marks the final regular season game for UMass senior co-captains Sue Bird and Jamie Watson. They are the only members left from the huge 14-member freshman class that started with the team in 1982.

"These girls have earned it," Banda said. "They can make history."

The Minutewomen can also make history if they top Springfield by finishing the season as the number-one ranked team in America, besides being the first undefeated UMass soccer team since Arnie Morse led the first Minutewomen team to a 15-0-1 record in 1978.

"I think we're really going be pysched," foward Monica Seta said. "The fan support should really be good. It's also a chance to go undefeated."

A 15-0-0 regular season record wasn't what the UMass team was shooting for in September. "Our number one objective was to win the New England region," Banda said. "We wanted to do everything possible to be the best team in New England."

Seta added, "I looked at the schedule and some looked hard (UConn, UNC). We figured if we could get by them we might have a shot (at going unbeaten)."

Freshman Beth Roundtree lead the squad in scoring with 10 goals, four assists for 24 points. Seta has 22 points (8-6) and Carolyn Micheel (5-11-21) is one assist shy of the UMass season assist record.

Freshman goalie Jan Holland has given up only one goal all year for a 0.10 goals against average.

UM women want respect

Swim season opens

By FRED NADEL
Collegian Correspondent

Respect. The University of Massachusetts women's swimming team is fighting for respect. Coming off a disappointing season, second-year coach Bob Newcomb looked into the high school ranks and brought some of the finest swimmers from the New England area to UMass, looking to bolster the 1985-86 team.

Eight freshman and transfer student Kris Henson add depth that was sorely missed last year, a 3-9 season.

Leading the Minutewomen this season are co-captains Sue Freitas and Allison Uzzo. Uzzo, a junior returning from sickness, feels she has a lot to prove. A double UM record holder in the 1000 and 1650 freestyle events, Allison wishes to improve upon these records and recapture the 500 freestyle record. Freitas, a senior swims the individual medley, as well as the sprint events.

Senior Nancy Stevens and Lori Carrol, a freshman, pair up in the 100 and 200 butterfly to form a strong winning combination. Perhaps the most significant gain is Henson, a transfer from Clark University.

Last season, Henson swam in the Division 3 national championships, and looks to be one of the top distance swimmers in New England.

New recruits Michele Leary, Melissa Waller, and diver Debbie Mullin will also add points for UM. Leary will swim a multitude of events and might be a major suprise to a lot of people. Waller will swim the breaststroke and can be a strong competitor in New England. Mullin was injured during the

continued on page 15

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:
Today
Football: at Connecticut, 1 p.m.
Women's Soccer: Springfield, Boyden Field, 1 p.m.
Field Hockey: Connecticut, NOPE Field, 1 p.m.
Men's Soccer: at Maine, 1 p.m.
Women's Swimming: Vermont, Boyden Pool, 1 p.m.
Cross Country: New Englands at Franklin Park, Boston
Volleyball: at MAIAW's.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 37 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Monday, November 4, 1985

Collegian photo by Neil Beckerman

HOT LIGHTS—Ramones lead singer, Joey Ramone, belts one out Friday night as the Ramones played to a full Student Union Ballroom. Review can be found on page 7 of today's Arts section.

Inn contract talks end; workers continue protest

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

Negotiations between management and employees at the Lord Jefferey Inn ended this weekend without a settlement or plans for future talks, union representaive Rob Traber said.

The 70 employees of the inn, owned by Amherst College, will continue their job action and picket the inn during their off-hours, which has resulted in a substantial loss in dining room business, according to Eric Nusbaum, general manager of the inn.

"It's had a distasterous effect on our restaurant business," Nusbaum said, refusing to specify exactly how much money the inn has lost since the 11-day work protest began. "Let's just say it's a significant loss of sales."

The overnight accommodations haven't suffered as much, Nusbaum said. Parents Weekend at Amherst College filled the hotel.

The inn workers have been working without a contract since Oct. 24 and are protesting management proposals to establish a two-tiered system of workers, where new employees would work for less than present employees. They would also receive reduced benefits and have fewer rights involving matters such as scheduling.

"I find it hard to understand that other employees at Amherst College, which are non-union, have received wage increases. We're not second-class citizens," Lee Wildes, a desk clerk at the inn said.

Nusbaum said the problem of not offering wage increases to inn employees stems from the establishment losing money.

"The whole thing centers around around the fact that the inn hasn't been profitable," he said, "We're still trying to return it to a break-even situation."

Nusbaum said employee layoffs are probable.

"We've made no secret that there will be layoffs," Nusbaum said. "Our business volume is a lot slower in the winter than in the fall."

The picketing employees of Local 217 are asking people not to stay, eat or drink at the inn.

"It's really cut down on my income," waitress Florence Kilgo, a UMass student, said . "I still have a job but I'm not making any money. There hasn't been any business in the dining room."

Looming in the background is the possibility of a strike that was approved by the employees.

"If we determine that it's the right thing to do, we'll strike them," Traber said. "It's the college's doing. They can end this at any time they want."

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

South western view of Puffer's Pond in North Amherst, which is expected to undergo major repairs next fall.

Official cites AIDS fear in decline of donations

By ROBYN RUGGIERO
Collegian Correspondent

Connections drawn between AIDS and blood donations threaten to affect the American Red Cross blood supply in Massachusetts, according to a Red Cross Medical Director.

"Overall blood donations are down in our region 8 percent from one year ago," Mark Popovsky, the director, said. "People are concerned with the disease and have misconceptions about how to contract the disease."

Popovsky said much of this can be attributed to the negative press surrounding AIDS.

"There is a fear of being educated," said Claire Gemme, Red Cross manager of collections operations. "The Red Cross is hoping with education people will understand that there is no danger of contracting AIDS when donating."

Popovsky said there is no risk of contracting the disease from donating blood. Red Cross policy states that the equipment used is sterile and will not be reused.

The Red Cross is holding a blood drive at UMass tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday and according to one Red Cross official, Chris Keaney, the University "is the biggest of any single donor group in the state."

Red Cross' goal is 500 pints in three days. Steve's Ice Cream in Amherst is supporting the drive by donating 2-for-1 sundae certificates to donors.

Popovsky said much of the fear of contracting AIDS through blood donations comes from equating donating with sharing needles for drug use, which is one confirmed was of contracting the disease.

"A person cannot get AIDS through blood donations," he said. "Never could, never will."

Popovsky said 92 percent of AIDS cases are contracted through sexual relations and illicit intravenous drug use. Hemophiliacs make up an additional 1 percent.

He said 1 percent are related to blood transfusions, but the Red Cross has taken precautionary measures to protect the safety of their blood supply.

In an effort to protect the public from risks related to blood transfusions, the Red Cross has implemented two policies for blood donors to follow before they are allowed to donate.

The first of these is a careful screening of blood donors to access whether or not they are members of groups at risk. Nurses carefully screen donors by asking if they have any of the symptoms attributed to

continued on page 3

INSIDE

Retired associate dean dies.....3
Ramones come to campus.....7
Women soccer 'make history'.....12

"He was an interesting man. He was a combination of being a very thorough, well-organized man, but also had the ability of being warm and friendly."
—Melton M. Miller, assistant dean of the College of Engineering

$12,000 allotted by state for Puffer's Pond work

By CAROLYN PHILLIPS
Collegian Correspondent

By next fall, Amherst officials hope to begin $12,000 worth of state-funded improvements to Puffer's Pond, which will include construction of erosion control terraces.

After the town conservation commission decided to cancel a more comprehensive $95,000 improvement proposal, Town Meeting voted last week to approve the less extensive changes.

The commission rejected the $95,000 proposal because it would have required renovations that some members felt would alter the pond, Peter Westover, director of town conservation services said.

Under the new proposal the town would have to install running water, permanent restrooms and at least 100 parking spaces. The commission members "don't want to change the atmosphere of Puffer's Pond," Westover said.

In addition to building erosion control devices, the commission also intends to use the money to install concrete pads for rental toilets, construct drainage surfacing along State Street and improve access to the pond for handicapped persons.

At the next town meeting in May, discussion of the possiblity of the town funding its own $95,000 improvement will begin. The improvements may include installation of a lighted ball field, tennis courts and a picnic area. An $80,000 dam repair will also be discussed.

Puffer's Pond is open from 6 a.m. to dusk, and is a popular spot for swimming and sunbathing. Prohibition of night use and alcohol consumption will be strictly enforced because "there are still occasional complaints from residents nearby (the pond) about noise late at night," Westover said.

AP Laserphoto

Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos, facing a growing Communist insurgency and mounting U.S. criticism of his rule, announces yesterday he is ready to call a new presidential election in three months or less to settle questions of his popularity. He made his announcement during a live satellite interview with ABC's 'This Week With David Brinkley.

Agents plead manslaughter

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Two French secret agents today pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the July 10 sinking of the Greenpeace flagship Rainbow Warrior.

The change in the charge from murder to the lesser charge of manslaughter came as a surprise to spectators in the crowded courtroom.

Maj. Alain Mafart and Capt. Dominique Prieur pleaded guilty to the charges of manslaughter and wilfull damage in the sinking of the ship in which a Greenpeace photographer, Fernando Pereira,was killed.

There is no set penalty for manslaughter, and the two agents will be ordered before the High Court for sentencing.

Some legal observers said the government's decision to accept the pleas to the lesser charges indicated it might deport the couple.

They had been charged with murder, arson and conspiracy.

Prime Minister David Lange had said Sunday that the agents probably had no physical connection with blowing up the Rainbow Warrior that was blasted by two mines while docked in Auckland harbor.

"I would be almost certain that those two never had anything physically to do on the night of July 10 which caused that ship to sink and that man to die," Lange said. The agents were arrested in New Zealand on July 12.

Lange, a former criminal lawyer, said he had no knowledge of the details of the prosecution's case against the pair.

A French investigation disclosed in August that Mafart, 34, and Ms. Prieur, 36, were among six French agents who were monitoring activites of the Rainbow Warrior.

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Andrew Wolff
Copy Editors: Steve Higgins
Layout Technician: Leslie Goldberg
Photo Technician: Maria Bull
Production Supervisor: Bethanne Moskov
Production: Kelly Sieger, Andy Diskes, Paula Saucier, Rob Catalano, Dave Boardman and Mark Parker.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit #58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

Daily Collegian
Advertising
that works!!
Call:
545-3500

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN
6 A.M.-3 A.M.
SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS
FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

HAPPY 21st BIRTHDAY!

Smart & Sassy, that's our Sam -
And never shy (she's one part Ham)!
Mirth & Joy are Gods she chases, and Visits she makes to far away places.

the Athletic Dept. will miss her soon,
'Cause she graduates this coming' June.
Can you guess who she could be?
A downward glance and you will see.

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1¼ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open:
Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

Sabroso

Lumatel
A Discounted Long-Distance Telephone Service for Residential Students
DORM STUDENTS!
Don't overpay on your toll calls!
See us in the Campus Center Concourse this week.
The Univ. Telecomm Dept.

TUESDAY NOV. 25 R-RATED HYPNOTIST
World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
Radically Different Ridiculously Funny
Richly Entertaining Recklessly Risque
Rte. 9, Amherst
JUSTIN RYAN'S
corner of University Dr.
256-1059

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wetrobe's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Are you denying yourself a better shot at grad school?

Okay, it may be too late to get a 4.0. But it's not too late to try to do better on your LSAT, GMAT, GRE, or MCAT. For that, there's Stanley H. Kaplan.

No one has prepped more students than Stanley H. Kaplan. Our test-taking techniques and educational programs have prepared over 1 million students.

So whatever grad school exam you're taking, call us. Remember, the person next to you during your exam might have taken a Kaplan course.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD
The world's leading test prep organization.
358 N. Pleasant
549-5780
Enrolling Now for Dec. LSAT/GRE
Free Speed Reading Lesson
Available Anytime

Look into the one market research graduate program that all these companies are involved in:

A.C. Nielsen Company
Advertising Research Foundation
Audits & Surveys, Inc.
Burke Marketing Services
Campbell Soup Co.
Coca-Cola USA
Custom Research Inc.
Frito-Lay
General Foods
General Mills, Inc.
Grey Advertising
Kenneth Hollander Associates
McDonald & Little Advertising
Market Facts, Inc.
Marketing & Research Counselors, Inc.
MRCA Information Services
Needham, Harper & Steers Advertising
NFO Research, Inc.
Procter & Gamble
Ralston Purina Co.
Sears, Roebuck
SSC&B:Lintas Worldwide
The Pillsbury Company
Yankelovich, Skelly & White
Young & Rubicam

The University of Georgia's Master of Marketing Research Program is truly unique. It is governed by a Board of Advisors drawn from the leaders of industry. Their personal involvement results in an outstanding program that prepares you for the real world.

It's a fifteen month program that combines classroom and on-the-job research experience. It was the first and is still the finest integrated program of graduate study leading to a Master of Marketing Research degree.

As you would expect, admission is selective and competition is stiff. $6,000 scholarships are available for qualifying applicants.

Professor Fred D. Reynolds
122 Brooks Hall
University of Georgia
Athens, Georgia 30602
Dear Sir:
Please send me complete information on your MMR program.
Name_____
Street_____ Apt._____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
Day Phone_____

Retired dean dies at 64

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

A funeral service was held yesterday for Joseph S. Marcus, retired associate dean of the School of Engineering at the University of Massachusetts, who died of cancer Friday at age 64.

Marcus retired from the University in January and died in his Amherst home after an illness lasting several months.

Marcus received many distinguished teaching awards from the University, and was honored two weeks ago by the Board of Trustees, when it named the Engineering East building Joseph Marcus Hall.

"He was an interesting man. He was a combination of being a very thorough, well-organized man but also had the ability of being warm and friendly," said Melton M. Miller, assistant dean of the College of Engineering.

Miller said he worked with Marcus for more than 10 years and Marcus was a "link between the school (of engineering) when it was new and the school as it is now."

Marcus was a faculty member since 1948, when he taught civil engineering. He became an assistant professor, associate professor and in 1969 was named associate dean of engineering.

He helped start the Joseph Marcus Yiddish Book Collection at the University Library, a 15,000-volume reference resource for Jewish Cultural studies.

"He had a strong committment to the students," said Nancy Hellman, an assistant dean of the School of Engineering. "He encouraged students to develop in their particular chosen field," through advising and counseling.

Marcus was born and raised in Worcester, and graduated from the Worcester Classical High School in 1940 and from Worcester Polytechnic Institute in 1944. He earned his master's degree at UMass in 1954.

He received the Chancellor's Medal for Service to the University, the Metawampe Award for distinguished teaching and the Distinguished Teaching Award.

He leaves his wife, the former Dorothy Slovin; two sons, Steven of Allston and Alan of Arlington, Va.; a daughter, Arlene Marcus of Newton; two brothers, Seymour of Worcester and Norman of Marblehead.

Health care workers meet

By BETHANNE MOSKOV
Collegian Staff

Looking to share knowledge and gain support, nurses and other health care providers involved with the issue of abuse against women yesterday completed their First Annual National Nursing Conference on Violence Against Women.

According to Peggy Peni, R.N., and a Ph.D. candidate in the School of Education, the main goals of the two-day conference were to "foster dissemination of ideas and information and to provide networking for the nurses and health care people that attended".

The conference, sponsored by the Division of Nursing and the Division of Continuing Education at the University of Massachusetts, was primarily aimed at professionals who have done research in the area of violence against women and who are seeking support for their work.

"Forty-eight presentations were given touching upon the topics of rape, battering, child sexual abuse, incest, medical exploitation, pornography, and elder abuse," said Peni, co-coordinator of the conference. The keynote speaker was Ann Burgess, a van Ameringen Professor of Psychiatric Mental Health Nursing at the University of Pennsylvania.

"The people who attended the conference shared their ideas and discussed various problems that they are facing", said Peni, adding that the conference was a great success with about 150 people attending from over 30 states.

Peni and Christine King, faculty member in the division of nursing and co-coordinator of the event, came up with the idea of the conference last semester when a class was being taught on violence against women.

"We decided that these issues concerning women were ones that needed to be discussed and brought out into the open," Peni said.

Plans are already in the making for the second annual conference, Peni said.

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

UP IN SMOKE—Passersby were treated to a flaming spectacle Friday when car, above, began smoking and burst into flames on Commonwealth Avenue near Boyden Gym at 4:09 p.m. The driver of the auto, a University student who police would not identify, escaped unharmed, police said. The blaze, which took Amherst firefighters nearly 15 minutes to extinguish, temporarily closed the road and there were no injuries, police said.

Speaker praises civilian watch

By ROB SKELTON
Collegian Staff

The official U.S. policy of contra-funded destruction in Nicaragua can be countered by maintaining a continuous presence of concerned American civilians in the war zones, said an activist last night at a lecture at the Newman Center.

Speaking about "The Effects of the Contra War Against Nicaragua," Witness For Peace member Mary Dutcher described her group's goals and discussed its accomplishments.

"We go to areas of most tension," Dutcher said, referring to the Christian-based groups' initial successes in ceasing hostilities near the Honduran border in 1983. "Since then we've been sending long-term and short-term teams into Nicaragua as an offering of friendship, and protest against our government's policy there," she said.

The presentation, which included historical narrative and slides of contra-inspired economic and social sabotage, was an attempt to clear up the confusion surrounding the potentially explosive international incident when she and 29 other religious North Americans were abducted by contra forces in Costa Rica near the Nicaraguan border last summer.

"We went to the Rio San Juan in an attempt to create a demilitarized zone," Dutcher said. "This delegation differed from others in that we were responding in part to a threat made two days earlier by contra commander Eden Pastora."

"He issued a public threat that we were 'wolves in sheep's clothing' and more 'politicians' than Christians," she said. "But we believe what the U.S. is doing funding the contras is illegal, immoral, and not in the best interests of the United States,"so the flotilla set off.

The group was shot at and intercepted by members of the ARDE (Revolutionary Democratic Alliance), who took the members hostage for 27 hours.

"We were marched to a little shack and told to wait. Later a man arrived who said the kidnappers were not the ARDE and that we were free to go," Dutcher said.

In the meantime, Witness For Peace members befriended their captors enough to ascertain their loyalties, which were to Pastora, according to Dutcher. "The American media confused this like they do most other Nicaraguan issues," she said.

Dutcher said other examples of media misinformation include the U.S. embargo of Nicaragua. "There is not an appreciation in this country of how ugly our behavior is to the rest of the world," Dutcher said. "We called on everyone to embargo, but no one did."

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

HARVEST MOON—All that is missing from this photo is the witch on her broom, as the Moon hovers over Amherst last Wednesday night.

★AIDS

continued from page 1

They must read a brochure on risk groups and sign it. If determined a member of a risk group they are not allowed to donate.

The second precaution involves a test for an antibody called Anti-HTLV III (Human T-cell Lyphotripic virus, type III). This is the virus, discovered in 1983, that cases AIDS.

If the test for this virus is positive it means the person has been exposed to AIDS, not that they have it. Those who have this antibody are not allowed to donate and are referred to an alternate test site. There are nine such sites in Massachusetts and one is located at UMass.

Those who have positive results when tested are prevented from donating in the future also.

The Red Cross encourages those who feel they might be carriers of AIDS to go to the alternate test site before donating. Those at risk are "any male who has had sexual relations with another male since 1977. Homosexual females are not excluded unless they have had relations with those males in the risk group," Popovsky said.

PART-TIME OPPORTUNITIES MAKE YOUR OWN SCHEDULE!

If you know the basics of home construction or weatherization (or even if you consider yourself to be "handy around the house"), DMC Energy needs your talent to motivate area home owners to save energy.

We have an immediate need for part-time energy auditors. These are flexible positions which put you in charge of your schedule. This is an ideal opportunity for anyone who wishes to work, but needs a part-time position which won't interfere with classes. No sales involved.

There is a three week training course (part-time). You will be paid a stipend of $27.00 per each training day. Upon successful completion of training and passing certification tests, you will be given a bonus of $125.00. Another bonus of $125.00 will be given you upon completion of one month's service, provided you have performed quality work.

There is a $16.00 payment for each audit completed, plus a $5.00 expense reimbursement for each completed audit,

Our next training class begins on November 12. If you are interested in the positions or would like additional information, please contact Ms. Temple at 1-800-332-2754 as soon as possible.

Tuesday Nov. 5 R-rated Hypnotist

World Famous

Frank Santos

Ⓡ Rated Hypnotist Comedian

Ⓡadically Different Ⓡidiculously Funny
Ⓡichly Entertaining Ⓡecklessly Risque

AT JUSTIN RYAN'S

Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Drive

let us do your wash-dry-fold and hand pressing
10-5 P.M. MON-SAT
SELF SERVICE
7 DAYS-7A.M.-10 P.M.
549-1665

SPEEDWASH Quality Laundry
11 Pray St.
Amherst, MA

HAIRCUTS
$8.50
with this coupon
CALL
STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr.,
Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85

DON'T JUST TAKE HISTORY. MAKE HISTORY.

Be the generation to abolish nuclear weapons everywhere.
Join The Great Peace March.

No one under the age of 30 has ever lived free from the threat of nuclear war. Millions believe that they will die in a nuclear war within the next ten years.

There comes a time in history when young people must take a stand and become the conscience of the nation. Students can make the difference.

On March 1st, 1986, you can take a stand by being one of five thousand people who will leave schools, homes, jobs, and families to walk from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C. We will walk 15 miles a day. 255 days. 3,235 miles. Our one goal: global nuclear disarmament. Nothing less.

We need you to make it happen. We need you to create a citizens movement so massive that world leaders will have no choice but to abolish nuclear weapons.

If you're eighteen or over, in good physical condition, and ready to devote nearly a year of your life to peace, then step forward. Help turn hope into history.

Look for the Great Peace March representative on campus today.

The Great Peace March YES! Card

☐ Yes! I want to march. Send me an application.
☐ Yes! I want to get academic credit for marching. Send me information.
☐ Yes! Enclosed is my contribution of: ☐ $100 ☐ $50 ☐ $25 ☐ Other $ _____
☐ Yes! I want to help. Please contact me.

Name _____
Address _____ City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Daytime phone ( ) _____ Evening phone ( ) _____
Campus _____

Mail to PRO-Peace
8150 Beverly Blvd., Suite 203, Los Angeles, CA 90048. (213) 653-6245
Please make checks payable to PRO-Peace. Your contributions are tax deductible.

THE GREAT PEACE MARCH. Step Forward.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Abortion an ugly reality

I am a white female, 21 years old. This summer, I got pregnant. This summer, I had an abortion.

One does not get an abortion, one has an abortion. And I will have this abortion for the rest of my life. Before I became pregnant, I was pro-choice. And after the experience and the pain and the tears, I am still pro-choice. Abortion is an option which should be available to all women, but it is not something I would recommend to anyone.

The positive test results were not a surprise: a week before I actually had the test, my boyfriend and I discussed our options. We talked about keeping the child and getting married, we talked about keeping the child and living together, we talked about adoption. After we had decided against all of those options, we discussed abortion. I could not use the word "abortion" for several weeks after the experience, and I still have trouble with it. To me, it is onomatopoetic; that is, it is a word which by the way it sounds, descibes the experience. I always referred to my abortion as "going to the clinic" or something like that.

I had thought it would be an easy decision to make, an easy decision to execute. Within half an hour after I received the positive test result, I was on the telephone to the clinic, making an appointment. Had I waited any longer, I might have talked myself out of it.

I was cornered by circumstances. I am a college senior, and school was starting in a few weeks. My family would not have handled my situation well, had I kept the child, and my boyfriend did not really want the commitment of marriage, myself, and a child.

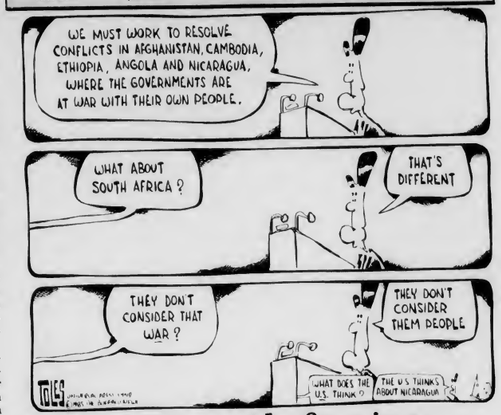
At a time when I should have been totally in control of my destiny—and the destiny of a future human being—I was not allowed to truly think for myself.

Ideally, I would have kept the child and raised it on my own, or with the help of any loving person who had come along. I cried long, hard, and deeply for the child inside me—the child I had to kill because it was not conceived at a time convenient for me and my circumstances. Each time I looked into my boyfriend's eyes for help and answers, all I could think was, "My God, it would have had blue eyes."I cried for a beautiful blue-eyed child I would never see.

But I felt happy and fulfilled; content, almost, with the life inside me, knowing it would have to be extinguished before much longer. Even now, I have trouble being physically intimate with a man without my insides turning to stone and without thinking I have killed another human being as a result of such intimacy.

This is what I did this summer. I killed another human being. I was pried open like a clam on a sterile operating table, and I had the life sucked out of me by a man in a green suit holding several suction tubes. The tubes fed into a bottle and the bottle was not fully covered by that piece of green cloth —I could see what they had taken from me. I could see what I was never going to get back. I felt so damn helpless lying there flat on my back, pried open.

At the clinic, I hadn't cried until the moment the doctor said "you might feel a little prick and then your ears might ring for a few minutes." At that moment, there on the table, abortion became more than a word-- it became real, an experience to be dealt with.



While my ears rang because of the anasthetic, the rest of me became a knot of agonized flesh and bone. This is something I will not ever forget in this lifetime.

I don't cry as much anymore, but there are times where I wonder about what could have been. I have accepted my situation, and I am receiving counseling. Nothing I can do will change what has happened to me, but I can make sure it will not happen again. Never again should I have to make the decision to end a human life. I understand that to some people, a four week old fetus may not be a human life. To me it was. Wait until you are given the chance to carry life inside you to make that decision.

I know abortion was the right decision.

It was the right decision for me, as a living, breathing human being.

Due to the sensitive nature of this column, the editor has respected the author's request for anonymity.

A future worth fearing

Bill Cole

November 7th, 1988--Pat Robertson, the candidate of the Christian/Republican Party, is elected President of the United States on a platform of "Good Government Through God." The following January...

"Hi everyone, and welcome to the 700 Club. I'm your host, Pat Robertson, and this week we have a terrific show lined up. Last week was our special inaugural show from the Capitol steps, and tonight we're coming to you live from my new oval office in the White House. It is here that I'll begin the job that God has given me: to save this nation from the throes of its decadence, and lead it down the path of moral righteousness."

"Before we move on to my Cabinet appointments, let's bring out my Vice-President and co-host . . . Mr. Ben Kinchlow!! . . . How are ya' this week, Ben?"

"I'm feeling great, Pat. For once I'm proud to be an American, and I'm ready to help my countrymen be righteous!!"

"That's terrific Ben, and now let's introduce our Cabinet selections. My first guest is a righteous man who for the past 20 years has displayed tremendous ingenuity in the private sector. His tactful treatment of employees and his Right-Wing ideology make him a natural choice for Secretary of Commerce. Ladies and gentlemen . . . Joseph Coors!! . . . Joe, glad you could join us on 700 Club tonight."

"My pleasure Pat, and might I add you're looking particularly righteous tonight . . . I must say. As the new Secretary I proclaim that to prevent Communist infiltration, all workers unions are hereafter banned!!"

"Whew, well brother Joe that is indeed a righteous thing you have done. Now moving on to my second appointment, the position of Secretary of State . . . Jeannie Kirkpatrick!!"

"Thank you Pat. I like to think I've proven my ability in my previous stint as UN Ambassador. Why I can still remember the night I dined at the Argentine Embassy in the midst of the Falkland Island invasion. And the time I voted wrong at the UN...and one time when I was alone in the General Assembly with the Nigerian representative . . ."

"Well thank you Jeannie, I'm sure your stories will liven up our staff meetings. My next guest tonight is making his second appearance on a Cabinet, having served briefly in the previous administration. How about a nice hand for the Interior Secretary himself . . . Sawing' Jimmy Watt!!"

"Hi Pat, thanks for having me. I'm thrilled to see righteousness again in the White House. In fact, as I was sitting backstage a vision from God descended upon me."

"Well that's great!! Would ya' like to share it with us Jim?"

"Sure. It was a huge airport with miles of runway, and on the terminal it said'Yosemite National Park.' I knew then that God has a job for me to pave the USA. Also Pat I'd like to add that I'm honored to be on a Cabinet that features a red-baiter, a fundamentalist, a black, a woman, and a . . ."

"Yes thank you Jimmy. My final appointment tonight is that of Defense Secretary . . . Mr. Mark Hofmann. He's received tremendous public acclaim lately for his literally 'explosive' talents. What's more he just recently switched from the Mormon to the Baptist faith because, as he puts it: "I saw the light . . . a bright light." Mark will be joining us as soon as he's released from the Morman Medical Center.

"Well that's it for tonight. Please join us next week when we outline our national policies with William Buckley Jr., Phyllis Shafley, George Will and John Silber. God bless you all and Good Night."

Letters
On mutually attractive diplomacy

The Right will apparently support any atrocity committed in the name of "anti-Communism," while the so-called Left stands ever ready to apologize for exactly the same crimes, so long as they are committed in the name of "Communism" or "socialism."

Since World War II, both Communist and right-wing totalitarianism has spread over much of the globe, fostered by the competing aims of American and Russian imperialism. Most recently, Ortega has voided the most basic civil rights in Nicaragua. His rationale for so doing was increasing American diplomatic, economic and military pressure on the Sandinista regime. Thus did American foreign policy provide Ortega with the perfect alibi for repression.

In contrast to the paranoid defensiveness that has characterized American foreign policy for more than a generation, a truely democratic foreign policy would support popular struggles for self-emancipation everywhere, while giving no support to any government which obstructs the democratic aspirations of its own or other peoples. The first step toward implementing such a policy is to disengage from power politics and the arms race.

The superpowers now routinely violate the sovereignty of smaller states, attempting to dignify their thuggery with names like the Monroe Doctrine and the Brezhnev Doctrine. Fortunately, there are countervailing tendencies to this organized, world-class gangsterism.

In the last five years small but substantial independent movements for peace and democracy have developed in the East Bloc. These groups operate under considerable adversity, and they desperately seek support from the Western peace movement and other democratic forces which they see as their real allies in the West. The same can be said of conscientious objectors and trade unionists in Nicaragua. With a state of emergency declared who is to defend them? Until the Latin American Solidarity movement stops apologizing for repressive policies committed in the name of "socialism," it will have little to offer the American public but the backside of a two dimensional, cardboard politics already available from the Republicans.

Gabe Gabrielsky
Amherst

All letters submitted for publication must be signed and include the author's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Letters must be typewritten and double spaced at 67 characters per line. Column submissions should be between 40 and 60 lines. All submissions are subject to editing for clarity and length. —Editor.

Letters
The merits of seatbelts, longevity

Baub Menzel hit the proverbial nail right on the head when he described his "dream" in Tuesday's Collegian that began with "trying my luck at the intersection when the light turned yellow." That's a game most drivers in this State seem to enjoy in their waking hours as well.

The theme of Baub's "dream" was that after he ran the red light, he was stopped by the police (now you KNOW he was dreaming; cops seem to ignore this nasty habit) who harassed him for not wearing a seat belt.

How about this scenario, which happens in real life all too frequently in this state. The "I-can't-wait" driver decides to try his luck upon getting the yellow light, and runs the red, whereupon he slams into some poor fool who forgot to wait the mandatory two or three seconds after getting a green light. His luck runs out, and death and/or serious injury are the result.

If I were a year round resident of this State, I wouldn't need a law to force me to wear a seatbelt. I find the idea of dying of old age appealing.

David Johnson
S. Deerfield

DOVE
Secretarial Services

Fast, Accurate Typing of

- Resumes
- Term Papers
- Dissertations

79 South Pleasant St.
Amherst, Mass 01002
256-1335
253-7480

SAVE
MIDAS

MUFFLERS
THE ECONOMIZER™ MUFFLER
$24.95
Regular $29.95

INSTALLATION INCLUDED
The Economizer muffler from Midas fits most American-made cars and trucks. Your satisfaction with this product is assured.

Guarantee: The Economizer Muffler is warranted by Midas for one year from the date of installation and will be replaced free of charge if it fails during this period.
expires Nov. 30th

BRAKES
$59.95
Per axle
(most cars) Regular $74.90
BRAKE SPECIAL

DISC BRAKES
- Front 4-Wheel brake inspection
- Replace pads with new guaranteed disc pads
- Resurface rotors
- Replace grease seals
- Inspect and repack wheel bearings
- Inspect calipers
- Inspect hydraulic system
- Lubricate caliper anchors
- Inspect fluid levels
- Add fluid if required
- Road test

DRUM BRAKES
- Rear 4-Wheel brake inspection
- Replace shoes with new guaranteed linings
- Resurface drums
- Inspect wheel cylinders
- Inspect hold down springs
- Lubricate backing plates
- Inspect hydraulic system
- Readjust brakes
- Road test

Guarantee. Midas brake shoes and disc brake pads are warranted for as long as you own your American or foreign car, van or light truck (under 7,000 lbs.). If they ever wear, new Midas brake shoes or pads will be installed without charge for the shoes or pads or the labor to install the shoes or pads. Additional parts and/or labor required to restore the system to operational condition are extra.

FREE WRITTEN ESTIMATES
143 KING ST. NORTHAMPTON 586-4840
JCT. RTES. 9 & 116 HADLEY 586-9991
Midas

Monday Night Football
at
TIME OUT
Free Munchies
We carry all Celtic Games!!
GAME
St. Louis vs. Dallas
37 N. Pleasant St.
Proper ID Required
Don't Drink and Drive

Guess Who's Coming To Campus?

Representatives from Walt Disney World Co. will be on campus Tuesday, November 5, 1985 and Wednesday, November 6, 1985 recruiting for the spring session of the Walt Disney World College Program. Restricted to Leisure Studies students and Hotel/Restaurant and Travel Administration. These students who are interested in co-op should contact the office of Cooperative Education at 545-2224 for further information.

©Walt Disney Productions
Walt Disney World®
An Equal Opportunity Employer

SOLD OUT

The Office of The Chancellor
and the Distinguished Visitors Program

proudly present
renowned paleoanthropologist

DR. RICHARD LEAKEY

speaking on
"The Makings of Man"

8:00 pm
Monday, November 4, 1985
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Tickets available through the Fine Arts Center Box Office

distinguished visitors program
Simulcast
Campus Center 165-9

Collegian photo by Neil Beckerman

Dee Dee Ramone playing base with the Ramones at the Student Union Friday night.

ARTS

Ramones play 'fast, hard'

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

The Ramones are getting lazy, plump and middle-aged but nevertheless put on a really good show in the Student Union Friday night.

Still driven by the fury of the 1-2-3-4 beat, yelled at the beginning of at least half the songs they played, the Ramones played about 25 songs plus another six during two encores. Opening with "Teenage Lobotomy" the songs spanned all 10 of the Ramones albums concentrating mostly on older material.

Lights flashing, guitars banging, despite the crummy sound system the crowd ate it up, and why not?

The Ramones were an antithesis to the arty, boring FM radio of the 70s playing loud, fast and hard. Compared to hardcore, though, the Ramones begin to lose a little of their power. But on more than one song Friday night, it seemed like it wasn't just in comparison to hardcore that the Ramones were slowing down. For example, during "Blitzkrieg Bop" Lead Singer Joey Ramone was actually singing instead of yelling. Guitarist Johnny Ramone also played fewer leads and except for climbing on a block on the side of the stage didn't move around that much. If you'd been playing the same songs for ten years with the same chords, just different words you'd be a little bored too though.

Despite any complaints that one could have, the Ramones are always the Ramones and therefore fundamentally infallible. I mean, they are the Beach Boys of the seventies. Almost every song is short, to the point, melodic.

Among the highlights of the show were "Beat on the Brat" (and not just because Joey was wielding a baseball bat), a wonderfully unintelligable "Commando" and, of course, the irresitable finale "Pinhead". Perhaps the lowpoint was an unbelievably sloppy and sluggish version of "Rock 'n' Roll High School".

As for being plump, it was hard to resist laughing when Joey came on stage having gained about 20 pounds and looking positively 10 years older than he looked a year or two ago. The truth of the matter I suppose is that he really looked his age.

Like the Grateful Dead they may never change but they are unquestionably still one of the best dance bands around.

The Neighborhoods were about as tight as a three piece unit can be for the first two-thirds of the set, but they just don't know when to leave the stage. They have a really full sound which rarely sounds as good as it did on Friday.

TUESDAY NOV. 25 R-RATED HYPNOTIST
World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
Radically Different Ridiculously Funny
Richly Entertaining Recklessly Risque
Rte. 9, Amherst
JUSTIN RYAN'S
corner of University Dr.
256-1059

HIGH STYLE at Low Costs
Even college students can afford to look good at Marjon

also: Tanning and waxing

	start at
cuts	$8.00
perm	38.00
foiling	45.00
shampoo/cut/dry	14.00

Marjon Hair Design
Mountain Farms Mall
Rt 9
Hadley, Ma
586-4551

Typewriter Paper, Typewriter Ribbons
Correction Fluid and much more!!

A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 7 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 1 p.m.

AMHERST CINEMA
Monday and Tuesday
Lord of the Flies 7:15
Ulysses 9:00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

Applause - Aria - Burnside - Calzone - Casio - CB-700 - Digitech - DOD - Embassy Studios
2nd ANNUAL WESTERN MASS. MUSIC EXHIBITION/WORKSHOP
Nov. 10, 1985 10:00 am to 5:00 pm Nov. 11, 1985
Sunday - Two Days - Monday
Parwick Centre - Chicopee, MA (Exit 5 MA. TPK)
$4.00 in advance (save a dollar)
$5.00 at the door
$2.50 to all students
Good for ADMISSION both days
Admission charge applicable towards any purchase expires 11/27/85
FEATURING CLINICS ON: Yamaha Drums • Zildjian Cymbols • Simmons Drums • Guild Guitars • DOD Effects • Siel Keyboards • Digitech Rack Mounts • Sieko Keyboards • Yamaha Sound Reinforcement • Kurzweil Keyboards • Yamaha DX Keyboards, Ycams, Drum Machines
Sponsored by Falcetti Music Since 1957
For more information please call (413) 543-1002
1181 Worcester St. Indian Orchard 543-1002
Holyoke Mall at Ingleside 538-7970
69 Elm St. Westfield, Ma 568-8855
543 Enfield St. Enfield, Ct. 203-745-3737
Zildjian Yamaha Sony Ultimate Support
- Fostex - Guild - KMD - Kurzweil - Mako - Sabian - Seiko - Siel - Simmons - Sonor

UMass Arts Council
CALL FOR GRANT PROPOSALS
Deadline for submission of grant proposals for single projects or events:
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8
Grant guidelines and applications available at Arts Council, the Student Activities office, or the Arts Extension Service.
Arts Council 125 Herter Hall 545-0202

GRAND OPENING

Friday Nov. 1

川 滬

北京園

WE WELCOME YOU TO PEKING GARDEN

We hope to introduce you to a new, authentic taste in Chinese cuisine. We emphasize the use of different Chinese spices in making a dish, such as fresh ginger root, scallion, fresh garlic, pepper corn, star anise, sesame seed, and of course, hot pepper. We also have a variety of Chinese sauces made from assorted beans and spices,will give a dish its unique, exotic flavor.

In our Menu we combine the most famous dishes from the south and the north to enable you to taste a wide range of genuine Chinese cooking. Our spicy dishes are prepared in three categories, mild, hot, and very hot. Please advise your waitress which category you desire. Our Chef has had 20 years of experience from all over the world, such as Mainland China, Hong Kong, and New York City. Therefore, we can guarantee you the finest in Chinese cuisine.

We sincerely hope that you will enjoy both our food and service. We welcome your comments and criticism.

Mandarin & Szechuan Restaurant

Luncheon Specials from $2.25 - $4.50
Mon-Sat 11:30 am - 3:00 pm (except Holidays)

Sunday Brunch served from 11:30 am - 3:00 pm
$6.95 per person $4.00 per child under ten

Banquet Room Available for larger parties

Cocktail Lounge

For take out orders and reservations please call 586-1202
Sun-Thurs 11 am - 10 pm; Fri & Sat 11 am - 11 pm

48 Russell Street
Hadley, Mass. 01035

GRAND OPENING

MAIN STREET MINI MART

Formerly Michael's Market

437 Main Street, Amherst

$2. OFF	$1. OFF
Ballatore Spumante Champagne with this ad til 11/31/85	Almaden Golden Champagne with this ad til 11/31/85
2 liter Coke Only 99¢ Limit 2 per customer with this ad til 11/31/85	2 liter Coke Only 99¢ Limit 2 per customer with this ad til 11/31/85

Serving You Daily 8 a.m. - 11 p.m.

Butterfield Information Session

Any student interested in living in Butterfield for the Spring 1986 semester should plan on attending an information session. This information session will be scheduled as follows:

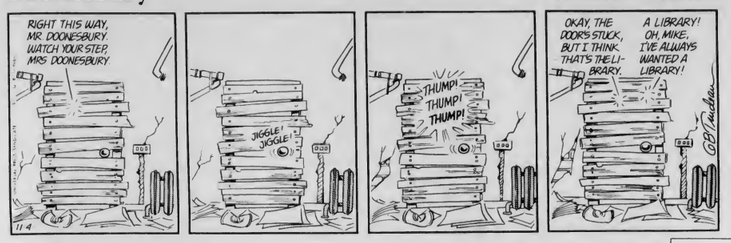
Tuesday, November 5, 1985
6:30 p.m.
Butterfield Main Lounge

Those attending the information session will be given Butterfield House Contracts and Butterfield House Housing Preference Forms to sign. Questions: call the Housing Assignment Office, 235 Whitmore Administration Building, 545-2100. Thank you.

STAR MARKET CO-OP OPPORTUNITIES

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WORKING IN AN EXCITING BUSINESS IN THE SUPERMARKET OPERATIONS FIELD?

Well, if you are, we at Star Market would like to talk to you. We offer an excellent co-operative education experience with outstanding benefits, pay (6.87 per hour to start), 40 hour work week, as well as excellent career opportunities as a result of a successful co-op experience. We are interested in talking to students from all majors.



We will be on campus for an informational session on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7 at 7:00 PM
in S.O.M. Room 112.
Interviews will be held on NOVEMBER 8.
To find out more about Star's Co-op program, please contact Co-op Program, 5-2224 today!

STAR MARKET SINCE 1915

An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Weather

TODAY:

Cloudy with a 40 percent chance of drizzle or rain, temperatures 50-55, with easterly winds 10-20 mph.

TONIGHT:
Rain and fog, low in the mid 40s.

TOMORROW:
Periods of rain, high in the mid 50s.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Menu

LUNCH
Hamburg on Roll
Tuna Oriental/Chow Mein
Noodles

BASICS LUNCH
Oatburgers
Tuna Oriental/Chow Mein
Noodles

DINNER
Barbecued Chicken
Pineapple Ham Steak

BASICS DINNER
Barbecued Chicken
Egg and Cheddar Florentine

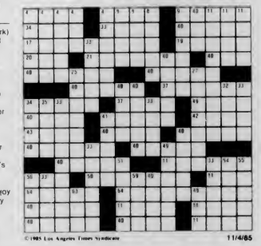
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Liberal or martial
5 Toss, the dice
9 Warming beverage
14 Wish you —— here
15 Entertainer Adams
16 Grown-up
17 Better than 19 After a while
20 Ending with Brooklyn
21 Ennui
23 Sauce for lo mein
24 Lethargy
26 Pacific Coast shrub
28 With a mystical meaning
31 Power of films
34 Haberdashery offering
37 Positive
39 Blessing
40 Clothespper
41 Interrupt. at a hop
42 "It —— Secret" Jo Stafford hit
43 Chip in
44 Magnum —— (master work)
45 Tough stuff
46 Altruism's opposite
48 Martinique peak
50 Single
52 Way out, to Barnum
56 Bath or door item
58 Splendid steed
61 Greek letter
62 Peeish
64 Ration one's use of 66 Bearer of bundles of joy
67 Hudson Bay Indian
68 Employ
69 Regretful
70 One of the Ladds
71 Hankerings

DOWN
1 Look forward to
2 Right-hand page
3 More faithful
4 All —— (ready)
5 Transformed
6 Redolence
7 Kind of wire
8 Yorkshire city
9 In a tranquil way
10 Harem room
11 Abandons restraint
12 Larder staple
13 Give it ——!
18 Nearly
22 Like porridge
25 Dietary need
27 Third party, often
29 "The jig ——"
30 Clown
32 "And Then There Were ——" Christie classic
33 Chemical compound
34 Wings
35 Carol or canzonet
36 Capable of 38 Face the day
41 One with promise
45 Sign, in music
47 Chichi
49 Heavy
51 Capital of Bangladesh
53 A Muppet
54 Cut
55 Units of loudness
56 Jumble
57 Choir member
59 Actor-singer Ives
60 Virginia willow
63 Kind of verb, Abbr
65 "—— do I love you..."

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

P	D	K	E		A	N	Y	A		A	H	E
U	R	A	L		A	D	E	E	M		S	A
F	L	Y	I	N	G	D	O	W	N	T	O	R
F	E	E		D	R	I	E	S		E	E	R
		S	T	A	R		A	I	S	E	S
P	I	N	A	S		O	L	I	D		S	T
A	A	R	O	N		A	R	C	A		A	W	O	L
B	Y	E	B	Y	E		B	L	A	C	K	B	I	R	D
L	E	N	S		N	E	O	N		O	R	I	A
E	R	I	E		T	M	A	N		T	H	U	L	E
		M	A	E	M		C	U	L	T
D	E	A	L	S		S	A	B	U		M	O	A
D	O	N	T	C	H	A	N	G	E	H	A	I	R
O	R	N	E		E	V	O	E	S		E	L	L	E
R	E	A	D		D	A	W	S		N	E	S	S

11/4/85

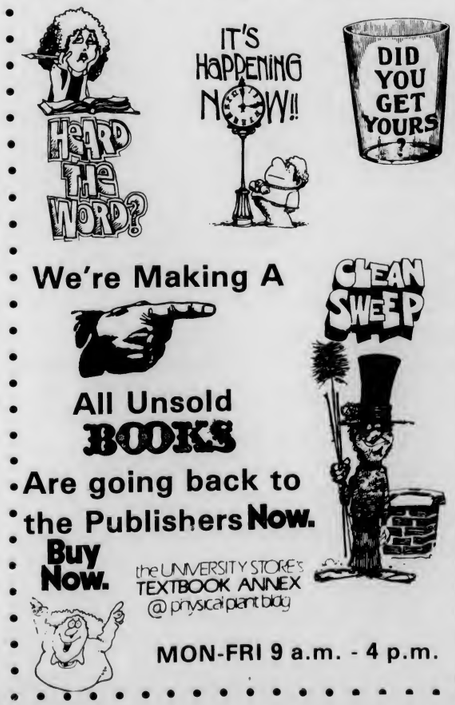

Photo Workshop

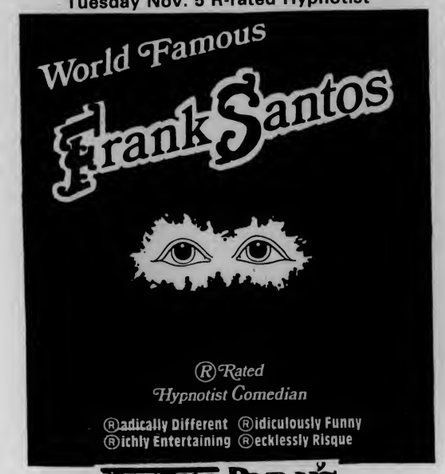
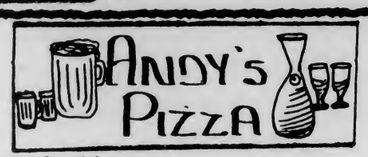
Michael Gordan, photographer for the Springfield newspapers, will give a photo workshop and critique prints at 7 p.m. tonight in Campus Center room 905-909. Mandatory for Collegian photographers; all are welcome.

Writing Workshop



For all new staff and correspondents at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the newsroom. This counts for staff status!



RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst
Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

Tuesday Nov. 5 R-rated Hypnotist

JUSTIN RYAN'S
Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Drive

In Store Special:
FREE Pitcher of Soda or Beer
with Large Pizza
Monday thru Thursday
(Free Delivery begins at 4:00)
175 University Drive 256-8147 256-8148

FREE FRIES
WITH THIS COUPON
NOT JUST FRIES! THEY'RE HOMEMADE IN NATURAL PEANUT OIL WITH THE SKINS STILL ON!
WITH ANY JUICY BURGER OR SANDWICH BETWEEN 11 AM and 8 PM M-F
RESTAURANT classé café BAKERY
HOURS 7-10 M-F 7-3 S-S
168 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst, Mass • 253-2291

Archer Kent
DISCOUNT HEALTH and BEAUTY AIDS
191 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst
253-3534
Sale prices in effect thru Nov. 9, 1985
$$$HOP THESE Bargain SPECIALS ...FOR $$$AVINGS!
LENSEPT
Disinfection Solution
8 oz.
$2.88
Save $2.27
AQUA NET MOUSSE
5 oz.
or
SOFT & DRI ROLL-ON your choice
99¢
COVER GIRL LUMINESSE LIPSTICKS
Luminesse
save $1.00
or your choice
$1.49
MAXIUMUM STRENGTH PAMPRIN
16 capsules
save $1.20
Clairol CONDITION
FREE PANTYHOSE OFFER
(BY MAIL—VALUE UP TO $2.00)
o.b. TAMPON 30's
only
$2.55
2 oz. tube
save $1.07
$1.88
DENTAGARD
6.4 oz. tube
$1.19

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package
Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season... a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

★football rolls

continued from page 12

The key play was a forty-four pass play from Palazzi to junior John Crowley. The flanker streaked down the left sideline and outjumped UConn cornerback Kevin Johnson at the 11, coming down with his 18th reception of the season.

Crowley burned UConn in the first half, catching 4 passes for a 103 yards. On the day he had 6 for a career-high 126 yards. He was named to the weekly ECAC all-star team.

UMass opened the second quarter as Neri plunged a yard to cap a 93-yard drive with 6:43 left. The march took 5:51 and was highlighted by a Palazzi pass to Bart Fuller that covered 31 yards.

Cornerback Chris Wood and Rundle made it academic with interceptions in the final two UConn possessions.

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS:

Linebacker John McKeown had 11 tackles and recovered two fumbles . . . UConn cornerback Jerry McIntosh was taken off the field in the fourth quarter in an ambulance with chest injury . . . UM safety Paul Platek caused two fumbles . . . UMass ran 18 more plays then UConn and had the ball 11:34 more.

JRs UB
HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES
11 am - 2 am 7 days 253-7018
50 Main St. Amherst, MA
Worthless Coupon
Buy a big one get a JR Beef
at full price!!
Worthless Coupon

Volleyball wins tourney

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team achieved yet another milestone over the weekend. For the first time in the team's history, the Minutewomen captured the MAIAW state championship, defeating the Massachusetts Institue of Technology 15-4, 15-6, 15-11 in the finals.

UMass, 31-6 on the season, defeated Wellesley College 15-3, 15-4, 15-10, in the semifinals.

"We did what we had to do to win it," said head coach Elaine Sortino. "It was just a great performance."

In addition to winning the state championship, freshman setter Juliet Primer and freshman middle hitter Barbara Meehan were named to the MAIAW All-Tournament first team.

Saturday's victories puts the Minutewomen in a good spot to gain a possible at-large bid to the Division II national tournament, and also enhances a possible bid to the East Coast Athletic Conference playoffs later this month.

Women's swimming wins first

By FRED NADEL
Collegian Correspondent

A rejuvenated University of Massachusettes women's swimming team opened its season with a 91-49 victory over the University of Vermont on Saturday in Boyden.

The squad led from start to finish in a impressive performance. "It felt good to beat Vermont after a close six point loss last year," said UM coach Bob Newcomb. "The victory shows the improvement from last years squad.".

Four freshman—Lori Carrol, Mellisa Waller, Regina Jungbluth, and diver Debbie Mullen claimed victories in their first meets for the Minutewomen. Carrol swept the butterfly events winning both the 100 and 200. Waller won the 100 breaststroke and Jungbluth captured the 200 breaststroke. Mullen after finishing third in the one-meter diving, but came back to win the three-meter diving.

Junior co-captain Allison Uzzo was also a dual winner with victories in the 500 and 1000 freestyle events. Co-captain Sue Freitas was first in the 50-yard freestyle. Also adding a win was transfer student Kris Henson in the 200-yard freestyle.

"There were some very fine swims today, some that will appear in the UM all-time top 10 list" Newcomb noted.

Newcomb also said that he was proud of all the swimmers who contributed to the victory and hopes the team can improve on their performances against the Catamounts. With contributions from all team members, UMass seems to have a well-rounded attack capable of victories in all events. The team takes on Smith College in Northampton on Saturday.

November is Career Planning Month

Information sessions and interview sign-ups in November:

EMPLOYER	IBM	STAR MARKET	WALT DISNEY WORLD
EVENT	Open House Note: 3 resumes required for admission Meet recruiters & sign up for Nov. 13 interviews	Info Session	Info Session
DATE	Nov. 12	Nov. 7	Nov. 5
TIME/ LOCATION	10 am - 4 pm CC 162-75	7 pm SOM 112	7 pm CC 805
MAJORS	EE, ME, IE, CS Mktg, MIS, Acctg Finance, TechWriting	HRTA, Food Mktg, Mngmnt & related	LS&R, HRTA

An opportunity to find out about some of the co-ops in your major!

OFFICE FOR COOPERATIVE EDUCATION
University Career Center 545-2224

BUS DRIVING JOBS!!
Train in January to start work in February!
UMass Transit Service will hold an
APPLICATIONS MEETING
Thursday, Nov. 7th at 7:00 pm
CC 162
The first 125 people will receive applications.
You Must —
- be 18+ years old
- have had a driver's license for a year
- have 2+ semesters left at UMass
YOU POSTIVELY MUST BRING PROOF OF YOUR CLASS YEAR TO THE MEETING.
The ONLY acceptable proofs are schedule, transcript, or letter from the Registrar.
For more info, call 545-0056. UMTS is an AA/EO employer.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

The Office of the Chancellor and the Distinguished Visitors Program present Paleoanthropologist Richard Leakey tonight CCA 6:00 simulcast CC165

Outing Club Meeting, 7:00, tonight room TBA trips and gen. announcements, Slide show Grand Canyon rafting. All welcome.

Amateur Radio Association meeting Tuesday Nov 5 7 PM 109 ELab all members and nonmembers welcome talk to the world!

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7393

72 Duster new heater, brakes runs great $50 firm 549-1269 or 6-8042 Paul

1977 Red Chev Camaro good condition AM FM cassette stero 2 extra new tires $900 or BO call 549-0462 evenings

72 VW Fastback rebuilt engine good body new muffler floor battery snows no work required $850 BO 5-0720 or 549-0362

Is is true you can buy jeeps for $44 through the U.S. Government! Get the facts today! Call 1-812-742-1142 ext 5931A

BUS DRIVING JOBS!

UMass Transit Service is looking for several part-time drivers. Applicants must be UMass students carrying 6 or more credits in a degree program. Class II license required. Starting pay is $4.60/hr. Call Bud or Jenny at 545-0056 for more info, or apply in person at the Bus Garage.

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, lcts/heon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

"CASH"

Paying cash for your baseball cards call Mike 546-6106

COMMANDO BOB

Thanks for that wild night of jungle tactics, Love and Kisses, Last night's Lucky Winner

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party DJ 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail immediately! 665-3440, leave message

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Univega 12-speed completely set up. Extra everything $200 549-0385

Bicycle built for two. Motobecane 10 speed. $400 1-467-7877

GREAT YOGURT

Dannon, Stonyfield, Colombo, Mountainhigh, and Brown Cow yogurt. ..only at the People's Market

HELP WANTED

Accounting Clerk Butterfield kitchen for the Spring semester - minimum commitment is one academic year, 5 hours/week $4 25/hour with free room and board. Applications are available at the Butterfield Kitchen Office and are due by 5 pm on Nov. 1, 1985.

On campus non-work study MWF 7-noon call Jane at 546-6889

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay abd commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stansel 584-3596

Part-time, on-call work with Mental Health Agency. Hours to suit your schedule 536-5473, 9 am - 5 pm

Santa needs elves - Petite outgoing individuals needed to wprk 1-5 wkdys. Apply at Job Matching in Hampshire Mall or call 584-8889

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4 41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Student Nurses. Apply now to work during semester break. Good earnings, plus experience in your field. Weekend and morning work available now. Call any time. Medical Personnel Pool 586-7265

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites. $5.00/hr. Call Cari at 665-3088 at any reasonable hour.

LAST CHANCE FOR SPRING

Apply now for a full-time internship at the Legal Services Office for the Spring, 1985 semester. Aid attorneys in client interviews, preparation of court forms, maintenance of continuing caseload, giving advice and referrals and investigations and research. Up to 15 credits may be received from academic departments. Gain valuable experience in the legal profession while working on campus No previous experience in the legal profession necessary, training provided. Deadline to begin the formal application process is November 6. For further information, call Mary at Legal Services, 545-1995

LOST

Lost black and white male cat with black fluffy tail. Anywhere from Presidential to Townehouse. Please call 549-4462

Lost eye glasses w/black case, please call Scott 6-4705

Set of keys in tan Fendi case lost. Very important! Please call Sheryl 256-1645

Wilson Tennis Raquet. Must find or will flunk tennis class! Any info call 253-7357

Ring lost two pearls sentimental value 549-7717

A Faces package at Bay Banks Triangle St., on Sat 10/26/85. If you have info please call Jen at 253-7805. After 6:00 PM The book is important.

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassey Recording Studio offes 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

PERSONALS

Cheer up Julie A! Your roommates need and love you! The Gang

Zoom - Where are you? - Waiting to har from you - Blue Eyes

I love you Gena Limone!

Sugarbush Ski Week! Hotel $149 see Ski Club now 545-3437

MD We lust after your grandfather hat. Meet you in the darkroom at noon. Sweet Young Things

To Raggedy-Ann Got your message, remember, timeless love will break all walls, To my Paisley Love Affair, The Berry

Chrissy and Winnie - Thought you would never see it? Well here it is and it says it all. Thanks for being there--I would never survive without you both! Love always, Nance

To Derek "the tux" McEntee: This is a voice from your past... let's get together sometime before our time here is up. Call me at the Collegian. I'll buy the first round! JB Lang

Keith P. You're hot! Happy B-day love your P.P.

Caryn - You want a personal? You got it! Happy Birthday! Caroline

Catherine Happy Anniversary you are very special and I will love you forever Love Christopher

Happy BIGday, birthDOOR!

Rich, A person does not a nation MAKE. Relationships rely on tolerance not on hate. Come back when us you can tolerate. Your so-called (one-on-one) friends? Bonnie, Lisa, Mary, Tony, Tom

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

REWARD

Lost two silver heart charms in Central read forget me not call 546-1106 Heather

RIDERS WANTED

Cheap Bus to Boston, $9.50, long weekend, Friday 11/8, 12 noon. Call 545-2145

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774 2740

To share 5 bedroom house in Belchertown. Own room, on bus route (stops right in front), $165 plus utilities. Available immediately Call 253-5390 after 5 pm

1 bedroom available in Amherst house with country setting for 1 female or couple. $195/156. 256-1700 keep trying

Quiet couple looking to share 2 bedroom apt. completely furnished call after 6 pm 549-6237

SERVICES

TAILOR Alteration Expert Same Day Service. Available SHAANN'S Rt 116 Sunderland Open 8 am 665-3878

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1339

Quality Typing by Professional. Reasonable rates. Convenient. Call Heather 253-3140

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7652

SPRING BREAK '86

Register now for Spring Break '86 in Ft. Lauderdale/Daytona Beach! Prices from $199. A $30 deposit guarantees your reservation (plus more!) Take until January 29 to pay balance. Pick your own roommates. Extras! - Mike 546-9049

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1339

Quality Typing by Professional. Reasonable rates. Convenient. Call Heather 253-3140

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7652

TRAVEL

Interested in a trip around the world I'll be leaving in January for 6 months Looking for adventurous travel companions Call Greg 253-5618

Take a Break on the French side Skibreak's january trip to Tignes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT air fare (Swissair), Transfers, Accommodations, Saipass (116 lifts), Slalom races cocktails for $749/7 nights in resort Skibreak 203-354-6059

Campus cordinator for January Skibreak to the French Alps travels for free! (1/15 Miles/Skibreak (203) 354-6059 PD

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next day service. TYPE RITE 253-511

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 546-8822

Reggae/Thrash Guitar & Drumme wanted call Geoff 586-7645

WANTED TO RENT

2 females looking for apt or room prefe in N. Amherst area. Start Jan or Spring call 546-5326

Sunday Night Staff
What can I say? You guys are bad! Just kidding, you're amazing!
BethAnne

Hey Rob Catalano!!
We'll have a party, when you do your laundry. We'll do the dishes. Us

Karin T
Here's to those late nights and early mornings!
I'll miss you next semester!
Love your typing roommate, Kel

Basically, football rolls on, 21-7

UM wins 4th straight at UConn, Palazzi and defense star again

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

STORRS — Winning is becoming basic for the University of Massachusetts football team.

There was nothing unusual about Saturday's 21-7 victory over the University of Connecticut before 11,340 at Memorial Stadium. Freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi sparked the offense by running for two touchdowns and throwing for 212 yards while Division 1-AA's best defense held the Huskies to 276 yards and a meaningles touchdown.

Just good, basic and winning football from a team that after nine games last season would've done anything for a victory. 1984 seems a long time ago.

UMass, 6-3 and 3-1 in the Yankee Conference, won its fourth straight. The Minutemen are assured of their first winning season since 1981. The UMass defense is now allowing a mere 9.2 points-per-game while the offense upped is average to 17 points-per-game (23 with Palazzi).

"It was a good win for us," said UMass coach Bob Stull. "They had beaten us two straight and we wanted to keep things going this season. We're becoming a pretty good football team."

Rhode Island, however, put a damper on UMass' celebration, dumping New Hampshire 30-20 in Kingston. The Rams, at 4-0 in the conference, have claimed at least a tie for the conference title and a berth in the NCAA playoffs. Even if URI loses to UConn on Nov 16, their 10-7 victory over UMass earlier this season would put them in the tournament.

UMass could get in via an at-large berth, but must win its next two games to do so, home against Delaware this Saturday and at New Hampshire the week after.

"They're all big ones now," said Palazzi, who had his best day passing, hitting on 13-of-23 while running 13 times for 51 yards and the two scores that won the game. The freshman quarterback now has six touchdowns on the season to lead UMass.

The Minuteman defense meanwhile paid the Huskies back for the 504 yards they ran up in a 21-16 victory last season. Nose guard Mike Dwyer (six tackles, a sack and a pass break-up) and linebackers Todd Rundle (who was named conference defensive player-of-the-week with eight tackles and three sacks) and Vito Perrone (14 tackles) helped punish UConn, holding them to negative two yards of rushing in the first half and just 85 on the game.

"We were fired-up," said Rundle, a 6-3, 225-pound sophomore that is quickly becoming one of the East's best linebackers. "We felt we could pressure (UConn quarterback Peter) Lane and force him to make mistakes. Things are really coming together for us."

Things came together for the UMass offense in its second possession as they marched 80 yards in seven plays, scoring on a Palazzi option keeper that went 11 yards with 4:59 left in the first period.

continued on page 11

SPORTS

Minutewomen are perfect, 5-0

Soccer (15-0-0) awaits tourney

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

15-0-0
Undefeated.
Untied.

The number one University of Massachusetts women's soccer team accomplished what no other soccer team has ever done at UMass as they disposed of unranked Springfield College, 5-0 to end up a perfect regular season in front of 1,000 fans at Boyden Field, Saturday.

"This is something you dream about. I didn't think it was possible," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said. "This is great."

Sophomore midfielder Carolyn Micheel had two assists to set a new single-season record of 13 on an afternoon honoring senior co-captains Sue Bird and Jamie Watson.

Playoff bids for the 14-team NCAA tournament will be awarded today and it's expected that UMass will receive one of the two byes and the Minutewomen will host a NCAA quarter-final game either Nov. 16 or 17.

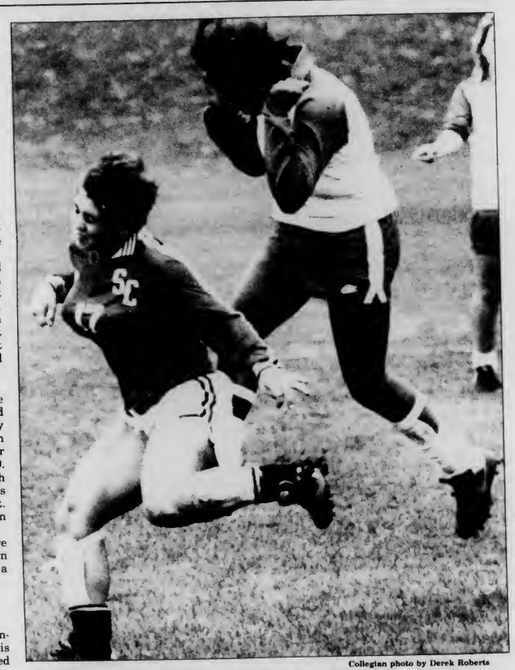
"We've made history," Banda said. "The kids did a great job. It was a lot of hard work."

"We have a real sense of accomplishment," Watson said. "It's a great feeling. It hasn't really hit me yet. I'm sure as time goes by it will be more special. It's real special right now."

The Chiefs were hopelessly outmanned by the Minutewomen who scored twice in the first 15 minutes. Micheel got her first assist of the day crossing the ball to Debbie Belkin for a goal with 6:06 gone in the game.

Micheel broke Kelly Tuller's 1978 record seven minutes later when she chased down a loose ball and crossed it front of the net to a waiting Monica Seta and the 2-0 lead.

Springfield had the most success using an offsides trap that caused UM to be caught offsides 12 times, nine in the first half. But UMass recovered by dumping the ball and outrunning the Chief defense.



Cathy Spence faked out the Chief goalie Danielle Trinceri to give UM the 3-0 lead with 15:20 to go in the first half. Cathy Cassady's goal amde it 4-0 and Kristen Bowsher's second penalty kick of the year (the first was against Adelphi) made it 5-0.

It was a physical game in which Beth Roundtree (back spasms) and Chris Schmitt (bruised shin) had to sit out. UMass outshot the Chiefs 13-2 and Jan Holland made two saves.

Bird and Watson were honored before and after the game as the lone seniors on the squad. "It feels really nice to end on a good note," Bird said.

Now the second season begins.

SOCCER KICKS: Banda played the entire roster in the game, giving all of his players a chance to savor the undefeated season . . . the Minutewomen did not allow a goal at home this season . . . the Final Four is November 22-23 at George Mason University in Virginia.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

Massachusetts forward Cathy Spence (right) readies a head pass against Springfield College at Boyden on Saturday. UMass was an easy 5-0 winner.

Minutewomen lose second straight

UConn downs field hockey, 2-1

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

The University of Connecticut, without a doubt, is the number one field hockey team in America.

Senior midfield All-America Janet Ryan scored her tenth goal of the season midway through the second half, snapping a 1-1 tie and ending the fifth-ranked University of Massachusetts' upset bid over the nation's top-ranked team, 2-1.

"They are number one," University of Massachusetts head coach Pam Hixon said. "They use each other well, and pass better than anyone, that's for sure."

The Huskies scored early, jumping on the board just five minutes into the game as Tracey Fuchs, UConn's leading scorer scored her twelfth goal of the season, deflecting a drive past a diving Kathryn Rowe.

Despite having only two shots in the first half, the Minutewomen, now 11-4-2 and losers of their last two games, struck back ten minutes later as junior forward Lisa Griswold scored her ninth goal of the season, shoving a loose ball past UConn goalie Laura Eby.

"They are the best team we've played this year. I'm disappointed to lose but they are an excellent team, and we've got nothing but respect for them," UMass' senior All-America Megan Donnelly said. "But I'm glad we played them and got experience against them before the tournament. I hope we get another shot at them."

Men's soccer falls to Maine, 2-1

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team saw their NCAA playoff hopes severely damaged, losing to the University of Maine, 2-1 in Orono on Saturday.

UMass, now 14-6, entered the game ranked third in New England. Maine was fourth. Only the top two teams are given berths into the tourney, although UM has a slim chance at an at-large berth.

Maine scored the first two goals to lead 2-0 at the half as Jay Hedelund and Torin Dudley tallied. UMass midfielder John Shannon scored at the 60:23 point of the second half, assisted by Ferdie Adoboe and Brian Sullivan. UMass goalie Sam Ginsburg played well, making 11 saves. The Minutemen play their final game of the season on Wednesday, hosting Harvard at 2 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 43 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Tuesday, November 5, 1985

Collegian Photo by Scott Maguire

HONORS ABOUND—Parents and students walk near Amherst College's monument at Memorial Field containing the names of Amherst alumni who have died in wars this century.

U.P.C. to host show in coffee house

By PATRICK JOHNSON
Collegian Staff

Union Program Council will schedule at least one show in the Campus Center Coffee House this semester, ending a disagreement between the Campus Center Board of Governors and the Food Services Administration, said Alex Zucker, board chairman

The disagreement between the BOG and Food Services, according to Zucker, centered around who has the last word in the scheduling of acts in the Coffee House.

Food Services vetoed a UPC request to book the Violent Femmes for Sunday, Nov. 24 because "they had improved their business (in the Coffee House) since the beginning of the semester and didn't want the show to disrupt their progress," Zucker said.

Richard Ellis of Food Services would not confirm the existence of a disagreement with the board, saying only "We have always worked together in the past with student groups and will continue to work with them in the future."

Zucker said the matter was not resolved until he met with Ashoke Ganguli of Auxiliary Services Friday afternoon, and explained the irrationality of Ellis' position. "I told him that, in all possibility, the show would be great publicity for the coffee house, " he said. "And Ashoke said 'It sounds good to me."

Ganguli said one of the problems had to do with the short advance notice given by the BOG, but he added, "Whatever differences we had, we ironed out."

Ganguli said he was not worried about the concert chasing away the Coffee House's regular clientele. "They'll come back. Some of the regular customers may even go to the show," he said.

UPC Talent Coordinator Lance Foley said, "One night in the (Coffee House) will not change anything for the semester. It would be absolutely ridiculous to think one concert on a Sunday night will make students, who go there for coffee and to study, say 'We can't go there anymore. We won't know if there will be a show tonight."

Although UPC has been given clearance for the night of Nov. 24, Foley said he will not know for sure until the end of the week whether the Violent Femmes can be signed to play in the coffee house. If they are signed, both Foley and Zucker said they expect the 750-seat Coffee House to sell out.

Mt. Holyoke advise divestment

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

SOUTH HADLEY- The faculty of Mount Holyoke College voted last night to advise immediate divestment of the college's over $14 million in stock it holds in companies operating in South Africa.

At their November meeting, over 100 faculty members approved a resolution to send the college trustees an advisory, calling for divestment of college stock in 26 corporations doing business in South Africa - including General Electric and General Motors.

Mount Holyoke trustees will meet on Friday and Saturday, when they may act on the resolutions, Lu Stone, associate director of public relations for the college said. The trustees in 1981 and 1983 divested $500,000 worth of stock in two companies doing business in South Africa.

"I don't think it (divestment) will bring down apartheid," Eugenia Herbert, a Mount Holyoke faculty member who proposed the resolution said. "I think it is important on a symbolic level.

"I don't think it (divestment) will bring down apartheid. I think its important on a symbolic level."
—Eugenia Herbert, Mt. Holyoke

"Those who oppose apartheid in South Africa are tremendously dependent on outside support and encouragement."

A committee of three students and three faculty members will meet with the trustees on Thursday to discuss divestment. All schools in the five-college area – Amherst, Hampshire and Smith colleges and the University of Massachusetts have either divested their stock in companies doing business in South Africa or are meeting with groups proposing divestment.

Before the faculty meeting, students handed out leaflets encouraging divestiture of the stock which is part of Mount Holyoke's $84 million endowment.

Study origin of man "on the Move"

By LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

The science of determining man's origins is "once again a science on the move," said paleontologist Dr. Richard E. Leakey, in a speech last night.

Leakey, speaking to a capacity crowd in the Campus Center Auditorium, said "in the past few years, even months, we have been making extraordinary breakthroughs." In Kenya, he said, his crew had unearthed the first clearly human skeleton, dating back 1.6 million years.

More than 80 people also viewed the speech on closed-circuit television in an adjacent room of the Campus Center.

"We're actively looking for fossils in the context of understanding what led them to undergo adaptations," Leakey said. In a press conference before the lecture, he noted that the advent of bipedalism, the ability of primates to walk upright, marked the "first genesis in human life."

Leakey addressed the concept of the evolution of man, saying "there are a good number of people who have trouble pronouncing the word, never mind thinking about the implications of the word." He said, however, that the conflict between religion and evolution is less of a burning issue than it has been in the past.

"We know enough to be as certain of evolution as we are of gravity," he said.

Leakey said humans bear closer genetic resemblance to chimpanzees than horses do to donkeys. "The notion that all forms of life are part of a grand design for humans is as silly as the idea that at the top of the evolution tree is the male caucasian."

Leakey said humans evolved in terms of functions, such as the use of hand tools. "The presence of stone tools suggests that their makers had the ability to conceptualize them, something that is not present in other primates," he said.

"Stone implements have been traced to a point in time consistent with the expansion of the brain," Leakey said. The increase in brain size is one of the characteristics that eventually distinguished primates from humans.

Leakey said his recent discovery of the human skeleton at Lake Turkana in Africa would be outlined in the next issue of SCIENCE magazine. His colleague, Kamoya Kimeu, who made the initial find,

continued on page 4

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire
Dr.Richard Leakey.

Index

SGA speaker may get vote of no confidence.....3

The perils of lust.....5

Women's soccer seeded first in NCAA tourney.....12

"Ronald Reagan is more of a politician than he is a fundamentalist."
—Dr. Richard Leaky, speaking at the Chancellor's house yesterday.

WORLD/NATIONAL

Summit agenda planned

MOSCOW (AP)—Secretary of State George P. Shultz met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze for nearly eight hours yesterday to plan the agenda for this month's U.S.-Soviet summit meeting, which is expected to focus on arms control.

Shultz arrived with a letter from President Reagan to Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, but its contents were not disclosed.

Shultz and Shevardnadze talked from noon, through a "working lunch," until about 7:40 p.m. at the elegant foreign Ministry annex.

Rozanne Ridgway, U.S. assistant secretary of state for European affairs, refused to characterize the meeting or say whether progress was made.

"We went through the whole agenda and everything on it," she said.

Shultz was to meet today with Gorbachev, whose call for a 50 percent reduction in American and Soviet nuclear weapons was followed by a new U.S. arms control offer announced by Reagan last Thursday.

Shultz planned to hold a news conference after meeting with Gorbachev and depart Moscow Tuesday night, said Ms. Ridgway and Bernard Kalb, the State Department spokesman.

Shultz told reporters before arriving in Moscow that the United States and Soviet Union were still "quite a difference apart" on strategic arms control issues.

Sakharov talks to family

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, speaking with relatives here for the first time in six years, said yesterday he is recovering after losing 44 pounds during a hunger strike that might have prodded the government into allowing his wife to come to the United States for heart surgery.

Sakharov, 64, and his wife, Yelena Bonner, 62, were contacted by his stepchildren and mother-in-law by telephone in Gorky, where he was exiled in 1980.

Sakharov's voice on the phone was a surprise to the family, which had scheduled the call last week following reports Mrs. Bonner had been given permission to once again leave the country. She has been abroad three times for eye treatment, most recently in 1979.

Mrs. Bonner plans to go to Siena, Italy, at the end of the month to consult with an ophthalmologist about her eye problems, then to Boston for coronary bypass surgery, her children said.

Mrs. Bonner's children said their mother and stepfather apparently were reunited Oct. 23, just before Mrs. Bonner was granted an exit visa. They said he had apparently been in a hospital during his hunger strike.

"They want us to know he is alive. That's quite clear," Tatiana Yankelevich, Mrs. Bonner's daughter, said when asked why Sakharov had been reunited with his wife for yesterday's call.

Mrs. Bonner's children said they believe the fast and the pending summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev led to the permission for their mother to leave.

"They did not want him on a hunger strike during the summit," said Mrs. Yankelevich.

But Efrem Yankelevich, Mrs. Bonner's son-in-law, said his mother spoke cautiously about her trip, and could not specifically say why she was allowed to leave.

Washington(AP)—Vitaly Yurchenko, a high-level Soviet KGB officer who defected to the West in August, has redefected to the Soviet UNion, a spokesman for the Senate Intelligence Commitee said yesterday.

The spokesman, Dave Holliday, said he was told by the Central Intelligence Agency about Yurchenko's change of heart. The Soviet Embassy in Washington called a news conference late yesterday afternoon and said Yurchenko would appear there.

CIA spokeswoman Patti Volz refused to confirm or deny the report.

Town votes on recalling Board of Selectmen

WAREHAM, Mass (AP)—Voters got the chance to make state history yesterday by voting to wipe the slate clean and oust their entire Board of Selectmen as the result of zoning dispute.

"There's a deep undercurrent rumbling. I think the recall will be successful," said Elsie Towne, editor and publisher of the town's newspaper, the Cape Cod Independent.

Two months ago, the recall petitioners in this town of 15,000 surprised many, including the selectmen, when they produced 1,887 certified signatures, more than the amount necessary for the recall election to be scheduled.

Ten candidates are running to replace the incumbents.

Last spring, the town zoning board refused the selectmen's request to withdraw a building permit from a local contractor. The contractor, Marty Johnson of Bourne, took his case to court and won.

The selectmen, lead by Lionel LaCasse, appealed the case and lost, but they delayed in giving Johnson permission to begin his project.

"I'd have to say that the Marty Johnson case brought everything to a head," Ms. Towne said.

"All they've done is to make decisions that are unpopular with a small group in town. The recall is ridiculous, and it's obstructive," he told the Boston Herald.

BUS DRIVING JOBS!!

Train in January to start work in February!

UMass Transit Service will hold an APPLICATIONS MEETING

Thursday, Nov. 7th at 7:00 pm

CC 162

The first 125 people will receive applications.
You Must —
- be 18+ years old
- have had a driver's license for a year
- have 2+ semesters left at UMass
YOU POSTIVELY MUST BRING PROOF OF YOUR CLASS YEAR TO THE MEETING.
The ONLY acceptable proofs are schedule, transcript, or letter from the Registrar.
For more info, call 545-0056. UMTS is an AA/EO employer.

Staff box

Night Editor — Gerry deSimas
Copy Editor — Kathleen Hart
Photo Tech — Scott Maguire
Layout Tech — Peter Soderberg
Production Supervisor — Norm Achin
Production — Conor Plunkett, Danielle Charbonneau, Sonja Sabels, Leslie Nakajima

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit –58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

What do Lynn Marie Bibby, David Eckoff and Liz Berman all have in common? They're all Umatel Subscribers!

Lynn Marie and David saved 27% on their long-distance calls in September and October! Liz saved 26%!

Isn't it time you looked into Umatel? All you need to qualify for Umatel, is to be a dorm resident.

Look into it!

University Telecommunications Dept.
602 Goodell

umatel

A Discounted Long-Distance Telephone Service for Residential Students

World Famous

Frank Santos

Ⓡ Rated
Hypnotist Comedian

Ⓡadically Different Ⓡidiculously Funny
Ⓡichly Entertaining Ⓡecklessly Risque

JUSTIN RYAN'S

TUESDAY NOV. 5 R-RATED HYPNOTIST

Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Dr.

Student senate will examine dissatisfaction

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

A motion asking the Undergraduate Student Senate to give a no confidence vote to Speaker John Ruddock has been submitted on tomorrow night's agenda after two of the senate's committees voted the speaker no confidence.

A no confidence vote usually serves as a signal for the speaker indicating that members are not satisfied with the speaker's performance, for whatever reasons brought forward during debate. In many cases, an overwhelming no confidence vote usually results in the resignation of the officer in question.

The motion submitted for full senate consideration is sponsored by Jordan Rosner, budget committe chair. He said Ruddock has repeatedly left motions off the agenda, has little knowledge of parliamentary procedure, and interprets SGA by-laws to his liking.

Ruddock said his "foundation is one of unity" and blames certain senate members, particularly those asking for a no confidence vote, of putting personalities in front of issues.

Last night, the Coordinating Committee, made up of the six SGA chairs and senate officers, had a special meeting to examine "various issues that needed to be dealt with for the effective functioning of the senate," Ruddock said.

The issues, Ruddock said, included a pending resignation and two SGA appointments.

However, several members walked out of the meeting after calling for quorum, when a motion calling for full confidence of Ruddock was brought up for debate.

The full confidence motion, submitted by Ruddock himself, was never considered because there was no longer quorum.

The motion asking for full confidence of Ruddock was stopped because "the make-up of coordinating committee does not represent the full senate," said Mark DeNyse, co-chair of the coordinating committee. DeNyse said he walked out "to stop this motion (full-confidence of Ruddock) from going on."

Ellen Breslin, a member of the coordinating committee, said the no confidence vote approved by the two committees will "do more harm to the student senate than the situation it is in now." She said the senate has lost its principal interpersonal goals and that certain members are "acting like brats."

The committee's votes and the walkout of the coordinating committee is a reaction to last week's senate meeting which was adjourned by Ruddock when he could not sustain order.

Meeting raps rape prevention on campus

By SUSAN EATON
Collegian Staff

The second meeting of the Sexual Violence Prevention Network took place yesterday and members looked at one educational approach to rape prevention on campus.

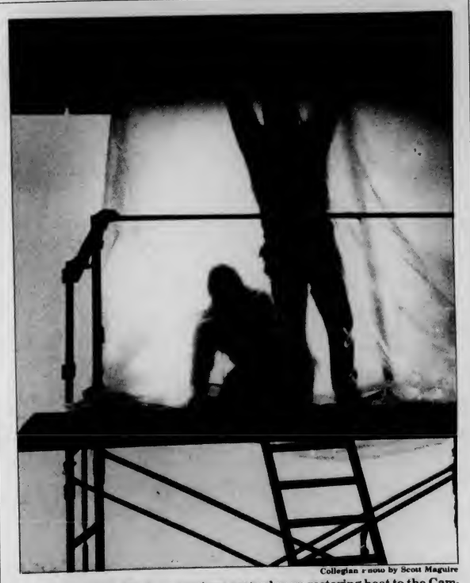
Kathy Alexander, director of the Everywoman's Center, presented a sample of the center's program on rape education, as she discussed what the program involved and showed the film titled, "Beyond Rape: Finding an End to Sexual Assault."

"With the workshops we give, what we are trying to do is find out where the students are in regards to knowing and understanding what rape is," Alexander said.

Alexander explained that frequent misconceptions students have is that rape is a sexual act, that rapes occur between strangers, and that attractive or "pretty women" are most the popular victims of rape.

"Two-thirds of rapes occur indoors, and seventy percent of rapes are between aquaintances," Alexander said, adding, "Date rape is the most popular kind of rape at this age (19-22), and at this university." Alexander also explained that "rape is never a sexual act. Rather it is agression which is being acted out sexually."

Within these workshops which take place at the Everywoman's Center, in residence halls, and at the request of campus and community organizations, Alexander said she tries to show women ways they can feel safer from rape, but also that "there are no guarantees. Everyone is vulnerable to rape," she added.



"We also talk about the basis of a society which condones rape. How does this society image women? What is the system that supports this? And, why have we gotten to this point?"

Coordinator of Men Against Violence Against Women (MAVAW), Bob Bureau said he is in the process of assesing campus needs and is working with the Coordinator of Greek Affairs, Bob White to possibly provide workshops for fraternities and sororities.

Collegian Photo by Scott Maguire

BREAKING IT IN—The women's basketball team works out in the newly refurbished Curry Hicks Cage. The 'new' Cage opens Saturday, Nov. 23 when the men's team hosts the Merrimack College in its season opener. The Cage, which seats 4200, laid down cement and a new plastic floor over the old dirt floor as it underwent a $3,2 million renovation. It opened originally in 1932.

Collegian Photo by Scott Maguire

HEAT REPAIRS—Workers continue yesterday on restoring heat to the Campus Center hotel. As of last night, most rooms had heat but those that didn't had space heaters. All the rooms had hot water.

Halloween goes smoothly

By JEANETTE DeFORGE
Collegian Staff

Despite University of Massachusetts adminstrators relaxing the Halloween policy and allowing students living in residence halls to have guests for the first time since 1982, the police did not have an unusual ammount of arrests last weekend.

"We handled a lot of minor calls but nothing earth-shattering," said Robert Joyce, UMass police chief.

"The Ramones concert (Friday night) caused quite a few problems," he added.

Three cars caught fire Friday in two separate incidents, UMass police reported.

Two cars, a 1973 Ford and a 1974 Oldsmobile caught fire in the parking lot outside of Chi Omega Fraternity. The fire started in the Ford and it spread to the Oldsmoblie which was next to it, police said.

A 1975 Cheverolet Impala caught fire on Commenwealth Avenue. The fire was caused by a faulty transmission line, police said.

Both fires were extinguished by the Amherst Fire Department, police said.

In other police reports:

Two 19-year-old men were arrested early Sunday morning on Lincoln Avenue and charged with receiving stolen property, police said.

A student and a Roslindale resident were seen driving with a table desk in the opened trunk of their car. They were stopped and police discovered the desk, valued at $130, was UMass property.

The Roslindale resident was also arrested on a default warrant and charged with transporting alcohol as a minor, police said.

A 21-year-old Somerville resident was arrested Friday night in the bathroom of the Student Union Ballroom and charged with possession of cocaine, police said.

A 25-year-old Brockton resident was arrested Saturday night in parking lot 22 and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving without a license, driving an unregistered and uninsured vehicle and attaching license plates, police said.

Incense burning in a discarded flower pot caused a small fire in Washington Tower late Sunday night. There was no damage

continued on page 4

Journalist speaks today

South African journalist Benjamin Pogrund will be visiting the University of Massachusetts tomorrow as a guest of the Journalistic Studies Program.

Pogrund, correspondent for the Boston Globe and former deputy editor of the now defunct Rand Daily Mail, will speak to an Introduction to Journalistic Studies course in the morning, and he will spend the rest of the day on campus touring and speaking with students, faculty and staff.

According to Professor Howard Ziff, director of the journalistic studies program here, "Pogrund is in the area visiting friends, but he will also meet with campus media, journalism faculty and local journalists."

The Rand Daily Mail, renowned opponent of the aparthied policies of the South African government, closed last spring after 83 years of publication. The official reason for closing was the paper's financial losses. It lost $7.5 million in 1984 and $23 million over the last ten years. Forty percent of the paper was owned a corporation owned by Harry Oppenheimer, a wealthy American businessman.

JILL LANG

Striking teachers force cancellations of classes

TEWKSBURY, Mass. (AP)—Striking teachers forced cancellation of classes for 4,500 public school students yesterday, with round-the-clock negotiations scheduled to begin later in the day in an effort to draw up a new contract.

Edward Farley, acting superintendent of the school system, said school was cancelled for a third day when not enough teachers reported for work to assure safe operation of the system.

He said school was tentatively scheduled for today, pending the outcome of negotiations.

Richard Mousseau, president of the Tewskbury Teachers Association, which is bargaining for the 273 public school teachers in the town north of Boston, said the union stood fast by its pledge, "No contract, no work."

He said although talks with the School Committee had been productive, "We are still what we consider miles apart on money."

The teachers, who have been without a contract since Aug. 31, went on strike Thursday and Friday, closing elementary, junior high and high schools.

Teachers and school officials had met with a state mediator Sunday night until 11 p.m. without reaching an agreement.

"We don't go back to classes until we have an agreement," Mousseau said.

Mousseau said there had been "minimal, but some" progress.

★Leakey

continued from page 1

was recently cited by the National Geographic Society for his contribution to the science of human evolution.

Leakey, the son of Louis and Mary Leakey, pioneers in African anthropology, never completed high school. He has received two honorary doctorate degrees of science and is the author of Origins of Man. In 1983 Leakey authored a seven-part series, "The Making of Mankind," for the British Broadcasting Corporation. He has been the director and chief of the national museum of Kenya for the past 18 years.

★police

continued from page 3

done and the area was ventilated, police said

Jewelry valued at $205 and $8 were taken from a room on the second floor of Baker House Sunday afternoon. The door was closed but unlocked, police said.

A 12-speed bicycle valued at $450 was reported stolen Saturday afternoon from the fourth floor of Cashin House. It was left unlocked in the lounge of a suite, police said.

A 1980 Yamaha motorscooter was stolen early Friday morning from parking lot 32. It was found three hours later in the Kennedy Tower driveway. It was not damaged and was recovered by the owner, police said.

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...

RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles

FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00

CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA 782-7191
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 453-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

World Famous

Frank Santos

®Rated Hypnotist Comedian

®adically Different ®idiculously Funny
®ichly Entertaining ®ecklessly Risque

JUSTIN RYANS

TUESDAY NOV. 5 R-RATED HYPNOTIST

Rte. 9, Amherst corner of University Dr. 256-1059

What if you don't get into the grad school of your choice?

Of course, you may get into another school, but why settle? Prepare for the LSAT, GMAT, GRE, MCAT or any grad school entrance exam with the best test prep organization—Stanley H. Kaplan.

For nearly 50 years, Kaplan's test-taking techniques have prepared over 1 million students for admission and licensing tests of all kinds. So call. Why go to just any grad school when you can go to the right one?

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

The world's leading test prep organization.

358 N. Pleasant
549-5780
ENROLLING NOW
for Dec LSAT/GRE

Now there's a better way to vacation in Bermuda—the island of pink sand beaches, warm turquoise waters, and easy-going charm with a British accent.

Now you can become a member of our exclusive vacation club, and enjoy your own cottage here in our private colony.

It's a rare opportunity to own in Bermuda, for a fraction of the cost you might expect. And it comes with all the trimmings—including private swimming, tennis, dining and beach facilities, plus a Robert Trent Jones golf course next door.

To learn how you may apply for membership, please contact us in Sypfld. at 413-739-7646

The St. George's Club Bermuda

A degree of caring.

For people who care about people—teachers, counselors, health and human services professionals—Northeastern University has a special place where you can obtain the knowledge and skills needed to help others. Boston Bouvé College of Human Development Professions.

You can reach out and further your career with Master Degree programs that include:

Master of Education
- Counseling
- Consulting Teacher of Reading
- Curriculum and Instruction
- Educational Research
- Human Development
- Rehabilitation
- Special Education

Master of Science
- Counseling Psychology
- Physical Education
- Physical Therapy
- Recreation Management
- Speech-Language Pathology & Audiology

Doctoral and non-degree certification programs are also available.

For more information and a free catalog, call (617) 437-2708 or write to Boston-Bouvé College at the address below.

BOSTON BOUVÉ
Northeastern University
Graduate School, Boston-Bouvé College of Human Development Professions
107 Dockser Hall, Northeastern University, 360 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02115

Northeastern University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action educational institution and employer

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Random thoughts—autumn

Anne McCrory

Taking a stroll one clear autumn day, nostalgia sets in.

Fall used to be getting to school with leaves stuck on your tights from joyfully stomping through them on the way.

Fall was jumping in the jumbo leaf pile after spending all day raking with Mom and Dad. And then watching more blow over from the neighbor's yard just minutes after you had filled the last Glad bag.

Fall was anticipating trick or treating from Sept. 1 on and hoping wouldn't be so cold you'd have to wear a winter jacket and cover up your costume. And defying Mom and not wearing a jacket anyway, coming down with pneumonia for three weeks afterward in first grade.

Fall was going to your grade school harvest fair, getting your face painted and selling balloons.

Fall was picking out the pumpkins-one large one for the family and one each for the kids-carving the same face with triangle eyes and nose every year. Even though everyone else opted to create monsters and other evil characters.

Fall was not minding when all your classmates called you pumpkin head because of your hair color, since at least it was in season.

Fall was going apple picking with your family and a few others, eating the fruit constantly so you could try every kind. Then never wanting to touch another piece when you got home with five bushels.

Fall was having your hands get numb playing outside but never wanting to go in anyway.

Fall was having the Concord grapes in the backyard ripen and learning to like them, even though you preferred the white seedless kind. And then helping Dad with the jelly project, making out the labels for the jars all the relatives would get for Christmas.

Fall was dressing up like Pilgrims every Thanksgiving, wearing "maxi-dresses," as they were then called, and Dad's handkerchiefs for head gear. Then playing the part by crumbling bread for the stuffing and peeling potatoes.

Fall was collecting colored leaves for the table and then having to throw them away because they were covered with ants.

Fall was getting excited for a class trip to Plymouth Rock, only to find the stone encased in a fence so you couldn't even touch it

Fall was making candleholders with acorns that always ended up in the attic.

Fall was being honored, at age 9, to partake of the annual family fishing trip for flounder in Quincy Bay. And abdicating that honor two years later, when you were considered old enough to bait your own hooks.

Fall was not minding that the days were getting shorter since there were cozy fires in the fireplace to look forward to. And you always were a night person, anyway.

Fall was checking to see if your ice skates fit for the upcoming winter and learning that your younger sister had bigger feet than you did.

Fall was placing bets on when the first snow would be and then never winning because no one had designated a prize.

Fall is getting sentimental as you're about to graduate from college and wishing for a moment that the years hadn't passed. Then realizing, that with the memories intact, it's time to move on.

Anne McCrory is the Collegian Managing Editor.

Polluted thought processes

Lawrence Soucie

One of the things I do when I have an hours or so of spare time is help MASSPIRG collect signatures. MASSPIRG is trying to put four binding resolutions on the 1986 ballot: The first would require hazardous waste sites to be cleaned up; the second would allow mail-in voter registration; the third would set up a consumer utilities board to keep utility rates down; and the fourth would reduce acid rain. For the most part this is a very rewarding activity and I would encourage anyone who has a moment of free time and a desire to make a difference to give it a try.

However, every now and then you come across people who are so out of touch with reality that they make some pretty funny comments, and I thought I would share a few of the more humorous ones with you.

When asked why he didn't want to sign the acid rain petition, a well-dressed young man replied "Industry should be allowed to pollute because they breathe the air like everyone else—if it causes cancer, they'll get it too." I almost chipped my tooth from gritting my teeth. Sure, they breathe the crap, but they rake in the profits from not disposing of their waste properly, while the rest of us lose our lakes, trees, and even our buildings to acid rain.

Already six percent of our lakes are acidified. Another ten percent are likely to go within the next decade. What we really need is federal legislation, but since Massachusetts produces thirty percent of its own acid rain, this is a start.

"Well, it would hurt the economy" he replied. Not true. Japan has installed the most up-to-date pollution control equipment with no obvious ill effects on its economy. As he was walking away I shouted "I hope your house dissolves."

Another person signed the acid rain, consumer utility board and mail-in voter registration petitions, but refused to sign the hazardous waste clean-up petition. His reason, "ya gotta dump the stuff somewhere." How about disposing of the stuff properly? Even if you care nothing about the earth, or how many people will die, it is still much more economical to prevent an aquifer from becoming contaminated than it is to try and clean it up once it is polluted. Already 40 towns in Massachusetts have been forced to drink either bottled water or purchase water from another town. Look at the town of Woburn, the site of one of the worst dumps in the nation, with little kids dying of leukemia. "I'm from Woburn" he replied. I just stood there, speechless.

Then there was the religious old lady who said "acid rain is from heaven and anything from heaven can't be bad." Ha Ha Ha. If acid rain is from heaven, then God lives in a smoke stack and has horns.

Or how about the fatalist who said "acid rain is going to fall and there is nothing we can do about it—signing your petition isn't going to help." Out of all the excuses, the fatalist bothers me the most. It may be true that the most anti-environment President in history is now in office, but he only has so much power. The vast majority of what he has tried to do has been blocked by the Congress. Even among his own party the President has little support when it comes to the environment.

But it is true: without national leadership on these issues the final solution might be years away. We've got to try, least the prophecy of Chief Seathl come true in out lifetime: "And to harm the earth is to heap contempt on its creator. The whites, too, shall pass—perhaps sooner than other tribes. Continue to contaminate your bed, and you will one night suffocate in your own waste."

Lawrence Soucie is a Collegian columnist.

The perils of wanton lust

There is a saying, not original with me, that states there are three kinds of people in this world: those who make things happen, those who watch things happen, and those who wonder what happened. In my better moments, I am one of those who watch. Lately what I've been watching is the desperate politics of federal aid for abortions and for AIDS. It seems to me that the desperation has less to do with medical care than with the horrendous thought that someone somewhere might have to put a lid on their sexual urges.

I emphathize with that desperation and I realize that moral discussions are small comfort when we're talking about giving up sex, but I think there are more than enough mundane, pragmatic reasons to keep one's pants on.

To start with, there's venereal disease. According to University Health Services, there are 14 different VD's one can pick up during copulation. Furthermore, it is now possible to get AIDS from almost any class of society—gay or straight, heroin addict or not. Officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta say the germ mutates so quickly they don't believe it is even possible to abolish it, and they calculate that 50 new, worse viruses will develop from it.

VD isn't the only medical complication from intercourse. For straight couples, the evidence indicates a strong correlation between sex and pregancy. No birth control device is 100 percent effective, and even the ever-present panacea of fix-it abortions has been known to fail. In fact, abortions have other surprises: long-term psychological trauma is attested to by thousands of women who had their babies aborted.

Those fortunate enough to avoid the $400.00 abortion bill or a case of the clap have other things on their minds. When two people share the most intimate parts of their persons, there's a level of trust and vulnerability which is unique in the human experience. How does it feel on the morning after (or the year after) when "sweetheart" goes their own way? Most people I've talked to feel either rejected or used. Others have to live with themselves knowing that they willfully rejected or used a lover. Some party.

What makes people subject themselves to this kind of abuse and emotional turmoil? Is an hour in the sack worth being in bondage to lust or loneliness? There are so many students getting their weekly or monthly "fix" of sex that an estimated one quarter of the women graduating from UMass will have had an abortion. Amherst is so proud of its liberated politics—liberated from everything but its gonads, as far as I can tell.

Such politics have a heavy price. I understand that two billion federal dollars just got funneled into AIDS research. I have no doubt that it was the right thing to do, but two billion dollars could feed a lot of hungry people. Instead it's going to research a heartbreaking problem which resulted from thousands of horny people having their own way. Who knows how many millions of tax dollars have been spent to abort babies?

Abstention is hard. I'll be the first to admit that there are few things as gratifying and affirming as a night with the love of one's life. But it's not worth sacrificing character and peace of mind. God knows, it's not worth it. Maybe one of these days, if enough people can be woken up, we can abolish the idea of sex as a national sacrament.

Rusty Denton is a Collegian columnist.

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

Daily Collegian
Advertising
that works!!
Call:
545-3500

LEARN TO FLY
U-MASS STUDENT CLUB
ACADEMIC CREDIT AVAILABLE-LOW COST 665-2577

Herrell's Ice Cream
Thomas Marketplace
Old South St. Entrance
Northampton
Open Noon 'till 11:30 Sun.-Thurs
No'th 'till Midnight Fri & Sat.
586-4837
Herrell's Ice Cream
The Original and Still the Best!

ARE YOU PREGNANT
& IN NEED OF HELP?
Birthright Can Help
• FREE PREGNANCY TESTING
- Same Day Results -
Services that are
Free, Confidential, Caring & Helpful
549-1906
Amherst Carriage Shops
Upper Level

"All in all I can honestly say working in Washington D.C. was incredible," said a recent UMass student who interned at the State Department--Bureau of Public Affairs. "It was by far the most exciting & rewarding experience of my life." Internships are available for all majors on campus. To plan YOUR internship contact the University Internship Program, 16 Curry Hicks 545-0727.

HAYRIDE
PARTY ON OUR HAYWAGON
DAY OR NIGHT, BONFIRE
AND PICNIC AREA PROVIDED
For Information and Reservations
CALL 247-9098
WEST HATFIELD STABLES
RTE. 5, West Hatfield, Ma
4 miles north of Northampton

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package
Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986
Stratton
Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

GET A $5.00 STORE CREDIT TOWARDS NEXT PURCHASE OVER $10- WHEN YOU BUY A PAIR OF
★ 501 or ★ CORDS or ★ JEANS
Levi's at Saturday Clothes
N. Pleasant St. Amherst
253-9729

GRAND OPENING
Nov. 5th
CopyCat Print Shop
"When the copy is as important as the original"
* Copies
* Binding
* Enlargements and Reductions
* Resume Writing
* Word Processing
* Printing
* Typesetting
* Flyers
We use the Xerox 1090, the latest technology by Xerox.
Finest Quality
Bay Banks Food Basket
Triangle St.
E. Pleasant
CopyCat Print Shop
Sub
549-3840
228 Triangle St.
2nd floor above
Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - 12 pm M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
Low Rates
Introductory Autofeeding Special
3¢ A COPY
THRU SUNDAY NOV. 10

BLACK AFFAIRS

Apartheid still a problem

By KIMBERLY A. BURGE
Collegian Staff

We may not have heard much about apartheid lately, but it is still a problem. The violence between black South Africans and the white minority leaders of that country has increased to the point where whites who live in residential areas are no longer safe in their own neighborhoods. Journalists and photographers are being attacked by white South Africans because they feel that all the attention being drawn to the violence by the press, incites the blacks to riot even more.

Whether this is true or not is not the issue. The issue is what are people doing and what can people do to bring an abrupt halt to this appalling situation.

Groups of students, citizens, business leaders, and even entertainers are showing their displeasure against aparthied. "Sun City", a single released by various recording artists calling themselves Artists United Against Apartheid, opposes the segregation of audiences in Sun City, a Las Vegas type of city in South Africa.

Locally, the sorority of Delta Sigma Theta and the fraternity of Kappa Alpha Psi of the University of Massachusetts are hoping to get 100 thousand signatures on a petition stating that the American people do not agree with Reverend Jerry Falwell's view that apartheid is not racist.

The red ribbon campaign sponsored by the Office of Third World Affairs is still going on strong. Thousands of ribbons symbolizing the bloodshed and struggle of black South Africans have been given out to students and faculty.

Everyone can do his or her share in showing their support against apartheid. Whether it is attending a rally, wearing a ribbon, buying the "Sun City" single, or simply putting your signature on a petition.

Announcements

The prestigous brothers of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Inc., would like to invite all young gentlemen interested in their fraternity to a Smoker. The Smoker will be held promptly at 8 p.m. on Thursday, November 7, in room 809 of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center on the campus of the University of Massachusetts. Proper dress is required.

The Jessi B. Cox Charitable Trust of Boston has awarded Hampshire College a second grant of $86,000 in its support of the minority student outreach and scholarship program.

For more information, contact Nancy Sherman or Maria W. Duncan at 549-4600 ext. 780.

Writing a Paper?
Want Help?
That's what we're here for.
THE WRITING CENTER
Mon, Thurs 7-9 pm:
Pierpont (SoWest)
Baker (Central)
Tues, Wed, Thurs 3:30-5 pm:
Bartlett 101
Wed 7-9 pm: Bartlett 101

MONEY MOTIVATED?
If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This
We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

UMASS SKI CLUB
Ski Sale Meetings
Thurs. Nov. 7
4 pm CC Rm 165
7 pm Hamden Commons, SW
All those interested in working the sale must attend one of the above!
For more info call 545-3437

WED., THURS. and FRI. SPECIAL
HAIRCUT
$6.95
with Laurie
with this ad/coupon
Expires 11/15/85
at SHEAR DELIGHT
complete hairstyling for men & women
549-1502
Bay Banks Food Basket
Triangle St.
E. Pleasant ST.
Sub
SHEAR DELIGHT
228 Triangle
Pray St.

TUESDAY NOV. 5 R-RATED HYPNOTIST
World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
©adically Different ©ldiculously Funny
©ichly Entertaining ©ecklessly Risque
Rte. 9, Amherst
JUSTIN RYAN'S
corner of University Dr.
256-1059

PART-TIME OPPORTUNITIES
MAKE YOUR OWN SCHEDULE!
If you know the basics of home construction or weatherization (or even if you consider yourself to be "handy around the house"), DMC Energy needs your talent to motivate area home owners to save energy.
We have an immediate need for part-time energy auditors. These are flexible positions which put you in charge of your schedule. This is an ideal opportunity for anyone who wishes to work, but needs a part-time position which won't interfere with classes. No sales involved.
There is a three week training course (part-time). You will be paid a stipend of $27.00 per each training day. Upon successful completion of training and passing certification tests, you will be given a bonus of $125.00. Another bonus of $125.00 will be given you upon completion of one month's service, provided you have performed quality work.
There is a $16.00 payment for each audit completed, plus a $5.00 expense reimbursement for each completed audit,
Our next training class begins on November 12. If you are interested in the positions or would like additional information, please contact Ms. Temple at 1-800-332-2754 as soon as possible.

ARTS LINES

For those who favor going out during weeknights instead of a trip to the library here are some cultural distractions (certainly more productive than conventional forms of procrastination).

At 8 p.m. tonight, the Department of Theatre will put on Sophie Treadwell's Machinal at the Curtain Theatre. The production will run at 8 p.m. tonight through Saturday. One matinee is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are available ($4.00 general admission, $2.00 for students) at the Fine Arts Center box office from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and at the Curtain Theatre one hour before show time.

If theatre is not what you're in the mood for tonight, at 7 p.m. the UMass Spanish Club will present Tuna,a musical group of students from Sevilla, Spain in Memorial Hall. There is no admission charge for five-college students.

Dancers and others should know about the Five-College Dance Concert at 8 p.m., Thursday and Friday at Mt. Holyoke College. The performance is the 'Fall Dance Faculty Concert.' Tickets are $4.00 general admission and $2.00 for students. Call 586-3100 for more information. (A repeat performance will take place at Amherst College's Kirby Theatre, Friday, Nov. 15 and 16).

Anyone with an appetite for Rock n' Roll who is interested in making the trek to Northampton, Watch the Teeth Kate (an interesting local band) is playing at 9:30 p.m., Thursday at Sheehan's Cafe.

TUESDAY NOV. 5 R-RATED HYPNOTIST

World Famous Frank Santos

®Rated Hypnotist Comedian

Radically Different Ridiculously Funny
Richly Entertaining Recklessly Risqué

Rte. 9, Amherst JUSTIN RYAN'S corner of University Dr. 256-1059

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION

Gas Saving Tune-up

4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95

Lube, Oil & Filter

$17.99

Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil, and safety check.

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watrobka's Store
549-4704

UMass Arts Council

CALL FOR GRANT PROPOSALS

Deadline for submission of grant proposals for single projects or events:

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8

Grant guidelines and applications available at Arts Council, the Student Activities office, or the Arts Extension Service.

Arts Council 125 Herter Hall 545-0202

THE FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MARIAN McPARTLAND
Tuesday, November 12 8 p.m.
Tickets $13 11 9
"A fascinating, inventive pianist playful, probing and provocative"
John S. Wilson, New York Times

ASPEN WIND QUINTET
Thursday, November 14 8 p.m.
Tickets $9
Winner – Naumburg Chamber Music Award 1984

MABOU MINES' "Cold Harbor"
A bleak & beautiful study of General Ulysses S. Grant
Sunday, November 17 8 p.m.
Tickets $12 10 8

Free College Students Half Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413) 545-2511 or 1-800-243-4642

STAR MARKET CO-OP OPPORTUNITIES

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WORKING IN AN EXCITING BUSINESS IN THE SUPERMARKET OPERATIONS FIELD?

Well, if you are, we at Star Market would like to talk to you. We offer an excellent co-operative education experience with outstanding benefits, pay (6.87 per hour to start), 40 hour work week, as well as excellent career opportunities as a result of a successful co-op experience. We are interested in talking to students from all majors.

We will be on campus for an informational session on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7 at 7:00 PM in S.O.M. Room 112.
Interviews will be held on NOVEMBER 8.
To find out more about Star's Co-op program, please contact Co-op Program, 5-2224 today!

STAR MARKET SINCE 1915
An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

DUNCE!

Twenty-five million adult Americans are totally illiterate. Another 35,000,000 are functionally illiterate.

Is America creating a permanent underclass . . . an academic third world?

"Absolutely," answers Reginald Damerell, former professor of education at the University of Massachusetts in his new book, Education's Smoking Gun, which squarely places the blame on the teachers' colleges and graduate schools of education.
"This is a tough, no-holds barred attack on teachers' training that has departed from the fundamental importance of the 3 R's in favor of visual aids. When a nation such as this democracy permits its educational standards to decline because teachers are not adequately trained it is necessary for someone to cry: 'Halt!'"[1]

He contends that the introduction of black studies, ethnic studies, and bilingual programs have, in fact, harmed most, those whom they were designed to help—minorities. "He damns three practices he encountered while teaching: admittance of graduate students who have abysmal academic records in an effort to offer equal opportunity; the wide-spread attitude that the 3 R's do not come first in education; and the lack of 'a body of knowledge' in the education curriculum."[2]

"Strong stuff, this, written by one who came into education after a successful advertising career. Like many outsiders, he was appalled at the ignorant, narrow-minded illiterates who peopled the classes, administrations and faculties of far too many university education departments . . . Damerell is sharp and informed, with little patience for the intellectual slums represented by education courses and the empty credentialism of the Ed. D."[3]

Education's Smoking Gun—"Passionate, lucid, a great polemic, the book belongs in every lively public affairs collection"[4]—read it today!

1 John Barkham Reviews
2 Publishers Weekly
3 Kirkus Reviews
4 Booklist

Education's Smoking Gun
How Teachers Colleges Have Destroyed Education in America
Reginald G. Damerell

FREUNDLICH BOOKS

University Store Campus Center, University of Massachusetts
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop 55 S. Pleasant St., Amherst
Globe Book Shop 38 Pleasant Street, Northampton, MA
Odyssey Book Shop 29 College Street, South Hadley, MA

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Weather

TODAY– Windy with periods of rain, heavy at times and temperatures in the 50-55 range.
TONIGHT-Spot fog with occasional drizzle. Lows in the 40s.
TOMORROW– Variable cloudiness with a chance of leftover showers. Highs in the mid 50s.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Surfman

by Bart

Menu

LUNCH
Open Face Roast Beef
Sandwich
Quiche Lorraine

BASICS LUNCH
The Salad Sandwich
Quiche Lorraine

BASICS DINNER
HARVEST FESTIVAL
Harvest Stuffed Acorn Squash
Roast Turkey
Cornbread Dressing, Gravy
Cranberry Sauce

DINNER
HARVEST FESTIVAL
Roast Turkey
Cornbread Dressing, Gravy
Cranberry Sauce
Fried Deep Sea Scallops
Tartar Sauce, Cocktail Sauce

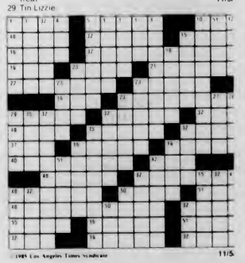
Writing Workshop

A former reporter for the Concord Journal will be giving a newswriting and reporting workshop at 7 p.m. TODAY in the Collegian newsroom. Mandatory for all correspondents and new staff.

Investigative Reporting Workshop (18 pt. bold)
Journalism professor Frank Faulkner, formerly of the Springfield Daily News, will give an investigative reporting and public documents workshop at 7 p.m. Thursday. This will count toward staff status for new people and it would do everyone some good to attend!

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 John or Paul
5 "—— Gets in Your Eyes"
10 Resort of a sort
13 October birthstone
14 Teutonic god
15 Work out in the ring
16 Water source
17 In super abundance
19 Poet's preposition
20 Singing brothers
21 Emulated Leo
22 Cheese dish
24 Strike
25 Capp and Capone
26 Bad tempered
29 Steppenwolf author
32 Ancient theologian
33 Answer at the altar
34 Catch sight of 35 Twists sideways
36 Black, to a poet
37 I wandered lonely —— cloud
38 Olympic sleds
39 Hosiery thread
40 Kind of ad
42 NT book
43 Leave out
44 Coloratura's specialty
48 —— chaste as ice —— as snow Hamlet
50 Labor for a lawyer
51 Word with cake or meat
52 Guest quarters
54 Newspaper item
55 Wyatt
56 Boredom
57 Before scope or winkle
58 Barbecue butinski
59 Crowded
60 One of the Waughs

DOWN
1 Glory's partner
2 Diva's domain
3 Less ruddy
4 Wing of a kind
5 Mystics
6 Painter of haystacks
7 Gambler's concern
8 Siberian people
9 Gargantuan
10 Barbecue treats
11 Trim down
12 Oh, my love is like ——
15 Flood
18 Begrimes
20 Competent
23 Simple
24 Records
26 Don't Be —— Elvis hit
27 Worshipped one
28 After school treat
29 Tin Lizzie
30 Philosopher's existence
31 Item for an emergency
32 Pond covering
35 Divided
36 Emerald Isle
38 Chateaux country river
39 Miners' quest
41 Sound through a straw
42 "A Chorus Line" role
44 The Plague author
45 Coveted prize
46 Krishasak's country
47 Room at the top?
48 Sailing
49 Bridge
50 Rt 1 's neighbor
53 —— in a million
54 Price control org. 1941-53

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

A	R	T	S		R	O	L	L		C	O	C
W	E	R	E		E	D	I	E		A	O	U
A	C	U	T	A	B	O	V	E		E	G	A
T	I	E		B	O	R	E	D	O	M		S
T	O	R	P	O	R			S	A	L	A	L
			R	U	N	I	C		T	Y	R	O
A	S	C	O	T		S	U	R	E		B	O
L	O	U	T		C	U	T	I	N		I	S
A	N	T	E		O	P	U	S		S	T	E
E	G	O	I	S	M		P	E	L	E	E
		U	N	W	E	D		E	G	R	E	S
M	A	T		A	R	A	B	I	A	N		R
E	L	F	I	N		C	U	T	D	O	W	N
S	T	O	R	K		G	R	E	E		H	I
S	O	R	R	Y		A	L	A	N		Y	E

11/5

©1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

LIBERAL ARTS CAREER WEEK

SPONSORED BY

UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE

NOVEMBER 5 - 7, 1985

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

November 5 - LIBERAL ARTS CAREER WORKSHOP
CC 101 - 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.
SEMINAR: Learn how to market what industry is beginning to regard as a very valuable educational experience in today's world of work.

November 6 - LIBERAL ARTS CAREER FAIR
Campus Center Auditorium - 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Over 30 corporations and government agencies will be participating.
Entry level positions in technical writing, management training programs, marketing, public relations, health care, personnel and more.
DON'T FORGET TO BRING RESUMES!!!

November 7 - HOW TO LAND A JOB IN HIGH TECH WITH A LIBERAL ARTS DEGREE - CC 168 - 1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Facilitated by a software engineer manager from WANG Laboratories. Topics: How to prepare while still in school; skill building; developing references; leveraging experience; job search and interviewing techniques.

UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE - WE MAKE IT HAPPEN!

UPS

University Career Center
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
545-2224

★volleyball

continued from page 12

potential to accomplish more milestones before the season is over.

"I'm surprised we've done as well as we have," said head Coach Elaine Sortino. "I'm very happy, but still surprised."

The list of team statistics is impressive. UMass has won four of six tournaments this season and carry a 21-5 tournament match record. The Minutewomen have won 75 percent of their games and have swept opponents 20 times. The spikers are also 7-1 at home this season.

Tonight, the Minutewomen face possibly the most crucial match of the season against New England nemesis Springfield College at Boyden Gym at 7 p.m.. Any hopes of a national tournament bid hinge on a win over the Indians, ranked fifth in the Northeast.

"They used to dominate us in the past," said Sortino. "Only recently has it turned around for us."

The Minutewomen have been getting the upper hand on Springfield, coming out on top in their last two meetings, both of which went the maximum five games. Last season's victory over Springfield was one of the most exciting matches of the year and solidified a UMass spot in post-season play. Tonight's match also marks the final home match for senior co-captains Ann Ringrose and Sally Maher, two mainstays of the record-setting 1985 Minutewomen team.

"We're going to have to block and serve well and run a good middle attack to beat Springfield," said Sortino. "We plan to run the middle every chance we get. We have to run the middle in the next four matches, especially if we're talking about post-season play."

Sports notice

Candidates for the UMass men's and women's varsity ski teams should attend an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. on Thursday, November 14 in room 306 of Holdsworth Hall. Positions are available for experience racers. Meetings will be held every Thursday until snow is available for try-outs.

Resume Typesetting

*High quality
*Letter perfect
*Customized layouts
*Superior to all other methods

Contact SGA Communications Office
304 Student Union
Ed Cunningham or Jim Emmett
5-1977

SGA Communications

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone
Petite - Regular and Half Sizes
WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes -
Nickels, Jazz and Paloma
Merchandise sold only
in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts (20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

Why doesn't JB's Deliver?
1. It's worth the trip
2. You need the fresh air
3. Fresh food is better
4. All of the above
5. None of the above
Answer Below
JBs "HOT ROAST BEEF" SANDWICHES 11 am - 2 am 7 days
60 Main St. Amherst, MA
Answer 5 (we don't own a car)

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

- New to Our Menu -
MEXICAN PIZZA
Crispy Flour Tortilla Chips covered with a Tangy Tomato Sauce, your choice of Toppings and lots of Melted Mozzarella Cheese. . .

...Offering Quality Mexican Foods

TACO VILLA
NORTHAMPTON 21 CENTER ST 584-0673 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine
AMHERST 41 BOLTWOOD WALK 256-8217 Beer & Wine Served
SPRINGFIELD 749 SUMNER AVE 788-0919 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Armenian Club Meeting Nov 6 6:30 pm CC 901 details about dance and party - old and new members always welcome!

Lutheran Student Fellowship will meet Wednesday 5:30-7:30 at Immanuel Lutheran Church for supper and a discussion. All are welcome

"Lunch with the Rabbi" Guest Hannah Kliger, "Yiddish Language and Culture: The Connection to Us" Tuesday, 11/5, 12:20 pm, Suffolk Room

Eastside Spring Concert Committee first planning meeting. Interested in planning hospitality, talent, stage crew, etc. Wed. * 6:00 pm Room TBA

Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Counseling Collective is open Monday, Wednesday, Thursday 3-7; Tuesday 1-3. Drop by room 433 SUB or call 5-2643

Help us finalize plans for the Rally for Rights! Radical Student Union meting 5:30 pm CC 808

UPC General Meeting Tuesday, 11/5 at 6:30 pm check showcase or come to the office for room number

Is lack of time keeping you from getting involved in public issues? Get credit through MASSPIRG Internships. Info: 545-0199

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7393

72 Duster new heater, brakes runs great 550 firm 549-1269 or 6-6042 Paul

1977 Red Chev Camaro good condition AM FM cassette stero 2 extra new tires $900 or BO call 549-0462 evenings

72 VW Fastback rebuilt engine good body new muffler floor battery snows no work required $850 BO 5-0720 or 549-0362

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

BUS DRIVING JOBS!

UMass Transit Service is looking for several part-time drivers. Applicants must be UMass students carrying 6 or more credits in a degree program. Class II license required. Starting pay is $4.66/hr. Call Bud or Jenny at 545-0056 for more info, or apply in person at the Bus Garage

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, luncheon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

"CASH"

Paying cash for your baseball cards call Mike 546-6105

COMMANDO BOB

That night of private war games in the woods was heaven. I'd follow your command anywhere. Love, a Lucky Private

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Kark-A-Dise Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on bushne. 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Univega 12-speed completely set up. Extra everything $200 549-0385

Bicycle built for two. Motobacane 10 speed $400 1-467-7877

Computer IBM 256k, color monitor mouse parallel, serial, printer NL Qgraphics computer desk, printer stand software 549-5185

Brand new Harmon Kardon receiver and speakers BO 549-5185

Safe Suntans 25-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Join alone- $25 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 10

GREAT YOGURT

Dannon, Stonyfield, Colombo, Mountainhigh, and Brown Cow yogurt. . .only at the People's Market

HELP WANTED

On campus non-work study MWF 7 noon call Jane at 546-6849

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Sannel 584-3596

Santa needs elves - Petite outgoing individuals needed to work 1-5 w/days. Apply at Job Matching in Hampshire Mall or call 584-8889

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4 41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct. 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites $5.00/hr. Call Carl at 665-3088 at any reasonable hour.

LAST CHANCE FOR SPRING

Apply now for a full-time internship at the Legal Services Office for the Spring, 1986 semester. Aid attorneys in client interviews, preparation of court forms, maintenance of continuing caseload, giving advice and referrals and investigations and research. Up to 15 credits may be received from academic departments. Gain valuable experience in the legal profession while working on campus. No previous experience in the legal profession necessary, training provided. Deadline to begin the formal application process is November 6. For further information, call Mary at Legal Services, 545-1995

LOST

Lost black and white male cat with black fluffy tail. Anywhere from Presidential to Townehouse. Please call 549-4462

Lost eye glasses w/black case, please call Scott 6-4705

Set of keys in tan Fendi case lost. Very important! Please call Sheryl 256-1645

Ring lost two pearls sentimental value 549-7717

A Farex package at Bay Banks Triangle St. on Sat 10/26/85. If you have info please call Ron at 253-7805. After 6:00 PM. The book is important.

Lost: Luis Vuitton wallet, contaning $$, credit cards, ID's. Of very sentimental value. Rewarded. Thank you.

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassy Recording Studio offes 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

PERSONALS

Cheer up Julie A! Your roommates need and love you! The Gang

Sugarbush Ski Week! Hotel $149 see Ski Club now 549-3437

Chrissy and Winnie - Thought you would never see it? Well here it is and it says it all. Thanks for being there--I would never survive without you both! Love always, Nance

Carya - You want a personal? You got it! Happy Birthday! Caroline

All right Dode this is it!

Mrs George Michaels! How is "T" you know I am jealous! Has your racquetball technique paid off yet? Love ya, The Wench

Daniel - Happy 21st babe! May we celebrate your 100th together. All my love, LM

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

REWARD

Lost two silver heart charms in Central read forget me not call 546-1106 Heather

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Fordham University or New York City Friday November 8. Please call Katie 549-2616

Desperately seeking ride RT Syracuse or Rochester weekend of 8th call 546-7498 anytime

RIDERS WANTED

Cheap Bus to Boston, $9.50, long weekend, Friday 11/8, 12 noon. Call 545-2145

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share 5 bedroom house in Belchertown. Own room, on bus route (stops right in front), $165 plus utilities. Available immediately. Call 253-5390 after 5 pm

Quiet couple looking to share 2 bedroom apt. completely furnished call after 6 pm 549-6237

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7652

SPRING BREAK '86

Register now for Spring Break '86 in Ft. Lauderdale/Daytona Beach! Prices from $199. A $30 deposit guarantees your reservation (plus more!) Take until January 29 to pay balance. Pick your own roommates. Extras! Mike 546-9639

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apt Cliffside F-4 starting January or February Bob 665-8219

TRAVEL

Interested in a trip around the world? I'll be leaving in January for 6 months. Looking for adventurous travel companions. Call Greg 253-5618

Take a Break on the French side! Skibreak's January trip to Tarnes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT airfare (Swissair), Transfers, Accommodations, Skipass (116 ffs), Slalom races, cocktails for $740/7 nights in resort. Skibreak: 203-354-6059

Campus cordinator for January Skibreak to the French Alps travels for free! (1/15) Mike/Skibreak (203) 354-6059 PD

TUNA

Tuna, a popular musical group from Sevilla, Spain is being sponsored by the UMass Spanish Club in a special, one night engagement, Tuesday, Nov. 5th in Memorial Hall. Free to 5-College community. Don't miss it.

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 546-8822

WANTED TO RENT

2 females looking for apt or room prefer in N. Amherst area. Start Jan or Spring call 546-8326

Responsible male senior seeks room in quiet apt or house near campus spring semester. Okay to call late nights, early mornings 546-5143

2 females need room anywhere in North Amherst will take over January lease call 549-3809

SPORTS

UM soccer seeded first in tourney

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The undefeated University of Massachusetts women's soccer team was named the top seed in the 14-team NCAA Division 1 tournament, Monday. Defending four-time national champion North Carolina was seeded second.

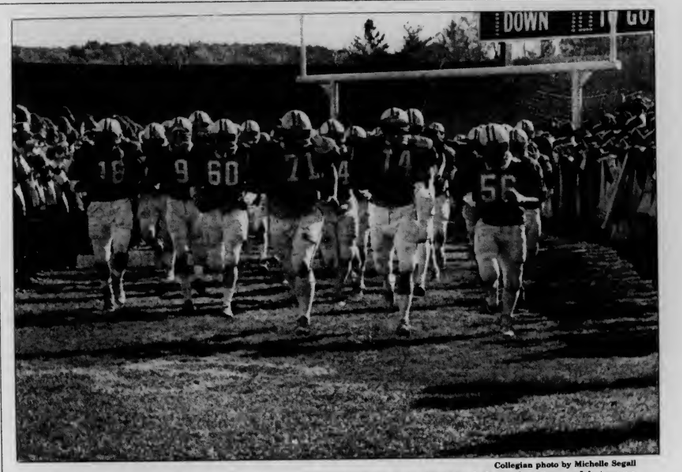
UMass, 15-0-0 , received a first round bye and will play the winner of the this weekend's Boston College-Brown game on Sunday Nov. 17 at noon at Boyden Field. UMass is undefeated (5-0) in playoff play at Boyden dating back to 1981.

UMass beat Brown, 6-0 and Boston College, 2-0 in the regular season. Brown, ironically, was the number one seed last year before being upset by Connecticut, 1-0 in the quarter-finals.

"We feel very happy that the NCAA has recognized the University as the top-ranked team," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said. "We've earned it. Now we have to go out and live up to it."

The Final Four will be held in Fairfax, Virginia on the campus of George Mason University on Nov. 23-24. ESPN will be covering the championship final.

UMass advanced to the Final Four last season, losing in the semi-finals to Connecticut, 2-1. They ended the season ranked third in the nation, like they had finished in 1983.



In other first round games this weekend, Cortland State is at UConn, William and Mary faces George Mason, Radford takes on N.C. State, Wisconsin makes it first NCAA appearance taking on Colorado College and the University of California-Hayward takes on UCal-Santa Barbara.

North Carolina also receives a first-round bye.

SOCCER KICKS–It is the fifth year of national championship competition and UMass has qualified each year as has North Carolina, UConn...Minutewomen Tabitha Polley and Marcie Englestein saw their first action of the year against Springfield as Banda cleared the bench.

UMass has made a steady rise in the past few years. In 1981, UM finished seventh at the AIAW nationals, in 1982 UMass was knocked out in the quarter-finals by Central Florida and finished fifth. In 1983, UMass took third at the Final Four topping UConn.

In its last two home games, UMass has played before 2000 fans, a 1000 each in the North Carolina (2-0) and Springfield wins (5-0). "The fan support has been tremendous," Banda said.

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Nose guard Mike Dwyer (center, number 71) and the rest of the UMass defense has turned into one of the nation's best units.

UMass football notebook

The UM defense doesn't rest

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

1984. Seven times, University of Massachusetts football opponents gain over 400 yards of total offense, four times they break they 500-yard plateau. UMass goes 3-8.

1985. Only once in nine games has an opponent broke the 300-yard mark, and UMass still comes up a winner when Boston University does, 17-14. The UMass defense is ranked first in the country in Division 1-AA in scoring defense, allowing only 9.2 points-per-game. The overall and rushing defense are also ranked in the top 20. The Minutemen are 6-3, winners of four straight and are talking about playoff possibilities.

"It's a great feeling, to look at the stats and know we're doing this," said UM defensive tackle Eddie Sullivan. "It shows how far we've come."

Per 100 yards gained by the opposition, UMass has allowed only three points. The Minutemen have allowed only two fourth quarter touchdowns all season, for seven straight games no opponent has scored in the first period. On the stat sheet and on the field, UMass has dominated the opponent's offense this year.

"It's hard to believe that we were down to Morgan State (UM's first opponent, an eventual 38-9 loser and holder of a 0-7 record so far this season) 3-0," laughed UM defensive coordinator Jim Reid. "We've approached each team a different way, we've learned from our mistakes last season. Plus, most importantly, the kids have played with tremendous intensity."

Freshman inside linebacker John McKeown has been among the most intense, averaging over 12 tackles a game. Inside linebacker Vito Perrone has also come on, making 78 stops. Inside backer Todd Rundle, a sophomore, has 75 tackles, five caused fumbles, eight sacks and eight hits for a loss on running backs. Senior nose guard Mike Dwyer, the emotional leader of the UM defense, has 70 tackles, 11 and a half sacks and has caused three fumbles. He also managed to break up a pass in Saturday's 21-7 win at Connecticut.

With a Delaware team that ran up over 300 yards on Division 1 Temple coming to town on Saturday (1:30 p.m. at Alumni Stadium), the Minutemen will have another challenge to meet.

"Not to be too cocky or anything, but we want to shut them down too," said McKeown. "We don't want to allow over 10 points to anybody."

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: Playoff chances-UMass must hope for an at-large bid (URI has the automatic Yankee Conference bid wrapped up). An 8-3 record and six-game winning streak may do it. That makes Saturday's game the most important in the last seven years. "We're looking for some student support," said head coach Bob Stull.

Junior offensive guard Stan Kaczorowski has given his placekicking duties to freshman Silvio Bonvini. "I was just filling until he came back (from a hip injury)," said Kaczorowski, who was five-of-six on extra points and four-of-eight on field goals for 17 points. "But it was good to get some glory," noted big Stan. Tailback George Barnwell is listed as questionable for Delaware with a bruised shoulder. . .defensive tackle Bruce Strange, linebacker Steve Silva and tight end Mike Kelley are all expected to play after long absences due to injury. UMass' depth seems back intact now that they have gone two straight games without injury.

Special teams players of the week against UConn were Frank Fay, Rod Turner and Ken Girouard. UMass receivers averaged over 16 yards a catch against UConn, flanker John Crowley has 23 receptions on the season for 360 yards, a 15.7 average. . .UMass opponents have an overall record of 33-36-1, however its next two opponents (Delaware and UNH) are a combined 12-5. . .Bart Fuller's 31-yard catch against UConn was the longest grab by a UM tight end this season. . .no UMass team has won five straight since 1979. . .Andrew Thomas is averaging 23 yards per kickoff return. . .backup quarterback Jim Simeone is playing special teams and looking good.

Cross country fourth in NE

Minutewomen take eighth

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team took fourth place in the New England championships at Boston's Franklin Park over the weekend.

UMass finished "pretty much where where we expected to," according to coach Ken O'Brien, who said that the top three finishers (Boston University, Northeastern and Providence College) were a class ahead of the Minutemen while the second five teams (Keene State, Lowell, Boston College, Brandeis and MIT) were about a class below.

Once again, it was John Panaccione who led UMass. With a 24:49 over the five mile course, Panaccione was 12th, a place better than last season and 15 seconds faster.

A group of sophomores were the next four placers for UMass. Steve Page was 25th in 25:26, John Lorenzini was 32nd, Bill Stewart was 33rd and Renardo Flores was 41st. Only 15 seconds separated the four runners.

"We need that runner between Panaccione and the rest of the team," noted O'Brien. "We're getting there, we've faced some top teams lately."

The men are in the IC4A Championships in two weeks at Lehigh.

"The New Englands were a new experience for those sophomores," said O'Brien. "It's a big meet and they did pretty well. I expect them to draw on that experience and keep up those efforts in Lehigh. I think our hard work will pay off."

The UMass women meanwhile, were taking eighth in the New Englands. The Minutewomen trailed BC, but were ahead of Rhode Island, Northeastern and Bryant.

BU's Lisa Welch was first in the race with a 17:24 over the 5,000 meter course, also at Franklin Park.

UMass volleyball notebook

Minutewomen face Springfield

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

It's been a season of firsts for the University of Massachusetts volleyball team.

The Minutewomen won their own UMass Invitational Tournament in September, took the Delaware Invitational last month and attained a national ranking as high of as 12th, all of which had never been done before in the team's history. Had it not been for the overblown and much ballyhooed arrival of Hurricane Gloria, UMass probably would have won the cancelled UMass Classic as well.

The spikers sport a 31-6 record, marking the second time UMass has reached the 30-win plateau, and are only three victories away from surpassing their best regular season mark of 33-15, set in 1983. UMass is also ranked second in the Northeast region and is in serious contention for a bid to the Division II National Tournament. The Minutewomen won the state championship over the weekend and are also in excellent position to receive a bid to the East Coast Athletic Conference playoffs.

Put all of this together and what you come up with is a successful season by anyone's standards and the

continued on page 11

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:

Today- Volleyball: Springfield College, Boyden Gym, 7 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 44 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Wednesday, November 6, 1985

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

GRAY DAY—Susan Vickie, a freshman elementary education major, reflects on the dreary weather yesterday from a balcony of Grayson Dormitory.

S. African journalist criticizes home press

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

Due to the absolute power of the white government, the press in South Africa is becoming less and less equipped to tell the people about the growing state of crisis there, South African journalist Benjamin Pogrund said yesterday during a visit to the University of Massachusetts.

"The white rule is not about to fall apart," Pogrund said. "The white rulers are totally ruthless, and their power is totally awesome.

"They have a firepower which has hardly been seen, and now, with the ghettos being closed off to the press, especially the foreign press, the government is allowing itself to move in and smash down the revolt.

"That won't make it go away, however," he said.

Pogrund, who describes himself as "the late deputy editor of the late Rand Daily Mail," was on campus as the guest of the Journalistic Studies Program. He spent the day visiting with students, faculty and area journalists.

When the Rand Daily Mail closed in April of this year after 83 years of publication, Pogrund said he found himself wondering about his future. After his lecture tour to the University of Massachusetts, the University of Michigan and the University of California at Berkeley, Pogrund said he plans to be the international editor of a new newspaper in London.

In 1957 when Laurence Gandar became editor of the Mail, a change came over the atmosphere and attitude at the paper. "He was a total maverick. He wrote articles analyzing the South African situation...He was brutally critical of apartheid, and he had a unique writing pen," Pogrund said of Gandar.

The Mail was one of the first papers to actually speak out against government policies in his country, he said.

Pogrund, who has contributed articles to the Boston Globe, said it was "unique to work in an environment where the government is aimed against you."

The Mail began to change at this time and "in due course the entire South African press was affected."

"The press reflects the society in which it exists," Pogrund said. "And the same is true in South Africa. Both the society and the press there are in a state of decline. The people know very little, and with the current decline, there is even less knowledge."

There is a division, he said, between the English speaking press and the Afrikaaner speaking press in South Africa. "There is no real press in South Africa to express the views and grievances of the majority."

Seventy-two percent of the population in South Africa is black.

There is a strong white control of the black press, but the black editorial voices are growing stronger too, Pogrund said.

"Radio and television are also propaganda organs. They are state owned government mouthpieces.

"The newspapers are white papers, written for and by whites; the ads are written for and by whites," he said. "Blacks are barely featured in the press except when they participate in riots and when crimes are committed."

The government is using various laws and regulations to suppress everyone with an opinion against apartheid, Pogrund said.

Pogrund has been convicted under the Suppression of Communist Act in his country for having and holding obscene and indecent publications. When searching Pogrund's house near Johannesburg, the police found several 25-year-old newspapers he was using for research purposes. The papers had been banned by the government.

"The rights of the press crumbled with the rights of the people."

Pogrund was instrumental in helping Makaziwe Phumla Mendela, daughter of imprisoned South African political leader Nelson Mendela, come to the University for graduate studies.

Apartheid protest in red ribbons

By ANITA ROYE
Collegian Correspondent

More than 16,000 red ribbons symbolizing the blood shed in the struggle against apratheid in South Africa have been distributed at the University of Massachusettts since September.

Director of Third World Affairs Sherwood Thompson, which is responsible for the campaign, said the white government apartheid policy which subjugates blacks and takes away many of their civil rights is "the most brutal, dehumanizing and oppressive system of governmental control over people that exists today."

Thompson said the purpose of the campus-wide campaign is to alert people to the activities in South Africa and to encourage ribbon wearing until the state of emergency is lifted. He said the ribbons "remind people of violence and oppression and demonstrate opposition to the apartheid movement."

The University has taken an aggressive role in the effort against apartheid and is in the forefront of the movement.

The national movement started in New York this past summer by the African National Congress and has since spread to campuses around the country.

AndrewLemieux, a sophomore thought and political economy major, has worn a ribbon since September. "I don't think it's right to deny basic human rights, which is what apartheid does," he added, adding that he wore the ribbon so others would ask questions and show an interest in the movement.

Tom Hancock, a junior enroled in the University Without Walls program, said he wore the ribbon as a visible statement against a philosophy "that I don't approve of." Hancock said he would continue to wear the ribbon until apartheid was abolished.

Smith College which has also been involved in the anti-apartheid movement distributed 300 ribbons for individual wear, and has also wrapped the ribbons around trees on campus.

Suzinne Pak, spokeswoman of the Ethical Investment Committee at Smith College, said the campaign has been well recieved and rallies for divestment are being planned.

Pak said a proposal for divestment has been given to the Smith College Board of Trustees. A response is guaranteed at the next trustees meeting in February.

Amherst College plans to distribute 1500 ribbons today which are expected to go quickly.

Karen Gardner, co-chair of the Black Student Union at Amherst College, said the school is currently assembling materials such as ribbons and literature for immediate release.

The college also plans to conduct divestment protests sometime in the near future.

Local man fights hunger

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

The fund-raising campaign started out as "Pioneer Valley for Africa Month" when a Northampton resident Doug Rose wanted to help those who are starving, but has since sprouted into "Massachusetts for Africa Month" for November as declared by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

"It has gone farther than I ever thought it would go," Rose said about the success of his crusade to help the hungry.

This month Rose has recruited businesses from all over Massachusetts to help contribute whatever they can to those who are starving. Rose said the participating groups include the AFL-CIO, the New England Patriots, the Boston Celtics and the Massachusetts Federation of Teachers who are running the program through the public schools.

Locally, the UMass Hunger Task Force and Oxfam America are allowing students to help the hungry by giving up their dinners in the dining commons on Nov. 21. Proceeds will go to Oxfam. This is the sixth year that they will be organizing the fast. In addition, an Oxfam representative will be coming to campus to address the hunger problem in the world.

"I think it will be better for America," Rose said, adding that Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., will bring the issue of a national hunger fund-raising effort into Congress. Rose said he thinks it is the first kind of fund-raising to be organized statewide. He said the money raised will go directly to the organization.

continued to page 5

Inside:

Senate Speaker feels the heat.....3
After Hours* fun.....9
UMass sports enjoy success.....16

"I don't recall agendas being this long."
—Senate member Joe Sparks in reference to the seven page agenda for tonight's senate meeting.
See story on page 3.

WORLD/NATIONAL

Alleged spy returns home free

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vitaly Yurchenko, the Soviet spymaster who slipped from the CIA's grasp after three months in America, was granted permission to return to Russia yesterday after assuring U.S. authorities he was not being forced by the Soviet Union to go home.

Yurchenko, clenching his hands over his head like a victorious boxer, left the State Department after a half-hour meeting and declared, "Yes, home!" when asked if he was heading back to the Soviet Union.

With four Soviet diplomats on one side and six State Department officials, including a doctor, on the other, Yurchenko had his first face-to-face meeting with U.S. authorities since he walked away from their custody over the weekend, after three months in the United States.

Yurchenko had appeared at an extraordinary news conference at the Soviet Embassy Monday, charging he had been abducted in Rome, drugged and pumped for secrets in CIA hideaways. The State Department denied the charges, saying Yurchenko had voluntarily defected.

As a result of his meeting yesterday, "the United States government has decided that Mr. Yurchenko's decision to return to the Soviet Union was made of his own free will, and that he is now free to leave the United States," State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said.

"In arranging this meeting we wanted to satisfy ourselves that Mr. Yurchenko truly did wish to return to the USSR and that he made this decision freely and of his own volition," Redman said.

He said the meeting was held in an atmosphere free of the possibility of Soviet coercion and the Yurchencko was told he would not be subject to U.S. detention or returned to Soviet custody if he didn't want to be.

The doctor determined there was no observable evidence Yurchenko had been drugged, "which could affect his behavior, or that he was not competent to make his own decision to return to the USSR," Redman added. He said the doctor made no direct physical examination of Yurchenko but was "completely satisfied."

AP Laserphoto

An array of fires break out in a petroleum refinery in Mont Belvieu, Texas after an explosion rocked the compound yesterday.

Secession of Roxbury suggested

BOSTON (AP)—Two residents are organizing a campaign to convince the city's Roxbury section to secede from Boston, saying minorities in the predominantly black area would have more control over public services and development in their neighborhood if it were a separate municipality.

Curtis Davis, a state employee, and Andrew Jones, a freelance television producer, said they began investigating the possibility three years ago because city officials were not addressing major problems in the area such as crime, poor city services and little community control over development.

"After the 1983 mayoral vote was counted and the Mayor Raymond L. Flynn plurality declared, the tally revealed that challenger Mel King had lost the election with 99 percent of the black vote," Jones told The Boston Globe in an interview published yesterday.

Shuttle crew returns to tests

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Space shuttle Challenger's international crew of eight packed up yesterday for their landing in California, but five of the astronauts face more intensive medical tests on the ground after the end of the science mission.

Mission commander Henry Hartsfield and pilot Steven Nagel, assited by astronaut James Buchli, will guide the stubby-winged shuttle to a landing at 12:44 p.m. EST today on a dry lakebed runway at Edwards Air Force Base.

Two West German scientists, Reinhard Furrer and Ernst Messerschmid, Dutch physicist Wubbo Ockels and American science astronauts Bonnie Dunbar and Guion Bluford worked rapidly yesterday to complete the 76 experiments crammed inside the 23-foot-long Spacelab module in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Messerschmid and Bludford, the "red team" in the two-shift, around-the-clock operation of Spacelab, will close out the final experiment just eight hours before landing. The "blue team" of Furrer, Miss Dunbar and Ockels will awaken from their sleep in space just in time to help complete the stowage.

Preparations continue for the summit

MOSCOW (AP)—Secretary of State George P. Shultz wound up 14 hours of "vigorous discussion" with Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other Kremlin officials yesterday, saying the talks failed to narrow the superpowers' differences on arms control.

Shultz said that despite "serious disagreements, the two sides had pledged to work hard in preparing the Nov. 19-20 summit meeting between President Reagan and Gorbachev in Geneva.

"Basically, we have a lot to do," Shultz said.

In a news conference before departing for an overnight refueling stop in Iceland, Shultz tempered his downbeat appraisal of the two-day visit by observing "we see some positive developements" in the U.S.-Soviet relationship.

But he was unable to cite any major area of reconciliation or prospect of an accord for the first superpower summit in more than six years.

In fact, Shultz said, he would not bet on an agreement in principle between the two leaders on how to pursue a treaty to curb the arms race.

Philosophically, Shultz said "life does not end in the middle of November." He said the possibility of additional meetings between the leaders was "before us but nothing has been settled."

He said later the four-hour session was "a vigorous exchange that covered everything."

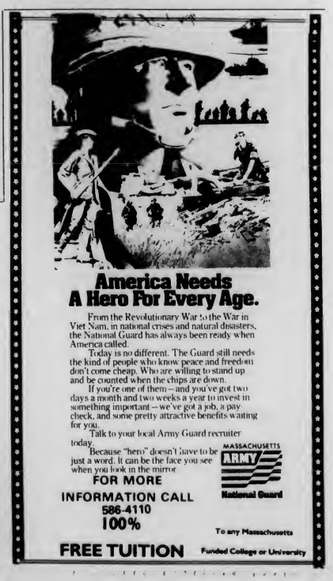
He twice described the talks as "frank," which in diplomatic parlance often means considerable disagreement.

But Shultz said, "It was far from a shouting match. The discussions were straight-forward, always quite cordial and I think they reflected our desire to use the time well."

Besides arms control, Shultz singled out regional issues and human rights.

"As we broke up we wished for success at the upcoming Geneva meeting and beyond and pledged to each other that we would work hard for continuing preparations."

Today's Staff



Night Editor	David Summersby
Copy Editor	Kelly Sieger
Layout Technician	Ansel Zinter
Photo Technician	Paul Desmarais
Production Supervisor	Ansel Zinter
Production:	Peter Forget, Mark Parker, Tony Beugless, Nancy Rivers, Karlin Isele

PLEASE NOTE: Due to technical difficulties, today's Collegian has been reduced four pages and the bi-weekly living section does not appear. The section will return in two weeks.

CORRECTION: In yesterday's apartheid story on the Black Affairs page, Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity was incorrectly credited with organizing a signature drive. Omega Psi Fi fraternity is organizing the drive.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

"GIMME SHELTER"—A student and his umbrella head for the dry sanctuary of the Campus Center during yesterday's downpour.

Senate speaker under fire

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

A resolution asking the Undergraduate Student Senate to present a vote of no-confidence and request the resignation of Senate Speaker John Ruddock is on tonight's agenda, causing controversy among senators over the motivation behind the issue.

Ruddock, responding to the resolution, said certain "people are trying to unload a lot of problems with the senate on me."

The resolution's sponsor, Jordan Rosner, chair of the Budget Committee, said since ruddock has been speaker, the senate meetings have run inefficiently and too many motions have been left undebated. Ruddock has been condescending to people, has coached senators on motions during meetings, and misread many by-laws, Rosner said.

Ruddock said, "It's insulting to think that people who are relatively new to the senate are questioning my experience with parliamentary procedure. People fail to realize that I've been in the senate since 1981."

Citing the lack of respect members give each other in the senate, Ruddock said, "Respect is something you get after you've given it." He said respect is not evident because certain senators "countantly monopolize meetings with dilatory comments," and "parliamentary procedure is only as strong as people are willing to abide by it."

Joe Sparks, co-chair of the Rents and Fees Committee, said he looks forward to the no-confidence vote tonight. Ruddock, he said, has an "inability to facilitate a meeting," and "does not relate well to the senate at all."

A no-confidence vote of Ruddock has already passed in the Governmental Affairs and Budgets committees, and a similar vote is predicted to pass in two more committees by tonight.

"I think they (senators) haven't given him (Ruddock) a chance since day one," said Dave Martin, the communter area spokesman. "People who should resign should be senators giving him the no-confidence."

Inefficiency questioned; meetings disruptive

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

The agenda for tonight's Undergraduate Student Senate meeting is seven pages long, almost three times longer than usual because of semester-long inefficiency in senate debate.

A big question facing the senate now is why this problem has arisen and what can be done to alleviate the problem.

The members of the Governmental Affairs and Budgets committees, who overwhelmingly gave a no-confidence vote to Senate Speaker John Ruddock, evidently believe that the speaker is contributer to the inefficiency.

Many other senators said they feel the problem of inefficiency is the senat'e habit of disruptive actions during debate, which come in the form of personality clashes and filibustering.

At last week's senate meeting, only three motions were approved, and the meeting was adjourned after "a threat of danger" was sensed by Ruddock. Ruddock said he called for adjournment after a senator had some papers grabbed from his possession and when he sensed a danger to the assembly as a whole.

The agenda is seven pages, Ruddock said, because of "filibustering, petty bickering and abject disregard for order."

Whatever the reasons behind it, there remains an agenda that many senators said is far too long and there is concern of the agenda expanding further in the coming weeks.

"I don't recall agendas being this long," said Joe Sparks, co-chair of the Rents and Fees Committee. "Other speakers have had to deal with obstacles but they've kept the ball rolling."

Students trying peaceful tactics against fee

By SEAN CASEY
Collegian Staff

After meeting with Graduate School and University officials last Friday, an ad-hoc committee of the Graduate Student Senate said it would change slightly its plans to protest mandatory payment of the Authority Fee by graduate students.

The committee will now work on a detailed proposal to present to Chancellor Joseph D. Duffy and the vice-chancellors concerning the fee, which graduate students oppose paying since it includes fees for dormitories and dining commons buildings used almost exclusively by undergraduates.

The senate agreed to urge graduate students and any other concerned citizens to request an itemized breakdown of the Authority Fee (formerly called the Universal Resource fee) from Associate Chancellor H.J. Littlefield's office.

A proposal to flood the Housing Assignment Office with Prince House applications was dropped as it was considered a "guerrilla tactic" the senate could use later if their current plans were being stalled or unaddressed by the administration.

Other actions such as witholding grade sheets by TA's or not paying the Authority Fee in March are still actions the committee will consider, but only as a last resort if other attempts failed.

Graduate School Dean Samuel F. Conti vehemently opposed these ideas and threatened to fire anyone who carried through with them, said committee chairman John Hayes.

"The graduate school officials agree with us inprinciple, so we really have to convince the chancellor and the vice-chancellors," Hayes said.

"We're not going to hurt anyone now, we just have to show we're organized and put pressure on the right people so that they'll change the policy," he said.

Vehicular incidents top police reports

A 1978 Pontiac received over $1000 in damages when it was hit by a 21-year-old woman driving a state van Monday on the corner of Stockbridge Road and North Pleasant Street, University of Massachusettts police said.

The woman pulled out of an intersection and hit the Pontiac. She was cited for failure to use care in starting out, police said.

In other police reports:

- A 1983 Dodge Charger valued at $6500 was reported stolen Monday morning from P Lot. The car was locked and there was a spare ignition key left in the glove compartment of the car.
- A Toyota received $300 in damages when it was hit by an unknown vehicle Monday morning in lot 65.
- A pocketbook containing miscellaneous identification and a small amount of cash was stolen from a PVTA bus Monday morning. The owner left the purse on the bus and she called the PVTA Bus Company shortly after realizing it was missing. The company had not found it.

The pocketbook was lost somewhere betweeen the Lederle Graduate Research Center and the Army ROTC building.

- A New York license plate was reported stolen Monday night from a 1982 Toyota parked in lot 43.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Engineering dept. plans joint admissions program

By NANCY KLINGENER
Collegian Staff

A new joint admissions program with the purpose of increasing access to the school of engineering will be run next year by the University and selected community colleges.

"It'll give incoming students a choice between coming directly to the University and spending their first two years at a community college," said Melton Miller, assistant dean of engineering for undergraduate affairs.

Students will be dually admitted to the University and one of six community colleges. After completing two years at the community college, they can transfer to the University's engineering school as juniors.

"We're interested in giving students who are qualified to come to the University's college of engineering an opportunity to start at a community college," Miller said. Students will not be eligible for this program unless they have been accepted to the University under the normal admissions standards. "It's not a second rate program," he said.

Benefits for potential students include the lower cost of community colleges and being able to live at home.

Holyoke, Berkshire, Springfield Technical, Greenfield, Northern Essex, and Cape Cod Community college will participate in the program as "the ones that have programs the first two years that are equivalent to our first two years," said James John, dean of the school of engineering. "We are doing this with community colleges who can guarantee that our students, because they're still our students, can transfer to become junior engineering students" at the University, Miller said.

continued on page 5

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

STUDENT DONOR—Sophomore communications major Colleen Clark gives blood yesterday in the Student Union Ballroom under the supervision of Red Cross staff member Peg Tiley. The Red Cross blood drive here ends tomorrow and officials are hoping to collect 500 pints.

JUSTIN RYAN'S
50 cent drinks WED....
the Blitz Continues
with PARTY NITE
FIFTY CENT DRINKS!
BACK to BASICS with the best party music!!
More Romantics, Madonna, Springsteen, Prince,
Billy Idol, Chaka Khan - Guaranteed!!!!
Watch for our "Theme Parties" coming soon!!!!

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!
Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 464 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2661
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1720 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-5417
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 5A So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-7611
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans, Call Today

H&O Presents:
Frank Fowle
Homeric Bard
THE WILL OF ZEUS
Wed. 7:30 p.m., Nov. 6
Bartlett 65 No Charge

CLASSICAL JAZZ REGGAE BLUES ROCK FOLK SOUL
#1 IN THE VALLEY!
DYNAMITE RECORDS
Maxell XLII90 $2.00
TDK SA90 — $2.00
New, Used,
Buy, Sell and Trade
584-1580
THORNES
150 MAIN ST. NORTHAMPTON

Tumatel
A Discounted Long-Distance Telephone Service for Residential Students
DORM STUDENTS!
Don't overpay on your toll calls!
See us in the Campus Center Concourse this week.
The Univ. Telecomm Dept.

LIBERAL ARTS CAREER WEEK
SPONSORED BY
UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE
NOVEMBER 6, 1985
November 6 - LIBERAL ARTS CAREER FAIR
Campus Center Auditorium - 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Over 30 corporations and government agencies will be participating.
Entry level positions in technical writing, management training programs, marketing, public relations, health care, personnel and more.
DON'T FORGET TO BRING RESUMES!!!
UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE - WE MAKE IT HAPPEN!
UPS
University Career Center
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
545-2224

★ hunger

continued from page 1

"I think that is good because it gives people more confidence if they know where it is going."

Rose said he thinks the benefit of Hunger Month will be in making people more aware of the problem and to get people working together. "People from all walks of life are contributing. Everyone from the police department to sports teams are involved.

"Individuals can make contributions to famine relief and organize projects themselves," he said. "Any kind of fundraising and contributing would be great."

Rose arranges for businesses and benefits by looking through the phonebook and making phone calles to everything with "Massachusetts" in front of it. He started everything in the Pioneer Valley by going around to businesses and asking for a percentage of a day's profict. Rose said he has received from 5 to 33 percent. He then persistently called the governor's office until Dukakis signed the proclamation for November to be Massachusetts for Africa Month.

After the month was declared, he quit his job to devote all of his time to the cause. "I have aborrowed all of the money that I can borrow." Rose said he is living "here and there," but does not regret a thing because "I feel fortunate in relation to others. Stuff can get done if peopie do it," he said.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

PAPER BREAK—Students read the Collegian while waiting for companions outside Berkshire Dining Commons yesterday.

SMU bans water

DARTMOUTH (AP)—Officials of Southeastern Massachusetts University have banned the drinking of campus water until tests have determined whether it was responsible for the stomach cramps and vomiting suffered by more than 300 students in the past week.

School officials brought bottled water onto the campus yesterday for the 5,500 students.

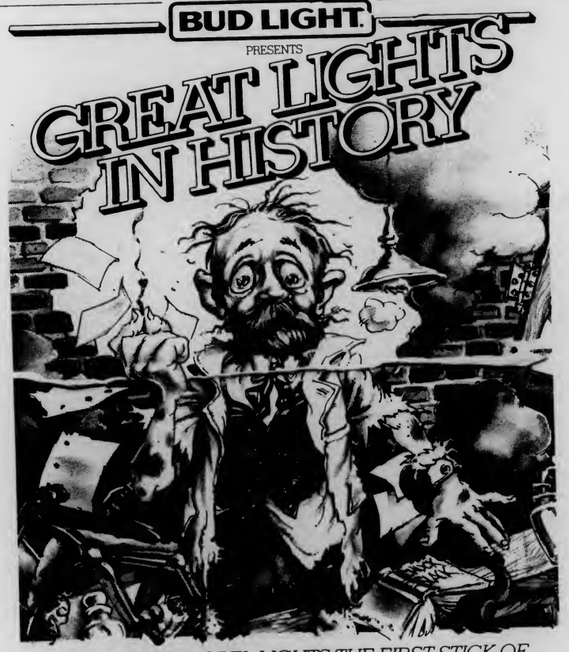
The college banned the water Monday after tests by the state Department of Public Health indicated the water might be responsible for the still-unidentified illness, according to SMU spokesman Greg Stone.

No contaminants have been found in the water, but the school is taking measures to prevent other students from coming down with the illness, the symptoms of which usually disappear within 24 to 48 hours, he said.

Health and school officials fear the illness might be a type of virus that flourishes under the same conditions as a strain of hepatitis so they are asking all students living in dormitories to recieve inoculations against the strain as a precaution, Stone said.

No hepatitis cases have been uncovered, but the hepatitis has a month-long incubation period so any possible cases wouldn't be apparent yet, he said.

More than 300 students were stricken by what officials originally thought might be a type of food poisoning last Wednesday night. While they have been recovering without problems, another 50 cases were reported on Monday, Stone said.



★ engineering

continued from page 3

Miller said that the program is "administratively unique" because the students will be admitted to the University from the start of their freshman year. "Our goal is to intergrate them gradually through the advising process."

The first students enrolled in the program will begin in September of 1986. "I think we'll first of alls ee how many students are going to do this. We might have 40 or 50 the first year," John said.

BUD LIGHT
PRESENTS
GREAT LIGHTS IN HISTORY

1867. ALFRED NOBEL LIGHTS THE FIRST STICK OF DYNAMITE, AND NEVER GETS ANOTHER MOMENT'S PEACE.
But he got a big bang out of his discovery.
And you'll get a bigger bang out of discovering Bud Light. It's the less-filling light beer with the first name in taste.
Get on the stick. Hurry to the bar of your choice and bring out your best. By discovering today's great light. Bud Light.
EVERYTHING ELSE IS JUST A LIGHT.

Family Resale Clothing
ONCE MORE WITH FEELING
Affordable prices for all your Winter Clothing needs.
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant
Amherst, MA
549-3772

CARROLL TRAVEL
15 Cowles Lane, Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8931
Hours: Mon-Fri 8:30-5:30; Sat 9-1; Thurs til 7:30
SKI EUROPE
Two Great Tours To Choose From:
Feb. 27th ENGELBERG
Mar. 14th BADGASTEIN

Tours include: round trip air transportation from Boston, accommodations, two meals daily, taxes and gratuities. Feb. 27th tour includes 7 day ski pass!
Call now for reservations!

Room Choosing Process for Spring 1986

Please read carefully

RESERVING YOUR CURRENT ROOM ASSIGNMENT

If you intend to keep your present residence hall assignment, personally sign up with your Resident Director/Residence Hall Manager on Tuesday, November 12. Deadline for Room Reservation is Tuesday, November 12.

IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR PRESENT RESIDENCE HALL ASSIGNMENT WHILE ALSO SUBMITTING A PREFERENCE FORM YOU MUST DO THE FOLLOWING.

1. Sign up for the same room on Tuesday, November 12 or a different room on Wednesday , November 13.
2. Fill out a Preference Form. On the Preference Form in the lower right corner is a box you must "check" if you wish to be returned to your residence hall if your residence hall or area choices cannot be met.

YOUR OLD RESIDENCE HALL ASSIGNMENT IS GUARANTEED ONLY IF YOU DO BOTH STEPS.

CHANGING YOUR ROOM ASSIGNMENT

If you wish to move to another room in the same residence hall, you must sign up with your Resident Director/Residence Hall Manager. DEADLINE FOR MOVING WITHIN A RESIDENCE HALL IS WEDNESDAY, November 13.

If you wish to move to another residence hall, you must complete a Housing Preference Form. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING COMPLETED HOUSING PREFERENCE FORMS TO THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE IS FRIDAY, November 22. Preference Forms may be dropped off at any Area Operations Office (Southwest-JFK Lobby, Northeast/Sylvan-Johnson, Central/Orchard Hill-101 Baker).

ROOMMATE REQUESTS

If you wish to move to another residence hall to room with a student already assigned to that residence hall, you must together complete a ROOMMATE REQUEST FORM. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING ROOMMATE REQUEST FORMS TO THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE IS THURSDAY, November 14.

If you wish to become roommates with a student in a residence hall to which neither of you is currently assigned, you must each complete a Housing Preference Form. These forms should be identical (with the exception of the "check" box) and stapled together. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING HOUSING PREFERENCE FORMS IS FRIDAY, November 22.

IN-HOUSE ROOM REQUEST FORMS

If, during the regular In-House Room Choosing period, you were unable to secure a particular type of accommodation (a particular single or double room), please contact your Resident Director/Residence Hall Manager and fill out an In-House Room Request Form. Rooms that become available during Intersession will be assigned according to seniority, to those students who have filled out this form and returned it to the Housing Assignment Office.

QUESTIONS?

If you still have questions about the Room-Choosing process, please contact the Housing Assignment Office (545-2100), 235 Whitmore. Thank you.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Let that free market flow

Stephen C. Erickson

Within the hallowed halls of our federal government of late, there has arisen quite a ruckus over the U.S. trade imbalance. One member of Congress after another is jumping onto the protectionist bandwagon. Pressing their faces into T.V. cameras, these would-be defenders of the American public are quick to chastise "the little yellow men" (Sen. Donald Riegle D-Mich.) and propose quotas to restrict imports while ignoring the consequences of such actions.

Without a doubt, there are U.S. industries that are hurting from stiff foreign competetion. As many a Congressman has pointed out, the trade deficit is partially a result of foreign subsidies as well as a variety of other protectionist measures imposed by foreign governments. But to blame our trade problems on these factors alone is misleading.

The high value of the dollar, which is brought about in no small measure by the debt on the federal deficit, serves to make the export of goods difficult while encouraging a flood of imports. It is politically convenient for Congress to blame the loss of American jobs on foreigners, but the issue is far more complex than our representatives in Washington would lead us to believe. Protectionism is a classic case of the cure being more painful than the disease.

First of all, we ought to consider the effect that protectionist measures would have on the American consumer. If the U.S. government enacts import quotas, then there will be fewer inexpensive goods in the U.S. and the consumer will be forced to pay higher prices. Middle class liberals may say that they are willing to pay more for consumer goods if it will protect American jobs, but those lower down on the economic scale can not afford such patriotic gestures.

In the long run, protectionism will probably not preserve American jobs either. Higher costs for components to U.S. products formerly manufactured abroad will result in making U.S. products more expensive and thus less competetive in a world market. The U.S. implementation of quotas might have the same effects in Japan that theirs have here. A new series of foreign trade barriers will arise which will either cause the further loss of U.S. jobs due to more restricted markets, the enactment of more U.S. quotas or subsidies, or some combination of these.

Of all the government-sponsored protectionist measures, government subsidies for failing industries are the most ridiculous of all, because such policies require the tax payer to fund inefficiency. Although members of Congress may wail and moan about the unfairness of foreign governments subsidizing their native industries, what is actually happening is that foreign tax payers are subsidizing the cost of what Americans pay for imported consumer goods. For example, the British taxpayer may be footing a portion of the bill for a pair of shoes a poor child in the U.S. is buying. It's better that the British taxpayer do this than the American taxpayer through expanded Welfare programs.

As the debate over protectionism rages, we ought to realize that the United States already has plenty of protectionist mechanisms in its trade policies. Dairy and tobacco subsidies represent a substantial chunk of federal money. We also have a good deal of import quotas already in place. The lowering of U.S. quotas for Latin American imports, for example, is a chief interest of those nations south of the U.S. border. Latin American countries desperately need U.S. markets, yet American liberals who raise impassioned pleas to help our bretheren in the developing world are the first to advocate protectionism.

The U.S. economy is one in transition, moving from a smokestack industrial base to a technological one. Some of our older industries are relocating to the developing nations where labor is cheaper, but insodoing, they are creating much need capital investment and jobs in poorer countries. Meanwhile, the traditional industries that remain in the U.S. have become leaner and more competetive, employing the new technologies of our changing industrial base.

Despite the loss of some jobs to foreign competetion, more Americans are at work today then ever before, reflecting new economic opportunities. Regardless of what special interests or some members of Congress say, a free trade policy, not protectionism, will protect the American worker.

Stephen C, Erickson is a Collegian Columnist,

Senate beset by quarrels

Guest/Wingle

A major crisis looms over the University of Massachusetts. October saw the board of Regents of Higher Education recommend to the governor that $255,000 in state financial aid be cut from the UMass budget request. This means that at least 500 students will find their access to education jeopardized. Some of your friends may be among those 500. You may be among those 500. This issue is important to you, isn't it? You'd think that this is a matter that your student senate is dealing with, right? Wrong.

Instead, your student senate is occupying itself with far more weighty concerns. This week's senate crisis is a part of a month-long parade of similar "crises" which have kept your representatives from addressing the financial aid, and many other dilemnas. The new problem is that some members of the Student Goverment Association have tried to make John L. Ruddock, the speaker, a scapegoat for the senate's inability to move through its agenda in an orderly, respectful fashion.

It's not the role of the speaker to function as a babysitter for the senate. However, upon wandering into a senate meeting, anyone will come to the conclusion that a babysitter is needed. The speaker has repeatedly made rulings based on Robert's Rules of Order, the guide by which procedural decisions are made. Members of the assembly, ignoring the authority given to the speaker in the rules, have chosen not to respect John Ruddock's legitimate rulings. Why has the student senate adopted rules which is has chosen to overlook? As a parliamentary official in the U.S. Congress said to us, "Rules of Parliamentary Procedure were written for assemblies that wish to abide by them."

The problem is not the fault of the whole senate. Instead, it is fostered by the same individuals who wish to place the blame on the speaker. They are creating a disruption and are then using that disruption to hamper the ability of the speaker to do his job. It is reasonable for the speaker to expect that individuals will not speak out of turn, interupt others, have shouting matches across the room, make rude and disrespectful comments, or engage in any other behavior which belittles the title bestowed upon senators by their constituents. Instead of blaming the presiding officer, you'd think that these people could simply clean up their acts.

The individuals we are refering to could act in a restrained, orderly manner. It's not that they don't recognize their infractions. The speaker has fulfilled his responsibilty to maintain discipline, by bringing these procedural violations to the attention of these people, many times. Obviously, the fact that they have continued to behave in this way can only be construed as a conscious attempt to disrupt proceeding and undermine the confidence that the rest of the SGA in John Ruddock's ability to maintain order.

So, who are these people and why are they doing this? Certain senators have conflicts with the speaker that are rooted in personal political ideology. John Ruddock, as a private individual, and as a member of this campus' Third World community, is involved in many extra-senate causes. His personal agenda has been labeled "progressive" by the senators in question.

The question we want to leave you with is this. Do you think this Senate is fulfilling its obligation to you? We feel that if these people treated your elected assembly with the respect that their constituents expect, then the business that the SGA was created to address could be acted on. John Ruddock is not the issue. The responsibility of senators to recognize your concerns and to conduct themselves properly is the matter at hand.

Alex Guest and Paul Wingle are assistants, respectively, to the SGA Presidents and SGA Speaker.

Letters

World needs peaceful dialogue

This past weekend a conference with great historical implications took place in Amherst. Approximately fifty people for Eastern and Western countries met to discuss peace activism. These citizens met to discuss the linkage of people on the grass roots level worldwide.

Among the delegates were seven Russians (from the independent peace movement—specifically the Moscow Group to Establish Trust Between the USSR and USA) who were recently exiled from the Soviet Union. These people tried to make proposals to their government and educate the public on the arms race. In the United States such actions would simply by ignored. In the Soviet Union, persons who engage in these activities are subjugated to imprisonment or detainment in mental institutions. In prison, people are subject to 16 hour work days (of hard labour), recieve only 1200 calories per day, and are often tourtured. In mental hospitals, patients are constantly interrogated and are forced to take psychoactive drugs.

Due to these oppressive conditions in the Soviet Union, the people are unable to have any public peace movement. Underground however, there are thousands of people communicating with one another to promote peace and human rights (this is very difficult and if caught can mean 3-17 years in jail). The citizens of the Soviet Union are people just like ourselves. They have different ideas, and different aspirations, as do United States citizens. However, they hold one hope in common, and that is to end the arms race and promote free thinking amongst all people. These are people who, unlike their government, are working for world peace through trust and global truth.

We, as citizens of the United States, have an incredible responsibilty to those in Eastern bloc countries. Although the effect we have on our own government may seem weak, we must support these people in their struggle. We have the ability to publically object to the arms race and the violation of other human rights. We must not further the oppression of the world's people by pointing thousands of warheads at them and forcing military spending; rather we should stand up and say no.

So, next time you feel too tired to go to the rally, have too much homework to write your representative, or feel you have no effect on anyone, remember your friends in the East.

Lisa Bohne
UMass Peacemakers

Inappropriate media coverage

We, the members of Cashin House Council feel the need to express our utter disgust and contempt for a news story aired on WMUA last weekend. As you may have heard, Fred Flintstone was struck down by gall boulders Friday night. This in itself was a total surprise, but the real shock was the WMUA reporter's coverage of the tragedy. In the middle of what must have been Wilma Flintstone's worst hour, the reporter was looking for her so that he could get a statement.

The heinous disregard for this woman's feelings is excusable; to pry a statement out of this shell of a woman is the worst form of self serving sationalism. The people of UMass deserve more than this reprehensibly irresponsible journalism.

Michael Gervasi
Sylvan

A thank-you for a tearing story

An open letter to the young woman who shared her abortion experience with us.

Thank you.

You made us all listen. "All" meaning those who relegated an abortion to just a "simple" operation, those who deny the human life within them (Quote: "I killed another human being"), those who do not understand the life-long ramifications and would shrug off the whole experience, those who have also chosen abortion who cannot speak as openly as yourself, and those who are continuing to work for life.

Ann Mancini
Amherst

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
"The BEST Chinese Food"

Boneless Bar-B-Q Spare Ribs
Small $2.80 or Large $4.60

Luncheon Specials
From $2.25 served 11 a.m. -3 p.m.

New Buffet & Sunday Brunch
Buffet Served 5-8
Mon.-Thurs.
Brunch Served
Sunday 11:30-3
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.25

1) Beef with Fresh Mushrooms
2) Chicken Fingers
3) Chicken Wings
4) Chinese BBQ Pork
5) Broccoli in Oyster Sauce
6) Sweet & Sour Chicken
7) Pan Fried Rice
8) Pan Fried Noodles with Chicken
9) Pan Fried Ravioli
10) Hot + Sour Soup

Luncheon Specials & Take-out Service
Full Cocktail Menu
Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11 p.m.

10 Belchertown Road
at Rte. 9, Amherst
256-0252

NOW OPEN
WORCESTER
MUNCHY
8AM TO 9PM
UNIVERSITY STORE

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

The Whately Inn
Quality Food To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
1 exit 3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open: Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

LOVE NOTES TERM PAPERS
TAKE HOME EXAMS
RESEARCH PROJECTS

The IBM Portable PC can help you with them all. With a built in amber display, two diskette drives, and 256 KB of main memory, the Portable PC runs the full range of IBM PC software.

To find out more about the Portable PC and what it can do for you, come to the IBM information booth in the Campus Center this Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

NO MATTER WHAT YOU'RE TYPING, WE'RE YOUR TYPE.
IBM

ARTS

SoHo by night: A strange After Hours

AFTER HOURS
Starring Griffin Dunne
Directed by Martin Scorses

By THOMAS HARRINGTON
Collegian Staff

Anyone who's ever been locked out of their car late at night in a strange city knows what a unique experience getting stranded can be.

You swear that if you ever make it home, you'll never leave your house again, and afterwards, you can't help describing your adventure to everyone you meet. It's this odd combination of excitement and fear that makes After Hours such a fun experience.

Our hapless hero is a bored computer operator (Griffin Dunne) who works in an office that is as antiseptically clean as his bright white suit. Suddenly, a chance encounter with a strange woman (Rosanna Arquette) not only sends him off on one of the most bizarre dates imaginable, but eventually strands him in nighttime SoHo like a lost child in the woods.

At first, getting home seems to be a simple matter, but an apparently unconnected series of events slowly but surely work against him, and his every sanctuary is violated, his every friend lost. It's a paranoic's delight.

You'd think that a story like this, especially directed by Martin Scorsese, (Taxi Driver) would be more morbid than fun, but Scorsese averts this by utilizing one of the freakiest casts possible. Griffin Dunne previously appeared as the living dead college student in American Werewolf in London, while Arquette has just received huge acclaim for her performance in

continued on page 11

Street survival: L.A. is the place

TO LIVE AND DIE IN L.A.
Starring William Peterson and John Pankow
Directed by William Friedkin

By JOE SHARTRAND
Collegian Staff

To Live and Die in L.A. cynically portrays corruption as a way of survival in the streets.

Director William Friedkin invokes a mood of hopeless despair and ferocious brutality. Thre is no innocence in his characters and if there is, it's quickly extinguished in the barbarous streets.

Richard Chance (William Peterson) and John Vukovich (John Pankow) are two secret service agents hunting for counterfeiter, Eric Masters (Bill Dafoe), Chance's friend and former partner. Chance is now out for revenge and will do anything to bring Masters to "justice." Everything snowballs as the two agents steal a large amount of money, accidentally kill an FBI agent, and generally ignore the rules in pursuit of their prey.

Many minor and major characters are blown away with shotguns and nobody, in the audience or on screen, seems to care. Chance and Vukovich are connected only by a bond of guilt in their lawless actions while attempting to apprehend Masters.

None of the characters have any morality, they kill and steal without thinking about it. They are merely pawns that move around in action sequences. These people are downers, as human beings and if it wasn't for the tremedously exciting car chase, this movie would be a downer too.

The action sequences are laid on thick, messy and fast, especially the car chase. This is the most exciting chase captured on film in a long while. The two agents rise against oncoming traffic to escape guns, trucks and a car full of armed men. This scene was carefully choreographed by the director and it shows. Trucks shoot out into the agent's path from nowhere as their car windows are shattered by shotgun bullets.

It is one of the few scenes in the film that actually causes thrilling shivers of excitement along the spine. If only Friedkin had spent as much time on the plot and characters as he did on that car chase scene. He would have had an excellent film.

continued on page 11

UMass Arts Council
CALL FOR GRANT PROPOSALS
Deadline for submission of grant proposals for single projects or events:
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8
Grant guidelines and applications available at Arts Council, the Student Activities office, or the Arts Extension Service.
Arts Council 125 Herter Hall 545-0202

Hampshire Business Machines Inc.
TYPEWRITERS
Sales, Service
Rentals
Brothers, IBM.
Smith Corona, etc
321 Main St.
Amherst
549-6177

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

TCYP has openings for the following positions:
FOSTER CARE -mature individuals and families to provide a stable environment for needy adolescents.
RELIEF STAFF - to provide respite hours to youths in foster care. Situations vary according to need.
ADVOCATES - willing to share living accommodations with young adults needing orientation into independent living situations.
Stipends, training and support are available for all openings. For further information, call B.J. Vanasse at Tri-County Youth Program, 16 Armory St., Northampton, 586-6210.

AMHERST CINEMA
Wednesday - Saturday
My Brilliant Career 7:00
Breaker Morant 9:00
Double Feature $3.00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

STARTS FRIDAY NOVEMBER 8TH
AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MARIAN McPARTLAND
Tuesday, November 12 8 pm
Tickets $13 | 11 | 9
A fascinating, inventive pianist playful, probing and provocative
John S. Wilson, New York Times

ASPEN WIND QUINTET
Thursday, November 14 8 pm
Winner—Naumburg Chamber Music Award 1984

MABOU MINES' "Cold Harbor"
A bleak & beautiful study of General Ulysses S. Grant
Sunday, November 17 8 pm
Tickets $12 | 10

Five College Students Half Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office. Springfield Civic Center, and TIXATIX Outlets
Call (413)545-2511 or 1-800-243-4642

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday, November 13

Over 30 companies represented!
Presentation, Luncheon and Career Fair
Luncheon tickets on sale in SOM lobby until Nov. 8

Those wishing to attend only presentation and Career Fair are welcome from 10:00 am - 5:00 pm, 1st floor Campus Center
Open to all students - any major!

Sponsored by the Undergraduate Business Club

Writing a Paper?
Want Help?
That's what we're here for.

THE WRITING CENTER

Mon, Thurs 7-9 pm:
Pierpont (SoWest)
Baker (Central)
Tues, Wed, Thurs 3:30-5 pm:
Bartlett 101
Wed 7-9 pm: Bartlett 101

SNACKSENSE

SOME FACTS ABOUT FAT

Functional Fat
Fat in your diet carries fat soluable vitamins such as A, E, D & K. It also provides essential fatty acids. Body fat protects body organs and provides insulation.

BUT, a diet high in fat is associated with an increased risk of heart attack, stroke and breast cancer. Fats are also high in calories.

How to cut down
- drink skim or low fat milk and use it in cooking too.
- substitute low fat yogurt for sour cream or use a mixture of the two.
- eat fewer fried foods and try more fruits and vegetables instead.

University Vending Services & University Health Services
Division of Health Education/University of Massachusetts/Amherst

---

MONEY MOTIVATED?

If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This

We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

The Hot Spot 99.3 presents
Comedian

SEEN ON THE TONIGHT SHOW, SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE, DAVID LETTERMAN & HBO

LOOKOUT RODNEY DANGERFIELD, EDDY MURPHY & GEORGE CARLIN 1985's HOTTEST NEW FUNNY PERSON

CATCH CHANNEL 22 & WHMP 99.3 "THE HOT SPOT" FOR DETAILS

$1.00 off W. College I.D.

Steven Wright

Friday, November 15, 8:00 p.m.
Springfield Symphony Hall

Tickets available at: Main Street Records, Northampton, U. MASS Fine Arts Center, All Stop & Shop Stores & the Springfield Civic Center Box Office.
MC/VISA 1-800-243-4842

A Hornor-Fox Production

We're Making A

All Unsold BOOKS
Are going back to the Publishers Now.
Buy Now.

the UNIVERSITY STORE's TEXTBOOK ANNEX @ physical plant bldg

MON-FRI 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

★ Hours

continued from page 9

Desperately Seeking Susan. Cheech and Chong of course, are Cheech and Chong. They are all talented comedians, and this gives the film a bite that regular dramatic actors wouldn't be able to deliver.

Some viewers are bound to find the character's frenetic behavior tiring while others will find it funny. The film's other major flaw is that it doesn't end, but simply stops at one point, giving the audience a slight disappointment.

Still, while it's going, After Hours is a terrific stop-and-go roller coaster ride, the kind you want to get right back on once it's ended. It's a film that comedy fans and horror buffs can enjoy equally.

★ L.A.

continued from page 9

Sex, blood and violence make this film especially palatable to teeny-boppers who are into this kind of thing, yet the despair and cynicism may limit its commercial appeal. The characters, though handsome are mentally hideous and would commit any depravity to get what they want.

Editor's note: For trivia buffs, Bill Dafoe who plays the villianous counterfeiter, Eric Masters, is brother-in-law of UMass journalism Professor Ralph Whitehead.

CAROL'S HEAD QUARTERS
Former Employees of LORDS & LADIES
Carol, Sandy and Ingrid
A Full Service Salon
- Manicures - Cellophane Colors - Perms
Reasonable Rates Walk-Ins

115 Russell St, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA
1-413-584-9948
Student Discount w/valid ID

JBs
HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES
11 am - 2 am 7 days
50 Main St. Amherst, MA 253-7018

JBs
HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

Daily Collegian
Advertising that works!!
Call: 545-3500

You spend your nights

TIME OUT

Great Lunches
Daily Specials

How about a day?
37 N. Pleasant St.

Open House at The Old Mill

Saturday, Sunday, Monday
Nov. 9, 10, 11

65 Montague Rd.
Route 63
1 mile north of UMass

START CHRISTMAS SHOPPING NOW AT OUR ONE STOP SHOP

Register for Door Prizes — Refreshments Served

STAR MARKET CO-OP OPPORTUNITIES

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WORKING IN AN EXCITING BUSINESS IN THE SUPERMARKET OPERATIONS FIELD?

Well, if you are, we at Star Market would like to talk to you. We offer an excellent co-operative education experience with outstanding benefits, pay (6.87 per hour to start), 40 hour work week, as well as excellent career opportunities as a result of a successful co-op experience. We are interested in talking to students from all majors.

We will be on campus for an informational session on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7 at 7:00 PM
in S.O.M. Room 112.
Interviews will be held on NOVEMBER 8.
To find out more about Star's Co-op program, please contact Co-op Program, 5-2224 today!

STAR MARKET SINCE 1915
An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

WAQY/WIXY present

OFFICIAL roller derby

EASTERN WARRIOR CHIEFS VS. WORLD CHAMPION L.A. T-BIRDS

Springfield Civic Center
November 7th-7:30pm
All Seats Reserved - $9.50, $8.50, & $7.50
On Sale at Civic Center Box Office, Datatix and Ticketron.
PHONE CHARGES: (413) 787-6600 or (203) 549-2622

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN. 19-24

TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET — SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING — HOTEL OR CONDO

ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES, MASTARRACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT.

HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199

FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP
Sign-up before Nov. 19th and get a free T-shirt.
LAGNAF 86
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 420 STUDENT UNION

Global Gifts of
Creswell Gallery
arts, crafts and gifts of color
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
10-5 Mon-Sat
549-6600

African Artifacts
• Cards
• Cloths
• Dolls
• Jewelry
• Posters
• Pottery
• Prints

DELANO'S

FINE FOOD
&
SPIRITS
Mon & Tues Nite
Free Taco Bar*
* 9 - till it lasts!
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Heineken
57 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
CHESS CLUB

GAMES CONVENTION NOVEMBER 8, 9, 10

Friday, Nov. 8, 7 pm Commonwealth Rm (Student Union): 5-Time US CHESS CHAMPION ARTHUR BISGUIER will simultaneously play all challengers. FREE to UM students, others: $5/board.

Saturday, Nov. 9, 9 am Student Union Ballroom: JOE SPARKS GRAND PRIX A 5-round nationally rated chess tournamnet with a projected prize fund of $1,000. Prize$ awarded at skill levels. FREE entry to UM students who preregister. Others $15-$30 depending on section.

Saturday & Sunday, Nov 9 & 10 Commonwealth Room: THE GRENADIER SOCIETY UM's miniatures and strategy games will be holding demonstration miniatures and board games; observers invited to participate. THE STRATEGY GAMES CLUB will be running various board, strategy and role-playing games tournaments. Prizes will be awarded. FREE ENTRY to UM students, others $3/day, $5/2 days.

Sunday, Nov. 10, 7 pm Commonwealth Room: 5-MINUTE SPEED CHESS TOURNAMENT

For information & registration contact
Joe Sparks at 545-0341, 420 SUB

Sponsored by the UMass Chess Club with help from the Grenadier Society, Strategy Games Club, BOG, CC Administration and SGA (hopefully).

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Surfman

by Bart

Weather

Today: Cloudy with periods of drizzle Highs will be 50 to 55.

Tomorrow: Mild and partly sunny with highs 55-60.

Menu

LUNCH
Chili Corn Chip Bake
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

BASICS LUNCH
Hearty Latin Stew
Grilled Cheese on Wheatberry

DINNER
Italian Sweet Sausage
Spaghetti, Tomato Sauce
Baked Corned Beef

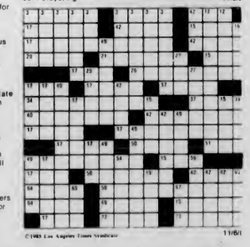
BASICS DINNER
Cheese Nut Loaf
Mushroom Sauce
Hi-Protein Spaghetti
Tomato Sauce

Investigative Reporting Workshop

Journalism professor Frank Falukner, formerly of the Springfield Daily News, will give an investigative reporting and public documents workshop at 7 p.m. tomorrow. This will count toward staff status for new people and it would do everyone some good to attend!

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Domingo
6 On — (equivalent)
10 TV messages
13 Surprised
14 Actress Thompson
15 SE Asian land
17 Dog constellation
19 Goya's duchess
20 Pearl Buck heroine
21 Basic military units
23 Inst. near Harvard
24 Dr.'s procedure
26 Cattle feed
28 Facial feature
31 Verdi opus
33 Sulky pace
34 Welder's fuel
37 Widespread
40 "Alice in Wonderland" creator
41 Birthstone for May
44 Desirable street?
45 Inauspicious
47 Egyptian goddess
50 Province of Piedmont
51 Authority
52 Unhappy state
55 A Gershwin
57 Bosh!
58 Glorify (someone)
60 Politician's prize?
64 Once again
66 Go downhill
68 Product of 50 Across
69 Arm bone
70 Two-wheelers
71 Brunched or munched
72 Program
73 Favor

DOWN
1 Cantina serving
2 Equal, in Dijon
3 Zola heroine
4 Suppose
5 In medias — —
6 Far East
7 Pangloe
8 Ornament
9 Least abundant
10 — mode
11 Firehouse mascots
12 Ferber novel
16 Fill to repletion
18 University at Montreal
22 Knight's title
25 Ring event
27 "Maltese Falcon" star
28 Drawstring
29 Athletic org.
30 Dogged
32 Eatery
35 Secret meeting
36 Morays, e.g.
38 Type of market
39 MacDonald's coster
42 Proposal
43 Moslem prince
46 Trattoria treat
48 Strong emotion
49 Spoof
52 Tie
53 Part of ancient Asia Minor
54 Domicile, for some
56 Spring month
59 "A Passage to India" director
61 Topographic feature
62 Shoshones
63 Army meal
65 Tiny
67 Certain tide

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

P	O	P	E		S	M	O	K	E			S	P	I
O	P	A	L		W	O	O	D	E	N		S	P	A
W	E	L	L		A	N	D		S	P	A	R	I
E	R	E		A	M	E	S		R	O	A	R	E
A	R	E	B	I			C	M	I	T	E
			A	L	S		C	H	O	L	E	R	I	C
H	E	I	S	E		A	R	I	U	S		I	D	I
E	S	P	Y		S	L	U	E	S		C	B	O	I
A	S	A		L	U	G	E	S		S	L	I
P	E	R	S	O	N	A	L		C	O	A
			E	L	I	D	E		C	A	I	N	Z	I
A	S	P	U	R	E		C	A	S	E		O	A
S	P	A	I	R	E	R	D	O	M	S		D	B	I
E	A	R	P		E	N	N	U	I		P	E	R	I
A	N	T			D	E	N	S	E		A	L	E	I

11/6/85

©1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

11/6/85

IBM

IBM Portable PC

$1075.00*

DEMONSTRATION
THIS WED. 11/6
THROUGH
FRI. 11/8

Orders will be taken on Nov. 18 - 21 this special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.

* Certain restrictions apply
see store for details

Located in
The Campus Center
545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE

★ UMass' success

continued from page 16

Don't forget the UMass cross country teams that are also ranked among the top five in New England or the women's tennis team which went 8-5 and did well in the region.

But maybe the biggest surprise has been the play of the UMass football team.

Written off by many after two straight 3-8 seasons, second-year head coach Bob Stull has rebuilt UMass into a New England power. The Minutmen are 6-3 and also talking playoffs. They have won four straight and beaten a number of teams that beat them in 1984. The mixture of veterans tired of losing and talented newcomers, including a freshman quarterback in Dave Palazzi that seems a shoo-in for many Rookie-of-the-Year honors, has sparked the football program back to where it belongs.

Fall 1985, so far a season to remember for UMass athletics, and with the tournaments coming, more glory may be on the way.

★ Delaware

continued from page 16

16-14 losers to Lehigh. UMass was an easy 27-3 winner over Holy Cross, just a week before Delaware played them.

Leading the Hens is quarterback Rich Gannon, the 1984 ECAC Rookie-of-the-Year. Gannon runs the complicated Wing-T offense with accuracy, completing over 55 percent of his passes and throwing for six touchdowns. He has also run for 279 yards, 86 against Temple. Gannon is Delaware's best athlete on offense.

On defense, sophomore middle linebacker Darrell Booker leads the Hens with 126 tackles. He had 23 against Temple and was named Defensive Player-of-the-Week in the ECAC. Free safety Tyrone Jones has five interceptions.

The Hens have a variety of defenses, but show a lot of multiple fronts with up to eight men rushing the passer. UMass will need to establish a short passing game to combat this.

Last year, UMass led 14-10 before the Hens ran off two quick scores to put the game away in the fourth quarter. The Minutmen are unlikely to pull a similiar fold this season, especially with what is on the line.

"It's the biggest game we've been in since I've been here," said UM head coach Bob Stull. "Delaware is an excellent team, but I feel good about our team this year. I'm anxious to see what happens."

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: UMass is ranked eighth in the latest Lambert Trophy poll, Delaware is fourth...a win will probably put UMass back into the national rankings for the first time in six weeks...Delaware's mascot is a chicken wearing a sweater with a "D" on it, inspiring it isn't.

What's at Stake

The Game: Delaware at Massachusetts, Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The Records: Both UMass and Delaware are 6-3 on the season.

What's at stake: Both teams must win the game to have any chance at making the Division 1-AA national playoffs in late November.

Why?: UMass can no longer make it as the Yankee Conference champion because the University of Rhode Island has clinched at least a tie for the conference championship and due to its 7-3 victory over UMass, would get the league's automatic berth. Delaware is considered an independent 1-AA team (it will become eligible for the Yankee Conference title next season) so an at-large bid is its only means of making the playoffs.

UMass' Chances for an At-Large Berth: Hard to say right now, UMass needs to win both its remaining games (Delaware and next Saturday at New Hampshire) to have any shot, with an 8-3 record, a winning streak of six in-a-row and one of the divisions best defenses, UMass would be given a good look by the selection committee. The Minutemen did have the division's fifth-toughest schedule coming into the season, do play in a tough conference and have lost three games by a combined 16 points (two of the losses coming without starting quarterback Dave Palazzi) so hope exists.

Mid-Semester Trip to

ISRAEL

January 5-19 (extra week option)

THE EXPERIENCE OF A LIFETIME

Discover Israeli Life and Culture.
Visit major cities
and a development farm.

Call now while places are still available.

Hillel 5-2526 Student Union 302

BUS DRIVING JOBS!!

Train in January to start work in February!
UMass Transit Service will hold an
APPLICATIONS MEETING
Thursday, Nov. 7th at 7:00 pm
CC 162

The first 125 people will receive applications.
You Must —
- be 18+ years old
- have had a driver's license for a year
- have 2+ semesters left at UMass
YOU POSTIVELY MUST BRING PROOF OF YOUR CLASS YEAR TO THE MEETING.
The ONLY acceptable proofs are schedule, transcript, or letter from the Registrar.
For more info, call 545-0056. UMTS is an AA/EO employer.

UMASS SKI CLUB

Ski Sale Meetings

Thurs. Nov. 7

4 pm CC Rm 165

7 pm Hamden Commons, SW

All those interested in working the sale must attend one of the above!
For more info call 545-3437

PART-TIME OPPORTUNITIES
MAKE YOUR OWN SCHEDULE!

If you know the basics of home construction or weatherization (or even if you consider yourself to be "handy around the house"), DMC Energy needs your talent to motivate area home owners to save energy.

We have an immediate need for part-time energy auditors. These are flexible positions which put you in charge of your schedule. This is an ideal opportunity for anyone who wishes to work, but needs a part-time position which won't interfere with classes. No sales involved.

There is a three week training course (part-time). You will be paid a stipend of $27.00 per each training day. Upon successful completion of training and passing certification tests, you will be given a bonus of $125.00. Another bonus of $125.00 will be given you upon completion of one month's service, provided you have performed quality work.

There is a $16.00 payment for each audit completed, plus a $5.00 expense reimbursement for each completed audit,

Our next training class begins on November 12. If you are interested in the positions or would like additional information, please contact Ms. Temple at 1-800-332-2754 as soon as possible.

YVONNE'S
CARRIBBEANA RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials
with Super Island Vegetarian and Regular dishes
Prices from $2.50 and up
50¢ DRAFT BEER
with all lunches
Route 9, Hadley, same block as Soda City
586-4389
Lunch Hours 11:30-3:00 pm Monday - Friday
Dinner Hours 5:00-10:00 pm Every Night

Resume
Typesetting

*High quality
*Letter perfect
*Customized layouts
*Superior to all other methods

Contact SGA Communications Office
304 Student Union
Ed Cunningham or Jim Emmett
5-1977

SGA Communications

Second Street

Wednesday Nov 6th
TONIGHT
A big blues double bill
John Lee Hooker
and the Coast to Coast Blues Band
plus
John Hammond
only $8.00 at the door

Tomorrow Night
Boston's favorite lady rockers
Girls Night Out

Wed Nov 13th
Reggae Rockers
Loose Caboose

Thursday Nov 14th
Miller Rock Series
SOUTHSIDE
JOHNNY
and THE JUKES

IN PERSON STRICTLY!
NORTHAMPTON MA
413 584 7771

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR
FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone

Petite - Regular and Half Sizes

WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes -
Nickels, Jazz and Paloma

Merchandise sold only
in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts
(20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Armenian Club Meeting Nov 6 6:30 pm CC 901 details about dance and party - old and new members always welcome!

IFSEA Meeting 7:00 Tonight in the Flint Cafe. Frank Banks of the Yankee Peddlar in Holyoke will be speaking.

DVP - Distinguished Visitors Program meeting. tonite Wed Nov 6 6:30 pm in the Daken Room, Student Union!

Animal Rights Coalition meeting today in the Campus Center room 177 be there or be square

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7393

72 Duster new heater, brakes runs great 550 firm 549-1269 or 6-6042 Paul

1977 Red Chev Camaro good condition AM FM cassette stero 2 extra new tires $900 or BO call 549-0462 evenings

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1977 Honda Accord, 5 speed, AC, AM/FM cassette, 30* mpg, new water pump, brakes, excellent mechanically, dependable transportation, $975 or best 548-9395

BUS DRIVING JOBS!

UMass Transit Service is looking for several part-time drivers. Applicants must be UMass students carrying 6 or more credits in a degree program. Class II license required. Starting pay is $4.60/hr. Call Bud or Jenny at 545-0056 for more info, or apply in person at the Bus Garage.

CALIFORNIA?????

Selling plane ticket to San Francisco leaving December 23 coming back January 12. $298 or best offer. Call Bill at 546-6277

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, luncheon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

"CASH"

Paying cash for your baseball cards call Mike 546-6105

DESPERATELY SEEKING WALLET

I lost my wallet in the Student Union off campus locker section on the third floor. Please return annonymously or personally to Mark Sands 296 E. Hadley Rd. Amherst, MA 01002 256-1725 Thanx

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt, on busline. 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Furnished bedroom in second story of a house. Close to town and campus. 162 Triangle St #2 call Gail anytime before 11:00 pm 549-7892

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month including, on busline, avail immediately 665-4964 leave message

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Bicycle built for two, Motobacane 10 speed. $400 1-467-7877

Brand new Harmon Kardon receiver and speakers BO 549-5185

Computer IBM 256k, color monitor mouse parallel, serial, printer NL. Q/graphics computer desk, printer stand software 549-5185

Safe Bustons 25-50% Off Just in time for winter - best prices you'll see all year. Join alone: $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions. Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 15

Ovation Accoustic 12-string guitar with built in microphone pick-up. Good condition. $400 or BO Alex 256-0645

Chevy Malibu 1973 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

13" Hitachi color TV, 1984 model, excellent condition. $160 549-2869

Government Homes from $1 (repair). Also delinquent tax property. Call 1-900-687-6000 ext. GH-9616 for information

GREAT YOGURT

Dannon, Stonyfield, Colombo, Mountainhigh, and Brown Cow yogurt. . .only at the People's Market

HELP WANTED

On campus non-work study MWF 7-noon call Jane at 546-6809

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar company. Interview by appointment contact David Stansel 584-5590

Santa needs elves ! Petite outgoing individuals needed to work 1-5 wkdys. Apply at Job Matching in Hampshire Mall or call 584-8889

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct. 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites. $5.00/hr. Call Carl at 665-3088 at any reasonable hour.

LAST CHANCE

Campus reporter for nat'l magazine seeks interviews with past or present students dating or married to profs. Please call Anne 549-5532 immediately!

LAST CHANCE FOR SPRING

Apply now for a full-time internship at the Legal Services Office for the Spring, 1985 semester. Aid attorneys in client interviews, preparation of court forms, maintenance of continuing caseload, giving advice and referrals and investigations and research. Up to 16 credits may be received from academic departments. Gain valuable experience in the legal profession while working on campus. No previous experience in the legal profession necessary; training provided. Deadline to begin the formal application process is November 6. For further information, call Mary at Legal Services, 545-1995

LOST

Lost eye glasses w/black case, please call Scott 6-4705

Set of keys in tan Fendi case lost. Very important! Please call Sheryl 256-1645

Lost: Luis Vuitton wallet, containing $$, credit cards, ID's. Of very sentimental value. Rewarded. Thank you.

Help! Glasses with pink frames lost on 10/28 somewhere around Wheeler. Please call Tricia * 6-4939

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mitch 256-1099 or 256-1664

HP41CV Calculator It's my life! If found please call 549-5606 Stevenc488

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassay Recording Studio offer 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

PERSONALS

Sugarbush Ski Week! Hotel $149 see Ski Club now 545-3437

Mrs George Michaels! How is "T" you know I am jealous! Has your racquetball technique paid off yet? Love ya, The Wench

* To Boomer and the Double Agent *
* Thursday?! Rad?? We're scared!! *
* Earn some points fast, your reputations *
* are in jeopardy and so is OPUS! *
* Love *
* Kathy, Mollewit, & the Saucy Wench *

Madog - Force yourself to cheer up, we can't deal with depression. Besides you're our man, our myth and our microbiologist.

Happy B-day Anita C! Lets get wasted at M-college! We love you Maria Kim Diane

To everyone who did Ramones security on 11/1 - Thanks the show could not have happened without you - Joe!

Precious, Happy Anniversary!!! I love you. You will always be my little snuggiebunny! Ollie Hey Yogi! Don't forget, today is your birthday! Relax & celebrate it, you're only 21 once! Happy Birthday! love Cindy Bear. PS I won't tell Mr Ranger if you won't. . .

To S.J. you've made my Tues & Thurs interesting and fun! Thanks! 6884381

Ollie - Two months! Who would have ever guessed? And I like you even a whole bunch of more lots. Here's to things getting better and better. Liz

PL - Let's start all over again. I think we can do it! Still want to go to Fla. w/me in Jan! Who loves ya. . .babe? Friends forever--NW

MAX and OPUS (with a "T") remember, you're a senior! Love ya! MJ

Mark - There are two things to do at 4:30 in the morning - sleep and. . .read the Collegian love the Coward

Simpleton Bachelors: Dam broke. Let's meet. You plan. Respond ASAP. Campus mail. No personals. State phone number!

Meet me in Oxford next summer with the UMass Oxford Summer Program. Details, Alumni, Blides all available 7-30, Thursday, November 7, Herter 305, or stop by Bartlett 160.

Bob (Puppet) Jeniski and Rich Giordano!! Happy Birthday! con amore Catwoman

Tired of the party scene? Feel empty and without direction? Jesus said, "I have come that they may have life and have it more abundantly." To find out more, call Barrie or Nini at 253-7206 bet en 6 and 7 pm (Alliance Christian . ellowship, RSO).

MJF - Happy one year Sweetheart! How can I tell you how much you mean to me? I'll love you always, Shawn

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

REWARD

Lost two silver heart charms in Central read forget me not call 546-1106 Heather

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Fordham University or New York City Friday November 8. Please call Katie 549-2816

Desperately seeking ride RT Syracuse or Rochester weekend of 8th call 546-7498 anytime

Ride needed to Long Island or NYC Fri Nov 8 Michelle 546-6667

PLEASE! I need a ride to Portland, ME on Nov 7 or 8. Share $ call Janice at 584-5592

RIDERS WANTED

Cheap Bus to Boston, $9.50, long weekend, Friday 11/8, 12 noon. Call 545-2145

ROOMMATE WANTED

To share 6 bedroom house in Belchertown. Own room, on bus route (stops right in front), $165 plus utilities. Available immediately. Call 253-5290 after 5 pm

Apt to share pleasant reasonable sized apt located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

Typing, Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7652

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction modern word processor letter quality Steve 549-0048

Male bellydancer for hire. Parties, birthdays, etc. Reasonable rates 6-5579

Juniors, Seniors thinking about Graduate School? If, when, where, how. . .Contact the Pre-Graduate Advisor-CASIAC Machmer Hall E-21. For appointment call 545-2191 or 545-2192

Quality Typing by professional Reasonable rates Convenient. Call Heather 253-3163

SPINAL TAP IS COMING

UMass Premier of This is Spinal Tap Thurs Nov 7

SPRING BREAK '86

Register now for Spring Break '86 in Ft Lauderdale/Daytona Beach! Prices from $199. A $50 deposit guarantees you reservation (plus more!) Take until January 29 to pay balance. Pick your own roommates. Extras! Mike 546-9039

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 546-8822

WANTED TO RENT

Responsible male senior seeks room in quiet apt or house near campus spring semester. Okay to call late nights, early mornings 546-8143

2 females need room anywhere in North Amherst will take over January lease call 549-3809

SPORTS

77-14-2: This fall, Massachusetts teams are enjoying almost incredible success

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

77-19-2. In the five major fall sports this fall (football, men's and women's soccer, field hockey and volleyball), the University of Massachusetts has gone a combined 77-19-2. With little doubt, this is the best overall season at the school in athletic success.

All five of those teams are now (or have been) nationally ranked, all five are in the top three in their regions. The NCAA playoffs are at least a possibility for all of the teams. For the most part, all of the teams are made up of young players and are not dominated by seniors, similar success, if not an improvement, seems inevitable for 1986.

UMass fall sports dominate New England like few other schools. UMass is 51-10 against New England, losing rarely. At home, UMass is even more dominant, running up an impressive 38-3 record.

A big reason for this success has been the athletic department's growing comittment to building good teams, not just ones that are competitive.

The football team, for example, was pushed up to the NCAA limit of scholarships. The women's soccer team is also approaching the NCAA limit. The men's soccer, field hockey and volleyball teams have also received increased funding for scholarships, the results are obvious.

"You are going to see big things from us," predicted UM women's soccer coach Kalenkeni Banda at the start of this season. He was right, his team went 15-0-0 and was ranked first in the nation. They take the top seed into the 14-team NCAA Division 1 tournament.

Jeff Gettler's soccer team set a UMass record for victories with 14. The Minutemen (14-6) are 9-0 at home and have had to play without the services of two all-New England players due to injury and academics respectively. Chances are they will not make the NCAA tournament, but Gettler admittedly didn't expect to be discussing the possibility in November either.

The field hockey team has slumped recently, losing two straight (two straight has been the longest losing streak of any UMass sport, the dubious honor shared by the stickers and the football team), but are still 11-4-2 overall and have two games to play. They are hoping for their second straight NCAA tourney appearance. Coach Pam Hixon's team, despite its lossess recently, is still a factor on the national scene, ranked fifth. A group of freshmen starters has helped lead UMass.

The UMass volleyball team has won 30 games for only the second time in its history, riding a 31-6 record into last night's home match against Springfield. UMass is 9-1 at home, has won the UMass Invitationals (for the first time), the Central Connecticut Tournament and the Delaware Tournament. The Only Division 2 team at UMass, the spikers are moving up into Division 1 next season and a rugged Atlantic 10 schedule. They have also won the state MAIAW championship and play in the Northeastern tournament this coming weekend. Coach Elaine Sortino's team, another young UMass squad, is hoping for a bid to the national tournament or the ECAC playoffs.

continued on page 14

The five winners

A breakdown of the 1985 UMass fall teams:

Football: The Minutemen are 6-3, winners of four straight and hoping for an at-large bid to the national 1-AA playoffs. They have won the most games since 1981 and are ranked eighth in the East.

Women's Soccer: UMass best fall team is 15-0-0 and awaiting the winner of the Boston College/Brown game for its NCAA Division 1 quarterfinal tournament game (Nov. 17 at UMass). The women have set a record for seasonal winning percentage and have allowed only two goals all season.

Volleyball: Not including last night's match with Springfield, UMass is 31-6 this season. They won the UMass Invitational, the Delaware Tournament, the Central Connecticut tourney and the Massachusetts state title.

Field Hockey: UMass is 11-4-2 this season and ranked fifth in the nation. They are awaiting their final two games of the season and the NCAA tournament bids.

Men's Soccer: UMass, 14-6-0, has set a record for wins in a season and is 9-0 at home. The Minutemen are ranked third in New England and were ranked nationally earlier this season, all without 1984's leading scorer, Kurt Manal, due to injury.

Collegian file photo

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will face Harvard University today on Boyden Field at 2 p.m.

Soccer hosts Harvard

UMass men hoping for at large berth

By BRYAN QUENZEL
Collegian Staff

Boyden Field has been a haven for the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team this season and the Minutemen hope to continue their domination at home when Harvard visits this afternoon at 2 p.m. for UM's last scheduled game of the season.

UMass is 9-0 (14-6 overall) on its home field this year, but are coming off a tough loss to Maine on Saturday that dealt a severe blow to the Minutemen's NCAA tournament chances.

"We desperately need this win to hope for an at-large bid," said UMass coach Jeff Gettler. "I don't see why not (UMass should hope for a spot). We will be compared to other teams around the country, then it's up to the committee."

A victory over Harvard (5-5-1) therefore is a must, but it won't be an easy task. The Crimson have won four in a row while bombarding opponents with 13 goals in its last three games.

"They are the same team as last year, except for two players," said Gettler. "Last year, they went to the final eight."

That Harvard team of a year ago blew out the Minutemen, 5-0 in Cambridge.

"They are a good attacking team," said Gettler. "Defensively they're suspect, but they are good coming at you."

Senior Don Donahue (6-5, three shutouts) will be in net for his regular start for UMass, but since it is the last scheduled game this season Gettler will be starting the rest of his seniors too.

Nick Marciano will be at forward replacing Tom Giordano, Paul Ricard will play in the backfield instead of Kevin Knoph, and Mike Bellino will start in the midfield for Andy Bing, the Minutemen's leading scorer.

UM volleyball rolls, Springfield falls in 4

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

It wasn't the prettiest of victories for the University of Massachusetts volleyball team. But a win is a win, and the Minutewomen made last night's victory over a pesky Springfield College count, 15-3, 14-16, 15-7, 15-3. The win raises UMass' record to 32-6.

"We did some really fine things tonight," said head coach Elaine Sortino. "But, overall, I think we were kind of flat. We haven't been up for a match in a while."

Last night's win also marked the final home match for senior co-captains Ann Ringrose and Sally Maher. Ringrose, a four year starter, made her 191st career start.

"I've seen those two grow so much. They came in as raw, gut talent volleyball players," said Sortino. "They have done so much in the four years that they've been here. The program has really taken off since they entered their freshman year."

"Annie is remarkable for her size. She has been very consistent for us," said Sortino. "Sally still does stuff that leaves me wondering how she did it. She just does it all."

By the way, there was a match. The Minutewoman through game one, 15-3, largely due to a revamped UMass middle attack centered around sophomore middle hitter Marcy Guiliotis and freshman middle hitter Barbara Meehan. Both Guiliotis and Meehan put down several balls while Ringrose dazzled the Boyden crowd of about 100 with pinpoint accurate serving.

Springfield came back to win game two and it looked as though a five-game match was in the making. UMass trailed in game tawo, 14-11, due mainly to miscues. But the spikers rallied to tie matters behind the hitter of Maher. UMass saved three game points, but fell 16-14.

The Minutewomen would regain their dominating form in game three as the spikers bolted out to a 10-3 lead. The Chiefs made a mild run, but were surpressed, 15-7.

Quite fittingly, Ringrose and Maher would steal the show in game four. A Ringrose solo block game UMass a lead it would not relinquish, 2-1. A Maher kill with emphasis increased the lead to 6-1. The spikers cruised the rest of the way, led by more offensive fireworks courtesy of Ringrose and Maher, 15-3.

Delaware scouting report

Blue Hens need to win as much as Minutemen

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

The University of Delaware football team, like the University of Massachusetts, has to win Saturday's clash at Alumni Stadium to have any chance at making the Division 1-AA national playoffs.

The Blue Hens, 6-3 this season and ranked 17th in the latest poll, have traditionally given the Minutemen problems. UMass has lost all nine meetings with Delaware dating back to 1958. They have met every season since 1979 and lost 27-14 last year.

In years past, UMass players wore shirts that said "We owe Delaware," attesting to the desire UMass has to defeat Tubby Raymond's Blue Hens.

"We've never beaten them, they're the only team we've faced regularly for four years and haven't beaten," said UM co-captain Paul Platek earlier this season. "It would be so sweet to get them."

Delaware won't be easy to get. The Hens are among the East's best teams in 1-AA, having defeated Division 1 Temple last week, 17-10. They have also knocked off Rhode Island (29-13), Navy (16-13) and Boston University, 21-0.

The Hens haven't been consistent, however. They lost to Holy Cross, 22-6; dropped 17-16 decision to William and Mary; and were

continued on page 14

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:
Today–
Men's Soccer: Harvard, Boyden Field, 2 p.m.

NUMMO NEWS

Connected with the Collegian for the sole purpose of distribution.

November 6, 1985 Volume 14 Issue 4

Networking...picking up momentum in Five College area

By ALFRED GETONGA
Special to Nummo

Recently a group of people gathered in the Babbot room on the campus of Amherst College. They were by no means a homogeneous group in terms of their social or cultural background, yet they all shared one thing in common, they were all of African descent.

The reason they had come together was only part of a process that many Africans as well as Afro-Americans have heard little about. It is a program that is picking up momentum in the Five College area. It was the third in a series of meetings that have previously been held at the University of Massachusetts and Mount Holyoke College. It has been given the name "networking." Essentially it is a program that hopes to increase the dialogue between the students of African descent in the Five College area.

Network has many goals to accomplish. However, no one can deny the opening remarks of one of the program coordinators, Kango Lari Lantone of Togo. He pointed out that the program has at least managed to set a foundation for official lines of communication to be established within the whole community of people descending from Africa in the valley. It is a program that has the full backing of the Five College African Students Association which has managed to bring together the community of African students in the valley under one umbrella.

At the start of the meeting, Sherwood Thompson of the Office of Third World Affairs at U-MASS. Pointed out that it is necessary to break down the stereotypes that have been created within the community. It was clear throughout the whole meeting that there did indeed exist many stereotypes that had forced students to take more pride in being associated with a particular college or the fact that one was an African and not an Afro-American. Also the fact that terminology became so important within the community, as to how one was to be identified, either as Black, Third World, Afro-American, African, was all attest to the fact that one was not just proud enough to be a person of African descent.

Jabu Maphalala, a South African studying at Amherst College, pointed out the importance of the community coming to grips with the basis of their own culture. He added that as a people we have a very positive history that we have allowed to be manipulated by other people to the extent that we now want to be disassociated from it because of the negative image it has been given.

Other speakers such as Sharon Jackson and Christopher Williams both studying at UMASS, expressed their disappointment at the minimal amount of interaction that goes on within the Afro-American community. Donna Ferguson, who is a sophmore at Smith College, remarked that when she first came to the area it was a totally alien enviroment to her. While growing up in New York Cit y she had been led to believe that there was more interaction among the community.

David Moore, a junior at UMASS, pointed out his disappointment at the reaction he had received from the Africans within the area. However Monica Velazquez, a senior econmics major at UMASS, seemed to offer a reply to his remarks in her presentation. She noted that Afro-Americans have clearly readjusted to a new culture due to the changed enviorment in the United States, and thus it was important to identify the new forms of bonds that link the whole community of African descent together. As for our differences we have to search them out and come to terms with them.

Clearly "Network" has a big job to accomplish but it would be made easier if the whole community was devoted to making it work. It is important that the community realizes that the social political and economic struggle of the people of African descent is far from over and it is only within ourselves can we find the solutions.

AP Laserphoto

VIDEO COP--Eddie Murphy, star of the hit movie "Beverly Hills Cop" smiles as he displays a video tape of the movie, Thursday in New York City. The Paramount Pictures production has set an all time record for video tape sales with 1.35 million cassettes sold.

Phi Beta Sigma, a big impact

By PATRICIA ODUOR
Nummo Staff

The gentlemen of Phi Beta Sigma are making an impact at the University of Massachusetts. Phi Beta Sigma is new on this campus. In fact, this chapter of the fraternity began at UMass only last semester, and was officially recognized on May 11, 1985. Approximately five months have passed and Phi Beta Sigma has contributed exceedingly to the Third World community.

Phi Beta Sigma was founded on January 9, 1914 at Howard University. The fraternity currently has over 90,000 members nationwide including four members at UMass. Their motto, "Culture for service, service for humanity", is taken very seriously. Along with their principals of brotherhood, service, and scholarship, Phi Beta Sigma has traditionally instilled future leaders with values that emphasize working in the service of society. "We train leaders to not only deal with technical type issues, but also to deal with people and interact with people."

Some of the well-known members include the celebrated Black scientist, George Washington Carver as well as Nnamdi Azikiwi, President of Nigeria, William

continued on page 2

A few having

Cosby pledges war on Hunger

By CHRIS ALLEN
Nummo Staff

Bill Cosby, along with some other celebrities, have asked millions of Americans to give them a hand in fighting hunger in the United States. The plan is to form a chain of some six million people across the country and raise $100 million by taking donations from participants.

"Millions of Americans go hungry every day. Now it's time for Americans to help Americans." Cosby said on a video tape shown at a New York news conference. Pete Rose, one of the celebrities involved said, "'Hands across America' is millions of Americans joining hands from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from coast-to-coast raising money for hungry and homeless Americans." In hustling up support he added, "Please help us."

The stunt is sponsored by U.S.A. for Africa, the group formed to distribute African famine relief funds from the song "We are the World".

Other entertainers who have signed up to help include Harry Belafonte, Lionel Richie, Tina Turner, Quincy Jones, Richard Dreyfus, Morgan Fairchild, Jane Fonda, Kris Kristofferson, Ed McMahon, Willie Nelson, Kenny Rogers and Susan Saint James

Quote of the day

Opportunity Knocks But Once!

IBM donates computers to Five College Inc.

By Chris Allen
Nummo Staff

At the Five Colleges, instructors of Chinese and Japanese have now fully "entered the computer age," thanks to a gift made this year to Five Colleges , Inc., by the IBM World Trade Americas/Far East Corporation.

The five IBM 5550 Multistations donated by IBM have been installed at four of the five campuses where they are now in popular use among East Asia faculty members. Each station offers three keyboards, which give the writer access to several options that include moving from English to the forms for Japanese and Chinese. As a result, students of these languages are also beginning to enjoy some of the benefits such technology offers.

Two of the stations have been installed at the University of Massachusetts, which has the largest number of East Asia language instructors on its faculty in the Department of Asian Languages and Literature. The other three stations are located at the Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith college campuses, where language sections are offered in both Chinese and Japnese. Faculty of all five colleges have already received demonstrations and training in the various uses of the machine from IBM representatives.

Among faculty users enthusiasm remains consistently high. Several are already conversant with the 5550's capabilities and applications for a variety of their research and teaching needs. Matthew Mizenko, Chair of the Asian Studies Department at Amherst College, reports that the new machines are "really making life easier for teachers (of Chinese and Japanese)" at the five colleges. For his own scholarly writing, it means "not having to leave blanks in the text as I compose," and later having to fill these in with hand-drawn forms. As a non-native speaker of Japanese, Mizenko also regards the new machine as "an invaluable tool for keeping up my ability to compose in Japanese" as he corresponds with Japanese colleagues.

Similar testimony about the effectiveness of the Multistations is offered by Don Gjertson, Chair of the University's Department of Asian Languages and Literature, who notes that these machines provide in Japanese "all of the conviences that the English speakers." Although the machines do not currently provide a word processing program for Chinese, Ted Yao, a member of the Asian Studies Department at Mount Holyoke College and current Chair of the Five College East Asian Languages Program, is finding the machine useful for producing clearly typed Chinese characters for supplementary "handouts" in his advanced Chinese languages classes.

In fact, faculty members emphasize the benefits students derive from the machines as well. For the first time, Mizenko observes, "professional-looking handouts for our students." And these can be produced in a fraction of the time it once took to do so in hand-written form. But the benefit is not merely a matter of cosmetics or efficiency: clearly-typed materials give students experience in reading characters, he noted, a vast improvement over the "hand -crawled" versions that were once the only alternative for supplementing text excercises and readings. Gjertson, Yao and Mizenko stress the fact that clearly-printed materials also have an important and positive effect upon the attitudes of students towards learning the language: students no longer have to struggle with "deciphering" characters that have been hastily drawn while struggling to master the characters themselves, they point out.

Arrangements for the gift, including the installation and demonstration of the machines, were made through the office of IBM World Trade Americas/Far East Corporation. Commenting upon the significance of the award, Five College Coordinator E. Jefferson Murphy observed that "these machines clearly represent an important addition to the resources of our Five College East Asian Languages Program. They serve to enrich the lives of both faculty and students in a number of ways. We are grateful... and we are delighted to have them."

Phi Beta Sigma

continued from page 1

Talbert, President of Liberia and Kwame Nkrumah, President of Ghana.

Last semester at UMass was the pledge period for the current members on campus. These members are A.Anthony Gee, Paul Fisher, Charles Sheffield and Al Valdez. During their pledge period the "Mkuu Line" completed various projects. Mkuu in Swahili means "leader" and the crescents brothers of Phi Beta Sigma exhibited their ability to lead.

The Mkuu Line began by painting the New Africa House library, which was long overdue for a paint job. They also refurbished the front entrance of the New Africa House.

The next project was the restoration and rededication of the Martin Luther King Jr. Culturol Center. The Crescents participated in a walk for hunger from which they raised money for the starving in the world.

During their pledge period, the Mkuu Line also toured inner-city students around the campus. These kids needed incentive and the Crescents attempted to give them it. They spent the day with the students and as Fisher mentioned, "provided them with some insights on campus." Gee felt that the kids needed to know that college "wasn't out of their reach" so their goal was to "try to interest them in college."

The Mkuu Line are no longer Crescents. They are now official members of Phi Beta Sigma. As members, they have continued their involvement in the community. On October 16, 1985, A.Anthony Gee, Charles Sheffield, Chancellor Duffy and four other student representatives went to Washington D.C. for a national press conference. At the conference, an important project was publicized. This project, Gee stated, will deal with the "growing complexity and danger in the problems facing American society." He feels that people are more interested in their self-interests as compared to the public interest. Gee observes that "the intense demand for economic, social, and political renewal requires a far greater sense of public purpose "as opposed to self-interest." "The university is trying to work with organizations that are reaching out to the community", Gee said. Phi Beta Sigmo is an organization that is helping with the project. The goal of the project, as Gee mentioned, is to "foster greater youth involvement in public and community service by establishing a Data Bank of public service programs to college students." The project, when completed, will provide information to organizations about each other. So, as Gee pointed out, "the right hand knows what the left hand is doing."

Lecture Planned on Gender and Race

On November 19, 1985, Beverly Manley will deliver two lectures at Amherst College and UMass on gender and race issues in the Caribbean.

The first lecture, at 4:00 pm in the Gerald Penny Black Cultural Center, Octagon, Amherst College, will be titled, "Race, Politics and Gender in the Caribbean" and the second lecture, at 7:30 pm in the Campus Center 163C, UMass, will be titled, "Black Women in the Caribbean."

Ms. Manley is the former President of the Women's Association of the People's National Party (PNP) in Jamacia and is former First Lady of Jamaica. She was instrumental in establishing the Women's Bureau, and pushing legislation requiring equal pay for equal work through the bureacratic system.

She is presently doing research on development issues with emphasis on women for her doctoral dissertation. Ms Manley is a consultant on communications, and women and development. She is also working on a regional radio program for women.

Ms. Manley's visit is sponsored by Amherst College: The Black Studies Dept., Black Student Union, La Causa, The Romance Language Dept., and the Woman's Center and by Umass: Everywoman's Center, The Women's Studies Dept., CCEBMS, and the Five-College Black Studies Committee. She is travelling under the auspices of the Institute for Policy Studies, Washington, D.C.

Nummo News Service

Released N American Kidnapped by Contras Western Mass

Nummo News Photo

Mary Dutcher, Witness for Peace volunteer came to Western Mass., on November 1st and was available to meet with local community groups, churches and the media. Mary is one of the 29 religious North Americans abducted last August by counter-revolutionary forces in Costa Rica near the Nicaraguan border.

She was aboard the Witness for Peace flotilla which was travelling on the San Juan River in a vigil for peace. As the first civilian vessel on that river over the previous 30 months, its purpose was threefold: to pray for peace in the border zone, to commemorate the lives lost in that region, and to support any and all gestures to reduce tension in the zone.

Their boat was fired upon and they were held by U.S. backed contras in Costa Rican territory for 27 hours.

Mary Dutcher is a Catholic layworker from St. Louis, Mo., and has been with Witness for Peace in Nicaragua since March 1984. As a member of the Long-Term Team, she arranges delegation tours and documents contra activity. Trained as a lawyer, she was the first woman attorney hired by Anheuser-Busch. Later she went on to become the Assistant Attorney General for the State of Missouri (in charge of the St. Louis office) and served as chairperson of the Mental Health Committee of the St. Louis Bar Association. While in Nicaragua Mary assisted in the preparation of Nicaragua's recent case in the World Court. Her contributions to peace and justice were recognized by Cardinal Carberry when he appointed her to the Archdiocesan Commission on Human Rights in St. Louis.

Witness for Peace is a grassroots, non-violent, faith-based movement committed to changing U.S. policy toward Nicaragua. Since 1983, Witness for Peace has arranged for over 1300 North Americans to visit the war zones of Nicaragua.

Construyamos Juntos was happy to sponsor Mary's visit here. Construyamos Juntos is a group from Western Mass., travelling to Nicaragua in 1986 to help build a school.

Nummo News Service.

Editorial

NUMMO NEWS

Serving the University community since 1975

C. Ron Allen
editor-in-chief

Donna Henry
managing editor

James Crichlow production manager

Rhonda Swan
Julian Tynes
News Editors

Christopher Brown
Sports Editor

David Walker
Photography Editor

Maureen J.Dyer
Layout Editor

David D. Moore
Business Manager

Anita Almeda
Secretary

Michael Thelwell
Faculty Advisor

There is a tendency among people of all races in general to equate the word, "Black" with violence or evil. This is because, the word black has always been associated with negative values in our society. Words such as black-mail,Black power, Black revolution are associated with wrong doing, and have some sort of negative connnotation to them. The term Black power is usually enterpreted as "violent" power and Black revolution, as interprise that deals with violence. Naturally, thisenterprise is comprised of individuals with dark color skin. However, in contrast on how the ignorant society has classified our color or any other word associated with the word "black"; the Black revolution,for example, was a cultural metamorphasis. Its main objective was to help in the struggle of Black people; to understand and accept themselves and each others goals, to redefine their place in America in terms of responsible participation in the full range of possibilities offered or demanded by this society.

Black students,...Lets look at ourselves. Ignore societies ignorant teaching. Teach ourselves that Black is beautiful. Be proud of your color. Feel pain when a brother or a sister is executed simply because of their skin color. Help fight against the iniquities of the world and not against one of your own just because you "don't like him/her." Be violent...yes; but not because you're Black...be violent because of the iniquities and the unjust that society has inflicted on our people.

And society understand...,being black, white or yellow does not eliminate the possibility of violence by individuals, because as we have seen, there are violent individuals in the society regardless of race, sex, color, or creed!

Donna Henry
Managing Editor

David Affonseca, Hollis Cotton, Michelle Creese, Hope Jones, Wilma Tynes, Yvonne Morgan, Patricia Oduor, Yvette Russell, Marion Tinsley, Carla Tucker, Shawn Wigham, and Deneice Williams.

NUMMO NEWS is a Third World Student Weekly at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.
Our offices are located at 103 New Africa House. Telephone numbers are (413)545-0061 and 545-0062.

Unsigned editorals represent the view of this paper. They do not necessary reflect the views of the student body, faculty or administration. Signed editorals, columns, reviews, cartoons and letters represent the personal views of the authors.

Are you offended? Submit to Nummo.

Editorial

Dear Editor,

Allow me the space to respond in part to a recent editorial which appeared in the October 30, 1985 edition of the Collegian by Stephen Erickson.

Speaking in Santiago, Chile, in 1973, Fidel Gastro, the Cuban Premier remarked, "Every social system think itself eternal until history comes forward to set it straight." Indeed, most people throughout the world today know that history has come forward to set the reign of apartheid in South Africa straight. That is of course, with the exception of the likes of Ronald Reagan, Jerry Falwell and rather sadly, Collegian columist, Stephen Erickson.

In my opinion, Ronald Reagan, Jerry Falwell and Erickson, based upon the position which they articulate with regards to South Africa as it presently exists, can at the very best be seen as would be supporters of Hitler's Germany. These apologists for apartheid may do themselves a favor by coming to grips with the reality as Fidel Castro on that very same occosion pointed out, "No social system under attack has ever resigned of its own velocity, in favor of the revolutionaries; instead, they have responded, and when they have responded they have always done so with violence." White South Africans, the perpetrators and defenders of apartheid know that they are under attack and they are responding with violence. While they respond to black challenges with violence,they are also saying to blacks that they should renounce violence. What perverted absurdity!

Whether one subscribes to violent revolutionary action as a means to bring about the desired social and political change, and/or, whether one believes that there is still time for a reletively peaceful resolution to the conflict there, is the fundamental question here. Anyone with integrity can see that there is a certain truism in the above statement by Fidel Castro. The applicability of this analysis is borne out in the unfolding events within South Africa over the past year or so. Any failure to understand this allows one to go around making apologies and to act in defense of that wretched system of facist terror and constitutionalized racism.

The perpetrators of apartheid and their overseas supporters over the past year have become painstakenly aware of the fact that this last phase in the struggle to eradicate apartheid from the face of the earth cannot be contained. They are now engaged in a mass propaganda campaign, one in which they hope to spread enough confusion in the minds of people throughout the world with the hope that by doing so they will buy themselves some time to make band aid solutions to the very real, compounded and complex problems. Problems which for four hundred years they have neither shown the desire nor the will to resolve. We must ask ourselves, what has awakened their conscience in this late stage of the game?

So that after several years of support for apartheid, we now hear Ronald Reagan, Jerry Falwell and Erickson, among others, saying-- apartheid is atrocious but! But what? The communist are coming! Apartheid is atrocious but! But What? We need time! This is what Reagan, Falwell and perhaps the least among them, Erickson, is saying to the long-downtrodden African people. They say to black South Africans-- be patient, you have lived with apartheid for four hundred years already; what is going to matter if you continue to live with it for another ten years or so?

Yes, Reagan, Falwell, Erickson and the like, are saying to the oppressed black masses of that nation; be patient reform is on the way! Give us a little more time so that we may change our ways! Indeed, how very familiar? How immoral; How fundamentally unjust that a recalcitrant regime should, at the appointed hour of their demise, be asking for time. Time--you have had four hundred years! There is a popular phrase which best describes the mentality of those who are advocating for time. It goes as follows: "When the oppressed cries enough, this is enough--the perpetrators of injustice tremble in their seats." Regan, Falwell, Botha, Erickson--we know whose side you are on. No more time! No way!

Apartheid, oh great enemy of human rights, human dignity and freedom--your time has come and you must go! You have a choice, You may go in relative peace or, you may go in pieces, but you must go! "Opressa-man" don't you chide our people about your need for time--time so that you may change your unjust, inhumane and dirty ways! Four hundred years our people have waited, but in vain! Four hundred years our people have pleaded, but you turned a deaf ear! Four hundred years our people have prayed, but the gods did not seem to answer! And now, now that the tables are turning, the winds of freedom are blowing in our direction--you turn to our people to ask for time? You ask our people to be patient!

The time for which you are asking is not ours to give! The patient for which you plea is not ours to give! Humanity, the convincing majority of humanity have become impatient with you! They demand that you must go--go and never again to return in human affairs. Never again to raise your ugly head! You must go--get out from among us! Be banished! Go! Get out of our father's land. We are the voices of South Africa! We are voices reaching out, reaching beyond the dungeon of apartheid to the four corners of the globe, calling out to people of goodwill--lend us your hand in this the hour of our persecution! We can smell the sweet fragrance of freedom-- we can taste it if only you will lend us a hand!

Go tell Ronald Reagan, go tell Jerry Falwell; go tell Chester Crocker; go tell George Bush; go tell Margret Thatcher; go tell the generals of NATO; go tell all the enemies of our freedom to let our people go! We have earned the rights to live as free men and women in the land of our ancestors bvt poverty, hunger, bigotry, genocide, exploitation is but all we see!

GEORGE M McKENZIE

HAVE A PROBLEM? MAKE USE OF THIS COLUMN

OPINIONS

Living in discontent

As internal coordinator of the Third World Caucus, I wanted to express the frustrations that I have been dealing with trying to get students to join the Third World Caucus (TWC). Each meeting of the Caucus this semester, the same six or seven senators have been present. Only half of those attend both the caucus meeting, as well as the senate meeting, that immediately follows.

I have been pleading my case to undergraduate students to please join the TWC to help us protect the comparatively small amount of resources that we still posses.

While students of color on this campus are shrouded in apathy and confusion concerning meeting the challenge of making your own destiny, the administration of Whitmore and the Student Government are making personal attacks on minority faculty, staff and administratiors.

The attacks are waged on professionals by giving bad "Annual Performance Reports" and never granting merit ta minority professional staffs. The above procedure eventually sets the professional up to be masterfullv and effectively terminated when the professional persons' contract is due to be reviewed for renewal.

If you as a student were to check around and ask minority professional staff what kind of pressure are they under from the administration, you would be surprised at the alarming number of those professionals that could soon be facing unemployment.

You would not have to go far to find out this information. In fact you would not have to go any further than the Office of Third World Affairs, CCEBMS, Housing, Financial Aid, Afro-Am Department, or just wherever there is a professional worker of color.

Let truth be told, if there are unfriendly forces in Whitmore and the Student Government, it will not be long before these same forces will breath a sigh of relief and say, "Well now the hard part is over, we got rid of all the troublesome professionals that didn't see things our way, but now lets get rid af the students of color that we don't really want on this campus anyway."

If you don't realize what this means, I will explain for you. After the administratiors are gone, who on this campus will advocate for you, not Denny Madsen, not Dean Field. For the last three years, especially the amount of Third World students on this campus has been increasing. But instead of the CCEBMS staff increasing it has been reduced. Money has been taken away form them and other resources are steadily being taken away.

The Whitmore administration has graciously accepted us Third World students at the urging of CCEBMS and BCP, but have not steadily been increasing the resources or the funding of CCEBMS that it would take to insure that those students do well, for some reason BCP's funding has doubled. Resources are certainly not adequately supplied and will not be supplied until we gather and make a strong statement.

Budgets of Third World students have been severly slashed, and certain professionals are constantly in turmoil. So when you go to that next party, semi-formal, cultural event, or step-show, remember Whitmore wants you to have all that fun so you will forget how to protect your resources. You will then be setting yourselves up for elimination because all you want to do is have fun and do not care to be serious and give power to yourselves.

David D. Moore

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

Please allow me to point out some of my experiences that I have encountered, being here in the "Happy Valley". My experiences will be based on interactions I have had both here and abroad, Kebya, in particular. They also concern me because I am a foreign graduate student in the School of Education, and I think it is good to share them with my fellow collegues.

It is difficult ta understand why blacks and some other minority groups have problems in communicating among themselves. It is not that they are too lazy or are cowards to come forward and compete for positive leadership. I understand that there are many constraints on the way, but there are as well, some ways to enter and effect to some comfortable extent. This means working hard, and struggling more. This may be very discouraging, but who said life is easy any way! Is the struggle over yet?

People should look back at the beginning of the "New World America" and what the Puritans had in mind, the struggle to extend liberty, ta be great and unique in the world. That means putting some people down and making them stay down, while remaining on top. The struggle gained a different momentum when, what the Puritans thought was going to work, did not work. This was a result of liberatian of some group (physically) from slavery but not psychologically.

Some of us have managed to internalize this type of psychological slavery and have appealed to the system. Others have been left out and are struggling. But many, in this case the youth, feel isolated. They do not know which way to follow. This is evident when you go to the University Departments and check out who is where. You realize that we have not yet acheived "Uhru" (freedom). I don't know whether it is fair to blame the black and minority recruiters or the system. This remains to be discussed.

The ather observations is the question of the role models. When I attended the first lecture of the Third World series of lectures, I was very embarrased at the lack of student participation. First, the auditorium was almost empty, only a few blacks and white students attended.

How can we blame the students for not attending important meetings and yet, we the faculty, (role models) haven't shown them how important they are?

It is obvious that there is a lack of guidance because of the accusations which occurred among student leaders, which showed the division among the black community itself. And this, I can't blame the student leaders for.

Masila Mutisya

NICARAGUA

Chris Allen

IMAGES OF THE REVOLUTION

Men can cry, too

This column is mainly for men. It's not about football, or beer, or women. Rather it's about something very unmacho; the showing of emotion, in particular, crying.

Now it's very possible that a lot of you guys out there are saying; Crying, he's writing about that? What a whimp!" Possibly true, but Ill go regardless.

Lets examine the American male: intelligent (sometimes), macho (most of the time), humerous (almost all of the time) and totally uncapable, for most of us at least, of any emotional display. Uncapable, thats not quite the right word, lets say conditioned to hide these emotions

At this point let me clarify something.I'm not only addressing the men, I realize that there are many women who are also reluctant to display emotions. I'm just focussing on men because society seems to be more willing to accept a woman crying than a man..

Men do get hurt, it's true. I'm a man, I played football in high school, drink beer, and have had relationships with women. I have done all of these macho things that seems to characterize a man, as to whether they really do characterize a man is up for grabs, and I've been hurt. Frustration, losing a loved one, breaking up with a girlfriend, being afraid of the unknown (ask any senior if they've felt that), we've all had these, or similar incidents happen to us, and yes, they hurt men. Yet, most of us have been taught not to show that hurt.

"Keep a stiff upper lip, BE A MAN."

I was at the funeral of a friend who was very close to me, where I acted as a poll-bearer. After the casket was placed in theground, I knew I couldn't hold the tears back and they came. No one knew, it was a rainy day and the tears mixed with the water running down my face.

There it is, I'll just keep all my tears, heartbreaks, lonliness, sadness, frustration, and all the feelings we're all subject to and that aren't proper to display in public, inside of me, packed up, carrying them with me for a time.

And I'll save my tears for the rain.

Chris Allen

IMAGES OF THE REVOLUTION

FABLES FOR MINORITY SURVIVAL AT UMASS

Dear Editor,

Mast of you are likely to be familiar with the following experiences or fables:

A man was walking through the snow-filled valley. He accidently stepped on a snake who was frozen stiff. The snake begged and pleaded, and finally convinced the man to carry him to warmer climates. The man placed the snake under his coat. In his shirt pocket and continued his journey. Although the journey was hard, the man never considered exploiting the snake as food. Not long after reaching warmer climates, the man felt a burning sensation in his chest. He realized he had been bitten. Suffering from the pain of heartbreak more than the poison, he questioned the snake: "Why, when I was willing to carry you, would you bite me?" The snake in his most socially aware voice said: "In the snow, I was cold; in th edessert I was hot; but I've always been a snake.

Once when I was young, I watched my grandfather work in his garden. He had two shavels. One was a very nice army issue, green shovel with a detachable fold up handle; the other was a one piece rusty iron job. After whining long enough, he allowed me to help him dig. It seemed as though he favored the army issue, so I, of course, asked for the army issue. First, he made me usethe old iron job. Then when I was tired he let me use the army issue. After a few minutes I realized that the ald shovel was equally effective and equally tiring. Fifteen years later, I had the opportunity to teach my younger brother the same lesson. By now the shovels were so old so I had repainted them one in black rust-proofing, the other in all white paint. It didn't matter, the lesson was the same.

The morals of these two stories respectively are:

(1) a snake, is a snake, is a snake!

(2) whether it is green, or brown, or white or black, a tool is a tool.

The combined moral of these stories is: If your friend won't call a spade a spade, don't hold them too close to your heart. If there are any administrators or staff people who feel attacked, take a lesson from Cinderella- If the shoe fits wear it.

by D. Anderson Hooker

Random Political thoughts

BY DAVID D. MOORE

Five members of the University of Massachusetts community, three faculty and two grad students were sitting down one evening over drinks and decided to create a forum to budget the existing gap between blacks born inAfrica and blacks born in America. These five founding members (Sherwood Thompson, Lane Lantone Kango, Masila Mutisya, Rudy Jones and Paul Barrows) felt there was not enough interaction between Africans and African American students and faculty on this campus and wanted to dosomething to improve it.

Lots of brainstorming took place to try to get a broader focus before making a meeting public. In this way the meeting would have direction when larger groups of people particapted. The first meeting came into existence at theNew Africa House. The distinguished participants which included the five founding members as well as, David DuBois and Michael Thelwell. The goal of the first meeting was to decide what issues were to be discussed, to create an open agenda under the umbrella of bridging the gap between the Black people from all over the world. With a common origin; the African continent.

The second meeting held at Mt Holyoke College was a panel discussion that had members from both American and Africa. The major concern at the second meeting was the lack of concern at the second meeting was the lack of warmth and communication between Africans and African Americans.

The third meeting of the "African/African American Connection" was held at Amherst College on 10 October 1985. Sherwood Thompson was the facilitator, present on the panel were Jamu of Amherst College, Donna Ferguson of Smith College, Chris Williams, Sharon Jackson, Monica Velasquez, and David Moore all of UMass Amherst.

Issues covered at the third meeting were South Africa, neo-colonialism, lack of friendliness, history of the panel discussion and promoting a commong interest of Black people. At the opening of the panel discussion everyone introduced themselves and Sherwood Thompson said, "we are all here to become friends, get to know each other and share experiences."

Jamu spoke of history, and of neo-colonialism. He said "we must speak to each other or we are helping colonialism come back. Our dissassociation of people with whom we have a common past is destroying us. Do not have someone else solve our problems for us. There are still instances where Blacks go out and bomb homes of majority Black neighborhoods.

Monica said "if Black people are a species then allk of our fates are inter-related." Numerous people from the audience of 40 people contributed comments and views to the panel. On of the founding members, Kango, contributed this statement. "During this summer I was teaching a group of CCEBMS students and felt students could not accept the fact that an African was teaching them Math.

Kango also said, "the students did not believe that Africans were smart or civilized. The students thought Africans ran behinnd the tails of tigers. Some students felt Africans and civiization do not go together. One student did not know what the word 'lynching' meant."

Chris Williams suggested that "we had better learn our history as a people or we will continue to be taken advantage of because a people without history are a lost people."

This third panel discussion raised the consciousness level of many involved and decided there is a definite need to get some solutions to the points that were generated.

The Arquipelago of Cape Verde

By ANITA ALMEIDA
Nummo News Staff

The Cape Verde Islands are located approximately 300 miles off the coast of Senegal, a country in West Africa. The Cape Verde Islands were "discovered" in 1446 by Diago Gomes. In 1462 the portuguese established their first African colony. Some people believe that Africans inhibited the islands before Portuguese claimed the islands.

The archipelago consist of ten islands; Brava, Fogo, Sao Vicente, Santa Luzia, Sao Nicolas, Mais, Sal and Santiago.

Santiago, the capital island, was settled with 56 natives of Portugal, 16 free Black men, 16 free Black women and approximately 400 slaves.

Seven years after they settled on the island, the Portuguese signed a contract for the buying and selling of slaves. At that time slavery was their main source of income. Slaves worked in cotton fields, farms, plantations and did some domestic tasks such as weaving clothes. In 1472 the Royal Warrant legalized the slave trade. Previous to the passing of this law the trade had been conducted without authorization. The Portuguese sold the majority of their slaves to the United States, Brazil and the Carribean. They called this action triangular slavery. The slave trade lasted for 170 years.

The islands suffered other miseries such as drought: from 1875 to 1948 that killed 8,000 people. During the years between 1950-1970 there was a significant amount of emigration from the islands. The people left the country because of famine, droughts and the absence of a basic economic struture.

Most of the immigrants came to the United States others went to Portugal, Italy, Holland, France, Brazil and Germany among other European countries. Most of those immigrants were able to live a comfortable life and send some money back to help support their families.

In 1975 after 500 years of struggling under Portuguese colonialism the islands acheived independence, the numbers of emigrants decreased. Most of the emigrants returned to the motherland to visit and many even stayed there to live.

BLACK HISTORY CORNER

November 1, 1942 - The first commercially successful Black magazine, Negro Digest, was published by John H. Johnson. In 1945 Johnson founded Ebony Magazine which is presently the largest Black magazine in the world.

November 4, 1952 - John T. Wright, owner of an Englewood, N.J. taxicab company, became the first Black man elected as councilman in Bergen County, N.J. and one of the few Democrats ever to win an office in the Republican stronghold.

October 30, 1979 - Dr. Richard Arrington, an educator with a graduate degree in inverterbrate zaology, was elected Mayor of Birmingham, Alabama. He was the first Black to be elected to that affice in that city and is currently serving a second term.

October 30, 1976 - Dr. Joseph H. Evans was elected president of the United Church of Christ. Dr. Evans was the first Black to head the group. A native of Kalamazoo Michigan, he graduated from Western Michigan University and received his divinity degree from Yale Divinity School in 1942. He has been Minister of Churches in Chicago, Cleveland and New York.

By YVETTE RUSSELL

Personal Profile... Arthur Jackson

By YVETTE RUSSELL
Nummo Staff

Mr. Arthur Jackson is the Director of the Financial Aid Program located in the Whitmore Administration building at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Although his job consists of many things, the basic summary of his job is being responsible for internal and external relations about financial aid. He is also the representative for all three campuses University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Boston, and Worcester) with the department of education, which concerns the administration and applications for financial aid. Mr. Jackson is responsible for policies, procedures and the like, concerning financial aid. His office is one of the largest of student affairs.

"We are prohibited by law to discriminate on the basis of late by color, creed, race, etc, so about 15 years ago they took all racial and other classifications out,"

Mr. Jackson was very cooperative in answering several questions concerning the effect financial aid has on minorities. When asked about the cutbacks that Reagan has made on financial assistance for students and its affect on minorities, he said "...the actual cutbacks have not been as bad as they have been publicized. However, what is happening is that Black students and parents are becoming disenchanted about coming to school. Remember, even though the president has recommended cutbacks in financial aid, the congress has overturned those decisions." Mr. Jackson explained that one cannot accurately state the amount of scholarship money that goes to minorities, stating, "...we are prohibited by law to discriminate on the basis of color, creed, race, etc., so about 15 years ago they took all racial and other classifications out, so there really aren't accurate counts on students as far as their racial background etc., because it can be used both positively and negatively. But what we are trying to do is expand certain programs, such as the W.E.B. DuBois scholarship program where we bring in 5 scholars each year who write an essay and have interviews with a campus committee. They are awarded a scholarship equal to the cost of tuition for 4 years. So we're trying to expand on scholarships for minority students, we all feel that if we expand financial aid for all students that we'll benefit minority students."

Nummo photo by Chris Allen

Director of the Finiancial Aid Program,Arthur Jackson.

Jackson added that "We're trying to expand the first program that we started which was the W.E.B. DuBois scholarship program. We're also doing far more in terms of recruiting and I think that's the largest basis. We're starting to go to the high schools with the Challenge program, and starting to educate the students about what they can get as far as education and financial aid and so on. I think when you're dealing with a public university, there's not that much specialized funds you have. But in fact, one doner did donate a $2,000 scholarship for minorities. It was by an anonymous doner, but we are beginning to receive donations from people. I guess what we're trying to instill in minority students is that you can't turn off an education because of cost. If you want to go to college and you have good grades then the college will try to help you pay for the expenses needed."

In closing this interview, I asked Mr. Jackson if he had any comments which he would like to make towards the minority student body. He stated, "Well I hope that the minority student population will remain accurate in issues concerning education, and that they will take an interest in South African issues because they do indeed effect us. Also keep up to date with what is happening here, as well as in your own home community. I think also, to become accurate in college will lead you down the proper road."

Ben Rodriguez...

Continued from page 7

the high drop-out rate from high school students and college students. B.C.P. currently offers a "Community Education Program" through which they educate the parents and community leaders about the educational opportunities available through the Bilingual Collegiate Program.

During their recruiting sessions, the B.C.P. counselors advised prospective students and their families about admissions, financial aid, housing, and academic problems at the university.

Bilingual Collegiate Program currently has enrolled five hundred and sixty-two students. There are eight staff members, fluent in several languages. As the director of B.C.P., Mr. Rodriguez ensures that all components of the program are fulfilled. Mr. Rodriguez's main concern is within the community. He emphasizes the importance of a college career for everyone. Mr. Rodriguez's fieldwork within the community is vital, as is the search for funding for Bilingual Collegiate Program.

The greatest acheivement of the Bilingual Collegiate Program is the success of their alumni, who represent every aspect of the professional world. The alumni of B.C.P. also help today with grades as well as with recruitment of new students.

B.C.P. is making a difference. Offering diverse services to a multicultural, multilingual population, B.C.P. is quite unique. If the university would recognize B.C.P. as a unique program its potential would be limitless.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CLASSIFIED AD POLICY/RATES
1-15 words $2.50
16-30 words $3.00
Deadline will be Friday 3pm
EXACT CHANGE OR MONEY ORDERS REQUIRED. NO ADS WILL BE ACCEPTED OVER THE PHONE.

Attention all interested students. Positions available at Nummo News in Photography, Layout, Writers, and Production. For more information please call or stop by Nummo News Office located in 103 New Africa House, 545-0061(0062). Workstudy and Non-Workstudy positions available.

Belated Birthday Greetings to Anthony Strickland from P.T.L.

The Graduate WAGES Program of Everywoman's Center is sponsoring a four week general support group for graduate women. The group will be discussing general concerns of women as graduate students. Facilitated by Ronna Tulgan, the group will meet Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:30, beginning November 7 and tentatively ending December 5. Childcare may be available. For more information and registration, call EWC at 545-0883.

PREDICTIONS Continued from page 8

1. Los Angeles Lakers
2. Portland Trailblazers
3. Los Angeles Clippers
4. Seattle Supersonics
5. Golden State Warriors
6. Phoenix Suns

TO ALL THIRD WORLD ORGANIZATIONS!!

Please submit all allocation request to Afrik-Am 5 weeks in advance. Contact Leslie Toons, Secretary.

Come to the tropics for good food and atmosphere at YVONNE'S CARIBBEANA
206 Russel Street on Route 9, Hadley. Light and heavy lunches served from 11:30-3:00pm, with Carribbean taste buds. DINNERS Tuesday, Wednesday 5-9pm Thursday, Friday, Saturday 5-10pm.
SUNDAYS International Brunch with Jazz from 11-3 pm. Dinner from 5-10 pm.
Check us out, you won't loose!

Hong Kong A year abroad experience from an Asian American perspective

Carolyn Y. Lee

"HONG KONG: One of life's great adventures and the only place in the world where east meets west so perfectly."

These are the images that a travel agency facilitates to persuade you to travel to the Far East. "The shopping is outrageous, the food is fantastic and the entertainment and nightlife is always the happening thing..." So, I decided to take on this "adventure" and prepared myself for the challenge of my college career, giving up the security of UMASS and becoming a Hong Kong exchange student for a year.

Although being a first generation A.B.C. (American Born Chinese), my experience might be perceived a little differently. Going to Hong Kong not only meant learning, growing and becoming more independent, it also meant discovering what my ancestors cultural roots and heritage were all about. Entering a different country is entering a culture - a civilization of a given race and given customs. It meant going to discover the cultural differences between the U.S. and Hong Kong. Having been born and raised in America and taught American values and traditions, I was always looked upon as a "banana" or "white washed" in the eyes of traditional Chinese people. So, I thought I would use this "unique, once in a lifetime opportunity" to discover what being Chinese was all about, trace my roots and in the midst of it all, maybe find myself.

When I first arrived in Hong Kong, it was hot, humid and very crowded. My first glimpse of the active citylife included numerous taxusm double-decker buses, minibuses, motorcycles, trams rickshaw drivers, limosines and only the newest in BMW and Mercedes Benz cars. The streets were saturated with scurrying people and drivers would stop at nothing to make the light before it turned red. The fastpace busy lifestyle that everyone had "warned" me about before I left was suddenly becoming a reality.

The "millions" of people instantly came into view. Yes, 5.5 million of them on this crowded little peninsula on the coast of China, which measures approximately 400 sq. miles. Now, I was about to become just another face in the crowd. I knew it wouldn't be long before I would have to adjust to the pushing and shoving and accept it as a part of the normal everyday activity.

The overall views of the city was simply fascinating. High sky-risers, beautiful hotels and cars, spectacular lighting and lots of excitement - it was like New York City only the people were all Chinese. For once, I was not a minority I was one of them, but even having the right face not enough- why doesn't this person speak the right language? Obviously, I was the foreigner and sometimes, speaking English had its advantages because it meant that you were a "somebody" -an American, and to the Hong Kong people, it seemed like America was the best place to be.

Yes, Hong Kong truly is "Shopper's Paradise" - they really do "have everything." From hawkers off the streets literally screaming out their low price merchandise, to pushy salesgirls in the shops, to elegant designer boutiques. It's no wonder the people of Hong Kong are high among the fashion conscious since everything is cheaper here and mamufactured or rather, "Made in Hong Kong."

And the food was fantastic. They had just about everything you could imagine from Western Style Prime Ribs to various South East Asian dishes such as pidgeons and snake soup served directly from the alley streets. The nightlife in Hong Kong really is the happening thing. The city is filled with neon lights, fantastic disco's, movies with glamorous stars, harbor cruises, sailor's and girlie bars, palm readers and dentists on the streets, lots of noise and the familiar sounds of mahjohng, snake shows...yes, the sites were amazing, but the skyline of Hong Kong...is simply the most beautiful in the world.

Then, there was school, life at the Chinese University of Hong Kong-a different kind of university life. Different to what one might find of the college campus's of the U.S.. The Chinese University was located a half hour away from the city and all the excitement. It was situated on a mountain with a scenic view of the harbor below. The buildings and facilities were quite similar to what we have at home., but there were no: campus pubs, frat parties, women's equal rights issues, racism, students with cars, campus hotel, heat in the dorms, organized gay/lesbian groups, students on work-study jobs, cheating on exams R.A.'s reminding you of 24 hr. quiet hours-it was always pretty much 24 hours of quiet, football games, students that wore contact lenses-they all wore glasses, students that smoked... anything, shaving cream fights, food fights, arcades on campus, contact between student and professor, co-ed bathrooms, and girls that wore make-up. However, there were: huge cockroaches in the room, laundry service, dim sum and Chinese food all the time, maids that swept the room once a week, a 1 a.m. curfew, bamboo scaffolding against the side of the dorm to climb into your room after 1 a.m, "sweet soup" get togethers, an outdoor swimming pool, lots of tourists and wedding couples on the weekends taking pictures, a fruit truck once a week, a post office on wheels, workers constantly burping and spitting, male/female visiting hours in the dorm rooms (restricted to weekends only between 12-6 p.m.), Chinese instructed classes, dorm activities such as singing contests, bamboo trees and poinsetta plants on campus during Christmas, shy guys, a 2 month rainy season, and always a shortage on toilet paper.

Classes and homework were similar to what was expected at UMASS. Therefore, my learning experience lay in the actual day to day interaction with the Chinese people and culture rather than textbooks.

A significant part of this learning experience was the interaction, dealing and accepting other people and ideas., finding out what makes them who they are. Life is different for everyone. Accepting those differences by trying and doing new things was almost an everyday activity. For example, eating on crocked stools and wooden tables in crowded dark alley streets (sometimes in the company of cats, rats and snakes) was a way of life for the Hong Kong people. I tried it, learned to accept it, and grew to love it.

The ability to adapt and get along well with others, to reach out and try to understand one another, to communicate and share our feelings and ideas. Developing those social interpersonal skills with all different kinds of people was and effort I always tried to make. And the 2 girls that I lived with, were not just my roomates., we became best friends.

I also found out what it was all about to be Chinese., who I am and where I belong, what my elders meant when they would tell me "this was how it was then we were young," why we celebrated all those holidays that aren't on the calender, and ate the kinds we did. I could really beging to pick out what was Asian about me and what was American, because finally, it was me against the entire Chinese culture.

Of course the year did have its ups and downs and lonely times, buty with all the learing and applying of what you know and being able to laugh with new friends, "problems" seemed only so minute and I was really very grateful. In the end, I think I only began to grow and become more of that independent person we all want to be.

Yes, this once in a lifetime opportunity was everything that it was supposed to be. It was eye-opening, mind-broadening and a time in my life, I'll never forget. The initial idea was to go, be open-minded, experience, learn, adapt, accept, and eventually become a part of, and so for 9 months, I did it all and I love Hong Kong! It definitely is the only place in the world where east meets west and being Asian American, it was the best place to discover that you are the best of both worlds.

"Go Discover Hong Kong!"

Ben Rodriguez... the man at the helm

By ANITA ALMEIDA
Nummo News Staff

Nummo Photo By David Walker

Mr. Benjamin Rodriguez, is a graduate from Catholic College of Puerto Rico. After graduating, Mr. Rodriguez returned to New York city to work with migrant workers. Also he felt a great need to help Black and Puerto Rican children.

In 1973, Mr. Rodriguez and several of his colleagues formed a spanish component. Mr. Rodriguez was elected the Director of the program, which he named "Bilingual Collegiate Program" also known as "BCP".

The program became active in 1974. It began with only five staff members and forty students. The majority of the staff members were workstudy students. B.C.P. now has several components such as tutoring, counseling, career and personal placement services. B.C.P. also offers scholarships to students.

The goals of B.C.P. are to establish the opportunity to the migrant community in Amherst, and "to open the university door for the migrant children."

According to Mr. Rodriguez, "At this moment B.C.P. is the most diverse program in the university."

B.C.P. caters to students from all over the world; Latin America, Asia, Europe, and everywhere. The counselors at B.C.P. can relate to every student - in their own language! "No other service here at the university can claim to cater to the needs of so many different cultures."

The Bilingual Collegiate Program has been very successful in offering education to a wide range of Third World students. And to help these students graduate, return to help the community, and to bring the community into the university. Recently, the most rapid expansion has been with the Asian students.

One of the most difficult tasks for B.C.P. is to decrease

Continued on page 6

SPORTS

85-86 N.B.A. Prediction

with Julian Tynes
Nummo News Staff

It's time for National Basketball Association prediction!! This week we are featuring predictions for the N.B.A. Pacific division, the home of the "World Champion" Los Angeles Lakers.

Every team in this division has improved itself significantly, and all 6 teams are contenders for a playoff spot. On with the predictions!!

Los Angeles Lakers

The Lakers had a great season. They obtained redemption in the championship series when they defeated the Celtics 4-2. The Lakers now have a goal of winning back-to-back championships. With the present squad, they have an excellent chance of repeating. In the N.B.A., a good center is essential for a run at that elusive title. The Lakers have a premier center in Kareem Abdul Jabbar. Jabbar, entering his 17th N.B.A. season, is the leagues all time scorer and shotblocker. Last season Jabbar averaged 22.0 points per game and added 622 rebounds to re establish himself as the leagues best center. The other starters on the frontline are James Worthy and Kurt Rambis.

James Worthy shot 57% from the field while averaging 17.6 points per game (ppg). Worthy may be the quickest forward of his size in the league and may be ready to emerge as an N.B.A. superstar.

Kurt Rambis is a poor shooter and an adequate rebounder surrounded by superstars. "Rambo" gets over on his non-stop hustle exemplified by frequent diving into the bleachers for a loose ball.

In the backcourt the Lakers are led by the "Magic Man", Earvin Johnson. Magic averaged 18.3 ppg and 12.6 assist per game (apg) while adding 476 rebounds. Backcourt partner Byron Scott averaged 16.0 ppg and led the N.B.A. in 3 point percentage.

However, bench strength is what separates the Lakers from the rest of the N.B.A. Maurice Lucas, Michael Cooper, rookie A.C. Green and Mike McGee would be starters on most N.B.A. teams; they give the Lakers quality depth. Reserve center, Mitch Kupchack, gives Jabbar an opportunity to grab an occasional rest while adding muscle on the court. With a line up like this, look for the Lakers as the team to beat!!

Portland Trailblazers

This is a team on the move! They have youth, talent, and desire. They have a good coach in Jack Ramsay. However, they will probably end up eliminated, once again, by the Lakers in the playoffs.

The Blazers start off with Sam Bowie at center. Bowie only averaged 10 ppg but was third in the league in blocked shots and averaged 8.6 rebounds per game (rpg). After a summer of tutoring in "The fine points of being an N.B.A. center", by Bill Russell, Bowie may be ready to establish himself as an N.B.A. force, on both ends of the court.

The rest of the front court consists of Mychal Thompson, Kiki Vandeweghe, and Kenny Carr. Thompson, who averaged 18.4 ppg while adding 618 rebounds and 205 assists, is the Blazers best all around front court player. Vandeweghe is the consumate scorer, able to drive by the ablest defenders and hit jumpers from 3 point range. Kenny Carr is the Rambis-type role player who rebounds and elbows with the best of them.

The backcourt of the Blazers is even deeper and more talented than their frontline. The main man in the backcourt, Clyde "The Glide" Drexler. Drexler, a former charter member of the University of Houstons famed fraternity, "Phi Slamma Jamma", averaged 17.2 ppg, 5.9 rpg, 5.5 apg, and 2.21 steals per game (spg), establishing himself as Portlands best all-around player. He won the shooting guard spot from N.B.A. all-star Jim Paxon, a great outside shooter and good passer who lacks Drexlers Michael Jordon-like qualities.

The point guard position will be run by either Steve Colter or Darnell Valentine. Colter is better at running the fast break, Valentine is superior in the set-up offense. Valentine the better defender. Cotler the man with the deadly "J". Either way Portland comes out a winner.

Los Angeles Clippers

What is this? A home for star forwards that nobody wants? Marques Johnson has a drug problem, Milwaukee ships him to the Clippers. Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell injures his knee, Boston ships him to the Clippers. Jamaal Wilkes injures his leg and is released by the Lakers, he signs with the Clippers. What's going on? All joking aside, the acquisition of these forwards could finally mean stability to this troubled franchise. The Clippers should be set at center. Rookie Benoit Benjamin should be the answer to the Clippers prayers! The 7 foot, 250 pound Benmjamin led the nation in blocked shots last season with 5.1 per game while finishing second in rebounds (behind Xavier McDaniel) and scoring 21.5 ppg on 58.2% shooting. Benjamin could turn out to be a superstar. He is backed by James Donaldson, a 7-2, 280 pounder who led the league in field goal percentage (fg pct.).

The Clippers backcourt is set. Off guard Derek Smith was picked up on waivers from the Golden State Warriors. He proceeded to embarass Golden State management by averaging 22.1 ppg while snaring 427 rebounds in 80 games. His running mate, Norm Nixon was fourth in the N.B.A. in assists (8.8) while averaging 17.2 ppg. They are backed up by Lancaster Gordon and Franklin Edwards, two young athletes who should mold themselves into capable backups.

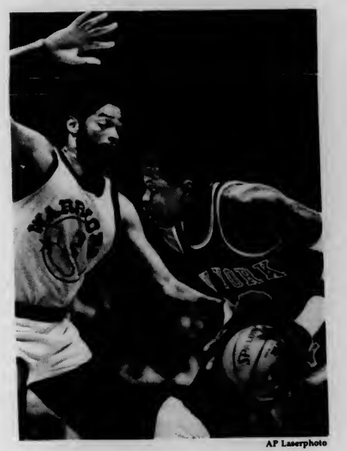
That means everything depends on the forwards. With a trio of Johnson, Maxwell, and Wilkes, the Clippers should have a workable forward combination. When combined with Benjamin and their guard duo, the Clippers could be a potent force for other N.B.A. teams to contend with.

Seattle Supersonics

"Oh where, oh where has my Gus Williams gone, oh where, oh where can he be?" This refrain should have echoed through the Kingdome last year as Seattle virtually collapsed without "The Wizard".

Up front the Sonics are set. Center Jack Sikma is a perennial all-star. Power forward Tom Chambers is a hidden gem. The 6-11 forward led Seattle in scoring, averaging 21.5 ppg while proving to be the best running, jumping, 6-11 forward in the league. Clearly, this guy doesn't suffer from "white man's disease"!

First round draft pick Xavier McDaniel should nail down the small forward spot. The 6-7 McDaniel was the only collegiate player to ever lead the nation in both scoring and rebounding. He should solidify the small forward position, a weak spot since the retirement of John Johnson many moons ago. The starters will be ably backed up by 6-11 Tim McCormick, 6-10 Frank Brickowski and 6-7 Danny Vranes.



The backcourt is where Seattle suffers. Off guard Al Wood is a great shooter in the open court or behind a pick, however his poor passing and ball handling makes him a liability when playing in the backcourt. Gerald Henderson is a fairly good point guard, but he's no Gus Williams. While a better floor general than Gus, he lacks the speed, quickness, shooting, defense and playmaking of Williams; abilities Seattle sorely missed. Jon Sunvold, his 6-2 backup, is too slow to drive by anyone or defense anyone. This leaves it up to reserve Ricky Sobers to provide quality reserve help. Sobers is a cool customer under pressure, but last year they often weren't in many pressure situations. This could be a long season for Sonic fans.

Golden State Warriors

This could finally be the season which brings a smile to the faces of Warrior fans. However if the Warriors don't learn to play better defense, it will be "the same old story"!

The Warriors have offensive talent. Center Joe Barry Carrol has a 20.1 ppg career scoring average. Forward Purvis Short averaged 28.0 ppg last season while power forward Larry Smith averaged 11.1 ppg, and 10.9 rpg. Backup forward Greg Ballard has proven N.B.A. credentials and backup center-forward Jerome Whitehead will be fighting for playing time with rookie Bobby Lee Hurt of Alabama.

The backcourt has scorers in Eric "Sleepy" Floyd and first round pick Chris Mullin of St. Johns. However if the Warriors do not develop depth and defense they can forget it!

AP Laserphoto

New York Knicks center Patrick Ewing (right), tries to find his way to the basket as Golden State Warriors center Joe Barry Carroll defends during the first quarter of their NBA game in Okland Thursday night

Phoenix Suns

A team in transition, hard to figure out!

The Suns have a hole in the middle; 7ft James Edwards has a nice turn-around jumper, but averages 5.5 rpg. He is a poor shotblocker and defender who can't pass. Alvan Adams is a good shooter and great passer, however the 6-9 Adams is too short and thin to be an effective rebounder or defender as an N.B.A. center. Rick Robey is terrible, he can't run, jump, or shoot. A total waste of 6 feet 11 inches!

The forward situation isn't much better. One bright spot is the play of 6-10 forward Larry Nance. Nance, an N.B.A. all-star averaged 19.9 ppg while hauling down 536 rebounds as a "small" forward. However power forward Maurice Lucas is gone. This means first round pick Ed Pinkney may find himself in a starting position. The 195 lb Pinkney is not the banger Lucas was and with Adams, and Nance, he Suns may have the thinnest frontline in the league.

The guard situation is even worse. With Walter Davis' comeback uncertain and Kyle Macy having moved on, the backcourt is in chaos. Davis is one of the great guards in the league. At 6-6, combining flashing speed with silky smoothness and the sweetest jumper in the league, this guy is so good he's Michael Jordons' idol! Jay Humpries seems like the heir apparent at the point. Humpries has been compared to Dennis Johnson defensively and Norm Nixon offensively, however Walter Davis is the key. If Davis is healthy they have a good chance to make the play-offs, however, without "Sweet D" forget it!

FOR PACIFIC DIVISION PREDICTIONS, SEE PAGE 6

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 44 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Thursday, November 7, 1985

Senate makes progress

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Undergraduate Student Senate, in a turn around from last week's meeting when only three motions were considered, last night got through more than half its unprecedented seven page agenda.

The senate considered about 15 motions up to 10 p.m., many of which were from the old business section of the agenda. It was rearranged by a senate vote to suspend the rules, which allows the rearrangement.

Three motions were withdrawn by their original sponsors and six motions were tabled for further student review. The agenda is usually about two and a half pages long.

A move to vote no confidence to Senate Speaker John Ruddock was not acted upon before the senate adjourned.

A motion to require that senate meetings end no later than 15 minutes before the last bus is scheduled to leave on seven selected routes, was approved 48 to 28 by the assembly. The passage will result in senate meetings, beginning last night, to end at 11:15 p.m. to insure the safety and convenience of members.

Senate meetings have been scheduled to go to midnight, which is the time a Campus Center room is reserved for the assembly. The motion caused much debate

continued on page 7

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

TRYING TO TAKE COVER — Senior accounting major Susan Allen tries to escape yesterday's rain under the protection of her jacket. Today's forecast calls for a chance of showers tonight.

Lack of business closes Inn

By TOM MIDDLETON
Collegian Staff

Lack of business has forced the Lord Jeffery Inn to close its restaraunt and bar indefinitely. About 50 union employees who have been picketing the inn have been laid off by the company management's decision.

The action was announced yesterday after the union and management failed to reach an agreement at a meeting called by a federal mediator Tuesday night. Food and beverage sales make up 55 percent of the inn's income according to Kent Faerber, president of the Amherst Inn Company, owners of the inn.

Restaurant business at the inn, of which is 75 percent owned by Amherst College, has been off by about 60 percent compared with last Fall, according to the inn's General Manager Eric Nusbaum. Much of the drop in customers has been due to the 14-day-old picket by members of Local 217 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union.

Many drivers for food and beverage supply companies have honored the picket line by refusing to deliver goods to the inn. "We're out of all Coca-Cola products," Nusbaum said

"We had days when we were serving nobody for lunch and six or eight people for dinner," Nusbaum said. The inn has lost more than $500,000 in the last five years he said. In remarks to Amherst College faculty, Faerber said deficits are projected at $200,000 for the current fiscal year.

Union employees have been working at the inn without a contract since Oct. 24. The main dispute in negotiations has been a two-tier pay scale proposed by management where new employees would work with a lower pay scale and fewer benefits than present employees.

Union members will attempt to bring the issue to campus by speaking to students, faculty and staff at Amherst College, said Union Representative Rob Traber.

Although about 30 union employees are still working at the inn no future negotiating sessions have been scheduled.

'Assassin' may threaten student safety

By DANIEL MILLER
Collegian Staff

The game "assassin," in which students shoot at each other with water pistols, has caused University of Massachusetts officials to be concerned that the game might threaten student safety, and be a souce of harassment to those who don't play or understand the game.

On Oct. 26 campus police stopped at gunpoint one student and two non-students outside of Butterfield House after dormitory security reported three persons walking outside the building with guns. The guns were plastic. The three were warned and released.

In a letter to all Orchard Hill and Central residential area residents, dated Oct. 30, area Coordinator Carol Wallace said that because "assassin" is being played on campus, "a number of students have in their possession assorted plastic 'weapons.' These weapons have caused several students to feel harassed and frightened and several other students to go through judicial proceedings for 'harassment' and 'endangering behavior.'"

Wallace cited the incident that took place outside of Butterfield. "Although this situation did not end tragically, the proliferation of plastic weapons on campus creates a potentially life-threatening situation," the letter stated.

In the game "assassin," each person is an assassin as well as a target. One person determines who will be the target of whom; if one "assassinates" someone, that person reveals who his or her target was before he or she was "assassinated." Then the assassin goes after that person. The last person to not be "assassinated" is the winner. Jim Vaudreuil of Gorman House said a game can last as long as two weeks.

Gerald O'Neil, director of the campus Department of Public Safety, said complaints to the police concerning weapons have to be treated as though the weapons involved are real.

"What we are dealing with is a commonsense approach," O'Neil said. "We can't assume that every gun is a toy, because our experience has been that a lot of complaints we get involve real weapons."

Wallace said that she means to "educate students in the consequences of playing with these toy weapons. The police feel compelled to draw their guns in 'weapons complaint calls,' and whenever real weapons are involved, there is a potential for serious consequences," she said.

"Our concern is that when it (assassin)

continued on page 3

Inside:

Sen. Kerry to speak on campus on Friday 3
Finals are coming! 10
Soccer knocks off Harvard, hope for playoffs 20

"There may be some grand plot here we can't fathom now."
—UMass professor Karl Ryavec on the redefection of former KGB official Vitaly Yurchenko.

Yurchenko returns home

By ANNE McCRORY
Collegian Staff

While the reasons for former KBG official Vitaly Yurchenko's desire to return to the Soviet Union remain unknown, a Soviet specialist at the University of Massachusetts thinks personal considerations better explain the incident than the fact the man may be a double agent—a possibility, however, he does not rule out.

"He may be a double agent sent here to find out how we handle these debriefings for defectors—what we ask, how we handle it, and who's doing it," political science Professor Karl Ryavec said in an interview yesterday. But "It's much more likely we have a person who defected for the reasons he stated (dissatisfaction with the Soviet system)...(who) simply realized American society is going to very different from what he left."

Yurchenko, once the number five official in the Soviet KGB responsible for North American operations, was the highest ranking official from the spy agency ever to defect to the West when he disappeared from the Vatican Museum in Rome last July and defected to the US Embassy there. Last month, he reportedly revealed information on Soviet intelligence to the CIA.

Monday night, he appeared at a surprise press conference at the Soviet residential compound in Washington, claiming the CIA had kidnapped, drugged and attempted to bribe him. He said he wanted to return to the Soviet Union, and State Department officials determined that that decision was voluntary after meeting with the defector Tuesday. He flew home last night.

Amherst College professor of political science William Taubman, who specializes in Soviet foreign policy, noted that several Soviet defectors—among them, former leader Joseph Stalin's daughter, a journalist, soldiers stationed in Afganistan and most recently a sailor aboard a Soviet freighter in the Mississippi who jumped ship last week—have chosen to return home. While their fates

continued on page 7

AP Laserphoto

Vitaly Yurchenko

National

Ballot victories for gun control, abortion

(AP) — Voters approved ballot measures affirming handgun control and the right to abortions and to smoke-free workplaces, but three communities rejected attempts to fluoridate their water and San Franciscans refused to limit downtown high-rise construction.

Even in an off-off year election, voters in nine states and scores of cities and towns grappled with ballot issues that touched on some of the nation's most emotion-laden economic and social questions.

Three New England towns-Bristol, Conn.; Dover, N.H.; and Derry, N.H.—rejected similarly worded measures Tuesday calling for the overturning of the U.S. Supreme Court's 12-year old ruling that legalized abortions.

Oak Park, Ill., one of the four U.S. cities which have banned handguns, beat back a proposal to repeal its 13-month-old ban. The other cities with similar handgun laws are Washington, D.C.; Morton Grove, Ill.; and Evanston, Ill.

Tucson, Ariz., voters passed a proposition restricting smoking in workplaces, and another one limiting the size and location of billboards. But they defeated a measure that would have required smoke-free space in restaurants.

Fluoridation fared badly in three cities. San Antonio, Texas, narrowly turned back a proposal to fluoridate the city's water supply, making it the second largest city without fluoride in its water after Los Angeles. Westfield and Leominster, both in Massachusetts, also rejected fluoridation.

"People feel the time has come to decrease the amount of additives in our drinking water and they are increasingly demanding a say in issues such as fluoridation," said Susan Pare, president of the Center for Health Action, based in Springfield, Mass.

San Franciscans soundly defeated a proposal to authorize spending up to $150,000 in public funds for a statewide petition drive to legalize marijuana. They also rejected a ballot measure to deny building permits for high-rise structures exceeding 50,000 square feet. Maine narrowly approved a "people's veto" referendum giving residents the right to approve any disposal plans for low-level nuclear waste. Residents of two college town, Boulder, Colo., and Oberlin, Ohio, approved measures declaring their cities "nuclear free zones," off limits to nuclear weapons. Boulder voters also approved a proposition renouncing the first use of nuclear weapons by the United States. Santa Barbara voters rejected a proposal, backed by environmentally minded celebrities like John Travolta, Jane Fonda and James Arness, that would have imposed tough new restrictions on offshore drilling. It was a victory for oil companies which had run a $1.1 million campaign to defeat the measure.

Reagan redefines goals for 'Star Wars' system

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan redefined his goals for the proposed "Star Wars" missile defense system yesterday, saying he would deploy the space shield unilaterally if other nuclear powers can not agree on a worldwide nuclear defense and disarmament program.

"If we had a defensive system and we could not get agreement on their part to eliminate the nuclear weapons, we would have done our best and we would go ahead with deployment, even though, as I say, that would then open us up to the charge of achieving the capacity for a first strike," Reagan said in an interview less than two weeks before he meets Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva.

The president's comments appeared to negate the terms he laid out in an interview with Soviet journalists last week in which he said he would not deploy a defensive system until offensive missiles had been dismantled. But Reagan denied there was any inconsistency in his separate descriptions of his policy.

"The terms for our own deployment would be the elimination of the offensive weapons," Reagan said to the Soviets.

But yesterday, he told the White House correspondents of Western news agencies tht if the U.S. research program he calls the Strategic Defense Initiative were to come up with an effective system to defend against nuclear attack, the United States would call a meeting of all nuclear powers to "see if we cannot use that weapon to bring about . . . the elimination of nuclear weapons."

If that conference failed to gain an agreement for mutual use of the defensife system, Reagan said, "we would go ahead with deployment."

EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS WANTED IN A BEER. AND LESS.
Friends don't let friends drive drunk.

Election day brings surprises and stability

Founder of Green Party 'astounded' by progress

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts professor is "astounded" by the fact that in only five months he and the founders of the New Haven, Conn., Green Party have been able to do what he says the Democratic and Republican parties took 150 years to accomplish.

Economics professor Richard Wolff received 2,441 votes out of 24,782 cast Tuesday in the New Haven mayoral contest, approximately 10 percent of the tally. Incumbent Democrat Biaggio DiLeto received 18,921 votes, Republican challenger Carolaine Dinegar received 3,420.

Wolff, a founder of the Green Party, said his organization had originally hoped to garner 1 percent of the vote, the amount required by the state of Connecticut to obtain legal status as a minor party.

"Everyone is astonished by the results," Wolff said of the city's political establishment. "To be honest, so are we."

The New Haven Green Party was formed last spring in order to lay the groundwork for a third national party "if and when the major parties in the United States abandon the major concerns for social justice," Wolff said.

"The Democrats run the city, we are the opposition and then there is the Republican Party," he said. Wolff said he was especially pleased that he beat the Republican Party candidate in one third of the city's precincts.

"The basis of disaffection from conventional politics in the United States is broader than any of us understood," Wolff said. "The willingness of Americans to accept and consider new political choices is much greater than we understood."

Wolff said he and the leaders of the Green Party will use the next few weeks to "try and figure out where this support comes from in order to make the New Haven Green Party a regular part of the political life of New Haven."

The next step will be to establish a shadow cabinet, "in a sense a parallel government so we can become step by step a party that is active all year and a party that can demonstrate to the people that is has the insights and integrity to govern," Wolff said.

Musante Jr. re-elected as mayor

David B. Musante Jr. was re-elected for a fourth term as the mayor of Northampton by a large majority of votes Tuesday.

Musante ran against James A. Kruidenier, a founding member of the Northampton Citizens Action Network, who was competing for the position for the first time.

About 6,400 of the 16,000 registered voters in Northampton turned out to vote in Tuesday's election, said Adeline Murray, the city clerk of Northampton.

Musante received 4484 of the votes and Kruidenier received 1695 of the mayoral votes.

The only referendum question on the ballot, which asked if a commission should be elected to form a city charter, was defeated in a close race. The question received 2683 votes for it and 2721 against it.

The 54-year-old mayor has held an elected position in Northampton since 1963 and has been been the mayor of the city since 1980.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

FAMILY WALK IN THE RAIN — Emily McClung and her two-year-old son Gregory of Amherst enjoy the light rain as they stroll through downtown yesterday afternoon.

Sen. Kerry will speak at UMass tomorrow

By JOE SHARTRAND
Collegian Staff

Senator John F. Kerry, D-Mass., will speak on arms control and the Geneva summit at 2 p.m. tomorrow in the Student Union Ballroom at the University of Massachusetts as part of a series of discussions on arms control.

The series, "The Summit and Beyond: Preventing Nuclear War," begins today and will continue until Nov.19 when President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev meet in Geneva for their summit meeting.

The series, sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies, opens today with a panel discussion titled, "After Nuclear War Starts: Can it be Controlled?". The discussion at 8 p.m. in the Converse Hall Assembly Room at Amherst College will feature Allan Krass, a physics professor at Hampshire College and a consultant to the Union of Concerned Scientists, and Professor Paul Bracken of Yale University.

A conference on arms control, titled, "From Trinity to Star Wars," will be broadcast, Tuesday via satellite, from Washington, D.C. to Mein Lecture Hall at Hampshire College. Amherst, along with five cities, has been chosen to participate in this conference.

John Sanbonmatsu, assistant director of the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies, said "satellites will be hooked up in Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Fransisco and Amherst." He said Krass convinced the Union of Concerned Scientists, which produced and organized the conference, to telecast it out to Hampshire College.

The conference will include Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn; Ambassador Jonathon Dean, chief U.S. negotiator at the USSR Mutual and Balance Force Reductions; Hodding Carter III, former assistant Secretary of State under President Jimmy Carter; Paul Bracken from Yale University; and Henry Kendall, chairman of the Union of Concerned Scientists. The audience will be able to communicate with the panel members through a live satellite link from Washington, D.C. "People will be able to ask questions of the panel members," Sanbonmatsu said.

The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies will handle all the publicity and details involved. "I hope that the space-age formats of the conference will bring people's attention to these kinds of issues," Sanbonmatsuhe said. "We hope people that attend will learn something about the space-age and U.S.-Soviet relations."

On Tuesday, Nov. 19, Professor Richard Lebow, director of peace studies and professor of politics at Cornell University, will speak on the arms race in the New York Room, Wooley Hall, Mount Holoyoke College. On Nov. 20 there will be an instant analysis of the Geneva summit with Lebow, Eric Einhorn, and Amherst College political science professor William Taubman at 8 p.m. in Graham Hall at Smith College.

Teach-in discusses crisis

By FRANCIE RICHARDSON
Collegian Correspondent

A teach-in to discuss who is responsible for the crisis in Central America will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in room 120 in the School of Management.

The teach-in, sponsored by the Faculty and Staff for Peace in Central America, will be divided into two parts. In the first series of discussions, speakers will focus on the background information having to do with the start of the Central American crisis.

The second half of the teach-in will look at on what students can do to help solve the crisis.

"I think we want to get the campus community more involved in some way," Ruth Hooke, the director of the University Without Walls program said. "It would be ideal if they (students) wanted to take a course or go on a trip to Central America. We want them not only to be informed but get involved and do something."

Speakers in the first half of the teach-in include John Cole, professor of anthropology, geography professor Julie Graham, Mary Dutcher, a Witness for Peace activist, and Micheal Thelwell, a professor of Afro-American Literature. A question and answer period will follow the four speakers.

The second-half speakers will be Michael Urmann, national director of Technica, who will discuss how his organization can scientifically and technologically assist Nicaragua and Bill Gibson, a professor of economics and advisor to the Nicaraguan government.

Ruth Hooke, director of University without Walls, will speak on Sanctuary and Doug Calvin, the head of the Student Delegation to El Salvador, will speak on "El Salvador: Mass Organizations and Crisis at the University".

The Faculty and Staff for Peace in Central America was established in December of 1984 to "educate the UMass community about what is going on in Central America" Hooke said.

Grievance policy ready

By SIOBHAN MASTERSON
Collegian Staff

The Academic Matters Council of the Student Government Association yesterday approved the substance of a proposed academic grievance policy, to be formally voted on by the council next Wednesday.

"I felt something very supportive and constructive today," Ellen Breslin, chairwoman of the Undergraduate Student Senate's Academic Affairs Committee, said.

The 12-person council met yesterday morning to make revisions in a policy that has been in the works for over eight years, she said.

The policy would allow for a formal procedure that a student can follow if there is a complaint about a faculty member's grading procedures. Larry Benedict, dean of Academic Support Services, said, "I am very pleased with the proposed policy. Every group on campus has a formalized due process except for the students."

According to the policy, an academic grievance is defined as a complaint by an undergraduate student alleging that some member of the University community has caused the student to suffer some specific harm related to an academic matter.

Exceptions originally were made pertaining to "matters of academic judgment," Howard Gatlin, UMass omsbudsman said, "(but) then we would have a procedure but no definable grievance."

The council proposed a solution by defining "arbitrary and capricious grading" as grading that is given to a student on basis other than performance, or by unreasonable standards.

"Nobody was willing to define academic judgment. Now the policy concentrates on what can be touched," Breslin said.

"This procedure can also protect faculty from unjust complaints, and it will improve relations in general," Gatlin said. "Professors who are accused unjustly will also benefit from this policy."

Al Wynne, a member of the council and a chemistry professor, said, "I have a concern that those receptive to the policy won't need it, and those who do might have problems with it. It definitely should be put through, however."

The policy must still be formally approved by this council, and then it will be presented to the Faculty Senate before the end of the semester, council members said.

★assasin

continued from page 1

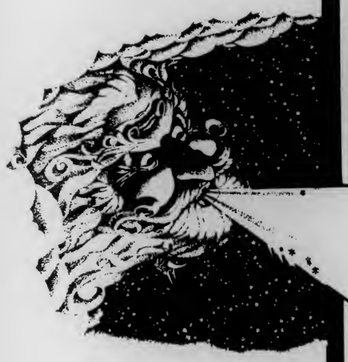
gets into the community which isn't familiar with the game, then it can cause problems," said Larry Moneta, assistant director of residential education for the east side residence halls.

Gorman House residential assistant Share Garay said that the Gorman-Wheeler Cluster staff have distributed a letter throughout the two dormitories encouraging the use of subsitutes for water guns, such as stickers or water balloons, while playing "assassin."

CHINESE KITCHEN
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
興旺樓
Eat In or Take Out Hours:
Sunday - Noon to 10 PM
Mon-Sat - 11:30 AM to 10 PM

Pu-Pu Platter $12.00

Try Our Luncheon-Dinner Specials
Only $1.49 before 3 PM, $1.90 after 3 PM



2 LOCATIONS:
430 Russell St (Rt 9) Hadley 253-2571
150 King St, Northampton 586-8220

Applause - Aria - Burnside - Calzone - Casio - CB-700 - Digitech - DOD - Embassy Studios
Zildjian
2nd ANNUAL WESTERN MASS. MUSIC EXHIBITION/WORKSHOP
Nov. 10, 1985 10:00 am to 5:00 pm Nov. 11, 1985
Sunday - Two Days - Monday
Parwick Centre - Chicopee, MA (Exit 5 MA. TPK)
$4.00 in advance (save a dollar)
$5.00 at the door
$2.50 to all students
Good for ADMISSION both days
Admission charge applicable towards any purchase expires 11/27/85
FEATURING CLINICS ON: Yamaha Drums • Zildjian Cymbols • Simmons Drums • Guild Guitars • DOD Effects • Siel Keyboards • Digitech Rack Mounts • Sieko Keyboards • Yamaha Sound Reinforcement • Kurzweil Keyboards • Yamaha DX Keyboards, Ycams, Drum Machines
Sponsored by Falcetti Music Since 1957
For more information please call (413) 543-1002
1181 Worcester St. Indian Orchard 543-1002
Holyoke Mall at Ingleside 538-7970
69 Elm St. Westfield, Ma 568-8855
543 Enfield St. Enfield, Ct. 203-745-3737
Yamaha
Sony
Ultimate Support
Fostex - Guild - KMD - Kurzweil - Marko - Sabian - Seiko - Siel - Simmons - Sonor

Yesterday & Today Records

Grateful Dead Psychadelic
Grand Opening
Punk Jazz
Blues
Top CASH For:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's
An Alternative Record Store
98 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 253-9209

STUDY AT OXFORD, NEXT SUMMER WITH THE UMass at Oxford STUDY PROGRAM.
FOR DETAILS,
ATTEND THE OXFORD METING AT:
HERTER 305
NOV. 7, 1985, 7:30 PM,
OR STOP BY BARTLET 160
OR CALL 545-1914.

TRADER FRED'S
LABELS FOR LESS

BABY... IT'S COLD OUTSIDE!
TRADER FRED'S OWN
Chamois Shirt 100% Cotton 1st quality $14.95 2 for $25
8" LEATHER INSULATED IRR'S
Herman Survivor Boots reg. $95 OUR PRICE $49.99
WINDCREST DISTRESSED CANVAS & DENIM
"Guess-Style" Jacket reg. $69.95 OUR PRICE $39.95
PINE TREE FOR WOMEN
Down-Filled Jacket reg. $100 OUR PRICE $49.95
GLORIA VANDERBILT
Leather Boots reg. $69 OUR PRICE $39.95
100% COTTON
Turtlenecks reg. $16 OUR PRICE $7.99
Trader Fred's is working to become your Lowest Priced Clothing Store in Hampshire County.
48 North Pleasant St., Amherst in the new Tucker Taft Building
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-9 Sun. 12-5
253-7155

21st Oxford seminar offers an experience

By CARYN BOWERS
Collegian Staff

For students who are seeking a summer educational experience at one of the world's oldest universities, the University of Massachusetts is sponsoring the twenty-first annual Oxford Summer Seminar beginning this July

A meeting to discuss the seminar, will be held tonight at 7:30 in Herter Hall room 305.

All classes in the seminar are taught by British professors, and contain no more than 12 students. Many are set up as individual or small group tutorials.

In a recent letter to the English Department, one student wrote, "I look back on my summer at Oxford with the fondest of memories. I am certain I learned more about people, how and why they operate, than ever before."

Last year 120 of the more than 200 applicants were accepted to the program. Forty-five of these were from UMass, and the rest represented 46 other colleges around the country.

The six-week long session is open to all five-college students, and runs from July 3 to August 13. Room, board and tuition for seminar participants costs $1775.

"The Oxford Summer Seminar is one of the oldest international programs, and one of the most reasonably priced," Richard Blum, assistant director of the program said. A ten-day pre-seminar program, which serves to introduce students to the English countryside, is offered for $690.

The program also features optional side tours to parts of Europe, social functions, and recreational activities—arranged and organized by the summer's student administrative staff.

Blood drive ends today

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

In the last day of its campus blood drive today, the American Red Cross is pushing to increase blood donations which have been low this week.

The blood drive will begin this morning at 9:30 and end at 3:30 p.m.

"Yesterday, we collected 113 pints of blood and we had hoped to do 150," said Chris Keaney, a field representative from the Red Cross. "We did about 40 more last year."

The blood drive in the Student Union Ballroom, which comes to the University for three days every semester, depends on UMass donors for a certain number of pints. "We have to collect 200 pints a day to meet expectancies," Keaney said.

"UMass is the single largest donor group in the state," she said, emphasizing the dependance of the state on UMass donations. "Everybody throughout the state notices how well UMass does and they do appreciate it."

She attributes the main reason for the decline in donations to the misconception that people can get AIDS from giving blood. "We feel the AIDS problem is affecting the blood donor problem. You definitely can't get AIDS," Keaney said.

In order to fit into people's schedules and avoid lines, the Red Cross is taking appointments. "It only takes 45 minutes to an hour to donate," Keaney said, adding that this is the only blood drive in western Massachusetts.

The bloodmobile also comes to the University every Tuesday to a room in the Campus Center.

November is Career Planning Month
Information sessions and interview sign-ups in November:

EMPLOYER	IBM	STAR MARKET
EVENT	Open House Note: 3 resumes required for admission Meet recruiters & sign up for Nov. 13 interviews	Info Session
DATE	Nov. 12	Nov. 7
TIME	10 am - 4 pm CC 162-75	7 pm SOM 112
MAJORS	EE, ME, IE, CS Mktg, MIS, Acctg Finance, Tech Writing	HRTA, Food Mktg, Mgt & related

An opportunity to find out about some of the co-ops in your major!
OFFICE FOR COOPERATIVE EDUCATION
University Career Center 545-2224

James H. McManus eating place
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889
CONVENIENT to CAMPUS!
• BREAKFAST SERVED ANY TIME
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
• BEER & WINE SERVED 'TIL MIDNITE
• PLENTY OF PARKING

Are you looking for a CHALLENGING CAREER?
Explore career oportunities with LECHMERE, a ten-store growth leader of the $8 - billion plus
DAYTON HUDSON CORPORATION
Come share challenging ideas with C. George Scala, Chairman, CEO and President of Lechmere on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7
5-6 pm
School of Management Building, Room 312
7-9 pm
University Career Center, Fraternity/Sorority Park
LECHMERE will be recruiting on campus on NOVEMBER 19 for management oportunities in the MARKETING and SALES divisions
LECHMERE
An Affirmative ACtion/Equal Opportunity Employer

TONIGHT
THURSDAY
THIS IS SPINAL TAP
The Concept Movie
Shows 5, 7, 9, 11
$2.00 admission
Campus Center Auditorium

MEN'S SHOE and BOOT
SALE
Including such brand names as:
Timberland
Clarks
Dexter
Nunn Bush
Come in and SAVE!!
BOLLES SHOES
8 Main St. Amherst 253-5598

jazz on the side...
Enjoy a piping hot slice of live jazz every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night from 9 to 12 pm.
plus complimentary hors d'oeuvres in the cozy ambience of The Loft at Seasons Restaurant.
Seasons
529 Belchertown Road • Amherst • 253-9909

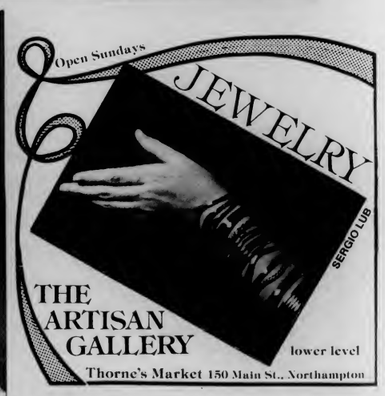
EVEN BEFORE FINALS, YOU COULD FINALLY GET THE AMERICAN EXPRESS CARD.

If you've been wanting the American Express® Card for some time, this is some time to apply.

Because if you're a senior, all you need is to accept a $10,000 career-oriented job.

That's it. No strings. No gimmicks.

(And even if you don't have a job right now, don't worry. This offer is still good for 12 months after you graduate.) Why is American Express making the Card a little easier for seniors to get?



Well, to put it simply, we believe in your future. And this is a good time to show it—for we can help in a lot of ways as you graduate. The Card can help you be ready for business. It's a must for travel to meetings and entertaining. And to entertain yourself, you can use it to buy a new wardrobe for work or a new stereo.

The Card can also help you establish your credit history, which can help in your future.

So call 1-800-THE-CARD and ask to have a Special Student Application sent to you. Or look for one on campus.

The American Express® Card. Don't leave school without it.℠

© 1985 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

Open Sundays
JEWELRY
SERGIO LUB
THE ARTISAN GALLERY
lower level
Thorne's Market 150 Main St., Northampton

FREE
MINI ALBUM
Bring in a roll of 110, 126 Disc, 135 C-41 Color Print Film for developing & printing. We'll give you a 12 page mini-album. FREE.
PHOTOS
Located in the Campus Center
Member 1985-86
We use Kodak PAPER
Offer Good: nov. 1-12
UNIVERSITY STORE

★ senate

continued from page 1

from senators questioning the necessity of the meeting deadline.

"I encourage you all to vote for this," said Dianne Rossi, SGA treasurer. She cited the increasing amount of assaults on campus and the impending danger to women walking home alone if they were forced to walk.

One of the motion's opponents was Bob Griffen, a senator who said meetings "should go as long as possible to get the work done for the good of the students." Senate meetings, he said, should not be cut short because of certain difficulties for some in getting home.

The senate also approved more than 30 committee appointments which were the object of controversy at last week's meeting. There was debate last week over who had the power to make the appointments, which caused an early adjournment because of excessive disruption in the assembly.

In other business, a Budgets Committee motion to approve the allocation of the $50,000 concert fund was approved. The fund, which was determined by a student referendum, is allocated to provide the Union Program Council with 45 percent or $22,500 of the total fund. The Southwest and eastside concerts are provided 22 percent or $11,000, and the Greek area concert is to be provided 11 percent or $5,500 of the fund.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

UPWARD SPIRAL – The ladder on the water tower at Orchard Hill moves upward into the cloudy Amhrst skies yesterday.

★ Yurchenko

continued from page 1

Motivations aside, Yurchenko "must have given them (the CIA) some valuable information - otherwise, they would've dropped him," Ryavec said. And he will have to give the Soviets information during his debriefing when he returns home, a situation that leads Ryavec to call the man a possibly "unbalanced" person who "wanted to do heroic deeds."

"He was a hero here (when he defected), now he will be a hero to the Soviets again," he said.

The CIA has denied Yurchenko's tale of being kidnapped and drugged by its agents, but that story will most likely be used in the Soviet press in order to make the incident seem believable and "they may even do a movie or TV show on it," Ryavec said.

are large unknown, Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., vice-chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said yesterday of Yurchenko's future: "If he's lucky, a bullet will be put in the base of his skull."

As for the reasons behind Yurchenko's decision, Taubman said, "This is the secret world of espionage of game within games within games. It's not like interpreting Soviet foreign policy, which in itself is not that easy (but at least) you have something to go on. This is really a mystery."

Ryavec said another factor in Yurchenko's "re-defection" may be the fact that Yurchenko's family still lives in the Soviet Union. "He may have sacrificed himself to make sure their lives wouldn't be so terrible—that his family won't become non-persons," he said.

Ryavec noted that many emigres leave the Soviet Union to make better lives for their children—an option that Yurchenko, with his wife and son still in Moscow, does not have. Beginning a new life in the United States can be difficutl for a 50-year-old man, especially one who, as a former member of the KGB, would not be welcomed into the Soviet emigre community, which is largely Jewish.

"America is a very dynamic, fluid, confusing society—many emigres find America difficult," Ryavec said. "They's like something more orderly, predictable, than what they get here.

Bruno's
- Quality Pizza - Subs -
256-0222
FREE DELIVERY
Sun. - Wed. 4 pm to 2 am
Thurs. - Fri. - Sat. 4 pm to 3 am

Oh where oh where is
DELAWARE?
McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Saturday at 1:00

Let's break the Delaware jinx and help the Minutemen into the Playoffs

Bring your noisemakers, banners and especially your Spirit to the Biggest Game of the Year
Be there on Saturday
at 1:00

LOVE NOTES
TERM PAPERS
TAKE HOME EXAMS
RESEARCH PROJECTS
The IBM Portable PC can help you with them all. With a built in amber display, two diskette drives, and 256 KB of main memory, the Portable PC runs the full range of IBM PC software.

To find out more about the Portable PC and what it can do for you, come to the IBM information booth in the Campus Center this Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

NO MATTER WHAT YOU'RE TYPING WE'RE YOUR TYPE.
IBM

THE SUMMIT AND BEYOND: AVOIDING NUCLEAR WAR

A special series of events sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies (PAWSS)

TONIGHT, 8:00 PM:
"AFTER NUCLEAR WAR STARTS: CAN IT BE CONTROLLED?"

A panel discussion with Dr. Bruce Blair (Cornell), Dr. Paul Bracken (Yale), and Prof. Allan Krass (Hampshire College)

Amherst College, Converse Hall, Red Rm.

TOMORROW, 2:00 PM:
SENATOR JOHN KERRY

Will speak on nuclear arms control and the Geneva Summit
U.Mass Student Ballroom

TUES., NOV. 12, 8:00 PM:
"FROM TRINITY TO STAR WARS"

National video teleconference from Washington, D.C., with former Secy. of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Sen. Albert Gore, Amb. Jonathan Dean, Dr. Paul Bracken, and Prof. Henry Kendall (MIT). Sponored by the Union of Concerned Scientists (live hook-up via satellite)
Hampshire College, Franklin Patterson Hall

All events open to all Five College students, faculty and staff. For information, call: PAWSS, 549-4600, ext. - 563

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday, November 13

Over 30 companies represented!
Presentation, Luncheon and Career Fair
Luncheon tickets on sale in SOM lobby
until Nov. 8

Those wishing to attend only presentation and Career Fair are welcome from 10:00 am - 5:00 pm,
1st floor Campus Center
Open to all students - any major!

Sponsored by
the Undergraduate Business Club

LIBERAL ARTS CAREER WEEK

SPONSORED BY

UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE

NOVEMBER 7, 1985

November 7 - HOW TO LAND A JOB IN HIGH TECH WITH A LIBERAL ARTS DEGREE - CC 168 - 1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Facilitated by a software engineer manager from WANG Laboratories. Topics: How to prepare while still in school; skill building; developing references; leveraging experience; job search and interviewing techniques.

UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICE - WE MAKE IT HAPPEN!

UPS

University Career Center
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
545-2224

Cigarette causes fire in Hampden DC

A cigarette thrown into a waste basket containing styrofoam cups and other paper products caused a fire in the lobby of Hampden Dining Commons Tuesday evening, University of Massachusetts Police said.

There was no damage done to the building. Amherst fire department extinguished the fire, police said.

In other police reports:

A student hit his head on a wall Tuesday evening on the 18th floor lounge of Washington Tower when he was allegedly "horsing around" with other students. He was semi-conscious and was taken to Cooley-Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, police said.

Stereo equipment was reported stolen Tuesday from two cars parked in lot 44 in seperate incidents, police said.

A stero equalizer and two speakers valued at $260 were stolen from a 1973 Datsun, police said.

A car stero valued at $218 was stolen from a 1979 Toyota, police said.

The driver's side window of each car was smashed.

A wallet containing $5 in cash and miscellaneous identification was stolen from the reference room in the library. It was left unattended for a short period of time, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Today's Staff:

Night Editor Gerry deSimas
Copy Editor Nancy Stern
Layout Tech Conor Plunkett
Photo Tech Michelle Segall
Production Supervisor MAtkins
Production: Peter Soderberg, Kelly Sieger, Naomi Goldberg, Norm Achin, and Itaru Kato

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit-58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

THANK YOU

TO THE VOLUNTEERS WHO WORKED SECURITY, STAGE CREW, AND HOSPITALITY, AND ALL WHO ATTENDED, FOR MAKING THE RAMONES CONCERT A GREAT SUCCESS.

THE SOUTHWEST AREA GOVERNMENT

SURE RENT-A-CAR
Good reliable rentals at a better than fair price.
CARS, TRUCKS, VANS
Low Daily & Wknd. Rates
50 Russell St., (Rte. 9)
Hadley, Ma.
tel 584-2319
Just over Coolidge Bridge

let us do your wash-dry-fold and hand pressing
10-5 P.M. MON-SAT
SELF SERVICE
7 DAYS - 7A.M.-10 P.M.
549-1665
SPEEDWASH Quality Laundry
11 Pray St.
Amherst, MA

LESBIAN WORKSHOP

Lifeline Institute
presents author of Lesbian Sex, Joanne Loulan, to speak Fri. Nov. 8, 7:30 pm, Seeyle 10, Smith College, Free.
Full day workshop Sat. Nov. 9, $30.
Call Lifeline for more information 253-2822.

THE PURSUIT GOES ON. AND ON. AND ON.

Nowadays (and nowanights) the Big Man On Campus is the one with the biggest collection of Trivial Pursuit™ card sets. So here are six more editions to pursue:
■ Baby Boomer™ Edition—From Eisenhower to Flower Power.
■ Silver Screen Edition—A ton of titillating Tinseltown trivia.
■ All-Star Sports Edition—Here's your chance to knock a jock right on his artificial turf.
■ Genus II™ Edition—Picks up where the Genus Edition™ laughed off.
■ RPM™ Edition—Music! Music! Music! From Beethoven to Boy George.
■ Young Players™ Edition—From the Brothers Grimm to the Brothers Gibb.
Get 'em all. Play 'em all. Have a ball!

TRIVIAL PURSUIT is the registered trademark of Horn Abbot Ltd. (Canada) for the game distributed and sold in the U.S. under exclusive license to SELCHOW & RIGHTER CO. Baby Boomer, YP, BABY BOOMER are the registered trademarks of Baby Boomers of America Inc.
©1984 Domark Computer Games (production and playing pieces)

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
Gas Saving Tune-up
4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95
Lube, Oil & Filter $17.99
Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil and safety check.
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704

Pearl Street
Thursday Nov 7th
TONIGHT
Red hot rockers from Boston
Girls Night Out
only $6.00 at the door
Wednesday Nov 13
Reggae Rockers
Loose Caboose
Thursday Nov 14th
Miller Rock Series presents
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY and the JUKES
Lets Party!
Every Friday
Mystery Deejay
Every Saturday
D.J. Mark Stoneham
10 PEARL STREET
NORTHAMPTON MA
413 584 7771

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Increase worth the fight?

Roth/Burgess

Recently, a group calling itself "students for government by referenda" has been working extremely hard, postering the campus urging you to vote against the since defeated Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) increase referenda question. We can't help but feel perplexed by the motives of these people.

This group, widely believed to be headquartered within Southwest Area Government, has a surprising amount of energy to work against the SGA and to seriously attempt to limit its effectiveness. Yet where were they when students organized to work against the Universal Resource Fee last year? WHere are they now to help save the sports teams? What did they do when the SGA was fighting the outrageous tuition hikes? Do they care about the RA pay cut of $100?

These people are wasting a tremendous amount of energy over a $6 per semester increase in the SATF, which, unlike any other university fee, has not been raised in over six years. Do they care about a proposed $80 fee, per student, per semester to fund a multi-sports facility? Are they even aware that the athletic fee was raised $25 last year? Where were they during the struggle to get a student on the Board of Regents? Are they helping to better the university's FY 87 budget proposal? Did they help the SGA to include the grandfather clause on the bill to raise the drinking age?

This is infighting energy. Not only is this group's energy grossly misprioritized, but they are lying as well. For instance, they suggest on their posters that the third and fourth priority of the SATF is to fund SGA conferences and SGA retreats. Last year the SGA Conference Account was eliminated and the money spent on the SGA retreat was less than 100th of one percent of the SATF, hardly an economic priority of the SGA.

We can respect their philsophy on student government (which is basically that student enpowerment is useless and that student government is inherently bad) but we are amazed that they would choose the financially least intelligent and least efficient area of the University to fight.

"Students for government by referenda" would like us to disband the SGA, in which case there would be no fee to fund anything. Ther administration would probably run a couple of concerts, help subsidize the Distinguished Visitor Program etc. but they would pay themselves a fortune in administration costs and they are much more likely to be out of touch with student's desires.

We have to have some type of governance body and it either has to be the SGA or the administration. Students for government by referenda have no concept of the history behind student empowerment; they want the administration to take over, and they want to remove the student input that now exists.

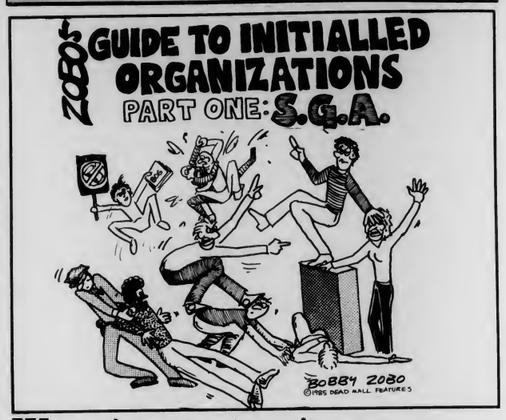
Strong evidence suggests that their posters were printed in Southwest Area Government using student money and resources, further placing them in contradiction.

We suppose every group has to have its crazies. We just wish these folks would work for students instead of against them.

Stacey Roth and Dani Burgess are SGA co-presidents.

Treaty should be scrapped

Peter Dow



In preparation for the upcoming summit, President Reagan and Secretary Shultz have become increasingly more conciliatory to Sovietdemands concerning America's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). Our latest position is that we will continue SDI research and development, but only in accordance withe the ABM Treaty of 1972 and the Protocol of 1974. One can only wonder why the policy makers and spokesmen in Washington continue to constrain our attempts at developing SDI, while, at the same time, they ignore the Soviet Union's quiet development of their own missile defense. America continues to treat the ABM Treaty as holy scripture; meanwhile, the Soviets have consigned their copy of the document to the trash can, except when the restrictions of the Treaty may be used to hinder U.S. SDI research.

Soviet violations of the ABM Treaty are too serious to be overlooked, and prove that the Soviets do have confidence in a missile defense. There are at least five major provisions in the ABM Treaty and its Protocol that have been violated by the Soviets. The first violation is of Article I of the 1974 Protocol, which determined that the U.S.S.R. would only deploy an ABM system around Moscow. However, U.S. satellites have discovered an ABM radar at Krasnoyarsk. Secondly, Article VI (b) of the ABM Treaty stipulates that radars designed to detect incoming ICBMs may only be deployed along the periphery, and must be oriented outward. Yet the Krasnoyarsk radar is in the central part of the U.S.S.R., 3000 miles from the Pacific and 500 miles north of Mongolia. Thus this radar must be considered to be an ABM battle management tool. In addition, the Soviets have also tested many surface-to-air missiles (including the SAM-10, SAM-12, and the SA-X-12), in violation of Article (a) of the Treaty; these missiles are also mobile, which is a violation of Article V (a). And finally, American satellites have spotted the deployment of SHO-4 and SHO-8 ABM missiles around Moscow. These photos indicate that the Soviets have constructed more than 100 missile silos, violating Article II of the Treaty.

Yet, despite these obvious Soviet violations, U.S. arms control experts continue to haggle over whether basic U.S. SDI research is in accordance with the Treaty. This application of a double standard by arms controllers is very dangerous. Apparently, Soviet activity approaching nationwide ABM capability is in the "gray" area of the treaty, and therefore allowable; but at the same time much of the U.S. research is also in the "gray" area, and therefore not allowable. Indeed, this is the most disturbing flaw in the ABM Treaty; there are no clear, concise restrictions, nor are there provisions for verification. Immediately, the U.S. is at a disadvantage, simply because of the nature of our society; while opposing forces in the U.S. argue over ABM legalities, the U.S.S.R. continues to research, develop, and deploy their own ABM system.

Thus we can only conclude that America must exercise its right to abrogate the ABM Treaty, a right given to both sides by negotiators. First, it is foolish and dangerous for the U.S. to abide by the ABM Treaty when we have overwhelming evidence that the U.S.S.R. has already broken that agreement. Secondly, it is wrong for us to adhere to the current document, which is so general and ambiguous so as to simultaneously prevent a U.S. action while allowing a similar Soviet action. Thirdly, and perhaps most importantly, the U.S. must pursue deployment of its own SDI to counter the Soviet's attempt at achieving first strike capability. In short, the ABM Treaty was built on the wrong principles initially, and the Soviets have already violated it. So why don't we simply proclaim the Treaty to be void.

Peter Dow is a Collegian columnist.

Warning: get going now

Ilana Levenson

The clank of quarters on a formica table top . . . the sound of the stereo speakers louder than usual competing for possesion of the air . . . the gulping of alcoholic beverages of every kind fills UMass on any given Friday or Saturday night.

This is how, you as a student let out your aggressions that have been growing inside you like a cancer that you must get rid of. Aggravating conversations with stubborn professors who refuse to sign you into their class and waiting in long lines to spend your hard earned cash on completely unrecreational school books, (actually that's not true, I have used my books to prop up my TV which is recreational) are only some of the reasons you need to unwind and put up your feet with a few brews.

However, as the semester progresses, these Friday and Saturday night party attitudes seem to carry on into the week. The usual Sunday afternoon hangover becomes a Sunday night case of "Bud" to conquer that hangover. That professor, who finally let you into his class although now you wish he hadn't because he is a horrible lecturer who makes up even more horrible exams, seems like a good enough reason to suck down another bud.

Suddenly the days blur together and you can't even remember what time your classes are, but then again you don't care eigher. So you keep on partying in the so called "Zoo Mass" spirit.

You know that you are beginning to miss handling in some important assignments but you figure that you will "wail" on the final exam and hopefully pass.

With only a few weeks left in the semester, you realize that it is time to dust off the books and get to work. To prove your seriousness about studying you decide to modify your drinking habits, which have become your livelihood, to between classes and late afternoon, leaving as many as two hours to study on some nights.

Without warning, finals week sneaked up on you. Your first final is tomorrow, so you turn down the stereo and put the beers in the fridge to keep them cold for later and open your notebook. The first few pages are filled with words, now meaningless to you, and time consuming doodles around the edges. As you try to recap the notes, a few things come back to you, like the title of the course. After the first few pages in the notebook, it has nothing in it but white lined pages that were starving for notes all semester that you never gave it.

You enter the final exam at Boyden Gymn sweating bullets. When the proctor signals you to begin the exam, you take your number two pencil and begin randomly filling the dots. Realizing that you flunked, you nervously go up to the teacher and ask if there is anything that can be done at this poing. The teacher laughs in your face and says that he has been waiting for this semester to be over so that he could celebrate. Now that it is over, he is going out for a brew.

Ilana Levenson is a Collegian staff member.

Letters

Speaker has abused his power

I am very concerned that the SGA leadership might eliminate funding for our spring concerts. On September 30th, I submitted a motion, to guarantee spring concert funding every year, to be considered by the Student Senate. Speaker John Ruddock does not support my motion and will not allow it to come to the Senate floor.

For the October 2nd Senate meeting, Ruddock placed my concert motion on the bottom of the agenda (the last item to be considered). On October 9th, John Ruddock questioned the presence of quorum before the motion was to be considered. The next week (October 16th), Ruddock cast the deciding vote to adjourn the meeting, as my motion was about to reach the floor. Ruddock "inadvertently" left my concert motion off the agenda for the October 23rd meeting.

Since the October 2nd meeting, John Ruddock has placed over 40 motions on Senate agendas in front of mine. Last night's agenda alone shows 24 motions that were submitted after my concert motion, but that Ruddock has placed before it. This is an absolute disgrace. Through Ruddock's biased and inept handling, he has prevented a motion that is very important to students from reaching the Senate floor.

A motion, calling for a "no-confidence" vote for Ruddock, was placed by Ruddock at the very bottom of last night's seven page agenda. I expect that it will be treated in the same manner as my concert motion. John Ruddock has clearly abused his power as Senate Speaker. Abuse of the agenda is only one example. If he does not modify his behavior, the Student Senate should request his resignation.

Bill Collins
Southwest

Needed: a clear impression

John Brentlinger

In the Nazi period many Germans said they didn't know their government was murdering millions of innocent people. In ignorance of lack of concern they quietly supported what what is now known as the holocaust. "Our government knows best—I have my own life to worry about"—could have been their motto.

This is like many people here and now. The government depends on ignorance and apathy while it plays Empire. Reagan hopes we will keep quiet about Central America, as long as U.S. troops aren't used in direct fighting. He thinks we will believe his lies about "totalitarian," "terroristic" Nicaragua.

The U.S. policy is, and has been, to support any government, no matter how bloody or corrupt, if it is pro-U.S. and anti-communist: for example, South Africa and El Salvador. And it tries to bring down any government that is independent of the U.S. and friendly to socialism: for example, Chile, under the leadership of Salvador Allende, and Sandinista-led Nicaragua.

The little country of Nicaragua, whose population is the size of metropolitan Boston, is a threat to Reagan only because it has declared independence from the U.S., and instituted programs of democracy and social reform that recognize the validity of certain socialist ideas: farm cooperatives, free education and health care, universal literacy, and planned economic development, to name a few. They are honestly committed to the poor, and could be a model to other Latin American countries with similar problems. But this is no threat, unless you mean they give priority to the needs of their own people, instead of U.S. cooperations. (They say, and I believe sincerely, they don't want to be closer to the USSR than to the U.S., but they want independence, and they respond to the USSR as to other countries who act toward them in a friendly and supportive way).

"It's a Marxist-Leninist dictatorship," says Reagan. Never mind that it has a mixed economy with legal guarantees of private property, with 63 percent of the agricultural land privately owned; with seven political parties of every tendacy, all equally funded by the government in the recent elections, in which 85 percent of these eligible voted secretly, and the Sandinistas received 69 percent of the vote. "It's a totalitarian puppet of Russia," he says.

According to America's Watch, the Sandinista revolution has made Nicaragua, one of the best countries in Latin Ameruica for human rights, freedom of the press, and freedom of religion. That they abolished the death penalty, pardoned thousands of captured National Guardsmen, and have a standing offer of amnesty for the contras; that they created a model prison system called "open farms," which re-educate instead of punish, and allow week-end furloughs, conjugal visits, and operate without fences or armed guards. "They are international terrorists," Reagan says. Yet he hasn't produced one bit of evidence to support that charge.

On the other hand, Reagan calls the contras "freedom fighters," though they are paid mercenaries who conduct systematic terror gainst the civilian population of Nicaragua. More than 7,000 people have been killed, of which 3,000 are children and adolescents; and 359 schools, 41 health centers, 14 production cooperatives, and 11 child-care centers have been burned and destroyed, along with many other vital economic facilities.

I spoke with some peasants who had been driven from their cooperative farm by the contras. They said: "They attack to show we aren't safe on the side of the revolution." One woman, 18 years old, described how the contras came in at night and murdered her father, mother, brother, 2-year-old daughter. "They murdered my family to make us afraid," she said.

You won't hear words like that on the evening news. But you will hear many more facts and viewpoints, and some interesting discussion, at our faculty teach-in tonight at 7:30, in SBA 120. I cordially invite you to attend, and fight that apathy and ignorance.

John Brentlinger is a member of the Faculty/Staff For Peace In Central America.

Lofty misunderstandings

Alex Zucker

For the past few years, the Blue Wall Bar has been losing substantial amounts of money. If one adds up the transactions for the Blue Wall from Fiscal Years '82 through '85, the sum is a loss of $77,169. Remember—this is before the Blue Wall stopped serving alcohol. At the same time the Blue Wall has been losing more and more money on beverages, the overall Campus Center Food Services operations have been cutting their losses over the same time period. As the CC Food Services have been slowly crawling their way out of a hole, the Blue Wall Bar has been tumbling in on top of them.

This year, the Blue Wall and CC Food Services must be examined in a new light. The Campus Center is currently without a liquor liability insurance policy due to the high costs of insurance brought on by numerous lawsuits against bartenders and drinking establishments. Until a pool of insurees get together to form an underwriters group, the Campus Center/Student Union will not serve alcohol. An underwriters association is, simply put, a group of alcoholic establishments joining together to provide a pool of money upon which any one of the bars/pubs/taverns may draw in case of a settlement against them. The state legislation providing for the formation of these groups will not allow for such a group to be formed until November 29.

In the meantime, the CC Food Services (under the aegis of the Auxilliary Enterprises operations) has been attempting to lure students into the Blue Wall in spite of the lack of alcohol. The Campus Center/Student Union Board of Governors (a student organization) has been working closely with the Food Services people in this important area. The result of this work is the "Campus Coffeehouse," located in the Blue Wall.

One of the BOG's priorities is to schedule some high quality entertainment in the Coffeehouse in order to attract students to the new area and around interest in this innovative enterprise. The Board funds the Union Program Council, another student group, to provide musical programming within the CC/SU Complex.

On Wednesday, October 30, the talent coordinator for UPC went to the Food Service Manager of the CC with a proposal for a dance concert in the Blue Wall/Coffeehouse on Sunday, November 24. He was told that this program was in conflict with the new atmosphere in the Coffeehouse and was not eligible for consideration. He called on the BOG in an effort to resolve this discrepancy between former and current CC administrative policies. I spoke with the Director of Food Services for Auxilliary Enterprises and I was told that the Coffeehouse was available only for "mellow" jazz music two nights a week and occasional Saturday evening dance parties.

I then spoke to both the Director and Assistant Director of the Campus Center who were very supportive of UPC's proposal and the possibility of a highly publicized, revenue-producing dance show in the Blue Wall/Coffeehouse. After receiving their support, I called the Director of Food Services and reiterated our case. I was told the decision was up to the Associate Manager of Food Services, the CC Food Services Manager and the Blue Wall Beverage Manager and their decision was withstanding. I spoke personally with two of the three managers listed above and they were clearly dead set against any type of programming which did not fit into their perception of what the Coffeehouse clientele preferred. Case closed. Or is it?

Who are the clientele of the Blue Wall/Coffeehouse? Students. For whom does UPC program a dance concert? Students. Who pays for the Campus Center every year on their bills? Students. So who should decide what is or is not "suitable programming" for the Blue Wall/Coffeehouse? Food Service adminstrators?

You figure it out.

Alex Zucker is Chairperson of the Campus Center/Student Union Board of Governors.

Editor's note: Upon being informed of this potentially explosive situation, the Director of Auxilliary Services Ashoke Ganguli agreed to overturn his subordinates unpopular decision.

Cafeteria hysteria

Herb Ramy

I know that the Dining Commons bring out the stupid, evil, and ignorant sides of most people, but this semester these tendencies seem to be even more pronounced than usual.

Take last week for example. I decided to eat early, because I had an exam later that evening. When I reached the D.C. there was already a small crowd of people there waiting for the doors to be unlocked, so I waited with them. While waiting, another individual joined our group and proceeded to elbow his way up to the doors to try and open them. Finding them locked, he swore quite loudly and began waiting also. I still don't understand this person. Did he think that the entire group was just waiting around for some geniur like himself to come open the doors for us?

This person is bad, but there are others who are even worse. How about the woman who cuts all the way from the back to the front of the line simply because she has a friend there? I had friends who had gone through the line a half hour before, does that mean I can do this too?

Let us not forget our wonderful lunch ladies. When they're not busy drinking coffee or smoking, they're just full of ways to make your life hell.

For instance, the other day at dinner I asked for the chicken. The lunch lady looked at me, sized me up, and smiled. She then proceeded to reach all the way to the corner of the pan, almost dislocating her shoulder in the attempt, just to get me a piece from an obviously one time anemic chicken. I tried to give it back, but a tall 250 pound gentleman objected.

"Fuck you buddy, take it. Better you than me." How could I ignore such a silver tongued request?

Now we come to the worst group of all, the D.C. cooks themselves. I realize that its difficult to cook for thousands of people each day, but some things still have to go.

The first thing that has to go is the multi-colored flourescent peas. They're so bright that I usually save a few of them to read by at night, and why are they different colors. Is this supposed to represent the original day of the week they were served on?

Next we have the juices and jello. Did you ever notice that whatever color the juice is, the jello is the same one? Coincidence? I think not. What I want to know, is the jello juice that didn't make it, or is the juice jello that didn't make it?

Finally we have the most important thing that must go, and that is the nuts in the brownies. It's not that I don't like nuts, Heaven and Jimmy Carter forbid, it's just that they don't belong in brownies.

I must admit that there is one advantage to being on the meal plan. None of us will ever have to spend a single day in purgatory because we've already been through hell on Earth.

Herb Ramy is a Collegian columnist.

Letters

Ideologue printed, responses not

Thank you Rusty Denton for your thought-provoking article in Tuesday's Collegian about the issues concerning certain forms of "censorship."

It seems as thought the Collegian grants you the freedom to write such articles. Yet, when its' readers—such as I—respond a number of times to the Letters Dept. commenting on similar issues, presenting a viewpoint which is truly "against the grain" of what seems to be the popular "radical" tradition of this newspaper, the letters never seem to appear.

Continue Rusty—and I'll try also!

Ann Mancini
Amherst

Irksome columnist provokes angst

Why must the students at this University be constantly bombarded by the simple-minded, inconsistent, and sophomoric views of David Valade? Everyone should have the chance to express his or her opinion on certain issues, and by the way Valade writes, I can tell everyone does.

Tony Rudy
Sylvan

ARTS

Debate at Harvard addresses warnings on album covers

Zappa debates tough parent

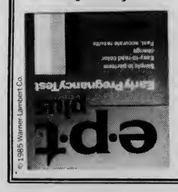
CAMBRIDGE (AP)— A mother who fought to get rock 'n' roll records to carry warnings of explicit lyrics found herself at a prestigious wing of Harvard University locked in debate with a Mother of Invention, rock star Frank Zappa.

More than 1,000 youths overflowed the John F. Kennedy School of Government Tuesday night, most of them to cheer Zappa in his discussion with Sally Navius, cofounder of the Parents Music Resource Center.

Her group last week reached an agreement with a record industry representative to carry labels on albums considered offensive, warning "Explicit Lyrics - Parental Advisory."

The crowd at the forum "Caution: Rock 'n' Roll May Be Hazardous to Your Health," exploded in applause when Zappa recited the label carried on his own recordings: "This album contains material that a truly free society would neither fear nor suppress, and some socially retarded areas, religious fanatics and ultraconservative political organizations routinely violate your First Amendment rights by trying to censor rock music."

A 40-member student committee at the graduate school voted to sponsor the debate because "no one from the target age group participated at the debate" in Congress, organizer Tony West said. "We were left out."



Cafe • Restaurant • Piano Bar
Amherst's latest piano bar...
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT!!
Thursday - Andy Jaffe JAZZ STYLIST 9-close
Friday - Art Andrews 6-9 from URBAN RENEWAL
Bob Cummings 9-close
Saturday - David Rutherford 6-9
Will Haigh 9-close
103 North Pleasant Street on Boltwood Walk
Amherst • 253-3635

THE TEXTBOOK ALTERNATIVE
Professors, check these advantages for your students:
- Longer, more convenient shopping hours
- Open Saturday and Sunday
- 10% discount on school supplies and regular (noncourse) books
- No long waiting lines - no hassle
- A helpful, warm, friendly shopping environment

Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
call us now:
253-3381
256-8735

Test yourself.
Which early pregnancy test is as easy to read as red, no—white, yes?
Which is a simple one-step test?
Which has a dramatic color change to make the results unmistakable?
Which is 98% accurate, as accurate as many hospital and lab tests?
Which is portable for convenience and privacy?

You're right. You get a Plus!

BUS DRIVING JOBS!!
Train in January to start work in February!
UMass Transit Service will hold an APPLICATIONS MEETING
Thursday, Nov. 7th at 7:00 pm
CC 162
The first 125 people will receive applications.
You Must —
- be 18+ years old
- have had a driver's license for a year
- have 2+ semesters left at UMass
YOU POSTIVELY MUST BRING PROOF OF YOUR CLASS YEAR TO THE MEETING.
The ONLY acceptable proofs are schedule, transcript, or letter from the Registrar.
For more info, call 545-0056. UMTS is an AA/EO employer.

Open House at The Old Mill
Saturday — Sunday — Monday
Nov. 9 — 10 - 11
Your One-Stop Christmas Shop
Route 63
See New Gifts, Crafts, and Decorator Accessories From the Recent Gift & Furniture Shows
MANY CHRISTMAS GIFT IDEAS
Come in and register for Door Prizes
Refreshments Served
1 mile north of Umass

NOW OPEN
WORCESTER
MUNCHY
8AM TO 9PM
UNIVERSITY STORE

live wire — by Peter Wissoker

For a long weekend this one's a little short on entertainment. Not to say that there's nothing to do, just not as much as usual.

Tonight Peter Tork, formerly of the Monkees, will be at the Iron Horse. He actually plays the banjo so he won't be singing accapella. Across town Girls Night Out will be playing at Pearl Street.

Friday the Sighs will be playing with Beat Therapy at Sheehan's. The Jon Butcher Axis will be playing at the Agora in Hartford.

Also on Friday, Eighth Route Army will have a record release party at the Zone in Springfield. A good time is guaranteed for all. Wynton Marsalis will be playing with the Springfield Symphony. Salley Rogers will sing at the Common School in Amherst.

Sunday night The Alarm and Beat Rodeo, Martin Cathy, John Kirkpatrick and Gabriel Yocomb will be at the Iron Horse for some English-type folk music.

Tuesday Stevie Ray Vaughn will play at Springfield Symphony Hall. Wednesday, Loose Caboose will be at Pearl Street.

ARTS

Album reviews:
Some hot, some not

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

ANOTHER WORLD (Warner Brothers)
The Roches

Surprise, Surprise. Despite denying that they would ever play with a full scale rock orchestration in a Collegian interview last year, on the new Roches album they do just that. Another World is extremely overproduced. There are, at their core some good songs on this album, as the Roches proved last spring at Mount Holyoke, but many of them get lost in between screaming guitars playing ripoffs of Eddie Van Halen on one hand, and bad violins on the nice cover of "Come Softly to Me." But this drive towards the 25* market and AOR are only for the worst. Sorry, don't write the Roches off, just this album.

SERIOUS BUSINESS (Alligator)
Johnny Winter

Johnny Winter is still the best white bluesician around. His guitar playing on this album is great as usual. My only complaint is that it is 1985 and the time where it was acceptable to sing about going and shooting "your woman" to put you out of your misery is past. This is just intolerable. It was entertaining when we didn't know better but now?

BOSTON, MASS. (Slash)
The Del Fuegos

This is a great album. It rocks hard from beginning to end. The Del Fuegos themselves sound really good. More than any other band around the Del Fuegos have managed to master the integration of Rock and Rockabilly. And Boston, Mass. proves it.

The Del Fuegos on the cover of their latest album, Boston, Mass.

LOST IN THE STARS (A&M)
The Music of Kurt Weill

There are few things as entertaining as hearing Sting sing "Mack the Knife" but that is only the beginning of the endless amount of entertainment to be derived from this new collection of Kurt Weill's songs. The album is produced by Hal Willner who produced last years collection of Thelonious Monk's songs. Lost in the Stars features Lou Reed, Marianne Faithful and Chris Spedding, Carla Bley and others. "Alabama Song," known mostly for its treatment of the Doors, is rendered by Richard Butler (of the Psychedelic Furs) as the gang leader with Ellen Shipley's beautiful soprano voice looping in the background like a ferris

continued on page 16

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MARIAN McPARTLAND
Tuesday, November 12 8 pm.
Tickets: $13,11.9
"A fascinating, inventive pianist: playful, probing and provocative"
John S. Wilson, New York Times

ASPEN WIND QUINTET
Thursday, November 14 8 pm.
Tickets $6
Winner—Naumburg Chamber Music Award 1984

MABOU MINES' "Cold Harbor"
A bleak & beautiful study of General Ulysses S. Grant
Sunday, November 17 8 pm
Tickets $12,10

Five College Students Half Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center, and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413)545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

Fresh Croissants and Breads Baked Daily
Huge Delicious Cookies
Freshly Made Pasta
THE CHEESE SHOP
79 Main Street, across from Plumbleys
Imported Cheeses — Coffee Beans
Bulk Tea — Fresh Pasta
Delicious Giant Cookies and other Baked Goods
Gourmet Groceries
Daily until 6; Saturday until 5; Sundays 9-1

50 CENT DRINKS
Thurs
Beat the Clock

	7-9	9-11	11-C
Drinks	50¢	50¢	50¢
Cover	0	$1.00	$2.00

Fri & sat
The Best in Dance Music
50¢ $2.00 Cover
Catch the Celts on The Big Screen
JUSTIN RYAN'S
The Party Never Stops

MONEY MOTIVATED?
If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This
We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

Season's Sunday Brunch Buffet

It's your choice and what a choice! Season's specialties from traditional Bacon & Eggs to Seafood Casseroles to Scrumptious Desserts. Season's Sunday Buffet from Eleven to Three only

$7.95

All major credit cards accepted

Experience the Joy of Dining with family and friends at

Seasons

529 Belchertown Road Amherst (413) 253-9909

• COMBO DINNERS •

Six different platters with combinations of our most popular entrees served with Spanish Rice and Refritos. . .4.05 - 4.85

. . .Bring Your Appetite!

TACO VILLA

...Offering Quality Mexican Foods

NORTHAMPTON 21 CENTER ST 584-0673 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

AMHERST 41 BOLTWOOD WALK 256-8217 Beer & Wine Served

SPRINGFIELD 749 SUMNER AVE 788-0919 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

The Special Charm of One of a Kind Jewelry

Antique and unique styles available in a wide range of prices.

J. AUSTIN JEWELER

on the common, amherst, 253-3986
mon.-sat. 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

nassau $25 florida

WILL HOLD YOUR BED

SPRINGBREAK

CALL NOW! 256-1261

COUNCIL TRAVEL SERVICES

79 SO. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY

SKI & PARTY WEEK

JAN. 19-24

TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET — SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING — HOTEL OR CONDO

ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT

HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199

FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP
Sign-up before Nov. 19th and get a free T-shirt.

LAGNAF 86

FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

DRESS FOR SUCCESS.

You're the man in charge. And you can handle it. Because the Navy has given you the management and technical training to get the job done.

Thirty men report to you. And what you do includes the care and responsibility for millions of dollars worth of sophisticated equipment.

At age 22 you can be a leader in the Navy. With all the decision-making authority you need to help you match up to your responsibility.

The rewards match up, too. A solid starting salary of $17,700, and up to as much as $31,000 in four years with regular promotions and increases.

Responsibility and rewards. It's the way you measure success in the Navy. See your Navy Recruiter or CALL 800-327-NAVY.

NAVY OFFICERS GET RESPONSIBILITY FAST.

TAPES

$1.35 EACH

TDK D-90
MAXELL LN-90
SONY C-90

SAVE minimum order of TEN

TDK

MAIL CHECK TO: TF WHOLESALE/RETAIL POBox AMHERST 01002

90 minutes tapes 2 albums

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Stratton

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals

Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

ARTS

A Cultural Peace Journey portrayed in realistic hues

By ROB SKELTON
Collegian Staff

Red-baiters would have us believe those activists who preach peace through conciliation work counter to our 'interests'.

Interesting. The collective evidence of 10 Amherst-area artists whose cultural peace journey was made in the name of awareness-raising suggests otherwise. The 100 color photographs on display in the Student Union Art Gallery through Nov.15, prepare the viewer for a more rational approach to arms control, East-West relations, nuclear restraint, and other vitally mutual interests that override any petty body politic.

The collection is different, but it's normal. It's just a bunch of people doing regular things. They don't look like Americans, and should that be a surprise?

Simply put, this showing of everyday activity serves to remind us that, despite geographic technicalities, most people have common interests.

Some of the images suggest less affluence than Americans enjoy, but it could be easily stated there is less blatent waste, less of an ugly materialistic culture.

So we see fewer grays as our newspapers show, and more realistic hues of life – strawberries (yes, they have strawberries) for sale in a farmer's market, dozens of eggs sold by old street vendors, a man selling herbs, and a circus with trained hippos doing tricks.

There are hints of Communism such as drinking machines on public streets which dispense soda and which all who use must share a common cup. And a bathtub shared by 16 people.

Remnants of the old days abound—glorious memorials to Peter the Great, and sad tombstones for the disproportionate number of Russians made casualties of war.

"I believe cultural exchange programs can give people a profound sense of other human realities, and I hope this show brings us all closer to world peace," Jane Kreisman, coordinator of the gallery said.

This show is a way for Americans to get a more realistic handle on the superpower conflict, which seems a world away from many of the pictures in this collection.

It shows an appearance of normalcy, one which we've been trained not to see of the U.S.S.R.

"We were given remarkably little constraint," said one of the participants. "But sometimes the groups who were arranged as an audience seemed uncomfortable, like school children. And the language barrier was sometimes difficult to overcome," she added.

Photographs can always help instill understanding. What we all need now is some more of that.

photo by Lorre Wyatt

Armenian herb Vendor from The Cultural Peace Journey is on exhibit at the Student Union Art Gallery through Nov. 15.

STORE CREDIT TOWARDS NEXT PURCHASE OVER $10-

GET A $5.00

WHEN YOU BUY A PAIR OF ★ 501 or ★ CORDS or
★ JEANS

Levi's at Saturday Clothes

N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-9729

Not valid with any other coupon offer. Limit one coupon per customer. Subject to local applicable taxes. Void where prohibited. Offer good only at store(s) listed. Offer expires

FREE CONE

Buy any ice cream at regular price and get one small cone or cup FREE.

Steve's® A first name in ice cream.™

48 North Pleasant St, Amherst, MA 01002

Not valid with any other special or promotion.

SAVE

$1.50 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA
(with one item or more)

99¢ Bar Drinks
FREE Pizza
Tues-Thurs
9:00-11:00 PM

Offer Good Tues - Thurs only

Expires Nov. 30, 1985

M/C & VISA Accepted
56 University Drive, Amherst
549-5713

Closed Mondays

the Hungry U

SAVE

WITH THIS COUPON

ARTS

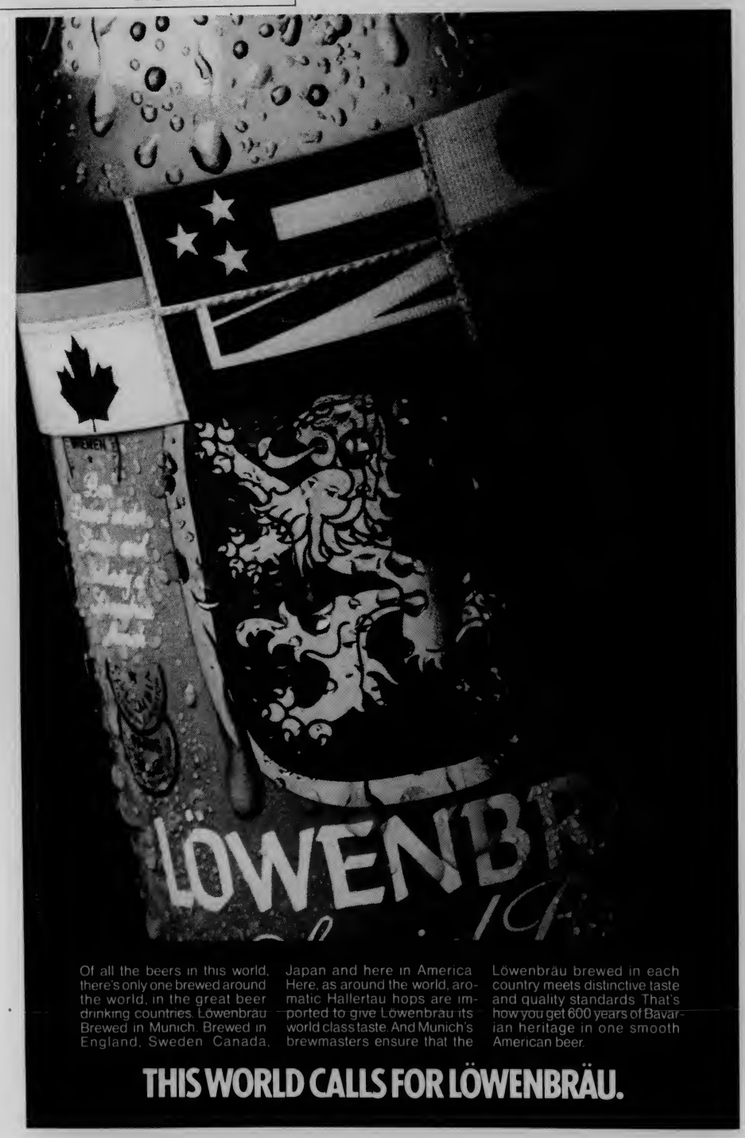
★reviews

continued from page 13

wheel. Dagmar Krause, Marianne Faithful and Sting all deliver fine Marlena Dietrich impersonations. This isn't a rock album exactly, since Weill wrote mostly in the late '20s and later for about 30 years, but it certainly is one of the most engaging albums of the year.

ROCK'N'ROLL GUMBO (Dancing Cat)
Professor Longhair

This is a reissue of an old Professor Longhair album released in the early '70s. Professor Longhair is a New Orleans pianist, one of the main purveyors of boogie-woogie piano playing. On Rock'N'Roll Gumbo he is joined by Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, a great drummer named Shiba and others. To hear what the Professor plays is to render obsolete most of the rock'n'roll of the early sixties. You realize that what the Rolling Stones needed four musicians to do, the Professor can do with two hands on his piano. This album rocks. Let's hope that his others are reissued as well.



T. REXTASY (Warner Brothers)
T. Rex

This is a "best of" collection which highlights the years 1970-1973. The album is chock full of goodies like "Born to Boogie," "Ride a White Swan," and of course "Band a Gong." T. Rextasy provides example after example of the T. Rex groove, rockin' hard yet easy, an offering of what was to be a new rock sensuality. This is not the first and most likely not the last T. Rex anthology but lets hope that the next one is digitaly mastered to make one more greatest hits collection a little more worthwhile.

TWO GOOD WHEELS (Epic)
Prefab Sprout

Great name, great idea. But Thomas Dolby's production and playing turns this album into a Thomas Dolby album. This is basic eurosynth so if you care for it then maybe there's something here for you. I found it affected (a little too affected) and lacking in individual character.

The Finest in Replacement Bands Crafted by TRAFALGAR
•Saddlery Pigskin
•Glove Leather
•Shell Cordovan
•Burnished Lizard
•Alligator
•Montana Calfskin
House of Walsh
32 Main St., Amherst 253-3361 Mon.-Sat. 9-5:30

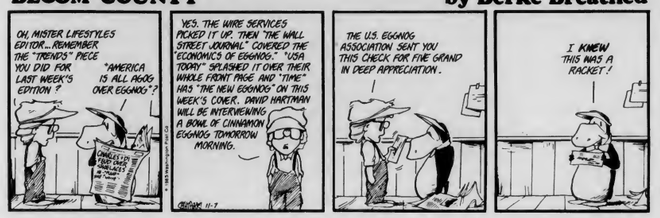
Of all the beers in this world, there's only one brewed around the world, in the great beer drinking countries. Löwenbrau Brewed in Munich. Brewed in England, Sweden, Canada, Japan and here in America. Here, as around the world, aromatic Hallertau hops are imported to give Löwenbrau its world class taste. And Munich's brewmasters ensure that the Löwenbräu brewed in each country meets distinctive taste and quality standards. That's how you get 600 years of Bavarian heritage in one smooth American beer.
THIS WORLD CALLS FOR LÖWENBRÄU.

HAIRCUTS $8.50 with this coupon CALL STYLES BY DEBORAH 65 University Dr., Amherst, MA 549-5610 expires 11-30-85

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck Rt. 63 No. Amherst 549-2880

ARE YOU PREGNANT & IN NEED OF HELP? Birthright Can Help
• FREE PREGNANCY TESTING
Same Day Results - Services that are Free, Confidential, Caring & Helpful
549-1906 Amherst Carriage Shops Upper Level

UNWANTED HAIR? Have it removed the Electronic Way! Call NEW REFLECTIONS 586-8371 No Needles, No Pain, No Hair



Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Woe's Moe

By Maureen Hayes

Surfman

by Bart

Weather

TODAY
Cloudy and foggy in the early morning. Clearing and partly sunny in the afternoon with highs in the 60s.

TONIGHT
Increasing cloudiness with a chance of showers. Lows in the 40s

TOMORROW
Partly sunny with highs in the 50s with one day left to go before the weekend.

Today's Menu

LUNCH
Ham Grinder
Broccoli and Cauliflower Casserole

BASICS LUNCH
Falafel Pocket Sandwich
Broccoli and Cauliflower Casserole

DINNER
Cheese Lasagna with Tomato Sauce
Chopped Beefsteak Special

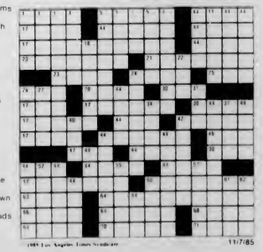
BASICS DINNER
Polynesian Vegetables
Cheese Lasagna with Tomato Sauce

Investigative Reporting Workshop

Journalism professor Frank Faulkner, formerly of the Springfield Daily News, will give an investigative reporting and public documents workshop at 7 p.m. today. This will count toward staff status for new people and it would do everyone some good to attend!

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 George Herman Ruth
5 Defeat
10 Small dogs
14 Recent grad
15 Fragrance
16 Beehive State
17 Nicklaus
19 Minelu
20 Makes a choice
21 "Skylark" poet
23 Son of Seth
24 Strawberry's stadium
25 Koch and Asner
26 Barracks bed
28 —— B. Bachelor's deg.
30 Work unit
32 Outflow
33 Sign up
35 Resort town near Santa Barbara
39 Preordains
41 Martinique e.g.
42 Mopes about
43 Exile isle
44 Havel opus
46 Chaney of films
47 Greek letter
49 Made do (with out)
50 Explosive initials
51 Ring finales, for short
54 Menotti, the composer
56 Hollywood's Garr
58 Paving material
60 Blue Jays home
63 Unveil
64 Brady
66 Roger!
67 Inflorescence
68 Jot
69 Reddish-brown horses
70 Hammer heads
71 Main drag right

DOWN
1 Luggage
2 Succulent
3 Feller of baseball
4 Port in NW Germany
5 Rings the bell
6 Planets
7 Caviar
8 Court shot
9 North Carolinian
10 Influence
11 Useful
12 Looked upon
13 Carriages
18 Rouen schools
22 Lend an ——
24 German sweet breads
26 Relinquish
27 Old Greek coin
29 Tom, Dick and Harry
31 Sentimental tripe
34 Garden vegetable
36 DiMaggio
37 Later
38 "—— it romantic?"
40 Tumbler's milieu
42 Up to date
44 Encourage
45 Updates, in a way
48 —— Khan
51 Skewered meat
52 Honshu city
53 Atomizer
55 One at ——
57 Creator of Le Penseur
59 Exclamations
60 Feds
61 Josip Broz
62 Muscat's land
65 Honest ——

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

T	E	N	O	R		A	P	A	R		A	D S
A	G	A	P	E		S	A	D	A		L	A D S
C	A	N	I	S	M	I	N	O	R		A	L B A
O	L	A	N		C	A	D	R	E	S		M I T
			E	K	G		E	N	S	I	L	A G E
L	I	P		A	I	D	A		I	R	O	T
A	C	E	T	Y	L	E	N	E			R	I F E
C	A	R	R	O	L	L		E	M	E	R	A L D
E	A	S	Y			I	L	L	U	M	E	N E D
		I	S	I	S		A	S	I		S	A Y
D	I	S	T	R	E	S	S		T	R	A
R	O	I		E	N	H	A	L	O		P	L U M
A	N	E	W		D	E	G	E	N	E	R	A T E
W	I	N	E		U	L	N	A		B	I	K E S
A	T	E		P	L	A	N		B	L	E	S S

11/7/85

11/7/85

Daily Collegian Advertising that works!! Call: 545-3500

ROYAL CRANE ORIENTAL FOOD MARKET
360 College St., Amherst
Rte 9 East 253-5658
with a large variety of AUTHENTIC ORIENTAL
• Fresh Produce • Sauces & Spices
• Noodles • Frozen & Canned Goods
• Cooking Implements & Supplies
• Homemade take-out food
• New items arriving every week
• Gourmet foods at everyday prices
• Asian cookbooks at Publisher's prices
• Open 10-8; Sat. open 9-8

HIGH STYLE at Low Costs
Even college students can afford to look good at Marjon

also: Tanning and waxing

	start at
cuts	$8.00
perm	38.00
foiling	45.00
shampoo/cut/dry	14.00

Marjon Hair Design
Mountain Farms Mall
Rt 9
Hadley, Ma
586-4551

SAVE $ 2.00

Get the bigger look of personal posters for less.

Your favorite 35 mm color photos can look great as gorgeous posters from Kodak. Just bring us your 35 mm color negatives, slides or prints. You'll get back 12 by 18-inch personal poster from Kodak's own labs. Personal posters by Kodak make ideal gifts for friends and relatives. Offer good November 4 - 20, 1985. See us today for details.

Open Mon-Fri 9-5

Ask for PROCESSING BY Kodak

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

EARN MONEY FOR COLLEGE
LOADERS & UNLOADERS
$8/hr • PART-TIME EVENINGS & EARLY MORNING HOURS
We offer steady employment, paid vacations and health benefits. Interviews will be held every Wednesday 9am—1pm
UNITED PARCEL SERVICE UPS
120 Wayside Avenue
West Springfield, MA 01089

COLLECTION PREMIERE

Lodestone
25% off all In-Wear, Matinique
One Week Only Starts 11-8
13 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
48 Main Street
Brattleboro, VT 05301

JBs HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES
11 am - 2 am 7 days
50 Main St. Amherst, MA 253-7018
JBs HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
"When the copy is as important as the original"
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES
• Copies • Binding • Word Processing
Resumé Writing!
• Fliers • Typesetting • Enlargement & Reduction
228 Triangle St., Amherst 549-3840
Mon.-Fri. 8-Midnite Sat. 11-7 Sun. 12-9
SPECIAL thru Sunday, Nov. 10 (AUTOFEEDER ONLY) 3¢ per copy

UMASS SKI CLUB
Ski Sale Meetings
Thurs. Nov. 7
4 pm CC Rm 165
7 pm Hamden Commons, SW
All those interested in working the sale must attend one of the above!
For more info call 545-3437

LORD'S & LADY'S HAIR SALONS
The Hampshire Mall
586-7913
20% off Student Discount*
not valid w/specials exp. Dec. 31

TUESDAY "PERFECT PERMS":
Reg. $53.00 & up ..... Now $39.95 & up
WEDNESDAY CUTS:
Women ... Reg. $18.00 ..... Now $14.00
Men ..... Reg. $16.00 ..... Now $12.00
Walk-in Service Welcome • No Appointments Necessary.
Not to be confused with Frank Stiriacci's Lords & Ladies

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Hampden Program will be starting its Comedy/Cabaret Series Thurs. Nov. 14 at 9 pm Hampden Snack Bar. Every Thurs.

Southwest Residents - Get Involved! Weekly Southwest Assembly meting tonight at 7:00 pm in Hampden's Southside room. All are welcome.

Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Counseling Collective is open Monday, Wednesday, Thursday 3-7; Tuesday 1-3. Drop by room 433SUB or call 5-2645

ANIMAL RIGHTS COALITION

Please contact Bob 648-9289

AUDIO

JVC home speakers. Never been used SK-66, 4-way, full 5 year warranty. Great for dorm or home. $199 549-0174 evenings

Fisher Speakers, 3-way with 12 inch woofer. Excellent sound $125 John 256-4226

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7393

1977 Red Chev Camaro good condition AM FM cassette stereo 2 extra new tires $900 or BO call 549-0462 evenings

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

'73 AMC Hornet wagon excellent condition, recently inspected $960. 549-1616

81 Berlinetta Camaro 54k white red cloth interior cruise control tilt wheel AC PS PB AM-FM cass Chapman new exhaust well maintained sacrifice $5,900 546-9000

BUS DRIVING JOBS!

UMass Transit Service is looking for several part-time drivers. Applicants must be UMass students carrying 6 or more credits in a degree program. Class II license required. Starting pay is $4.60/hr. Call Rod or Jenny at 545-3066 for more info, or apply in person at the Bus Garage.

CALIFORNIA!????

Selling piano ticket to San Francisco leaving December 23 coming back January 12. $298 or best offer. Call Bill at 546-6277

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, luncheon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

DESPERATELY SEEKING WALLET

I lost my wallet in the Student Union off campus locker section on the third floor. Please return annonymously or personally to Mark Sands 29E E. Hadley Rd. Amherst, MA 01002 256-1725 Thanx

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, $200/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Furnished bedroom in second story of a house. Close to town and campus. 163 Triangle St #2 call Gail anytime before 11:00 pm 549-7692

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on busline, avail immediately 665-4964 leave message

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Bicycle built for two, Motobecane 10 speed. $400 1-467-7877

Safe Sunless 35-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Join alone $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions. Le Bon Soleil. The cent for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 15

Ovation Accoustic 12-string guitar with built in microphone pick-up. Good condition. $400 or BO Alex 256-0545

Chevy Malibu 1975 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

13" Hitachi color TV. 1984 model, excellent condition. $160 549-2859

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stansel 584-3596

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Drivers wanted $7-9/hr, 3-4 nights own car required, Pinocchio's Pizza apply in person, 1177 N. Pleasant, N. Amherst

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites. $5.00/hr Call Carl at 665-3088 at any reasonable hour.

LAST CHANCE

Campus reporter for nat'l magazine seeks interviews with past or present students dating or married to profs. Please call Anne 549-5532 immediately!

LOST

Lost: Luis Vuitton wallet, containing $$, credit cards, ID's. Of very sentimental value. Rewarded. Thank you.

Help! Glasses with pink frames lost on 10/28 somewhere around Wheeler. Please call Tricia ? 6-4939

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mitch 256-1069 or 256-1664

HP41CV Calculator it's my life! If found please call 549-5505 $$reward$$

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Glasses; brown frames, photobrown lenses. If found call 253-3702, Reward.

Eye glasses on 10/31 in Campus Center Auditorium call Dale 6-4039

Lost brown wallet Nov. 1 ID's and credit cards please call 549-5935

Eyeglasses brown/tan case on 10/29 in Holdsworth call 549-4853

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassny Recording Studio offes 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Long Island or NYC Fri Nov 8 Michelle 546-8667

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share new home in Shutesbury. Very clean, modern house which is 10 miles from UMass. Male or female, $125 plus $10 for utilities. Call anytime, available now. 367-9328

PERSONALS

Sugarbush Ski Week! Hotel $149 see Ski Club now 545-3437

Mrs George Michaels! How is "T" you know I am jealous! Haa your racquetball technique paid off yet? Love ya, The Wench

Simpleton Bachelors: Dam broke. Let's meet. You plan. Respond ASAP. Campus mail. No personals. State phone number?

Meet me in Oxford next summer with the UMass Oxford Sumemr Program. Details, Alumni, Slides all available 7:30, Thursday November 7, Herter 305; or stop by Bartlett 160.

Tired of the party scene? Feel empty and without direction? Jesus said, "I have come that they may have life and have it more abundantly." To find out more, call Barrie or Nini at 253-7206 between 6 and 7 pm (Alliance Christian Fellowship, SBO)

Dave Panagore - Thanks for doing a super job on the Ramones concert. Without your production the show could not go on. You're an asset to any production staff and we're grateful to have you. Thank you. SWAG

Laura Goldstrick - Thanks for heading up a top-notch hospitality crew. You are some kind of host. Truly yours, SWAG

Joel Rabinowitz - Mr. Security, Mr Cool as a cucumber. Thanks for a wicked good job on the Ramones concert. Love, SWAG, PS - We hear you worship at the Peace Pagoda

Tom Talucci - Thanks for your planing work on the Ramones concert. Your hard work helped make the concert a great success. Sincerely, SWAG

Lynne B. - I can't tell you how much I've enjoyed your company this week so here's a personal to show you. - Chris -

Deb The one person who deserves everything have a Happy 20th Birthday I love you R

Which witch is the witch which. - -Sarina (Jennader) with the magic smile call me, write to me, or come dance with me again same place Sat. Nov 9 Clickclo the Atomic Chicken!!!

John E - Break a leg kid! Love, your sister PS Sorry it's late

It's Eve Roth's Birthday! Everyone wish her a happy 19th we love you! Allyson, Pam & Missy

Congratulations to the new pledges of Delta Zeta! We love you! DZ sisters

Pat Ferris, Twig and Butterfly for man and bear? Have some compassion!! That means you too Nadine!

B DEMETRIUS The following things will be needed for information leading to the' release of Carter Bear. 1 jar of honey, 1 box honey nut Cheerios, scale model of bees nest, 1 can of salmon wrapped in brown paper marked C Bear. Leave at info desk on 11-12 by noon

Leatherface - My daffy roommate, have a great birthday love, The Machine

Dear Mon - It's about time you grew up! We were gonna send you a cockroach but the cucumber killed it! Maybe next year! Happy 18th kid! We love you! Jacqui and Pam LWF - "A friend is a person with whom I may be sincere. Before him I may think aloud." Thanks for listening to me think. I love you with all my heart. Love always, Cookie

Happy Birthday
Sigma Kappa
You're 111 years
old - keep it up!
Nov 1874 - Nov 1985

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7652

Male bellydancer for hire. Parties, birthdays, etc. Reasonable rates 6-5579

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

KATHLEEN OUR QUEEN

Do you still love us? Thanks for the popcorn, it was the least you could do since we do so much for you. What is 317 or

SHARON JALBERT

Happy Birthday Madwoman! Can you believe that we're still together? here's to another humerous year! SWAT TEAM, we don't eat after 11, guess who's coming to visit, Whitney, sleep-over in 11 MacKimmie, he agravates me, little boys, Brick House, MIA, Such is Life! LOve ya, Dah

SPRING BREAK '86

Register now for Spring Break '86 in Ft. Lauderdale/Daytona Beach! Prices from $199. A $30 deposit guarantees your reservation (plus more!) Take until January 29 to pay balance. Pick your own roommates. Extras! - Mike 546-9039

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apt Cliffside F-4 starting January or February Bob 665-8219

TOWELMAN!

Our conversation at the party Thursday night was "absorbing"! Call me 546-5414

TRAVEL

Megabucks Scholarship to study next summer in England with the UMass Oxford Summer Seminar. Find out more about it 7:30, Thursday November 7th at Herter 305. New courses, old favorites, alumni, slides! Or stop by Bartlett.

Do something January 5-12 Ski Vail Teo 546-4783

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 546-8622

Like English Boat, Costello, Diverse Styles? Interested in doing original material & play bass, drums? Call Gregg 6-3253 or Rick 6-6792

WANTED TO RENT

Responsible male senior seeks room in quiet apt or house near campus spring semester. Okay to call late nights, early mornings 546-5143

2 females need room anywhere in North Amherst will take over January lease call 549-3809

To take over lease in January of a two bedroom apartment on bus route call nights Laine 546-9678 Randy 546-6363

SPORTS

Minutemen top Harvard, 1-0

Adoboe scores to cap season

By BRYAN QUENZEL
Collegian Staff

There is no place like home, even when home is covered in six inches of mud.

So was the case for the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team yesterday as they sloshed their way to a 1-0 shutout over Harvard on a rain-drenched Boyden Field.

The victory capped a perfect 10-0 record at home for the Minutemen and closed out the most succesful season in UMass men's soccer history with a 15-6 record.

The lone goal came at the 52:23 mark from junior Ferdie Adoboe. Off an indirect kick, senior Matt Dowd passed to junior John Shannon standing to the left of the net. Shannon's shot was stopped by Harvard goalkeeper Matt Ginsburg, but he was not able to contain the ball. Adoboe was there to put in the rebound. It was the forward's third game-winner of the season.

"It was a pretty good goal" Adoboe said. "On a day like this its difficult for the keeper to hold on to the ball. I was able to capitalize. It was a great relief to score."

Senior Don Donahue registered his fourth shutout of the year while improving his record to 7-5 on the season.

Now the Minutemen must wait and hope that they are one of the 23 teams selected for the NCAA playoffs. UMass' only chance is to receive one of the seven at-large bids.

"I can't believe they could overlook 15 wins," UMass coach Jeff Gettler said. "There are 23 teams that make it and if you look at the top 20, some don't have that many wins."

Even if the invitation to the tournament does not come, this UMass men's soccer team can be proud of what they accomplished this season.

Back in September, the pre-season New England polls did not even mention the Minutemen. All of the articles talked about Connecticut, Maine, and Harvard. The loss of All-New England selection's Kurt Manal and Paul Serafino, to injury and academics respectively, seemed insurmountable. No one expected UMass to have a very successful season, but the players new what kind of team they could be.

"This team is great," senior forward Nick Marcino said. "After the first few days we were a team already."

"I feel real good (about the season),"freshman forward F. J. Zwicklbauer concurred. "It was what I expected. After two days of practice, I thought we had the talent to go far."

The Minutemen's 15 victories destroyed the previous high of 11 and their nine shutouts is another UMass' record.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Coach Gettler and a rain-soaked bench look on as the men's soccer team slogged past Harvard, 1-0 yesterday at Boyden.

"We've finally made a reality out of our success, 10-0 at home says it all," Gettler said. "People will look at 15-6 and come in here with a different attitude toward us. I don't think we earned it before, now we have."

The Minutemen are losing only seven players to graduation this year. Add to that the expected return of both Manal and Serafino along with the development of freshman goalkeeper Sam Ginsburg (8-1, 0.74 goals against average, five shutouts) and UMass looks to have the talent for an even better season next year. But that hasn't entered Gettler's mind.

"I could care less about next year right now," said the coach. "Right now, I just want the guys to enjoy it."

Soccer Kicks: Sophomore midfielder Andy Bing led the Minutemen in scoring with 10 goals and eight assists for 28 points. He was followed by Zwicklbauer (5-10-20), forward Tom Giordano (5-5-15), and Adoboe (3-8-14).

UMass outscored its opponents 26-3 at home. The Minutemen only once gave up more than two goals in any one game. The team never lost two in a row this season. Gettler and his outgoing seniors are 34-34-10 in their four years at UMass.

If the Minutemen do make the playoffs, the possibility of the men and women playing a twinbill at Boyden does exist.

A good end to the season

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

When this season began with the loss of two All-New England players, University of Massachusetts men's soccer coach Jeff Gettler and the team never dreamed it could achieve a record-setting 15-6 season and would be talking about a post-season tournament in early November.

"Before the season I had no idea what we might accomplish. All I knew was that we would have to play every game one at a time," Gettler said.

Reflecting on the season, Gettler said he was overwhelmed by the satisfaction that his team has brought to himself and the players. He said that in the past, the Minutemen had not earned the respect of its New England opponents but that his team has now achieved it and couldn't be happier with its finale.

"This has been a magical, fabulous team with no standouts," he said.

The seniors, playing possibly their final home game, backed his sentiments.

"If you had told me we were to go 15-6 before the season began, I wouldn't have believed it," departing senior co-captain Tom Uschok said. "I'm just very happy and very emotional."

Senior goalkeeper Don Donahue had only one regret and that was not beating the University of Maine during his career here. Otherwise, he was elated.

"I can't explain the feeling inside, its just such an emotional high," Donahue said.

Jan Holland: Freshman goalie ready for tournament

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Goalie Jan Holland has allowed only one goal this season to help lead UMass to a 15-0-0 record and the top-seed in the NCAA tournament.

She has probably touched the ball the least of the 11 starters on the No. 1 University of Massachusetts women's soccer team.

But then getting the ball to freshman goalie Jan Holland isn't the type of offense the high scoring Minutewomen use. In 11.5 games, Holland has allowed but one goal and features a 0.08 goals against average.

She is presently in the midst of setting a national record for goals allowed in a season. Cortland State's Madolyn Hale set the record in 1978 when she allowed two goals.

That sits very well with sixth-year coach Kalekeni Banda, who for the first time, has strong depth at goal.

"We're were looking for someone to stop some shots for us, direct the defense and wins some games for us," Banda said at the start of the season.

Not only did Holland beat out fellow freshman Carla DeSantis and Brooke Adams for the number one job, the freshman from Aurora, Colorado, who was originally recruited by North Carolina, has shown the mental toughness needed in the UMass goal.

"Pyschologically, I go through so much before a game," she said. "My nerves start two days before a game. My stomach is always in knots."

The 15-0-0 Minutewomen outshot the opposition 251-31 and the shots on the UMass net have been sparse. Holland has only been called on for 23 saves.

"I still feel that I haven't been tested," Holland said after shutting out Springfield on Saturday. "I know that I'm ready to play.

"I'm ready for that action. I want it. I want to come through with the big saves when they need it."

Holland has filled in the last link in a strong UMass defense this year. What Massachsetts had lacked in previous years was a consistent keeper.

"I think the most important thing is that we play together well. The defense is tremendous. I just tell them what to do. We just communicate so well. Everyone marks up back there and there's always someone there to clear it (the ball) out."

"The difference," Holland said, "is the confidence in the defense and the confidence they have in me. In high school, I knew the defense would go to a point and break. Here, I'm confident that they won't break down and if they do, I'll be there. That's a big difference."

But the real test comes in the playoffs with the challenge of the competition and the cold, raw New England weather. Holland has already played in miserable conditions, the rain and mud against UConn and Brown, and she's not one to back down in the face of adverse conditions.

"I love it," she said of the rain and snow. "That's Colorado weather and I feel right at home." Just as home as she feels in goal for the top-ranked Minutewomen.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 46 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Friday, November 8, 1985

Rally against auditing today

Groups petition against Accuracy in Academia

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

A petition drive against the presence of Accuracy in Academia at the University of Massachusetts will be launched today when the sponsors of the petition rally at noon in front of the Student Union.

The "Progressive Coalition"–consisting of members of the University Democrats, Radical Student Union and UMass Peacemakers–will issue a petition calling for a campus-wide referendum to oppose Accuracy in Academia. During the rally speakers will address the fairness of the organizations presence on campus.

Accuracy in Academia has encouraged students to enroll in UMass courses and report alleged anti-American biases of the course content to the organization.

"Actually it (Accuracy in Academia) is an un-American institution in that it seems to deny people their constitutional rights," M. Lynne Murphy, a rally speaker and member of the Universty Democrats said.

The coalition will also sponsor a skit "to portray in a humorous manner what we see the functioning of Accuracy in Academia to really be," rally organizer Mitch Gaslin said.

"Everybody has a bias," Gatlin said, "It's just a matter of being clear about it.

"If it's an ideology Accuracy in Academia doesn't agree with, then they say it's incorrect," he said. "If it's one they agree with, then it's fact."

Speakers at the rally will also address the University's inability to get alcohol liability insurance for on-campus bars, which has been unable to serve alcohol since the insurance expired this summer.

"The sooner they square the alcohol policy away, the sooner they open up campus bars," SGA co-president Stacy Roth said, "and stop drinking and driving which has increased (after campus bars stopped serving alcohol.)"

The rally, which was scheduled for Wednesday, was postponed until today because of rain. Alex Guest, assistant to the co-presidents, will replace Roth in addressing the liability insurance.

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

VIEW TO A VACANT CAMPUS–The University should be as empty this weekend as in this photograph from the 9th floor Campus Center yesterday. Many students will probably take advantage of the Monday holiday to visit home.

Day reminds public of veterans

By BRION MCALARNEY
Collegian Staff

Veterans Day is just another holiday for many people, but for the directors of the Vietnam Veterans Outreach Center in Greenfield, it is a day for public awareness about the plight of veterans.

"The public does not want to really look at it, they want to forget Vietnam veterans," said Richard Papineau, Vietnam veteran and director of fund raising at the center.

"Last year we had 70 veterans come through here with no place to go," he said.

On Dec. 6, the University of Massachusetts will present a day-long conference on "Vietnam Veterans and their Families: Problems and Solutions," in hopes of bringing some attention to their plight.

"The workshop is an attempt to make health providers see that this is a major public health problem," said Alvin E. Winder, of UMass' school of Public Health. The conference is open to anyone interested.

The Outreach Center provides a wide variety of services including legal assistance, medical and mental health treatment, military discharge upgrading, employment training and placement, and permanent housing assistance.

Locally, the University Veteran Services, located at the University Career Center in 1 raternity/Sorority Park, provides many services for approximately 700 students enrolled in the University, Director Karen Truehart said.

"Veterans are living in streets, lying in dumps, dying from pneumonia...there is a lack of awareness, of wanting to help from the public," said Papineau.

The center is almost entirely funded by the state with few public donations, he said.

"Reagan considers it a 'crime' to be poor, mentally ill, lower class," said Steinberg.

About 47,000 Vietnam veterans have committed suicide since returning from the war, compared to 57,000 killed in combat, Steinberg said.

"The public expects the government to help, but the government is not going to help, that is admitting they're wrong," Papineau said.

Papineau was honorably discharged from the Marines in 1967 due to combat fatigue, later diagnosed as post-traumatic stress disorder.

Day care faces inquiry on sex abuse

By DAVE BOARDMAN
Collegian Staff and The Associated Press

An allegation of sexual abuse in the University of Massachusetts day-care program has been substantiated by the state Department of Social Services, and a further investigation will be conducted, a spokesman for the state Office for Children said yesterday.

The state Office for Children, responsible for licensing day-care facilities in the state, will conduct the investigation into the University's day-care system. The initial investigation, which began Oct. 25, arose after a University Health Services pediatrician filed a report on the case with the Department of Social Servcices on Oct. 9. The allegation is also being investigated by the Franklin County District Attorney's office.

University officials have refused to identify the facility involved in the investigation, or release any information concerning the teacher involved.

However, according to a day-care center employee who wished not to be identified, the allegation concerns a staff member at the Grass Roots Day School, located near McGuirk Alumni stadium. The same source also said the person involved "previously had a very good record" and has since been transferred to administrative duties, rather than working with children.

Grass Roots Day School Director Michael Denney said he had no comment when contacted on Tuesday.

Arthur Clifford, University director of public information, said yesterday that "There are no staff members under investigation. Any temporary re-assignment of any staff members was not done with any assumption of guilt."

The same day-care employee said no change of policy has occurred within the day-care system, but "they (center administrators) made us read official policy about not hugging any children unless they first initiate affection."

In a letter to parents of children enrolled in the day-care programs, University officials stated that child care administrators "have taken direct action to reassess all of our ongoing staff and personnel policies...." The letter, which did not state the nature of the allegations or the day-care center the child attended, was signed by William F. Field, dean of students, Elizabeth Perkins, director of the University child care program, and the directors of the school's day-care centers.

Dotty Meyer, North Village Children's Center director said no policy changes had been enacted at the North Village facility, but she added that she was unaware of actions at the other facilities. Meyer added that all employees were given orientation handbooks and copies of the Child Care Sexual Abuse Prevention Policies upon hiring.

What's open, what's not

Monday, Nov. 11 is Veterans Day, a national holiday.
Banks–Closed
Post offices–Closed
Mail Delivery–Special and express only Restaurants–Open
State offices–Closed
Bars–Open
Liquor stores–Open
Retail stores–Open
Supermarkets–Open
UMass Tower and Goodell Libraries–Open 8 a.m. to midnight

Inside:

Telephone directories are here.....2
Five-College minority enrollment on the rise.....11
Last home football game of the season is tomorrow16

"From what I have learned in the last 12 years or so, I would say yes,–you can have a controlled nuclear war,"

–Dr. Paul Bracken of Yale University at the Five-College panel discussion on arms control. See story page 3.

WORLD/NATIONAL

Callers say Shiites executed American hostages

BEIRUT (AP)—An anonymous caller said Islamic Jihad extremists planned to kill their half-dozen American hostages yesterday, and a second caller claimed they were dead. But no bodies were found in the designated spot.

The captives were to be "executed" by firing squad because indirect negotiations with the United States had reached "a dead end," the first man said in a call to a Western news agency.

In Washington, however, a White House official said "contacts" in the Lebanon hostage case had not broken down. And President Reagan said of the death threat, "Evidently there is no substantiation of that at all."

Since the calls could not be authenticated, it was impossible to determine whether they were a macabre hoax or simply part of a war of nerves being waged by the shadowy Shiite Moslem faction to pressure Washington into making a deal.

Six Americans are missing in Lebanon. Islamic Jihad claimed Oct. 4 it killed one of them, diplomat William Buckley, 57. But no body has turned up.

The other American captives are Peter Kilburn, 60, an American University of Beirut librarian; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest; Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; David Jacobesen, director of the American University Hospital, and Thomas Sutherland, the university's dean of agriculture.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, believed made up of fundamentalist followers of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, had said it would release the Americans when Kuwait frees 17 Shiite comrades serving prison terms for the bombings of the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in December 1983. Kuwait refuses.

Several threats were made earlier to try the hostages as spies and "execute" them if the demand was not met. But no deadlines were set. In some other Lebanon abduction cases, calls reporting supposed "executions" have turned out to be false.

A representative of the news agency, which declined to be identified, said yesterday's first call came at 7:15 a.m. 12:15 a.m. EST from a man who, speaking in classical Arabic, declared the American hostages would be shot by firing squad.

Colombian troops storm palace, rescue hostages

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—Assault troops blew down walls of the Palace of Justice with dynamite yesterday and rescued up to 48 hostages held by leftist guerrillas. Officers said their men 'annihilated" the guerrillas and found a total of 50 bodies.

The Supreme Court's chief justice was reported killed by the guerrillas, but there was no confirmation that his body had been found.

Commanders of both the army and national police toured the building's charred and smoking remains. Reporters were allowed to accompany them, which indicated no rebels were alive inside.

A commander of the assault, Col. Alfonso Plazas, said the leftist guerrillas "were annihilated."

Neither the government nor security forces officially announced an end to the siege.

Military sources said 50 bodies were found inside and 18 were those of guerrillas, including six members of the April 19 Movement rebel group's high command.

The sources said Andres Almarales, who led the band that took over the palace Wednesday, was one of the six and identified the others as Vera Grave, Afranio Parra, Antonio Jacquim, Francisco Otero and Guillermo Elvencio Ruiz.

Gen. Jesus Maria Arias, an army brigade commander, said one of the rescued hostages told officers Almarales had "assassinated" the chief justice, Alfonso Reyes Echandia, but there was no official report that his body had been found.

Most of the bodies were badly burned by a fire that swept the five-story building begining late Wednesday night. It was not clear how and when the hostages had died.

There were conflicting reports about whether some guerrillas had surrendered and the number of hostages freed in the final assault at about 3 p.m.

In reports from outside the justice building, RCN and Caracol the army used dynamite to blast through walls at the building. The government spurned a rebel offer to negotiate earlier in the day.

AP Laser photo

The Colombian Palace of Justice burns Wednesday night as government troops watch. Leftist guerrillas took over the palace and apparently set the blaze to destroy court records.

AP Laser photo

The Jefferson Memorial is visible in the background yesterday over the flooded waters of the Potomac River.

Flooding ruins towns, reaches VA streets

(AP)—National Guardsmen patrolled flooded streets in Richmond, Va., yesterday and monuments were sandbagged in the nation's capital as the crests of storm-swollen rivers surged eastward after laying waste whole towns and killing at least 38 people.

Behind the crests, people returned to the ruins of communities across the western mid-Atlantic region, to begin rebuilding in the wake of deluges that left nearly 50 people missing.

As muddy floodwaters of the James River spilled into low-lying sections of Richmond, including a newly renovated area of shops and businesses, firefighters monitored five 1 million-gallon fuel tanks that were afloat off the south bank, opposite downtown, but still tethered to their moorings.

"There's always the danger of a leak," said public services Director Jack Fulton. He said the tanks hold an unspecified petroleum product.

The waters lapped the Main Street Station, a renovated train station in riverfront Shockoe Bottom that was to have reopened as a shopping center yesterday.

"This is terrible for the people down here," said Irene Williams as she scanned the flooded area, which was watched over by some of the 586 National Guardsmen deployed to help police.

This Fall
We've Got It All
In BOTH STORES!
Amherst Carriage Shops • Northampton (Next to Iron Horse)
POSTERS Huge Selection ★ BAMBOO BLINDS
BEDSPREADS (Cover Walls. Furn.. Windows) ★ Paper LAMPSHADES (Variety of Colors)
RUGS & MATS (Colorful. Durable) Greatly Expanded ★ CARDS (Over 1400 Designs)
SKIRTS & BLOUSES (Comfortable Cotton) ★ Brass & Silver JEWELRY (earrings. rings etc.)
FALL SALE
20 - 50% off
selected Clothing, Chinese Shoes
Tapestries & Rugs
Great Gifts... Great Prices
Check Enclosed
THE MERCANTILE
Daily & Sat. 10-6 • Sunday 12-5
Amherst 549-1396 Northampton 584-1205

US control in nuclear crisis has diminished

by Joeseph R. Tigan
Collegian staff

The ability of the United States to control a nuclear crisis similar to the Cuban Missile Crisis has diminished since Kennedy's time, according to a panel discussion last night at Amherst College.

"If we were forced into an alert situation, the prospects of managing that situation have gone down," said Dr. Paul Bracken of Yale University.

The panel, which opened a series presented by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security on nuclear arms control, also stated that controlled nuclear war is possible.

"From what I have learned in the past 12 years or so, I would say yes—you can have a controlled nuclear war," Bracken said.

Composed of Bracken, Dr. Bruce Blair of Cornell University and Dr. Allan Krass of Hampshire University, the panel unanimously agreed strategic command and control is imperative in controlling and possibly preventing nuclear war.

"The objective of strategic command and control are to prevent the unintentional use of nuclear weapons during peacetime (negative control), and the coordination and implementation of war plans assuring that legitimate orders are carried out during wartime (positive control)," Blair said.

Strategic command and control is designed to make U.S. political decision-makers confident that they could withhold retaliation indefinitely to a pre-empted strike by another country, Blair said.

"I think Mr. Blair wants to bring back the days when our decision-makers had two to three hours, instead of 10 to 20 minutes," Krass said.

According to Blair, our present alert system doesn't allow our leaders the time or capability to designate the sites under attack.

"One of the problems with our alert system is tha amount of psychological stress it places in the people in charge of this apparatus" Blair said.

Collegian photo by Brian Guarnotta

CASH-These campus employees don't get their "money for nothing"as they wait to cash their paychecks in a long line on a typical Friday afternoon.

International law advocated

By SUSAN EATON
Collegian Staff

Americans who oppose U.S. policy in Central America should work to make international law an important and objective force, according to a national peace activist who was one of the 29 Americans captured by Nicaraguan contras this summer.

Mary Dutcher, a member of the American Christian organization Witness For Peace, was kidnapped by members of the U.S.-backed military force which is working to overthrow the Sandinistan government in Nicaragua. Dutcher was kidnapped while her group was traveling down a river near the Costa Rican border on a peace vigil.

In any movement expressing opposition to United States policy in Central America, Dutcher said, "What is important is the objection of the policies by citizens in other countries," which will begin a trend to see international law in a more powerful light. By living in Nicaragua, Dutcher said she saw "how important it is to the government there that there are people of faith and conscience in the United States opposed to U.S. policy.

"There are only a handful of countries left which vote consistently with United States on Central American resolutions in the United Nations," Dutcher said. "A growing isolation of (the United States) in world affairs further demonstrates the need for a re-evaluation of our commitment to upholding the law of the land."

"Contras are mercenaries or terrorists," said Dutcher, who explained that contrary to the anti-government force in El Salvador (the FMLN), the contras are not "international, legal dissidents" because they do not comply with certain standards as defined by The Geneva Conventions; declarations adopted in 1949 to address crimes perpetrated by Nazi war criminals, which have since been ratified by the U.S. State Department.

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

Mary Dutcher

To be defined as legal international dissidents, opposition movements must hold land and have a clear direction and agenda as to what they want to accomplish. Because they have not gained the status of legal international dissidents, Dutcher said, "The United States will be held responsible for the contras actions."

'Women in law' this weekend

By SUSAN EATON
Collegian Staff

A three-day conference focusing on "Women in the Law" will be held this weekend at Mount Holyoke College featuring discussions on public policy and its affect on women's issues.

Among the speakers is U.S. Rep. Patricia Shroeder, D-Colorado, who will give the keynote speech "Women, Law and Public Policy" at 8 p.m. tomorrow in Gamble Auditorium. Shroeder served as co-chair of Gary Hart's 1984 presidential campaign.

Other topics at the conference will be Violence Against Women, Women and Children, Medical Ethics and Discrimination and Stereotyping by Race, Sex, and Age.

According to Vee Wailgum at Mount Holyoke's Office of Public Relations, Mount Holyoke alumni have been in the vanguard for women attending law school and pursuing careers as lawyers and judges, and this conference will serve as the institution's first formal gathering of alumnae lawyers.

Mount Holyoke undergraduates will participate with a U.S. District Court Judge, and alumnae law professors, in a "Student Moot Court," at 7 p.m. tonight in Laboratory Theatre. The case will be one concerning the rights of parents to refuse medical treatment on behalf of a child with acute leukemia.

Also appearing on panels will be, Sissela Bok, well known philosopher and author who wrote, Secrets: On the Ethics of Concealment and Revelation, who will speak on "Law Medicine and Ethics" at 2 p.m. today in Hooker Auditorium. Judge Patricia Wald from Washington, D.C., of the U.S. Court of Appeals and Elaine Jones, from the National Association For The Advancement of Colored People Legal Defense and Education Fund, will participate in a panel discussion at 2:30 today on "Combatting Discriminationm and Unfair Stereotyping by Race, Sex, and Age."

Jewish women 'beyond stereotypes'

By SHERYL JEAN
Collegian Staff

Jewish women have stretched beyond the patriarchal notions that Judaism only pertains to males, the editor of the Jewish feminist magazine Lilith said in a lecture at Amherst College last night.

"Females make up 51 percent of the Jewish community," said Susan Weidman Schneider, in her lecture "Beyond the Stereotypes of Jewish American Princess and Yiddish Momma."

"In the past Jewish women have had only second class status, but Jewish women are rectifying this by becoming participants instead of observers in Jewish life," Schneider said.

Jewish women are presented with a double message that stresses marriage and a career at the same time, Schneider said. In a survey of Slavic, Italian and Jewish women, Jewish women scored highest in support of both traditional values of marriage and children and career opportunities, she said.

Women have been traditionally taught the "daughter of the book" lesson that you should be smart, but not too smart, Schneider said.

"According to all surveys," Schneider said, "Jewish women have the best education." When conjuring up an image of a Jewish scholar, you no longer have to conjure up the image of a man, she said.

The women's movement in the last 10 to 15 years has given Jewish women the chance to build a closer alliance between the Jewish women and men, Schneider said.

"Women must reconcile being Jewish and female, and they must ask if they want 'a bigger piece of the same pie or a new pie,' " she said.

$1500 balance scale stolen from Graduate Center

A Mettler balance scale valued at $1500 was reported stolen from the 10th floor of the Lederle Graduate Research Center Wednesday. The scale had been missing since Monday, University of Massachusetts police said.

In other police reports:

Two cars were founded stranded in the grass on the south side of the McGuirk Alumni Stadium near the maze Wednesday in separate incidents, police said.

The owners of both cars were contacted and they will be billed for the damages done to the area, police said.

A 1980 Plymouth received $100 in damages from a broken windshield. The damage was reported Wednesday afternoon in the McGuirk Stadium P Lot, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Telephone directories distributed

Residence halls have priority for books

By ROB COHEN
Collegian Correspondent

Shipments of the University of Massachusetts student telephone directories for the fall semester began to arrive yesterday, a month later than scheduled.

Associate Dean of Students Robert Brooks, who is in charge of receiving and distributing the directories, said that he didn't understand why there was a delay in receiving the books. Brooks said that the delivery trucks may have been set-back two or three days by severe storms en route from the Directory Company in Lubbock, Texas.

In distributing the 15,000 texts, Brooks has given priority to the residence halls, he said. Delivery of the 6,400 Residence Hall telephone books began yesterday and will leave one copy per dorm room. As additional shipments arrive, copies will be delivered to full-time staff members and each administrative office on campus, he said. The books will be available to off-campus students at the Collegian rack in the second floor lobby of the Campus Center.

Last semester, no phone books were published because of a complication at Turley Publications Inc., of Palmer, Brooks said.

The arrival of the directories will not only benefit students, but will also be welcomed by students and operators working for the University's directory-assistance system.

According to one University operator, there is a large decrease in the number of calls to directory assistance when the phone books first arrive. She said that before spring phone books arrive at the beginning of the semester, the number of information calls soar. She explained that most students probably throw away their first semester phone books over intersession.

Woman bears child for sister

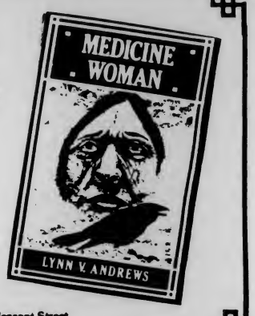
MALDEN (AP)—A healthy baby girl was born yesterday to a woman who had agreed to be impregnated by her brother-in-law's sperm so her sterile sister could start a family.

Kristen Jennifer was born at 3:35 a.m. at Malden Hospital, into the waiting arms of her mother-to-be, Carole Jalbert, according to a statement released at a news conference.

Mrs. Jalbert, who was present throughout the labor of her sister, Sherry King, exclaimed, "Oh, my baby, my baby," when the 7-pound, 6 1/2-ounce baby was born, the statement said.

Mrs. King said the delivery "hurt, but it was worth it."

Owen King, husband of the biological mother, said the child was the culmination of a two-year project with a pretty heavy emotional investment."



Today's staff:

Night Editor.....John Yonce
Copy Editor.....Jim Patriquin
Layout Technician.....Peter Soderberg
Photo Technician.....Maria Bull
Production Supervisor..... Peter Soderberg
ProductionPam Marchand, Laura Bell, Amy Constant, Lynn Smiley, Mark Parker

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit-58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

sophia bookshop

Native American Books
Art
Music

103 North Pleasant Street
Amherst 253-5574

CAREER DAY '85
Wednesday, November 13

Over 30 companies represented!
Presentation, Luncheon and Career Fair
Luncheon tickets on sale in SOM lobby until Nov. 8

Those wishing to attend only presentation and Career Fair are welcome from 10:00 am - 5:00 pm, 1st floor Campus Center
Open to all students - any major!

Sponsored by the Undergraduate Business Club

Open House
at The Old Mill

Saturday — Sunday — Monday
Nov. 9 — 10 - 11

1 mile north of Umass

Your One-Stop Christmas Shop

See New Gifts, Crafts, and Decorator Accessories From the Recent Gift & Furniture Shows

MANY CHRISTMAS GIFT IDEAS
Come in and register for Door Prizes
Refreshments Served

FOUR SEASONS
Wines/Liquors

BEER SPECIALS
COORS & COORS LIGHT... 12 oz. cans... $10.99
BUD & BUD LIGHT..... 12 oz. cans..... $11.50
BUSCH..... 12 oz. cans..... $8.99
UTICA CLUB..... 12 oz. bottles..... $6.99
GENESEE BEER..... 12 oz. bottles..... $7.99

SIX PACK SPECIALS
BECKS.....$4.25 KRONENBORG.....$3.99
DAB.....$3.99 BALLANTINE.....12 packs $3.99

LIQUOR & WINE SPECIALS
VODKA & GIN.....1.75 L.....$8.99
RON ROBERTO RUM.....1.75 L.....$10.99

NEW ITEM
WM. TELL Peach, Strawberry, & Blackberry SCHNAPPS...750 ml...$4.99
ALMADEN TABLE WINES.....1.5 L.....$3.99
PREMIAT WINES.....2 for $5.00

FINE WINE SPECIALS
1982 CH. LaTERRASSE.....$3.99
1980 CH. GISCOURS.....$12.99
1983 LaTOUR CHARDONNAY reg $7.49 NOW $5.99
THEO. ROERDERER BRUT CHAMPAGNE.....reg. 17.99 NOW $10.99

Route 9, Hadley 584-8174

Special Student / Youth Fares to SCANDINAVIA
On Scheduled Airlines!
The inexpensive way to get to Scandinavia.
Winter Rates:
New York to Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm
from $215 one way, $350 roundtrip
Chicago to Copenhagen
from $215 one way, $350 roundtrip
Chicago to Oslo, Stockholm
from $255 one way, $430 roundtrip
and tours designed especially for students to the
SOVIET UNION
For Information Call:
WHOLE WORLD TRAVEL
17 E. 45th St., New York, NY 10017
(212) 986-9470

Apply Now to Compete in the 1986
Miss Massachusetts - USA Pageant

Mercedes Waggoner
1985 Miss Massachusetts - USA

No Performing Talent Required

Why not go for it??? Apply to compete for the Title of MISS MASSACHUSETTS-USA, our representative to the prestigious MISS U.S.A. PAGEANT, to be nationally televised on CBS in May, 1986. Over $100,000 in prizes await the national winner.

Our 1986 State Pageant will be held in February, 1986. To qualify, you must be single, between 17 and 24 as of May 1, 1986, and at least a six month resident of this State - thus, college dorm students are eligible. So for some fun, excitement amd glamour, phone (617)-266-3280 or write to

Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. Pageant Headquarters, Dept. MA
222 Newbury Street, 2nd Floor, Boston, MA 02116
Your letter MUST include a recent snapshot, brief biography and PHONE NUMBER
DEADLINE IS NOVEMBER 15, 1985

NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Daily
Collegian

1985 WINNER OF
5 GOLD CIRCLE AWARDS

- NEWS WRITING
- OVERALL DESIGN (TABLOID)
- PAGE ONE DESIGN (NEWS)
- OPINION PAGE DESIGN
- FEATURE PAGE DESIGN

ADVERTISE IN AN AWARD WINNING PAPER

CONTACT: ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
(413) 545-3500

Collegian
113 Campus Center
Amherst, Mass. 01003

The Chequers

Harvest Specials

Crab Stuffed Scrod
Chicken Cordon Bleu
Pork Parmesan
Roast Sirloin of Beef (au jus)

all $6.95

All specials include potato, choice of salad or vegetable, french bread & butter, homemade dessert, coffee or tea.

Specials served Sun.-Thurs. 5:30-9 p.m.

University Drive, Amherst

The Five College Program
in Peace & World Security Studies
Presents

Senator John F. Kerry

Speaking on Nuclear Arms Control and the Geneva Summit

2:00 pm - Student Ballroom
U.Mass. Student Union

MONEY MOTIVATED?

If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This

We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

CLASS OF 1986

GET A JUMP ON THE COMPETITION

Increase your marketability for that first job

Buy an IBM Portable PC and get started now

Stop by the IBM Information Booth in the Campus Center Today

IBM

IBM

IBM Portable PC

$1075.00*

DEMONSTRATION THIS WED. 11/6 THROUGH FRI. 11/8

Orders will be taken on Nov. 18 - 21 this special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.

* Certain restrictions apply see store for details

Located in The Campus Center 545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Accuracy is accuracy or...

Mark Caldeira

According to its promoters, Accuracy in Academia insists that "academic freedom requires rigorous honesty: no conclusions without facts, no facts without context." Academic honesty? Well if this is the case, I support Accuracy in Academia.

I support all efforts to teach United States citizens honest accurate history—the American history that reveals how millions (at least 7-8) of Native Americans were massacred, exiled, and forced off the land they inhabited by our "forefathers'" genocidal act of freedom. Since this era stretches from about 1492 to the present day (e.g. Leonard Peltier), I would expect the slaughter of the Native Americans to be taught right along with Columbus, the Pilgrims, George Washington, etc., and to receive equal emphasis.

I also hope Accuracy in Academia will help insure proper treatment of Black History in our educational institutions. Our citizens will receive a more honest and accurate education when A.I.A. prevents the unjust neglection of the slave system's impact upon our country. Children in grammar school should not be denied knowledge of the savage, immoral, and uncivilized treatment of our African brothers and sisters who were encouraged by our leaders to be forceaby removed from their culture and homeland and sold as slaves in a land foreign to them. Black slavery in the United States should probably cover at least a semester of study. It will certainly be a strike against inaccuracy when our children are properly informed about the many black men, women, and children Thomas Jefferson and the rest of our "patriotic fathers" enslaved for their personal consumption while proclaiming that "all men are created equal" in the Declaration of Independence. For too long have these facts been overlooked; I anticipate A.I.A.'s redress of this failure.

Students should be taught the history of the labor movement—how workers across the country have fought endlessly, and are still fighting for their right to work, fair wages (if there is such a thing under this system), and the right to unionize; and how business and government have continously tried to crush organized labors' attempts toward these unalienable rights.

A.I.A. should bare the veil which hides the truth of real violations of free speech and free press—such as the detainment and imprisonment of thousands of innocent native Japanese during WWII; of analogous Vietnamese during the Vietnam War; of socialists and communists and their sympathizers during the McCarthy Era (a phenomenon resurfacing today). A.I.A. should also see to it that when teaching about Hitler and the evils of Fascism, teachers should be obligated to openly announce the horrendous acts of our government in granting sanctuary and political asylum and even giving jobs in the Army to Nazi war criminals who fled Germany at the end of the war. (Imagine a government using up hundreds of thousands of American lives to fight fascism and then sneaking those same ruthless, fascist killers into our country to live!)

In short, we are all aware of how "inaccurate" our education has been. The educational industry aids the flight of corporate profits, through schooling and mass media (TV, radio, newspapers, magazines, advertisements, etc.). We are constantly bombarded with "filtered facts", half truths and a wealth of other dangerous inaccuracies which contribute to our impoverished natio of uncritical, narrowminded non-thinkers.

If we truly desire an "accurate"and "honest" education, will we ever receive one by monitoring and neutralizing those very attempts to redress the current academic fraud? If we allow "Accuracy in Academia" and other right wing groups to infiltrate the classrooms and effect the process of education, then education in America will become like it is in the Soviet Union—"controlled by party line."

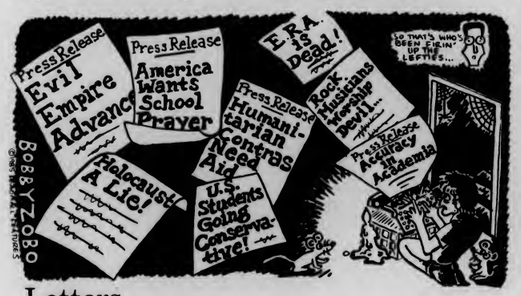
Mark Caldeira is a UMass Student

European views differ

Ken Levinson

When the question is asked: "Why does the United States need nuclear weapons?", the proponents will inevitably answer: "To counter the Soviet threat and protect the interests of our allies." This may be a good response for those people who are paranoid (have an unreasonable fear) of the Soviet menace, but it is not an answer congruent to the beliefs of many of our European friends. To put it simply, they are not concerned that the Soviets have designs to conquer Western Europe.

When World War II ended the traditional powers found themselves in ruins. England, France and Germany found themselves rebuilding while the United States and the Soviet Union were thrust into the role of Super Powers. In the new Bi-Polar World the U.S. was the sole atomic power, and the Soviets were scared.



In trying to understand the Soviet Union it is essential to try and comprehend its historical perspective: Russia has been over-run from the east by both Genghis Kahn and Atilla the Hun, and from the west by Napoleon and then twice by Germany.

When World War II ended with over 20 million Russians killed, the Soviets were afraid. They established Communist puppet governments in Eastern Europe, and diffused the German threat by splitting the ruined country in half. Since 1949, except for the Berlin crisis, and supporting communist revolutionaries in Greece in the early 60's, the Soviets have not taken any military action against Western Europe, although they have tightened control over their sphere of influence.

While they do feel Soviet totalitarian control over its citizens and those of Eastern Europe is deplorable, many Western Europeans see some advantages in the Soviet/Communist system: All people get complete medical care, education is available to all, and there is no unemployment or poverty. These allies like the United States, but they do not see it as paradoxical to like their Soviet neighbors also. The interests of our European friends would be best served by a policy of peaceful coexistence and Detente like engagement, not missiles!

Ken Levinson is a Collegian Staff member

Letters
Rally today against "accuracy"

Today, at noon on the steps of the Student Union, students and other members of the University community will have the opportunity to express their opinion on one of the most important issues facing the UMass community. This is the presence of the group calling themselves "Accuracy in Academia, Inc." While claiming to be a non-profit organization designed to promote greater accuracy and academic freeedom on campuses across the country, "AIA" is actually an attempt by a small group of conservative idealogues to make sure that only their concept of the truth is presented to students. This monitoring and intimidation of our professors is un-American as it imposes controls on the free exchange of ideas, and it is condescending to students as it assumes that we are unable to decide for ourselves what to believe and what to challenge. We must all unite to oppose these attempts to bring America back to the days of Senator Joe McCarthy and his rabid anti-communism.

In order to facilitate this, a rally has been organized by a number of student groups under the banner of the Progressive Coalition. In adition to rallying against the presence of Accuracy in Academia, Inc. at UMass, a petition drive is also being begun to have a student referendum on this question. It is important that UMass take the step of being the first student body in the country to oppose the actions of AIA. If you can't make the rally, petitions can be picked up and returned to room 413A of the Student Union.

Mitch K. Gaslin
Amherst

Random notes
Editor's comments

Larry Bouchie

Despite recent infighting and a motion for a no confidence vote for the senate speaker, the Undergraduate Student Senate acted upon a surprisingly voluminous number of old and new motions and agenda items last Wednesday night. One can only hope that senate personalities won't prevent the body from conducting student business for the remainder of the semester.

And, for those who yearn for a different kind of student and grassroots politics, the twice-yearly Amherst Town Meeting has many student members. On a campus note, Dean of Students William F. Field wields a mighty gavel and a lively wit as town moderator. Look for the return of politics in action this spring when town meeting convenes again.

* * *

The telephone lines in Whitmore will soon be completely re-wired so that a push-button telephone system can be installed. This will increase the number and type of communications which administrators may receive, including computer and photographic transmissions. Some find it hard to believe that on campus students were afforded this luxury before administrators

* * *

The Collegian Board of Editors recently unanimously approved the establishment of a gay issues beat to provide regular coverage of community events. Responding to a proposal made by the LBGA, the board decided to arrange for the position, under the supervision of the news editor, and the position has already been filled by a Collegian staff member. The Collegian has never before had a gay issues beat.

* * *

The Old Chapel clock has moved light years closer to the true eastern zone daylight savings time, and is now within five minutes of the correct time. For all the people who worked toward this end, a grateful campus thanks you.

* * *

Students at Southeastern Massachusetts University are now drinking bottled water, in the wake of unexplained food-poisoning cases. Though UMass students drink and bath in what could best be described as swimming pool water, at least it's safe.

Larry Bouchie is a Collegian columnist.

FRIDAY FILM FOLLIES

ARTS

By DON LIPPER
Collegian Staff

The best movies around this week all come from down under. That magical marsupial-infested land where real men eat vegamite sandwiches and intense film-makers are born and bred in special camps.

The best new movie around is at Pleasant St. in Northampton. UTU is a passionate and violent epic set in New Zealand but patterned after some of the Hollywood's best westerns. See it before it leaves Tuesday (review pg. 10).

The Amherst Cinema has a good weekend of double features (as always). My Brilliant Career is a delightful film about an Australian woman's coming of age in the rural outback. Funny, insightful and moving, this film is enjoyed by femininst and non-feminist alike. Breaker Morant is the story of three soldiers fighting on the British side of the Boer War. The men are court martialled and used as scapegoats. Like Catch 22 this film examines the ambiguities and hypocrisies of war as the men are put on trial for acting immorally in an immoral institution.

If you can make it down to Springfield, check out The Gods Must Be Crazy! another Austalian comedy written, produced and directed by Jamie Uys. In this strange and funny movie, bushmen in the isolated regions of the outback find a Coca-Cola bottle thrown away by a passing airplane pilot. The bushmen believe the bottle is a gift from the gods and begin to worship it. One bushman, realizes that the bottle is destroying the ways of the tribe and he goes on a journey through the desert to return the bottle. (Not even knowing that by doing so, he'll get five cents back).

That's All Folks.

Tania Bristonie plays Kura in UTU a violent epic playing at Northampton's Pleasant St. Theatre through Tuesday.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 MATINEE & TWILITE SHOW
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
Relax, you're never...
BETTER OFF DEAD.
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.50) 7:45, 9:55
Sat-Sun (2:30 & 5:00 @ $2.50) 7:45, 9:55
PG
A killer is loose
TO LIVE AND DIE IN L.A.
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
Sat-Sun at (2:00 & 4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
GENE HACKMAN DILLON MATT TARGET
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
Sat-Sun at (2:15 & 4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
Charles Bronson in
DEATH WISH III
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.50) 7:30, 9:55
Sat-Sun at (2:30 & 5:00 @ $2.50) 7:30, 9:55
R
HAMPSHIRE 4 584-7550
STEVEN SPIELBERG Presents
Michael J. Fox in BACK To The FUTURE
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
PG Sat-Sun at (2:00 & 4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
Wild and Wonderful!
After Hours
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.50) 7:30, 9:30
R Sat-Sun at (5:00 @ $2.50) 7:30, 9:30
Glenn Close Jeff Bridges
JAGGED EDGE
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
Sat-Sun at (2:15 @ $2.50) 4:45 @ $2.50) 7:15, 9:45
R
That was then, this is now.
1984
Fri at (5:45 @ $2.50) 8:30
Sat-Sun at (5:00 @ $2.50) 7:30, 9:55
Sat-Sun at (2:15 @ $2.50)
Mon at (2:15 @ $2.50)
THE CYPRESS LATE SHOWS
FRI & SAT at 12:15 SEATS $ 3.50
ROCKY HORROR
BEVERLY HILLS COP
PINK FLOYD - THE WALL
1984
R

• LPs • BLANKS • CASS • 45s
MAGS • IMPORTS
AL·BUM'S
NEW ENLARGED STOCK OF RECORDED CASSETTES $3.99-5.79
ALL CDs IN STOCK $12.99
DON'T FORGET WE
BUY • SELL • TRADE
USED LPs, CASSETTES & CDs
ALBUMS • 181 N. PLEASANT STREET • AMHERST • 253-7137
SUNGLASSES
POSTERS • PINS • ACCESSORIES

SHOWCASE CINEMAS
ROUTE 5 RIVERDALE ROAD
W. SPRINGFIELD 733-5131
LATE SHOWS FRIDAY, SATURDAY - CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCES SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND HOLIDAYS
EARLY MAT. WED. FRI. SAT. SUN.
FIRST SHOW ONLY $2.50
"A REFRESHINGLY LOOPY MOVIE!"
Kathleen Carroll NEW YORK DAILY NEWS
THE GODS MUST BE CRAZY
An Epic Comedy Of Absurd Proportions
A TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX RELEASE
JAMIE UYS' "THE GODS MUST BE CRAZY"
a C.A.T. FILMS PRODUCTION
MARIUS WEYERS SANDRA PRINSLOO and XAO THE BUSHMAN
BOET TROSKIE JOHNNY BOSHOFF
JAMIE UYS
PG
STARTS TODAY

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
MARIAN McPARTLAND
Tuesday, November 12 8 pm.
Tickets $13.11.9
"A fascinating, inventive pianist; playful, probing and provocative"
John S. Wilson, New York Times
ASPEN WIND QUINTET
Thursday, November 14 8 pm.
Tickets $6
Winner—Naumburg Chamber Music Award 1984
MABOU MINES' "Cold Harbor"
A bleak & beautiful study of General Ulysses S. Grant
Sunday, November 17 8 pm
Tickets $12.10
Five College students Half-Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center, and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413) 545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH
UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN. 19-24
TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING HOTEL or CONDO
ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES, NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT.
HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199
FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP
Sign-up before Nov. 19th and get a free T-shirt.
LAGNAF 86
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

Enjoyable Live Entertainment
This Evening
from 7 P.M. til 11 P.M.
Featuring:
The Inspiring Music and Singing of Chuck Carbonneau & Guitar
Sample one of our fine coffees and pastry products while enjoying an evening of Leisure and Great Musical Sounds
Location: Bluewall Cafeteria
No Admission Charge

ARTS

James Green as the lover and Alicia Gallagher star in "Machinal" playing at the Curtain Theatre through Saturday.

(Left to right) Michael Vousboukis as lawyer for the defense, Alicia Gallagher as the young woman and John Kinsherf as lawyer for the prosecution in "Machinal".

A portrait of despair in a machine-like society

By MIKE GERVASI
Collegian Correspondent

Machinal, the play currently running in the Curtain Theatre, portrays society as a huge machine whose gear-like people can be easily replaced when they don't work.

The story centers around a confused and vulnerable woman who is trapped in a desperate situation. She is suffocating in a clerk job and at home she struggles to support herself and her mother. In an attempt to be free from this set of problems, she plunges head first into another set by marrying her boss. It is a marriage of convenience which leaves her with a child she doesn't want. She is forced to submit to every gear (her mother, husband, God...) in her machine-like world. Each is sure they know her needs, when actually they only care about their own.

Alicia Gallagher is outstanding in the leading role of the young woman. She effectively conveys the experience of a person lost in the machine. You can feel her drowning in the vacuum of her loneliness and subjugation. Marty Norden who plays her patronizing, insensitive husband also does a fine job.

The story is set in the prohibition years, yet addresses issues still relevant today. The main character faces the anonymity of a world that doesn't care about her wants or needs. The people with whom she interacts, want her to conveniently

All aspects of the production are effective in conveying these ideas. The staging and costumes are inobtrusive, allowing the play to reach into any time-frame. The characters could just as easily exist in today's world.

The direction, by Doris Abramson, is crisp and precise. It gives the play an atmosphere that draws the audience in still further to the bland, unfeeling world in which the protagonist lives. The characters move and speak together with a well-oiled efficiency.

This is an important story for those who feel the anonymity of a world that the title suggests. The portrayal of the story, by all involved is a job well done.

amc THEATRES
ANNOUNCE
THE EXPANSION
OF
amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 4 TO amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 6
TO SERVE THE PUBLIC BETTER WITH
• STATE OF THE ART PROJECTION • DISCOUNT TWILITE & MATINEES
• DOLBY STEREO SOUND • ERGONOMIC SEATS
Grand Opening FRIDAY NOVEMBER 22nd
Back to the Future | Jagged Edge | That was Then This is Now
After Hours | Santa Claus the movie 11/27 | Rocky IV 11/27
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL 584-7550

AMHERST CINEMA
Friday and Saturday
My Brilliant Career 7:00
Breaker Morant 9:00
Sunday - Tuesday
Diner 7:00
The Graduate 9:00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

UPC Presents
* JASON and the SCORCHERS
11/21 CCA
Your Future Lies Here
11/24 Bluewall
* VIOLENT FEMMES

Pleasant St. Theater
"EXPLODES WITH ENERGY" —Archer Winston, N.Y. POST
"EERIE...POETIC... GO SEE IT!" —John Richardson, N.Y. TRIBUNE
utu
. . . a point of honor
directed by Geoff Murphy
R
at 3:15, 5:35, 8, 10:20 on Sat and Sunday
Fri, Mon and Tues at 6:50, 9:15
He Just May have been the Greatest
THE BUDDY HOLLY STORY
PG
at 7 and 9:15 weekdays & Fri
Sat & Sun 3:15, 5:40, 7:50, 10 pm
27 Pleasant St./Northampton 586-0935

"★★★★ POWERFUL, AWESOME, FRIGHTENING." —Rocky Mountain News
"STUNNING." —Scott Haller, Los Angeles Times
"A bracing, stimulating and technically superb close-up look at the Los Angeles punk scene." —Jeffrey McAllister, Variety
THE DECLINE of western civilization
A film by PENELOPE SPHEERIS
featuring
ALICE BAG BAND • BLACK FLAG • CATHOLIC DISCIPLINE
CIRCLE JERKS • FEAR • GERMS • X
Executive Producers JEFF PRETTYMAN and GORDON BROWN
Soundtrack on SLASH RECORDS
A NU-IMAGE FILM Release
Student Union Ballroom, UMass
5:00, 11:00 $1. 7:00, 9:00 $2
Monday November 11
Sponsored by WSYL Radio 105.1 FM

An Austrailian western

By DON LIPPER
Collegian Staff

UTU Starring Anzac Wallace, Bruno Lawrence and Kelly Johnson. Written and directed by Geoff Murphy

UTU has everything.

Murderously restless natives, vitimized homesteaders, horses, guns, brutal non-stop violence, cultural conflict with the white man's world, passionate men and women, the cavalry and a whole cast of characters seeking revenge. This is probably the best western to be put on film in a long time. There's just one problem, this western takes place in the eastern hemisphere.

Northampton's Pleasant St. Theatre consistently comes up with really good and generally accessable domestic and foreign art films. UTU (playing through Tuesday) is the epic adventure of a New Zealand native who returns from the colonial army to find his village and all its inhabitants have been senseleesly destroyed by the very army he is serving. He instantly kills one of his fellow soldiers. Te Wheke (played by Anzac Wallace) sends word to the army colonel that he is deserting. "I'm coming to get him," he says in a Ramboesque fashion.

Te Wheker musters a small commando force that goes on a killing rampage across the countryside. With guns and axes, the natives savagely butcher every white person they find.

After beheading a priest in front of his Sunday congregation, Te Wheke attacks a colonial couple (the Williamsons) trapped in their isolated house. The Williamsons (Bruno Lawrence and Ilona Rodgers) fight bravely against the onslaught but eventually they lose. Williamson (left for dead) goes crazy and vows revenge against Te Wheke.

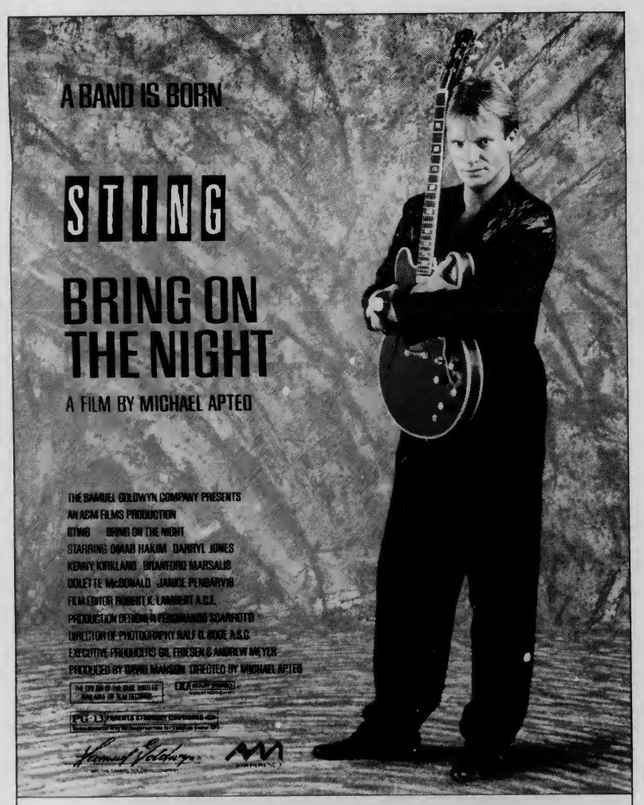
Lieutenant Scott (Kelly Johnson) is dispatched by the army to take care of Te Wheke. Unsure of himself in his new command, the naive Scott is unable to capture Te Wheke. Instead he falls for Kura (played with cunning sensuality by Tania Bristowe) who is one of Te Wheke's women.

The action sequences are suspenseful and well-coordinated. The film moves quickly from one scene of brutal violence to the next. The story has a mean quality that comes from its basis in historical fact which makes the audience uneasy. We're unsure of what will happen to the characters in this non-formula film.

Please don't mistake this film for the senseless commando movies we've been subjected this year. UTU (which means revenge) is a complex and intellectually sophisticated movie that examines the affects of violence and the endless thirst for revenge. Its characters are very real and complex. Distant narrative strands come together to weave a sweeping storyline. UTU doesn't make judgements about its characters, all are tainted by their need for revenge.

UTU is involving, entertaining and even has a few good laughs. It's worth seeing before its departure from Pleasant St. on Tuesday.

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880



安城中國飯店
Amherst Chinese Foods
Best Mandarin Food
62-64 MAIN ST., AMHERST
BEER & WINE LICENSE
Fresh Vegetables from Our Own Farm
CLOSED WEDNESDAY
WE DO NOT USE MSG OR ARTICIAL COLORING
253-7835

Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-3601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 373-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today.

STARTS FRIDAY NOVEMBER 8th
AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU

Congratulations
Kris & Kate on Number 22!
Daddy-O

Exotic Fish & Pet World, Inc.
49 Russell St., Hadley, MA
one of the
Hadley Village Barn Shops
AQUARIUM SALE
NOV. 9 - NOV. 17
• 10 Gallon Setup only $39.95
tank, filter, filter materials, pump, heater, thermometer, conditioner, full incandescent hood
• 20 Gallon Setup only $49.95
tank, heater, thermometer, filter, filter material, conditioner
• 30 Gallon Setup $69.95
tank, heater, thermometer, filter, filter material, conditioner
Christmas Lay-a-way available on these low prices!
FISH SALE
• Fancy Guppies $1.99
• Small Serpaes 3-$1.00
• Platties 79¢
• Painted Swords 99¢
• Small Neons 5-$1.00
• White Clouds 5-$1.00
• Glass Cats $1.49
• Tiger Barbs 3-$3.29
Many more fish specials!
586-3362 Tues-Fri 10-9 Sat-Mon 10-6

BLACK AFFAIRS

Minority enrollment increasing in five-college area

By RHONDA SWAN
Collegian Staff

For the past few years, the numbers of minorities enrolling in institutions of higher learning in the five-college area has steadily increased.

At the University of Massachusetts the numbers have "significantly increased over the past three or four years," said Tim Rinehart, acting admissions director. Rinehart said that the University is very pleased with its progress in recruiting minorities but realizes that is by no means completely satisfied. "We've gone from four to five percent to seven or eight percent in the last five years and we're very pleased about that. However, we're never satisfied with the quantity or the quality of students," said Rinehart.

He said it would be very difficult to judge whether or not minorities were well represented at the university. He noted that the minority population of the state of Massachusetts is between 10 and 11 percent and if the university were to try and match that figure, it has a "little ways to go."

Presently the total number of minorities in the entering freshmen class is 367 students or 8.6 percent of the total freshmen population. Rinehart said the goal of the university is to "provide access to all minorities."

Minority enrollment has also increased steadily at Smith College in Northampton. Yvonne Freccero, registrar of Smith College, said the reason for the increase is "because we work hard." Freccero said the college has had a steady increase every year but is not yet completely satisfied. "We're not satisfied and we want to keep trying," she said.

The present minority population at Smith is 342 students, which makes up 13 percent of its total student body. Juliette Brigham, associate director of admissions, said that Smith does "quite a lot in terms of minority recruitment." In addition to employing personnel to address the special needs of minority students, Smith have some of their own minority students go to their hometown high schools to aid in recruitment. Brigham feels there is a need to target black, Hispanic, and Native American students for recruitment while Asian students "seem to holding their own."

Cheryll Rothery, assistant director of admissions and coordinator of minority recruitment at Mount Holyoke College, said the minority population at that campus has remained steady for the past few years. Although she is not satisfied with the numbers, Rothery feels that minorities are well represented at Mount Holyoke "we have a very diverse student body." The college's minority population of 223 students is approximately 11 percent of the total student body. Rothery said that the college implements new programs every year and provides resources to retain the students once they have entered.

Mary Frye, assistant dean of students at Hampshire College, feels that the admissions office there is beginning to "pay more attention" to the issue of minority recruitment. Although she was not able to cite exact statistics, she said she felt that there had been an increase in the total numbers of minority students enrolled at Hampshire. Hampshire presently has 111 minority students which make up 10 percent, of the student body.

Frye said that for a predominantly white school, this figure was a "significant percentage." However, she also said that she felt "most minority students would like to see an increase in enrollment." Paul Thiboutot, associate dean of admissions of Amherst College, noted that when examining the population there, one must take into account that "you are dealing with small numbers, especially when compared to an institution like the university."

For the past few years, Amherst College has experienced a slight decrease in black enrollment and a slight increase in enrollment of Hispanics and Asian American students. Presently, there are approximately 1500 students, 10 percent of which are minorities. In terms of representation, Thiboutot said, "I would like to see greater representation of all kinds."

DELANO'S

FINE FOOD & SPIRITS
Mon & Tues Nite
Free Taco Bar*
* 9 - till it lasts!
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Heineken
57 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

TAPES
SAVE
$1.35 EACH
TDK D-90
MAXELL LN-90
SONY C-90
TDK SA-90 2.25
MAIL CHECK TO: TF WHOLESALE/RETAIL P.O. Box 66 AMHERST 01004
90 minutes tapes 2 albums

HERE'S THE NEWS YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR!

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package
Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Stratton
Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

HOW TO LAND A NEWSPAPER JOB
MINORITY JOB FAIR
November 14,15,16
Holiday Inn Hartford, Conn.
Free Registration
Call 1-800-524-4242

INTERVIEWS
Recruiters will interview students who want to land internships or full-time jobs in the following newspaper fields:
• Advertising • Marketing
• Circulation • News Reporting
• Photography • Graphics
Interviews begin after Friday's luncheon and continue through Saturday.

HIGHLIGHTS
Keynote Banquet Speaker, Thursday evening, Nov. 14, Robert Maynard, Publisher, Oakland Tribune. One of the first black publishers of a major newspaper in the United States.
Luncheon Speaker, Friday, Nov. 15, Osborn Elliott, Dean, Columbia University School of Journalism. Former Editor-in-chief of Newsweek.
Panel Discussions on Friday morning.
Meals provided for all registrants: Thursday evening banquet, Friday lunch and dinner.

INFORMATION AND REGISTRATION
Call The Hartford Courant Toll Free 1-800-524-4242 between 9 AM and 5 PM.

SPONSORS
American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE), New England Newspaper Association, New England Press Association, Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.
The Hartford Courant

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
1-665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open: Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

NATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM INFORMATION MEETINGS

There will be four information meetings for students interested in applying for the National Student Exchange Program for Fall, 1986.

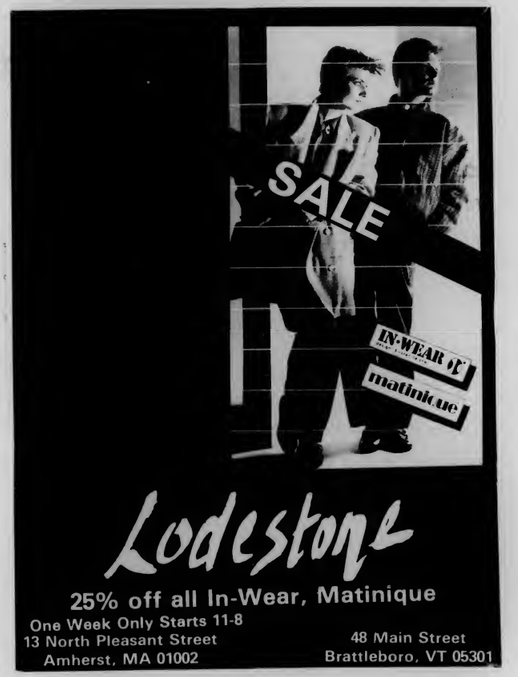
Tuesday, November 12*	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 13	4-5 pm	CC 805
Tuesday, November 19	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 20	4-5 pm	CC 803

* financial aid information session

Students applying to restricted schools: Univ. of Hawaii/Manoa & Hilo; Univ. of So. Florida; Cal State Chico, Northridge & Sonoma; and College of the Virgin Islands must attend one of these information sessions.

When It Comes To Price, We're the Underdog

Nike® Recognition
Leather Court Shoe
Women's sizes
Reg. 32.99-36.99
$25 Low $28 High



Olympian®
Leather High Top Court Shoe
Men's sizes Reg. 26.99
$21

Nike® Convention
Leather Court Shoe
Men's sizes Reg. 39.42.99
$31 Low $33 High

Boys' sizes
Reg. 31.99-33.99
$24-$25 Low High

In our game, the best way to stay on top is to keep our prices under everybody elses. Even on the best-selling names and styles in athletic footwear, like Nike and Olympian leather court shoes. That way, we all come up winners.

OLYMPIAN
We thrive on competition.
Hampshire Mall, Rte 9, Hadley

Lodestone
25% off all In-Wear, Matinique
One Week Only Starts 11-8
13 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
48 Main Street
Brattleboro, VT 05301

C & C LIQUORS
61 Main St., Amherst
Next to Town Hall
FOR FREE DELIVERY OF $20 MINIMUM ORDER, (OFF UMASS CAMPUS)
Dial 253-3091
All Prices In Store Cash Only

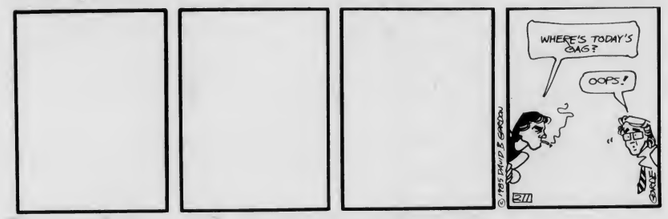
15% Off All Italian Wine (750 ml.)

Commonwealth Cranberry-Apple Wine $3.99
Gallo Hearty Burgundy & Chablis $3.49 1.5L
Grizzly Beer Imported from Canada $3.25 6 pk. + dep.
Piels Draft 12 pk. + dep. $3.75

IBM on campus
Open House
10:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
Come Informally to Get Information about Regular & Coop Opportunities at Several IBM Locations
• Bring 3 resumes
• If invited, interview on 11/13/85
Tuesday 11/12/85
Campus Center
EE, ME, IE, CS, Acct. & Finance
IBM is an equal opportunity employer
careers in engineering, science, programming, marketing

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU



BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Woe's Moe

By Maureen Hayes

Bat Brain

Weather

Partly cloudy, breezy and cooler today, with highs in the lower 50s. Tonight, it will clear and cold, with lows from the mid 20s to mid 30s.

Menu

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Cranberry Sauce
Spanish Shrimp and Rice Casserole

BASICS LUNCH
Garbanzo Vegetable Stew
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich/
Cranberry Sauce

DINNER
Meatloaf/Marinara Sauce
N.E. Style Scrod/Herb Crumb Topping
Eggs with Sharp Cheese Cold Plate

BASICS DINNER
Fiesta Rice and Cheese
N.E. Style Scrod/Herb Crumb Topping
Eggs with Sharp Cheese Cold Plate

The Collegian is good family reading.

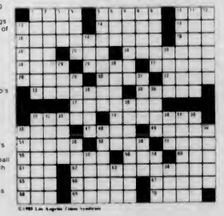
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

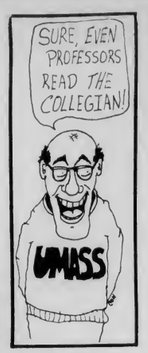


ACROSS
1 Heraldic fillet
5 Go off with ——
10 Before ish or phyta
13 Dim
14 Partisan person
15 Lilia devi
16 Stanley's quest
18 Actor Vigoda
19 Abbr. on a street map
20 Part of a shoe size
21 Orange-red mineral
23 Gentleman!
25 Ending to coal or opal
27 Headdress for her highness
28 Seed covering
30 Evening, in Padua
32 Floating behemoths
33 Island near Madagascar
35 Golfer Tony and family
37 Strong wind
39 Tradshooting
42 Treated a violin's strings
46 Thorny trees of India
47 Cockatoos
49 Granted
51 Certain ape, for short
53 TVA power
55 — voce
56 One of Jacob's sons et al
58 — Rheingold
60 Dickens lad
61 Chinese pagoda
62 Old Faithful's Park
65 Me of baseball
66 A Room with —— E M Forster
67 Skirt features
68 OT book
69 Covered car
70 Start of some competitions

DOWN
1 Baron of the boards
2 Opposite
3 Chou En ——
4 River into Donegal Bay
5 Rater
6 Bridle part
7 Fan, for one
8 Hawaiian bird
9 Potomac Falls
10 Honeymooners Falls
11 Boards
12 "Lulu" and others
13 Mild expletive
17 Command to Dobbin
22 Author O'Flaherty
24 A Udall to friends
26 Kind of heating
27 Royal equestrienne
31 Pub potables
34 Jot
36 Winter Amber
38 Wash in a way
39 Arranged in succession
40 —— Falls, Ore.
41 Slave of old
43 Ida's neighbor
44 Redactors
45 Actor Andy et al
46 Tea party site
48 Sked again
50 —— at Sea
52 Prides of the Prado
54 Crow
57 Granular snow
59 NCO
63 Meadow
64 Also

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

B	A	B	E		W	O	R	S	I	E		P	U	G	S
A	L	U	M		A	R	O	M	A		O	U	A	M
G	O	L	D	E	N	B	E	A	R		A	R	I	A
S	E	L	E	C	T	S		S	H	E	L	L	E	Y
		E	N	O	S		S	H	E	A	R	E	R	S
C	O	L		L	I	T		P	U	G
E	B	B		M	A	I	D		M	O	J	A	I
B	O	O	M	S		I	L	E		M	O	O	N	S
E	L	A	N		F	O	L	E	R	O		L	O	N
			A	U		A	R	E	E		I	N
K	O	S		G	I	A	N	T		R	I
A	S	P	H	A	L	T		T	O	R	O	N	T	O
B	A	R	E		O	I	A	M	O	N	D		J	I	M
O	K	A	T		S	U	M	E	R		I	O	T	A
B	A	Y	S		P	E	E	N	S		N	E	O	N



11/8/85

Bring down the cost of your education

Save up to 50%* on a Zenith Data Systems PC
Read about it in Talking Clones.
Coming on November 20th

Published by Zenith Data Systems * Based on suggested retail prices

VETERANS GET FREE INSTALLATION ! !

SONY $199 $269 $379 | Clarion $149 $199 $229 | BLAUPUNKT $189 $229 $99

WHISTLER $89 — QUALITY AM/FM CASSETTE — Complete System with Speakers $88

STOP AUTO THEFT — ARMORED HOOD LOCK AND IGNITION CUT OFF SYSTEM $99 installed — 20% OFF Insurance Cost — KEYLESS ALARM SYSTEM $99 & up installed — DELUXE ALARM SYSTEM Ignition Disarm, Loud Siren, Flashing Headlight, Motion Detector $239 installed

HURRY 4 DAY SALE ONLY!
FRI.-MONDAY
OPEN SUNDAY!
372 RIVERDALE ST.
W. SPFLD. 734-4995

CUSTOM CAR SOUND

141A DAMON RD.
NORTHAMPTON 586-5258

Look Who's Coming to the Boston GRE/CGS Forum on Graduate Education

American University • Boston College • Bryn Mawr College • City University of New York • George Washington University • Harvard University • Institute of Paper Chemistry • Louisiana State University Medical Center • Northeastern University • Smith College • University of North Carolina • University of Southern California

This is just a small sampling of the nearly 75 graduate schools from across the country that will be represented at the Boston GRE/CGS Forum. Take advantage of this exciting opportunity to meet with graduate school representatives, pick up catalogs and applications, and attend workshops on topics including admissions and financial aid, GRE test preparation, and graduate study in a variety of disciplines.

Saturday November 16, 1985
Hyatt Regency Cambridge
575 Memorial Drive
9:00 am - 4:00 pm

Registration fee is $3, payable at the door. Registration begins at 8:30 am. Watch for more Forums information in upcoming editions of this newspaper.

Jointly sponsored by the Graduate Record Examinations Board and the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

HAIRCUTS $8.50 with this coupon
CALL STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr., Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85 C

WE'RE SETTING THEM UP-SO YOU CAN MOCK-EM' DOWN

FALL "SPECIAL"
Saturday 9am to 5pm
Sunday's 9 am to 2 pm
BOWLING
99¢ A Game
Northampton Bowl
628 Pleasant St., Northampton
584-4630

Kegs ★ Beer ★ — Wine ★ Soda ★

STADIUM LIQUORS

Catch our great in store specials

Minutemen do it again. . . BEAT DELAWARE!

SPECIALS
Budweiser loose cans. . . $11.50 cs $1.20 dep.
Schaeffer 12 oz. cans. . . . $8.35 $1.20 dep.
Piels Draft or Light. . . . $6.80 cs $1.20 dep.

Stadium Liquor — ROUTE 9 — ROUTE 116 — UNIVERSITY DRIVE — SOUTH PEST COMPLEX — FLUCKEY STADIUM — BOOTH — AMHERST TOWN PARK

253-5595 175 University Drive

We're Making A

All Unsold BOOKS
Are going back to the Publishers Now.
Buy Now.

the UNIVERSITY STORE's TEXTBOOK ANNEX @ physical plant bldg

MON-FRI 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Volleyball in big tourney at Northeastern

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

It's a very big weekend for the University of Massachusetts volleyball team.

Elaine Sortino's Minutewomen can all but guarantee a bid to the East Coast Athletic Conference playoffs and could put themselves in excellent position for an NCAA Division II tournament bid as well with three victories at the Northeastern Invitational tournament this weekend.

UMass, 32-6 and ranked second in the Northeast, will face Brown University in its opening match on Friday night before facing the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and host Northeastern on Saturday. The spikers swept MIT for the state championship last weekend, and are 1-2 against Northeastern this season.

"We went three games with them (Brown) at the Army tournament last year," said Sortino of Brown. "They are a very fine Ivy League team. They recruited very well out of Virginia's program and from California."

"They have all of those kids back," added Sortino. "I think that it's going to be a very tough match. Right down to the wire."

Because of the round-robin format of the tournament, the team with the best record coming out of the round-robin competition will be crowned tournament champion.

"MIT got stronger as we played them last weekend," said Sortino. "They will be ready. They know what to expect from us."

"MIT will be a tough match because they're good, they're smart and they can make adjustments really quick," said Sortino.

UMass will have to control the middle with freshman middle hitter Barb Meehan and sophomore middle hitter Marcy Guiliotis. The middle offense was key to the spiker's victories at the state championship last weekend and over defense and can win games itself now.

★ football

continued from page 16

"They're (the offense) showing what we hoped they would," said Stull. "Dave has a lot to do with that, but the line and backs are playing as well as they have since I've been here."

"I expect a battle, we both have a lot to gain," said Stull. "I know that team wants to beat Delaware for no other reason then they haven't before. This is the first important game that's been played here in a long time. That's fun for me and the players, the bigger the game, the more fun I have. I hope we can continue to have some fun."

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: TB George Barnwell is still questionable with a shoulder bruise, sophomore Ted Barrett will get the start. . .Delaware's weakness defensively this season has been against the option, which Palazzi has run well this year.

Delaware at UMass

Where and When: McGuirk Alumni Staduim, 1 p.m.
The Records: UMass is 6-3, Delaware is 6-3.
The Season Series: Delaware leads, 9-0.
Last Season: Delaware won, 27-14.
The Latest Line: Delaware by 7.
UMass against the Spread: The Minutemen are 6-3 and 4-0 as underdogs.
National Rankings: Delaware is ranked 17th in Division 1-AA. The UMass scoring defense (9.2) is ranked first, the UMass total defense (262.8 yards) is fifth and the rushing defense (99.1 yards) 12th. Delaware's total defense (283 yards) is 11th, the scoring defense (13.3) 8th and the rushing offense (236.2 yards) 10th.
Injuries: UMass—P Jim Tandler, OG Peter Borsari and OG Sheldon Hardison (all knees) are out for the season, TB George Barnwell (shoulder) is questionable. Delaware—none.
*Radio: The game will be carried on WTTT-AM (1430), WSPR-AM (1270), WPOE-AM (1520), WUHN-AM (1110), WUMB-FM, Boston, (91.9) and WMUA-FM (91.1).

★ Atlantic 10

continued from page 16

Gerlufsen, Minuteman captain Carl Smith and senior center Tom Emerson made the drive down, and patiently answered questions about UMass' chances in the league.

"I like our team," said Smith, a junior point guard. "UMass is ready to make some noise. We have a lot of good younger players that people might not know about now, but soon will."

. . .

The pre-season poll is as follows: St. Joseph's, Temple, West Virginia, Duquesne, St. Bonaventure, Rutgers, George Washington, Rhode Island, UMass and Penn State.

Pre-season all conference picks were Maurice Martin and Rodney Blake of St. Joe's, Nate Blackwell of Temple, Rick Suder of Duquesne and Dale Blaney of West Viginia. Smith was named to the second team. For some reason, no Minutemen were named as Freshmen of Influence.

A-10 Notes: Theokas said the final game of the league tournament will be on ESPN and a regular season TV contract is in the works.

. .quote of the day by new Rutgers head coach Craig Littlepage on his 6-9, 260-pound center, Lloyd Moore, "I haven't seen a player his size. . .period."

Springfield College on Tuesday night. The Minutewoman defense will also be a factor this weekend.

"We know about Northeastern," said Sortino. "We'll have to shut down Monique Ellis (NU's big offensive force). We will really have our hands full."

"We have three very tough matches this weekend. For that reason, I would have liked to see us play with a little more spark," said Sortino after the Springfield victory.

The tournament bids to the ECAC playoffs will be awarded on November 18, by the ECAC tournament committee. The NCAA Division II tournament bids will be announced the following weekend on November 25, the weekend of the ECAC playoffs. The sight of the ECAC playoffs has not been determined as of yet, although a bid was submitted by the Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD.

UMass is in a dog fight for ECAC bids with the University of New Haven and the Naval Academy.

UMass swimmers travel to Smith

By FRED NADEL
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's swim team travels to Northampton to face Smith College, Saturday at 1 p.m. Coming off a swamping of the University of Vermont, the team hopes to keep its win streak intact.

"Smith has a lot of individual talent, but not a lot of depth," head coach Bob Newcomb said.

The teams should match up well, which will lead to an exciting contest. Smith, as Newcomb noted, suffers from a lack of depth, similar to to that of last year's UMass team. This year, however, UMass has the depth and this is a major advantage in favor of Newcomb's squad.

Smith's strongest swimmers are Deedee Burgess, Cathy Wiezbicki, Susan Lemczycki, Monique Fischer, and diver Sabra Kroll. Burgess swims the distance events and will face strong competitors in either UM's Allison Uzzo or Kris Henson. Lemczycki provides a challenge for Minutewoman freshmen Michelle Waller and Renee Jungbluth, both winners in last week's meet.

"The performance of our breaststrokers is vital on Saturday," Newcomb said.

There will be some minor changes in Saturday's lineup to match Smith's weaknesses with UMass' strengths, Newcomb said. The coach said he is looking for a strong team effort against Smith, and cited the meet's importance.

Last season the team lost to Smith and hopes to settle a year-long grudge with a victory on Saturday. Once again the team's performance can be used as a gauge of the improvement over last year's squad. Newcomb also looks to Saturday's meet to find out what kind of a team he has this year and how competitive it can be.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Worship Service led by Rev. Kevin Lewis, in James House chanvrom; Sunday, November 10, 4:00 p.m. all are welcome; 545-2661

UPC General Meeting Tuesday, November 12 at 6:30 in 101CC come see what's up and coming!! New members welcome

AUDIO

JVC home speakers. Never been used SK-66, 4-way, full 5 year warranty. Great for dorm or home. $199 549-0174 evenings

Fisher Speakers, 3-way with 12 inch woofer. Excellent sound $125 John 256-4226

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 Saab 99LE automatic. In good condition. $900. 253-7393

1977 Red Chev Camaro good condition AM FM cassette stero 2 extra new tires $900 or BO call 549-0462 evenings

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

'73 AMC Hornet wagon excellent condition, recently inspected $950. 549-1615

1970 Dodge Coronet convertible. Many new parts. Reliable. $700.00 or BO 584 4939

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, luncheon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

CONGRATULATIONS RHONDA!

Happy Birthday and Congrats on your engagement!

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline. 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Furnished bedroom in second story of a house. Close to town and campus. 163 Triangle St. #2 call Gail anytime before 11:00 pm 549-7692

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on busline, avail immediately 665-4964 leave message

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline, 365/month, avail 11/86 253-9534

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Safe Suntans 25-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Jem alone $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions. Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 15

Ovation Accoustic 12-string guitar with built in microphone pick-up. Good condition. $400 or BO Alex 256-0545

Chevy Malibu 1973 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

13" Hitachi color TV, 1984 model, excellent condition. $160 549-2859

Government Homes from $1 (u repair). Also delinquent tax property. Call 1-805-687-6000 ext GH-9616 for information

Yabadabadoo UMass "Bed Rock" Cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-8314

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stansel 584-3596

Free meals in exchange for lunch and dinner set up & clean up. For more info call 549-1063 ask for Heidi or Tammy

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Drivers wanted $7.0/hr, 3-4 nights own car required. Pinocchio's Pizza apply in person, 1177 N. Pleasant, N. Amherst

INSTRUCTION

Bartending classes starting Oct 28 covers all aspects sign up in Credit Free Workshops Tower Library

Tutoring Services for Biology and its prerequisites $5.00/hr. Call Carl at 665-3088 at any reasonable hour.

JOAN

Thanx for coming up - I'm going to be the happiest guy in UMass this weekend. Six months and still going strong. This will be the best weekend yet. I love you - Mike

LOST

Lost: Luis Vuitton wallet, containing $$, credit cards, ID's. Of very sentimental value. Rewarded. Thank you.

Help! Glasses with pink frames lost on 10/28 somewhere around Wheeler. Please call Tricia * 6-4939

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mitch 256-1069 or 256-1664

HP41CV Calculator It's my life! If found please call 549-5505 $$reward$$

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Glasses: brown frames, photobrown lenses. If found call 253-5702; Reward.

Eye glasses on 10/31 in Campus Center Auditorium call Dale 6-4039

Lost brown wallet Nov. 1 ID's and credit cards please call 549-5855.

Eyeglasses brown/tan case on 10/29 in Holdsworth call 549-4853

Long black coat with puffed shoulders. Left in Herter 110 Mon nite 11/4. If found please call EM at 6-7711 or leave message at 5-2084. Reward!

Pair of photogret lens glasses in brown vinyl case call Jon 549-0902

100 Happy Birthday Blake signs!! Sorry! Happy Bday anyway - Love ya'

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassay Recording Studio offes 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

PERSONALS

Tired of the party scene? Feel empty and without direction? Jesus said, "I have come that they may have life and have it more abundantly." To find out more, call Barrie or Nini at 253-7206 between 6 and 7 pm (Alliance Christian Fellowship, RSO).

Which witch is the witch which. Sarina (Jennifer) with the magic smile -call me, write to me, or come dance with me again same place Sat Nov 9 Chickeo the Atomic Chicken!!!

Good Luck Nick when playing chess this weekend. But do you really realize what you're getting into in 189 days? There's still time to reconsider. If you knew her like we know her - - -

Hey Creep! This is just one more reason why I'm a S-head Happy Birthday! Love always, Joyce

Pap I'm sorry about everything D

Gidget - How 'bout them Mets? Yeah, do you want me to? Yes.

Scottie Santarella! It's your birthday! I can't believe that!

Beer and Rach Happy Anniversary! How about a country pie? Look in the fridge I love you guys - Carr

Happy Birthday Liss Webster! Have a wonderful weekend but give your hair and nails a break! Love David and Pamela

Iey Shar! Thanks for being the best friend in the world! Hugs, your Westwood Twin Angela!!! I hope you have a great 18th Birthday! Should I invite the goats?! Thanks for being such a great friend, Love ya Becky

To John "Pack your stuff", Dana "let's get a rock", Gary "chase the car" and Mike "man without a nose" how bout another roadtrip to Boston? Tony "Bellygerantrude-Boy

Gayle - Happy Birthday! Luv your roommates Kara Lisa Taz

Cathy C 15 I've had my eye on you for awhile, and I just want to say you look marvelous Secret Admirer friend of a friend

Turbo, Tomorrow is our four week anniversary. Let's keep showing everyone what happiness is all about. This honeymoon will never end! Love, Buz

- Stringer - Definite possibility Scott

Soap-Eye Hope your wonton soup was hot. Happy 20th love your buddy whose too nice Sebastian - Don't laugh at Jungle Jim here's one for you Tia!

Bernie, Thanks for the best 3 years ever. I love you more than ever. Lets stay together always. Hoppy to be with you. Kangaroo

Happy 19th Birthday, Jen Queen of Sloth! Love, you loyal subjects, Jodi and Lori

Hey Jen Simon, Ita Nov. are you cold yet? Your concerned exroomie wants to know. Love Carol

Kitty, I love you more than anything in the whole world. Love A and F. Puppy

Macho Happy 21st Birthday you stud Will you serenade us the way you did for the ducks? Love, Mary, Amy, & Paula

Special K... one on one basketball is not your best game! Try something you might be able to outlast me in. The Taller One

Jeff Pattow - Happy 19th Birthday! Love you more than you'll ever know! XOXO - P

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, oncampus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share new house in Shutesbury. Very clean, modern house which is 10 miles from UMass. Male or female, $125 plus $10 for utilities. Call anytime, available now. 367-9328

SERVICES

COINS 133/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Midterm problems? Student counseling service. After 2 pm 1-467-7877

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7652

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2131 for an escort ANYTIME

Quality TYping by Professional. Resonable rates. Convenient. Call Heather 253-3163

SPRING BREAK '86

Register now for Spring Break '86 in Ft. Lauderdale/Daytona Beach! Prices from $199. A $30 deposit guarantees your reservation (plus more!) Take until January 29 to pay balance. Pick your own roommates. Extras! - Mike 546-9039

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apt Cliffside F-4 starting January or February Bob 665-8219

TRAVEL

Do something January 5-12 Ski Vail Ted 546-4733

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

WANTED

Wanted take over lease in 2, 3, 4 bedroom apt reward negotiable call 549-8822

Like English Boat, Costello, Diverse Styles? Interested in doing original material & play bass, drums? Call Gregg 6-3253 or Rick 6-6792

WANTED TO RENT

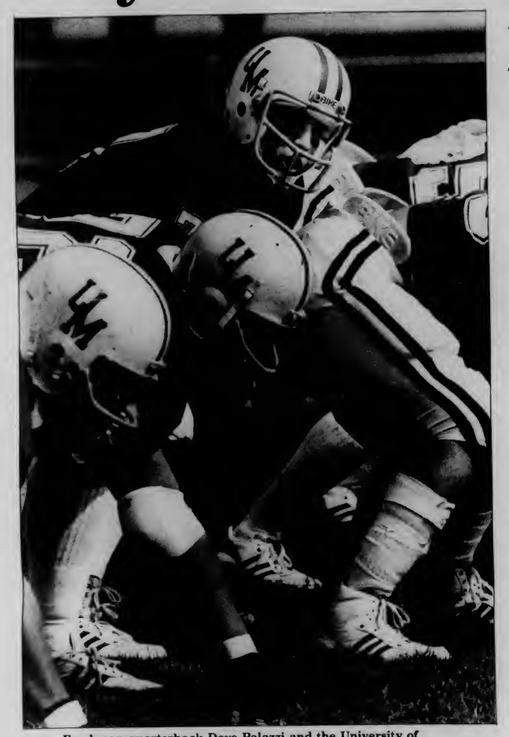
Responsible male senior seeks room in quiet apt or house near campus spring semester. Okay to call late nights, early mornings 546-5143

2 females need room anywhere in North Amherst will take over January lease call 549-3809

To take over lease in January of a two bedroom apartment on bus route call nights Laine 546-9678 Randy 546-6363

WHO'S A GOOD KITTY?

Saturday is Jenny Boyce's Birthday! Let's make it a really special day for her because she's really special to all of us.



YO UMMR

Come see the UMass Marching Band in its final home appearance tomorrow afternoon at the UMass vs Delaware football game.
Yo Bandos, thanx for a great season from the Brothers of Kappa Kappa Psi and the Sisters of Tau Beta Sigma

SPORTS

Playoffs on line for Minutemen

Delaware biggest game of 1985 for overachieving UMass football

Freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi and the University of Massachusetts football team take on Delaware tomorrow at Alumni Stadium. Sports information photo

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

Admit it, in September you didn't think that on November 9th the University of Massachusetts football team would be playing to keep its national playoff hopes alive.

Neither did UMass head coach Bob Stull. "To be honest, I was hoping we would be a much better team, but I really didn't think I'd be talking about our playoff chances this late in the season," Stull noted. "But I'm glad I am."

The Minutemen will take a 6-3 record and a four-game winning streak into McGuirk Alumni Staduim tommorrow to face the University of Delaware, a team that like UMass needs to win to keep any playoff hopes flickering.

"This is a determined bunch of young men," said Stull about his team. "We've been very businesslike in practice, pretty loose and all, but with a real sense of purpose about what we have to do."

"I think we've proved to ourselves and everybody else that we are a good football team and that the past is behind us," said Stull. "Now it's time to win a game that means something more than gaining respect, this means a lot more."

The Minutemen, with a win against the Blue Hens tomorrow and another next Saturday at New Hampshire, would place themselves in serious contention for one of the six at-large bids for the division 1-AA national playoffs beginning November 30.

"If we win two games, go 8-3 and have six wins in a row, we'll force them to look at us," said defensive coordinator Jim Reid. "We'll be a team that's tough to overlook."

But first, UMass must get past a tough Delaware squad that needs the game just as much. The Minutemen have never beaten the Blue Hens in nine games dating back to 1958. Delaware is the only team that the UMass seniors have played regularly over four years and haven't beaten. In a season of paybacks, this would be the sweetest.

"I want that game so badly," said junior offensive guard Stan Kaczorowski last week. "This would mean so much to the guys that have been here a while. We have so many reasons to want to win this game."

Delaware is also 6-3, coming off a 17-10 win over Division I Temple that wasn't as close as the score. The Blue Hens are one of the nation's top 1-AA teams. Ranked 17th in the latest poll and favored by a touchdown, Delaware joins Richmond as UMass' toughest opponents of 1985.

The Hens refined the Wing-T, a motion offense favored by many high schools. Coach Tubby Raymond's team is led by sophomore quarterback Rich Gannon, a multiple threat that runs well out of the pocket.

"It's a tough offense to prepare for," said Stull. "But we've seen them before and I think that our defense is ready for them. You need a little help from Delaware to beat them. A few turnovers wouldn't hurt our chances."

On defense, Delaware goes with a standard 6-1 with some four man front variations. Sophomore middle linebacker Darrell Booker is the key to the Hen defense. He made 23 tackles against Temple and roams the middle as well as any in the nation.

"Booker's tough, but we'll just run our offense and see what they give us," said Stull. "We're not going to change what's been working well so far."

The best weapon in the UMass offense this season has been freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi. The Minutemen are 5-1 with Palazzi in the line-up and according to Raymond, "one of the toughest challenges we've had all season."

"Palazzi's a good quarterback and he's done a lot of things for them," said Raymond earlier this week. "He's very mobile and our defense will have to keep tabs on him at all times. As for UMass' defense, just look at the stats, they don't allow many points."

The UMass defense allows just 9.2 a game to be exact, first in the 1-AA rankings. Led by a tough line, mobile linebackers that get to the ball well and a secondary that has allowed 163 yards a game, the UMass

continued on page 15

Slumping field hockey needs clutch victories

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

The fifth-ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team sets out on its longest road trip of the season today, flying to Ann Arbor, Michigan for two matches against teams from the Big Ten.

The Minutewomen, 11-4-2 and losers of two straight, battle the University of Michigan on Saturday before taking on Purdue University on Sunday. UMass is in a must-win situation needing to take both games in order to all but guarantee themselves a lock on an NCAA national tournament bid.

"Our goal now is to go 13-4-2 on the season. These games are crucial. I feel we'll need to win both games in order to get in," UMass head coach Pam Hixon said. "If we don't then its out of our hands and we'll be at the mercy of someone else. But we don't want that, we want to control our own destiny."

Hixon said the team is riding high and feels confident in its ability to win under pressure. The team is going to stick with what has gotten it this far, and at this point there is no room for anything new.

"There are no more what-ifs. I'm going to go with the player combination that gives us the most spark and that's all there is to it," Hixon said.

Should the Minutewomen be swept, their playoff hopes could be in jeopradv, in the fate in the hands of the selection committee.

But Hixon has remained confident in the team's chances throughout the season and doesn't expect, regardless of the outcome, UMass not to be selected to the national tournament. She has said repeatedly that no one can be counted out or taken lightly this season since no team in the nation seems totally dominant.

The University of Connecticut, which defeated the Minutewomen 2-1, in a battle at NOPE last Saturday, was ranked number one last week. The Husky express was derailed yesterday however as it was crushed by Northeastern, who tied UMass at midseason. All in all, any one of the teams selected to the national tournament can be considered a legitimate threat to capture the national title.

Free Hits: Sophomore defensman Ronnie Coleman made her first start of the season last Saturday against UConn and was praised by Hixon as doing a great job. Freshman forward Ruth Vasapolli also drew praise from Hixon who said that Stuart played a tremendous game. Stuart was assigned to shadow two-time All-America midfielder and UConn co-captain Janet Ryan, who eventually scored the game-winner off a corner hit. The two games this weekend will mark the final regular seaon games for departing seniors Megan Donnelly, Chris Kocot, Judy Morgan and Kathryn Rowe.

Atlantic 10 notebook

Hoop parity sets in

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.–"I didn't ask to be picked for first in the preseason," said St. Joseph's basketball coach Jim Boyle. "I even wonder if there's any team in this league I can say without a doubt we can beat on any night, the conference is that even."

The media descended on Giants Staduim yesterday to listen to the coaches of the Atlantic 10 tell them how solid their conference would be this season. Not one coach would come out and say he felt good about his team's chances to win the four-year-old conference's title.

"I look at Duquesne with the players they have coming back, I look at Temple and the talent they have and I look at West Virginia with their tradition of playing well and I wonder how we got so many first-place votes," said Boyle. "We have four starters back, sure, but there's a lot of good teams in this league. The A-10's a comer, there's a lot of talent in this league."

. . .

And a lot of enthusiasm. Just a day after the Big East drew a media horde of 240 to Madison Square Garden, the A-10 set about destroying the "weak sister" image that's plagued it since its inception in 1982.

"We have some great coaches in this league, some great players and no, I don't think we're overshadowed by the Big East," said second-year commissioner Charlie Theokas.

"This league will soon be able to compete with the Big East for the top players," said Temple coach Don Chaney. "We need to get that one team to shine nationally and hopefully a little more exposure to accomplish our goals."

. . .

UMass coach Ron

continued on page 15

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:

Today

Volleyball: at Northeastern tournament.

Saturday

Football: Delaware, Alumni Staduim, 1 p.m.
Volleyball: at Northeastern tournament.
Field Hockey: at Michigan, 11 a.m.
Women's Swimming: at Smith, 1 p.m.

Sunday:

Field Hockey: Purdue, at Michigan, 11 a.m.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 47 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Tuesday, November 12, 1985

Star Wars may push arms race

Kerry attacks initiative

By PHIL SERAFINO
Collegian Staff

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

Massachusetts Senator John Kerry.

Continued research into the Reagan administration's Strategic Defense Initiative threatens to escalate the arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union at a critical point in its history, according to U.S. Senator John Kerry, (D-Mass).

Kerry, who spoke at the Student Union Ballroom Friday afternoon, said that he is not optimistic about next week's Geneva summit talks between President Reagan and Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev because the Reagan administration "was unwilling even to not test an anti-satellite weapon prior to the Geneva conference."

The initiative, known as Star Wars, is a space-borne system designed to destroy incoming nuclear missiles. Kerry said that the Soviets will think we are building Star Wars in order to have the capability to strike first in a nuclear war.

"Looking at the history of the arms race , knowing that every action causes a reaction, we should simply be able to understand that that is what this (Star Wars) is going to do: cause another reaction from the Soviet Union," Kerry said.

"You can't build Star Wars unilaterally without the Soviet Union responding in kind," he said, adding that enormous expenditures of money and resources will be used in the ensuing technological race.

Kerry said that it would also destroy the deterrence factor that has kept the nuclear peace since 1945. "What has kept the peace since we dropped that bomb forty years ago is the riotual recognition that each of us can penetrate the other's offense and defense," Kerry said.

He also said that nuclear deterrence has helped prevent conventional wars also, because "we both know that conventional conflict can escalate into the nuclear conflict which has no end that is acceptable."

Kerry said that the U.S. and the Soviet Union would be better off concentrating on verification policies to keep track of the construction and deployment of nuclear weapons by both sides, because we have the technology necessary to do this.

"Why can't we both of us agree on a level of weapons where we both maintain today's ability for penetration and then begin to work backwards from that, rather than continually escalating and changing?", Kerry said, adding that through satellite verification both countries could be sure the other was being faithful to the agreement.

He also faulted the Star Wars plan for only being 90 percent effective, saying that is no protection at all. He said that the system would not provide protection against cruise missiles, which fly close to the earth's surface.

"We ought to be struggling in this summit to stop this insane continuous rush that ignores all the lessons of the arms race, to pretend that there is a technological cure for this problem. There is not,"Kerry said.

Kerry's speech was part of a week-long program sponsored by the Five-College Peace and World Security Studies program in preparation for the Geneva summit, which begins one week from today.

Mt. Holyoke to divest from South Africa

By LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

SOUTH HADLEY - Mount Holyoke College has become the third college in the five-college system to completely divest from companies doing business in South Africa, along with the University of Massachusetts and Hampshire College.

The Mount Holyoke Board of Trustees agreed to begin immediate divestment of its $14.5 million interests in companies doing business with South Africa.

The announcement Saturday, that the college would seek total divestment, calls for divestment by no later than early 1987, said Student Government Association President, Susan Trabucchi.

Hampshire College, in 1977, and UMass, in 1977 and 1985, have also agreed to totally divest from South Africa. Smith and Amherst Colleges have partially divested their holdings.

According to the Sunday Republican, Mount Holyoke trustee board chairman, Richard Unsworth, announced the board's decision at a noontime press conference on the steps of Skinner Hall before more than 70 cheering students and faculty members who had staged a sit-in at the student union the night before to support divestment.

The portfolio in companies with South African ties represents 17.2 percent of the college's $84 million endowment.

"With all that's been going on this fall (anti-apartheid activities) we were greatly encouraged by the school's actions," Trabucchi said.

Robin Carter, a senior at Mount Holyoke who led an ad-hoc committee for divestiture, said that students "applaud this statement of conscience," but that the "time frame for divestiture allows them to be pretty slack."

Carter recommended that a committee consisting of students and faculty members monitor the progress of divestment, "just to make sure they're doing their job."

Carter said previous college policy had attempted to urge the companies in which they hold stock to comply with the Sullivan Principles, a set of guidelines developed in the 1970's that require racial fairness in hiring.

Petition against A.I.A.

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

A petition now circulating at the University of Massachusetts is the first in the nation aiming to denounce, what some UMass students call, the "neo-McCarthyist" practices of Accuracy in Academia (AIA) on campus.

The petition seeks a campus-wide referendum to express student opposition to the AIA monitoring of UMass professors believed (by AIA) to be promoting an "anti-American bias" in the classroom.

About 80 students attended the rally in front of the Student Union Friday to launch the petition, which requires the signature of 10 percent of the student body to be come a referendum.

"We don't need right-wing though cops to tell us how to think," Chris Anders, a member of the Radical Student Union said.

This fall, AIA began encouraging monitors to attend UMass classes and watch for liberal bias, which will be exposed in a periodic report circulated by the organization.

AIA seeks to eliminate "outright falsehood" which is a reflection of liberal bias, Reed Irvine, editor of the AIA Report said in a televised debate with UMass Chancellor Joseph Duffey on October 14.

Duffey said Friday that he will challenge Irvine and AIA President John LeBoutillier in a public debate when they come to the UMass campus December 5.

Duffey said the student petition will not be a significant deterrent to the practices of AIA on campus, but will satisfy a student need to express their beliefs.

Anders encouraged signing of the petition as a strong message to the organization.

"It (the petition) is not intended to kick Accuracy in Academia off campus—they have the right of free speech," he said, "but it's important for student to say that we oppose what they are doing."

In a letter to the editors of college newspapers nationwide, AIA directors Lee Csorba and Matthew Scully wrote, "The right of academic freedom is not the same as the right of free speech. Universities were not set up around the country merely to provide malcontents with a means of registering their grievances against society."

But rally speaker M. Lynne Murphy, a member of the University Democrats, said that AIA policy ignores the fact that open discussion and inquiry are an important part of a secondary education.

If AIA succeeds, "education will become a mere distribution of facts because teachers will be terrorized," Lynne said.

"Accuracy in Academia is a neo-McCarthyist group which seeks to obliterate progressive viewpoints from the classroom," she said.

D.A.'s office finds no evidence of child abuse

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

There is no evidence of a crime or criminal conduct in a case of alleged of a child attending the University of Massachusetts day care program, the northwestern district attorney's office has announced.

The investigation had "uncovered no evidence of a criminal conduct by any individual, nor did it uncover any evidence of a crime."
—Hampshire County District Attorney Michael Ryan

The Morning Union in Springfield reported Saturday that District Attorney W. Michael Ryan, said Friday that the investigation by State Police Detective Denise Fuller into "the allegation that a child was sexually abused at a day care center at the University of Massachusetts has been completed. No criminal charges will be brought against any individual as a result of this investigation."

The Union reported that Ryan announced that his office's investigation had "uncovered no evidence of any criminal conduct by any individual, nor did it uncover any evidence of a crime."

A pediatrician at University Health Services reported the suspected case of abuse to the state Department of Social Services on Oct. 9, which prompted the investigation by Ryan's office. The department's officials reported Thursday tht they had "substantiated" the report of abuse, and its investigation is separate from the district attorney's probe.

Last night, UMass spokesman Arthur Clifford and Dean of Students William F. Field both said they had not seen the district attorney's report today.

"The other agencies could find improper procedure," Field said of the case, referring to the current investigations of the reported abuse by the state Department of Social Services and the state Office for Children.

Field added that Ryan said criminal charges could only be brought by the district attorney's office, while the state offices could disclose procedure violations.

Inside:

Polymer center gets financial boost. . . 3
The immediacy of abortion. 5
Great football effort falls short. 12

"We've worked so hard only to have them beat us again."
—UMass Mike Dwyer after Delaware's 10th straight win over UM Saturday.

Today's Staff

Night Editor Gerry deSimas
Copy Editor Kathy Hart
Layout Technician Anne McCrory
Photo Technician Scott Maguire
Production Supervisor MAtkins
Production: Kelly Sieger, Danielle Carbonneau, Norm Achin, and Leslie Nakajima.

No allegations that sexual absuse of children has taken place at the University of Massachusetts day-care program have been filed by the state Department of Social Services, as had been reported in Friday's Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit-58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

What happens to your future when you choose the wrong personal computer?

Steve Jobless tells all in Talking Clones.
Coming on November 20th

Published by Zenith Data Systems

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION

Gas Saving Tune-up

4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95

We'll install new resistor spark plugs, points, & condenser (where applicable), set timing, inspect rotor, distributor cap, PVC valve, ignition cables, air filter and vapor canister filter. Includes Emission Test and Printout.

Lube, Oil & Filter

$17.99

Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil, and safety check.

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704

CAREER DAY '85
Wednesday, November 13

Over 30 companies represented!
Presentation, Luncheon and Career Fair
Luncheon tickets on sale in SOM lobby
until Nov. 8

Those wishing to attend only presentation
and Career Fair
are welcome from 10:00 am - 5:00 pm,
1st floor Campus Center
Open to all students - any major!

Sponsored by
the Undergraduate Business Club

NOW OPEN
WORCESTER

MUNCHY
8AM TO 9PM
UNIVERSITY STORE

DOVE
Secretarial Services

Fast, Accurate Typing of
- Resumes
- Term Papers
- Dissertations

79 South Pleasant St.
Amherst, Mass 01002
256-1335
253-7480

 Super Sale ***
— Students Only —
14 Days of Greece for $699
The Price Includes:
Flights
Lodging
Most Meals
&
More!!
For reservations call:
UNiversity Travel & Tours Inc.
225 Main St.
Northampton, Mass 01060
tel. 584-9913

TAPES
$1.35 EACH
TDK D-90
MAXELL LN-90
SONY C-90
SAVE
TDK SA-90 2.25 EACH
MAIL CHECK TO: TF WHOLESALE/RETAIL PO 666 AMHERST 01004
90 minutes tapes 2 albums

Collegian photos by Neil Beckerman and Maria Bull

McGuirk Alumni Stadium was the scene of Saturday's football season finale where 9,000 plus fans enjoyed the Minuteman marching band at halftime. Below, tailgater Betsy Reardon works on a banner to support UMass against Delaware. Story on page 12.

1st semester for concerns group

By NANCY KLINGENER
Collegian Staff

Operating without an office hasn't stopped the new program for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Concerns from already having an impact in its first semester of operation at the University of Massachusetts.

The program was recommended last year in a report by Felice Yeskell, then Human Relations Planner and Advocate for the Office of the Vice-Chancellor for Human Affairs. Yeskell, along with Reed Ide, is now co-directing the program she recommended forming in her report.

Yeskell said that there are a number of purposes for the program. The primary purposes are "to coordinate programming around information, to offer staff development training to agencies on campus, and to be a sort of a contact point for people on campus," as well as serving as a "visible and safe access point for members of the gay, lesbian and bisexual community," Yeskell said.

The program has already conducted a workshop for the Legal Services Office, which Yeskell described as "one in a series of workshops." She said they they have "a real strong desire to work collaboratively with other agencies on campus." The program has also "begun working very closely with Health Services in a supportive way, in terms of AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) education," Ide said.

Ide said that they are also "really trying to put in residents in a structure so that lesbian, gay and bisexual students really feel strengthened as individuals," and to "build the sense that they are certainly good, valuable people."

"Most of the problems lesbian, gay, and bisexual students have are from the outside world," Yeskell said. She said that homophobia is based on ignorance, and that "it's fairly easy to dispell that ignorance, if you have access to those people." In her experience conducting workshops, she said that she was often amazed at how people can change.

Yeskel said the other agencies on campus have made them feel supported and welcomed. "I'm pleasantly surprised to find the level of concern what it is," Ide said.

Ide, who is new to the University, had lived and worked in New York City for the past 15 years and was editor of a New York City newspaper, The Villager.

"Seeing the devastating effect of AIDS on the gay community," he said, made him come back to study so that he could eventually help with the problem. As an undergraduate "starting from scratch," Ide said that he may major in counseling or human services.

Yeskell has worked at the University for four years. She was Head of Residence at Dwight House, Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Awareness Educator for Residential Education East, and Coordinator of the Oppression and Social Issues Training Project. She is also oing graduate work in the School of Education.

The Program is formally located in the John Adams tower lobby, rooms 101 and 105, but can't operate there because of a lack of furnishings such as desks and typewriters. In addition to Ide and Yeskell, there are two students working for the program.

Holocaust lecture

David Wyman, professor of history and judaic studies at the University of Massachusetts, will speak about "The Abandonment of the Jews," at 8 p.m. today in the front lounge of the Newman Center.

Wyman has spent the last 15 years researching the extent which the United States, in the face of overwhelming evidence of the Holocaust, refused to help rescue the victims until very late in the war. He compiled material from more than 60 archives to write his best-selling book, The Abandonment of the Jews: America and the Holocaust, 1941-1945.

Wyman, a devoted Christian and grandson of two Protestant ministers, has spent his entire academic career investigating the fate of Europe's Jews during World War II.

"I grew up with the church and its teachings. I struggled with the subject of writing about the Holocaust. It wasn't just a Jewish tragedy," Wyman said. "The perpetrators were Christians-Christianity and Western civiliazation failed. Christians still don't pay enough attention to the Holocaust. It's their problem too."

Wyman is a special advisor to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council and a member of the Academic Advisory Board of the Simon Wiesenthal Center.

—JOEL P. COFFIDIS

Author David Wyman, writer of Abandonment of the Jews: America and the Holocaust, 1941-45.

$10 million for polymer research

House of Reps. passes bill

By KELLY SIEGER
Collegian Staff

A bill that included a $10 million appropriation for the recently established Polymer Science Center of Excellence at the University of Massachusetts was passed last week by the U.S. House of Representatives.

According to Tim Shea, a spokesman for State Representative Silvio Conte (R-Mass.), this is "one of the first steps" in getting the funds passed. The bill must be approved by the Senate. Shea said he expects the law to be enacted by early December.

Conte is responsible for writing the portion of the Treasury Postal Appropriation Bill which contains the proposed $10 million. As a result of his involvement with the center, he was appointed to the center's new board of directors for the last month.

The nine-member board will be responsible for the spending of the $10 million, which is added to the $6 million appropriated by the state, and various contributions from private organizations.

The board, composed of scientists, businessmen and politicians, will also organize research, and establish communication links with other research facilities. They will have full legislative control over the center, which is at the forefront of polymer research.

Dr. Anna Harrison, a professor of chemistry at Mount Holyoke College and a board member, said the main objective of the first board meeting on Dec. 10 will be to determine the effect of the center on the academic community.

"The center at the University is going into this with a world reputation in polymer science," she said. One of the immediate goals of the board is "to maintain and enhance this reputation," she added.

Polymers are chains of molecules used in the construction of textiles, rubber products, and plastics. The U.S. leads the world in the production of polymers. Massachusetts is eighth in the country in the production of polymer-based items, employing 30,000 people in the various industries involved.

The center at UMass is only one of five Centers of Excellence existing in Massachusetts. The Centers of Excellence Corporation was developed by Gov. Michael Dukakis' administration in order to increase research of new technologies for the economic benefit of the state and its industries. Other centers of excellence in Massachusetts concentrate on marine science, photovoltaics, biotechnology and microelectronics.

Anger for refusal to hire prof.'s

By PAMELA BURRELL
Collegian Staff

Faculty and graduates students of the alternative track in the philosophy department are reportedly angered over the department's recent decision not to hire two professors, one of which probably would have taught an alternative track course.

The department voted 14-1 against Humanities and Fine Arts Dean Murray Schwartz's proposal to hire the professors.

One would have taught a regular philosphy course while the other would have taught in the philosophy department's alternative track, which is a small program in the department for graduate students.

"It's a tragedy," said Graduate Program Director of the Alternative Track, Robert Paul Wolff. "This is the only philosophy department I've ever seen in which such a thing has every happened," Wolff added.

"One (professor) was supposed to work for our track, that's why the chairman and the majority of the department voted against it," said John Brentlinger, an associate professor of philosophy.

The Alternative Track is a program department with separate regulations from the rest of the department. It consists of five faculty and more than 20 graduate students.

The program was created in 1983, in an effort to settle disputes between faculty members of the department, Department Chair Michael Jubien said. "It doesn't seem to have worked," he added.

"It's outrageous that the majority of the department are so dead set against the minority," Ann Ferfuson, a philosphy department professor, said.

Philosphy Professor Robert Ackermann said, "My opinion is that they want us dead, they are so upset by our existence." Ackermann said he voted in favor of the proposal because "the department is locked in a stalemate and the dean's proposal offered something to act on the stalemate.

"It's obviously crazy," Ackermann said, "The philosphy department is a looney bin."

Fred Feldman, graduate program director of the philosophy department voted against the dean's proposal. He said it didn't meet the request of the proposal submitted by the department because the proposal didn't mention recent continental philosophy, an area of study in the

continued on page 6

UNITED TECHNOLOGIES IS LOOKING FOR ANOTHER BUNSEN.

When Robert Wilhelm Bunsen needed something in the lab that didn't exist, he sat down and invented it. His burner. His battery. His calorimeters. A spectroscope. A thermopile.

United Technologies needs people like that. People who don't give up when they need something no one's invented yet.

When we find the people we want, we see that they get their challenges. And their rewards. We know what they want because we're engineers too. We're a corporation of engineers all the way to the top.

United Technologies gives you worldwide room to grow. Something new is happening all the time, in helicopters or silicon wafers, heat pumps or spacesuits. Even our escalators are escalating. It's the kind of excitement you need, among people who speak your language.

Maybe you'd better look into United Technologies. You've got nothing to lose, and think what you've got to gain. Stop by the campus placement office, or write for more information and a reprint of this ad. United Technologies, P.O. Box 1379, Hartford, CT 06143.

United Technologies means Pratt & Whitney, Hamilton Standard, Otis, Carrier, Automotive Group, United Technologies Microelectronics Center, Norden, Chemical Systems, Essex, Sikorsky and United Technologies Research Center.

An equal opportunity employer.

UNITED TECHNOLOGIES

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Warped views on lust, sex

Paula Hartwig

I have several arguments with Rusty Denton's column of Nov. 5, entitled "The perils of wanton lust." If this article was an attempt to present a logical and somewhat objective argument dealing with the issue of federal aid for abortion and for AIDS research, then I believe it failed miserably.

Let us begin with Denton's misconceptions about abortion. He states that lately he has been watching the "desperate politics of federal iad for abortions . . ." Do people have any idea how close women are today to losing their right to have legislation that are being presented to the lawmakers to reverse Roe vs. Wade, and to cut federal aid? Denton then goes on to ask, "How many millions of tax dollars have been spent to abort babies?" If it is not the moral issue, but rather the economic issue that he is really discussing, then I owuld like to ask if he will be willing to help thes women with his state tax dollars. I say this because many of the women who apply for and are denied federal aid for abortions, are poor, thus eligible for welfare for themselves and for their child. Consider the cost of an abortion vs. the cost of giving birth to a child and caring properly for that child, and I ask people to consider this from a strictly economic standpoint.

I must admit that I laughed to myself when I read this statement: ". . . evidence indicates a strong correlations between sex and pregnancy." I hope that this was a n attempt at humor, because if it was not, then I regret to inform people that pregnancy is a direct result of sex. Most of us learned that fact in our pre-adolescent years, soon after which we should have been briefed on the subject of contraceptive. It is true that no method is 100 percent effective, but is also true that our generation is not going to change attitudes towards sex overnight—VD or no VD, AIDS or no AIDS, therefore birth control remains a necessity.

Let us discuss lust for a moment. I would like to point out that lust is a fact of life for human beings. Men and women have been slaves to sexual desire since the beginning of time, which is not an argument in favor of promiscuity, but rather a simple observation which explains why our species still exists. I believe that love is an important element, and without this combination of love and lust, then we would be frigid and uncaring society. Scratch that—we simply would not "be."

Onward towards AIDS . Denton mentioned that he understood that $2 billion has been appropriated for AIDS research from federal funds. He comments, "no doubt that it was the right thing to do, but two billion dollars could feed a lot of hungry people." I hope that I am not the only one who sees the absurdity of this statement. What are Denton's true feelings? Does he believe that it was the right thing or does he thing they have their priorities confused?

After all, Denton said that the AIDS problem is the result of "thousands of hurny people having their own way." One last question: If you were in charge of this money, would you feed only the hungry, but chaste, members of our society, or could you find it your heart to also feed those horny, selfish AIDS victims and maybe even those wretched undeserving pregnant women?

Paula Hartwig is a UMass student.

The immediacy of abortion

Rusty Denton

There is a stubborn side to America which refuses to believe that anything is wrong until a disaster acquires immediacy. Americans wouldn't aid the helpless in World War II until the Japanese bombed a Hawaiian naval base. U.S. civil rights violations were ignored for decades until American sons and daughters converged on Mississippi and Alabama, only to be arrested and beaten and killed. Vietnam was just another worthy cause until the networks televised maimed bodies and faces day after day for month upon month. It makes a person wonder how such a self-centered country has survived this long.

I wish I could say that I were different, but I'm not. I read the papers, and I see thousands of lives being taken all around me through the expedient act of abortion, and I weep. But I'm always reminded that a few years ago I didn't care; I knew nothing about it except that it was legal and that it absolved the shame of pregnancy out of wedlock. I'm no different from anybody else—the issue was forced on me before I gave it any thought.

Some years ago, I was very close to a young woman. We had years to fulfill our plans, and we were in love. One morning, a young hoodlum pushed his way into her apartment and raped her on her own bed. I would have done him violence if I had ever found him, but a more important issue was dealing with my love's trauma. Fortunately, she didn't contract any diseases from the punk, but we had a long wait before we found out whether she had become pregnant. If she had wanted to carry a baby to term, I would have married her without a second thought, so that her baby could grow up with a father. But I didn't know what she wanted, and abortion seemed like a reasonable alternative.

We had all the classic reasons. She had been raped. She had a promising career. I was a janitor with no savings. We didn't want a family yet. But she was much wiser that I. "I would always wonder what my child would be doing right now if it had lived, what it would have been like," she said. "Would it be playing basketball? Would my child have been a teacher or a doctor or a musician? What would we have done together? Don't you understand? If I'm pregnant, it's my baby." It took me awhile, but I did understand—even unborn babies are children.

As it happened, as it usually does with rape, there was no pregnancy. I shake to think about the disaster of abortion I might have helped her into. I've since discovered that it makes others shake, too. Seasoned medical professionals can't deal with the mangled humanity tumbling out of the womb during abortion—arms and legs and decapitated heads for a D&C procedure. Saline injections bring out dead babies covered with chemical burns. Prostaglandin abortions induce labor too early, and the battered premies are ejected with bruises from head to foot. You'd think you were in a war zone. Mothers aren't even allowed to see what comes out of their wombs because it's too traumatizing. Right now abortion professionals get very large salaries because so few medical personnel want to be involved—according to the New England Christian Action Council, a doctor can make $35,000 a year working just three hours a week in some abortion programs.

Why are we doing this? No mother who ever tried to abort herself did herself more harm than what a legal abortion does to a baby. It makes me sick with anguish. But I know how immediate abortion had to be for me before I recognized its true nature. How immediate does it have to be for the rest of America?

Rusty Denton is a Collegian columnist.

Letters

Attention: telephone books in

Distribution of the Student Telephone Directories will begin today. Residence hall students will receive one per room. Distribution to commuters will be at the Collegian kiosk on the second floor of the Campus Center. Faculty and administrative staff will receive copies by direct mailing within one week from the Dean of Students Office (so please resist the temptation to take copies at the Campus Center location, thank you).

The cover photo, which the printer was supposed to credit out did not, was supplied by the University's Photography Services.

Sorry for the delay.

Robert N. Brooks
Associate Dean of Students

Column espoused dereliction

As a senior at UMass, I've had the opportunity to read many a Collegian ED/OP page and have been both entertained and educated as to several different points of view. Even though I certainly haven't always agreed with all that was printed, I found most of the material of some socially redeeming value.

In the Nov. 1 edition however, I read a letter entitled "Policy provokes a rage." I was disgusted by the total lack of taste that Mart Bovlerice displayed in expressing his displeasure regarding the Halloween guest policy for Southwest. In this letter, Bovlerice thanks the student senate for changing the Halloween policy so that his brother's "derelict friends" may come up and be free to run amok with their well-stocked supply of eggs and toilet paper.

To substantiate the revocation of such a policy so that the "Zoo Mass' image may be upheld is sick. With this in mind I can't help but question the discretion of the Collegian Editorial Editor in publishing this article. After all, doesn't this image of UMass, as a haven for visitors to ransack as they please, run contrary to what this University is trying to get away from?

Bill McCaskie
Amherst

AIDS a homophobic platform

Rusty Denton's presentation of AIDS and homosexuality (Nov. 5) is refreshing blatant in a society which usually masks its homophobia so well.

Subtly, the media have instilled fear and grave misunderstanding of gay people across the United States, through an "objective" exposition of the AIDS crisis. This "objectivity," which is nonexistent, provides a platform from which homophobes can pontificate, as well as a wall of seeming legitimacy for them to hide behind. Fortunately, Denton's misinformation and pointed exaggerations are so obvious that his views can easily be dismissed from any serious discussion of the subject.

William J. Poulin-Deltour
Amherst

Tenure decisions important also

Accuracy in Academia seems to have raised hackles all around campus. The concensus is that this groups is trying to force their political views on the curriculems of colleges around the nation.

Having dealt with tenured professors, I do not find it likely that this would be effective. It is almost impossible to get anyone with absolute job security to do something that they do not want to do. I do not believe that they will have any significant impact anywhere in the University.

What Accuracy in Academia is trying to do is not at all different from what has been going on at UMass. Politics cover the whole of inter-personal relations, and groups have tried to control politics in classes here before.

Here is a brief example: A profesor suggested that whatever went on between consenting adults was their business. This comment probably would not have raised any eyebrows here, but for the fact that he was referring to sadism and masochism. Some campus groups objected to the same sort of treatment that they believe Accuracy in Academia would allegedly engage in. They called for his dismissal. The professor was denied tenure, but this probably had little to do with the controversy.

The University of Massachusetts is a public institution. This means that everyone, including Accuracy in Academia, has the right to attend, observe, and make comments about it. It is their right to review classes as members of the public.

Everyone has the right to review classes at UMass. The problem is that the only views that count are those of the inmates running the asylum (professors).

Accuracy in Academia will have exactly the same impact as the students on classes, professor attitudes, and tenure—virtually none. Instead of wasting enery condemning an essentially impotent group, the students should be working to get students on the tenure review boards. The student are the victims of the insular and unresponsive nature of University faculty, and nothing is being done to help them.

Matthew Saroff is an SGA senator.

Yesterday & Today Records

Grateful Dead Psychadelic

Grand Opening

Punk Jazz Blues

Top CASH PAID for USED:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's

An Alternative Record Store

96 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 253-9209

Look Who's Coming to the Boston GRE/CGS Forum on Graduate Education

Clemson University • Bank Street College • Boston University • Emerson College • Fordham University • Georgetown University • Massachusetts Institute of Technology • Oklahoma State University • Syracuse University • Tufts University • University of Maine • University of Notre Dame • Villanova University

This is just a small sampling of the nearly 75 graduate schools from across the country that will be represented at the Boston GRE/CGS Forum. Take advantage of this exciting opportunity to meet with graduate school representatives, pick up catalogs and applications, and attend workshops on topics including admissions and financial aid, GRE test preparation, and graduate study in a variety of disciplines.

Saturday November 16, 1985
Hyatt Regency Cambridge
575 Memorial Drive
9:00 am - 4:00 pm

Registration fee is $3, payable at the door. Registration begins at 8:30 am. Watch for more Forums information in upcoming editions of this newspaper.

Jointly sponsored by the Graduate Record Examinations Board and the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States

★philosophy

continued from page 3

alternative track.

The dean's "counter proposal" however, did include a junion professor position in this area. Feldman said that it is best to build on and maintain the strengths in the (philosophy) department. He does not consider the alternative track to be a strong part of the program.

"Yes, they (alternative track) want to grow. But they're not the department. The department doesn't want them to grow, naturally they're upset," said Jubien. He added that it was a fair decision because it is the will of the majority.

Last spring, Dean Schwartz called a meeting of the faculty and requested a recruitment plan for the department be submitted to him. A recruitment play drawn up by Jubien was chosen by majority vote to be submitted to the dean.

The original plan called for recruiting two senior-level professors specializing in fields other than recent continental philosophy. The alternative track concentrates on social and political philosophy and recent continental philosophy.

The dean's counter-offer, which was voted down 14-1, consisted of a senior professorial position in metaphsics epistemology and a junion position in continental philosphy.

Jubien said, "the dean's proposal seemed to offer expansion in an area (alternative track) that I don't think should be emphasized any more than it is. I think a lot of people voted against for the same reason."

"Since they didn't want us to have anyone they rejected it, that's not going to resolve the split in our department," said Ferguson.

Schwartz said that the department has been growing. The department hasn't hired anyone in a few years, Schwartz said, although he didn't know how many years. "The department has been granted its share of support including grants for new faculty," he said.

America Needs A Hero For Every Age.

From the Revolutionary War to the War in Viet Nam, in national crises and natural disasters, the National Guard has always been ready when America called.

Today is no different. The Guard still needs the kind of people who know peace and freedom don't come cheap. Who are willing to stand up and be counted when the chips are down.

If you're one of them—and you've got two days a month and two weeks a year to invest in something important—we've got a job, a paycheck, and some pretty attractive benefits waiting for you.

Talk to your local Army Guard recruiter today.

Because "hero" doesn't have to be just a word. It can be the face you see when you look in the mirror.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 586-4110

MASSACHUSETTS ARMY National Guard

100% FREE TUITION To any Massachusetts Funded College or University

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Stratton

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals

Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

Are you denying yourself a better shot at grad school?

Okay, it may be too late to get a 4.0. But it's not too late to try to do better on your LSAT, GMAT, GRE, or MCAT. For that, there's Stanley H. Kaplan.

No one has prepped more students than Stanley H. Kaplan. Our test-taking techniques and educational programs have prepared over 1 million students.

So whatever grad school exam you're taking, call us. Remember, the person next to you during your exam might have taken a Kaplan course.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD
The world's leading test prep organization.
358 N. Pleasant
549-5780
Intersession Classes Enrolling Now
MCAT GMAT GRE LSAT
FREE SPEED READING LESSON
at your convenience

HOW TO LAND A NEWSPAPER JOB

MINORITY JOB FAIR

November 14,15,16

Holiday Inn Hartford, Conn.

Free Registration
Call 1-800-524-4242

INTERVIEWS

Recruiters will interview students who want to land internships or full-time jobs in the following newspaper fields:

- Advertising
- Circulation
- Photography
- Marketing
- News Reporting
- Graphics

Interviews begin after Friday's luncheon and continue through Saturday.

HIGHLIGHTS

Keynote Banquet Speaker, Thursday evening, Nov. 14, Robert Maynard, Publisher, Oakland Tribune. One of the first black publishers of a major newspaper in the United States.

Luncheon Speaker, Friday, Nov. 15, Osborn Elliott, Dean, Columbia University School of Journalism. Former Editor-in-chief of Newsweek.

Panel Discussions on Friday morning.

Meals provided for all registrants: Thursday evening banquet, Friday lunch and dinner.

INFORMATION AND REGISTRATION

Call The Hartford Courant Toll Free 1-800-524-4242 between 9 AM and 5 PM.

SPONSORS

American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE), New England Newspaper Association, New England Press Association, Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

The Hartford Courant

Not valid with any other coupon offer. Limit one coupon per customer. Subject to local applicable taxes. Void where prohibited. Offer good only at store(s) listed. Offer expires 11/16.

FREE CONE

Buy any ice cream at regular price and get one small cone or cup FREE.

Steve's®
A first name in ice cream.™

48 North Pleasant St,
Amherst, MA 01002

Come see our wide selection of fine Christmas Cards!

A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 1 p.m.

DAVID WYMAN
Professor of History and Judaic Studies at UMass will speak on

"The Abandonment of the Jews"

the subject of his best-selling book

Tuesday, November 12, 8 pm
Front Lounge of the Newman Center
Free Everyone Welcome
Sponsored by B'nai B'rith Hillel, Episcopal Chaplaincy, Newman Center and United Christian Foundation

?

Look for your picture this week and for weeks to come.

Who will be the mystery beefer?

If your picture appears in our ad, you will win the prize alloted, and become eligible for the megabeef drawing.

JBs HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

11 am - 2 am 7 days
253-7018
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

LORD'S & LADY'S HAIR SALONS SM

The Hampshire Mall
586-7913
20% off Student Discount*

not valid w/specials exp. Dec. 31

TUESDAY "PERFECT PERMS":
Reg. $53.00 & up ..... Now $39.95 & up

WEDNESDAY CUTS:
Women ...Reg. $18.00 ..... Now $14.00
Men .....Reg. $16.00 ..... Now $12.00

Walk-in Service Welcome • No Appointments Necessary.
Not to be confused with Frank Stirlacci's Lords & Ladies

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE

*Collegian*******

Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegian Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

IBM

on campus

Open House
10:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
Come Informally to Get Information about Regular & Coop Opportunities at Several IBM Locations
• Bring 3 resumes
• If invited, interview on 11/13/85

Tuesday
11/12/85

Campus Center

careers in engineering, science, programming, marketing

EE, ME, IE, CS, Acct. & Finance

IBM is an equal opportunity employer

BLACK AFFAIRS

Structural sexism felt in national black community

By Dr. MANNING MARABLE
Special to the Collegian

(Editor's Note: Dr. Manning Marable teaches political sociology at Colgate University.)

There is a tendency within the media to classify all of black America into one single socioeconomic and political package, ignoring its internal diversity. Problems related to gender inequality, the absence of pay equity and full political representation for women, are frequently characterized as relevant to white females alone. Yet, the structural inequalities of sexism are indeed profoundly felt within the national black community.

In 1981, the average married black couple earned $19,600 which is roughly 77 percent of the median income of white two-parent households. But for black women with no spouse, their 1981 median income was only $7,500.

In the areas of health care, vocational hiring, and electoral politics, the inequalities between black and white women can be observed. Black women are four times more likely to die in childbirth than white women. This statistic shows in part the inadequacies of public health facilities and medical care available to black women. In 1981, black women comprised less than one percent of the legal profession and only seven-tenths of one percent of the total of all female physicians are black.

Earlier this year, more than four hundred black women from 29 states caucused in Atlanta to hold the first national assembly of the National Political Congress of Black Women. Since it was founded in 1984, the Congress has attracted 2000 members so far and was very active in elections at the grassroots level.

The National Political Congress of Black Women has several specific goals for the next decade. Organizers plan to give workshops in the technical aspects of media relations and fundraising to help the development of local leaders as potential candidates.

National leaders include liberal Democrat Shirley Chisholm, national chair of the Congress; vice chair C. Delores Tucker, leader of the Democratic Party's Black Caucus; and conservative Republican businesswoman Gloria Toote, second vice chair.

Philiadelphia city councilwoman Augusta Clarke said, "We're in existence because we are for the political power of black women-Democrats. Republicans, and independents; our uniqueness is that this group is diverse and independent and we speak for all women."

UPC Presents
* JASON and the SCORCHERS 11/21 CCA

11/24 Bluewall
* VIOLENT FEMMES

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

ARE YOU PREGNANT & IN NEED OF HELP?
Birthright Can Help
• FREE PREGNANCY TESTING
- Same Day Results -
Services that are...
Free, Confidential, Caring & Helpful
549-1906
Amherst Carriage Shops Upper Level

In my mind there is no doubt. If I had it to do all over again, I'd make the same decision.

Darryl Murphy
Accountant, DH&S Boston
BA, University of Massachusetts, 1984

Coming to work for DH&S was a decision I felt good about, right from the start.

The growth opportunities, exposure to a lot of different business environments: all outstanding, better than my original expectations.

At DH&S we have always been strong on the quality of our people. And because good people expect your best, you look for every opportunity to give it.

On top of that, DH&S has always been in the forefront of technical changes within the profession—sampling techniques, new computer modeling.

But most important, we've recognized that the whole accounting profession is a changing environment.

It's not a numbers game; it's a people profession. It's people, working within a total business environment.

We're always working as a team directly with clients to help them solve their problems. We provide input and advice on tax matters, operations systems, accounting questions—things that really impact the bottom line.

There's no question. It's an outstanding business career.

Deloitte Haskins+Sells
USA

SAVE $2.00

Get the bigger look of personal posters for less.

Your favorite 35 mm color photos can look great as gorgeous posters from Kodak. Just bring us your 35 mm color negatives, slides or prints. You'll get back 12 by 18-inch personal poster from Kodak's own labs. Personal posters by Kodak make ideal gifts for friends and relatives. Offer good November 4–20, 1985. See us today for details.

Open Mon-Fri 9-5

Ask for PROCESSING BY Kodak

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

ARTS LINES

Lots going on for the four-day week ahead:

The Pulitzer prize winning play, Crimes of the Heart, will be presented by the UMass Department of Theater. Performances are at 8 p.m. tomorrow through Saturday (with a 2 p.m. matinee on Saturday) in the Curtain Theater. Tickets are available throught the Fine Arts Center Box Office (545-2511) and all Datatix outlets. Prices are $3 for the general public and $2 for students and senior citizens. Those planning to attend are urged to get their tickets early being that this is a popular show with season subscribers.

In Living Color, an evening of three one-act plays by contemporary Third World women playwrights, will take place at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and Nov. 21-23 in Southwest's Hampden Theater. The three plays, "Pigeons," by Genny Lim, "Marine Tiger," by Estrella Artau and "Loners," by Joan California Cooper are making their debut as college productions. Tickets are available through the Fine Arts Center Box Office. Prices are $4 for the general public and $2 for students. For more information, call 545-1945.

Don't wake up late Wednesday morning or you may miss out on tickets for Jason and the Scorchers with guest Pajama Slave Dancers and Violent Femmes with guest, Ben Vaughen. The Scorchers will play at 8 p.m., Nov. 21 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Tickets will be $8.50 in advance, and $10 the night of the show. Violent Femmes will play at 8 p.m., Nov. 24, in the Blue Wall Coffee House. Tickets will be $9 in advance and $10 the night of the show. All tickets are general admission and are available at Tix Unlimited in the Student Union Building, For the Record at FACES (Amherst), and Main St. Records (Northampton).

Mark Medoff's, "Children of a Lesser God," a play focusing on the life of a deaf woman who spends 26 years of her life in a state school for the deaf will be presented by the Williston Theatre Ensemble at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and Nov. 21-23 at the Williston Theatre in Easthampton. For ticket prices and reservations call 527-1520.

Indian Sitarist, Jamluddin Bhartiya will appear at 8 p.m. Thursday in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith College. The concert is free and sponsored by the Smith College Asian Students Association. Bhartiya is known for his performances in the "East-West Trio," with jazz pianist Burton Greene and bongo-player Glenn Hahn, mixing influences from jazz and South American music with classical Indian ragas.

And Debbie Friedman, performer, composer, liturgist and recording artist will perform at 8 p.m., Saturday in Amherst College's Johnson Chapel. Fr

The Violent Femmes will appear Nov. 24 in the Blue Wall Coffee House. Tickets go on sale tomorrow

Jason and the Scorchers will appear Nov. 21 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Tickets go on sale tomorrow.

NATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM
INFORMATION MEETINGS

There will be four information meetings for students interested in applying for the National Student Exchange Program for Fall, 1986.

Tuesday, November 12*	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 13	4-5 pm	CC 805
Tuesday, November 19	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 20	4-5 pm	CC 803

* financial aid information session

Students applying to restricted schools: Univ. of Hawaii/Manoa & Hilo; Univ. of So. Florida; Cal State Chico, Northridge & Sonoma; and College of the Virgin Islands must attend one of these information sessions.

AMHERST CINEMA
Tuesday
Diner 7:00
The Graduate 9:00
Double Feature $3.00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

THE FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERTS
TONIGHT!
"A fascinating, inventive pianist, playful, probing and provocative"
MARIAN McPARTLAND
Tuesday, Nov. 12 8 pm.
Tickets $13.11.9

TUESDAY NOV. 12 R-RATED HYPNOTIST
World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
Radically Different Ridiculously Funny
Richly Entertaining Recklessly Risque
Rte. 9, Amherst
JUSTIN RYAN'S
corner of University Dr.
256-1059

JUST FOR THE FUN OF IT
POOL TOURNAMENT
Every Tuesday Night
Beginning at 7:00 pm
Cash Prizes, amount depending on number of entries
For more details, call 253-9202
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

VOTED BEST DINNER
UNDER $4
and BEST NACHOS
in the best of the valley poll 1985

TACO VILLA
...Offering Quality Mexican Foods

NORTHAMPTON 21 CENTER ST 584-0673 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine
AMHERST 41 BOLTWOOD WALK 256-8217 Beer & Wine Served
SPRINGFIELD 749 SUMNER AVE 788-0919 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

let us do your wash-dry-fold and hand pressing
10-5 P.M. MON-SAT
SELF SERVICE
7 DAYS-7 A.M.-10 P.M.
549-1665
SPEEDWASH
Quality Laundry
11 Pray St.
Amherst, MA

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95 Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1304
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans...Call Today

HAYRIDE
PARTY ON OUR HAYWAGON DAY OR NIGHT, BONFIRE AND PICNIC AREA PROVIDED
For Information and Reservations CALL 247-9098
WEST HATFIELD STABLES
RTE. 5, West Hatfield, Ma. 4 miles north of Northampton

CopyCat Print Shop
"When the copy is as important as the original"
Resumes. . .They Count
Resumes make an impression. Be sure that yours reflects the image you want to project. It's something we can help you with.
Resume Package Includes:
• Consultation with a professional
• Writing your resume
• Writing your cover letter
• Typesetting in your choice of typeface
• 25 copies of resume cover letter and matching envelopes on your choice of paper
ALL FOR JUST $69.95
Hours:
8 am - 12 pm M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
228 Triangle St.
549-3840

Tired of having your papers placed at the bottom of the Fridge?
Come to
THE WRITING CENTER
Mon, Thurs 7-9 pm: Pierpont (SoWest) Baker (Central)
Tues, Wed, Thurs 3:30-5 pm: Bartlett 101
Wed 7-9 pm: Bartlett 101

Challenging Engineering Positions With Professional Growth

Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, has openings for:

Electrical Engineers
Mechanical Engineers

The Shipyard's assigned mission is to modernize, refuel, convert, and repair Nuclear Submarines. Work involves design, development, and testing of submarine systems and equipment.

Career advancement to journeyman level paying over $28,000 within 2½ years if hired at GS-5 and 1½ years if hired at GS-7 level.

BS Engineering degree and U.S. Citizenship required.

Benefits include 13-26 working days paid vacation - 9 paid holidays -13 working days paid sick leave - outstanding retirement program -choice of health & life insurance programs.

Portsmouth Naval Shipyard was established in 1800 and employs over 8,500 employees. The Shipyard is a leader in the life-cycle maintenance and modernization of nuclear submarines and offers unparalleled challenge and opportunity. Portsmouth Naval Shipyard is located in the heart of vacationland. All season sports and other activities are available within minutes.

The Shipyard Recruiter will be on campus on November 18, 1985.

If you cannot make this interview and are interested in employmet, submit your resume to: Industrial Relations Office, Code 170.5, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, NH 03804-5000.

Portsmouth Naval Shipyard is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Pearl Street
AND
Miller HIGH LIFE
Rock Series
Presents
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY
and the JUKES

DOORS OPEN
8:00 P.M.
DON'T BE LATE FOR THE PARTY
FREE T-SHIRTS, HATS, AND ALL KINDS OF GOODIES TIX IN ADVANCE AT ALL DATATIX OUTLETS
$9.50
AND AT MAIN ST. REC'S IN NORTHAMPTON
10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

Delaware 27, UMass 24

UMass	3	7	7	–	24
Delaware	0	13	7	7	–27

M: Bonvini 47 FG.
D: Tolbert 1 run, kick failed.
M: Strickland 12 run, Bonvini kick.
D: Tolbert 5 run, Roberts kick.
M: Neri 24 run, Bonvini kick.
D: Gannon 2 run, Roberts kick.
M: Dwyer 28 interception return, Bonvini kick.
D: Singleton 18 pass from Gannon, Roberts kick.

Statistics:

Passing: UM — Dave Palazzi, 15-28-0-205. Delaware — Rich Gannon, 13-24-1-193.
Rushing: UM — Al Neri, 6-40; Ted Barrett, 13-32; Tony Strickland, 2-17. Delaware — Gannon, 25-99; Bob Norris, 10-62.
Receiving: UM — John Crowley, 3-85; Barrett, 4-30; Dan Rubinetti, 3-44. Delaware — Norris, 5-94.
Attendance: 9,121.
Punting: UM — Dimitri Yavis, 7-39.1. Delaware — Mike Anderson, 5-37.6.

★Minutemen fall to Delaware

continued from page 12

McHale and fumbled. UM right tackle Mike Briggs recovered at the 28 and Bonvini came on to boot the field goal.

The lead help up for the period as the UMass defense allowed 56 yards in two Delaware possessions. The Hens did take the lead with 11:07 left in the second period as fullback Tony Tolbert vaulted over from the two, capping a 60-yard drive that took 10 plays. UMass helped the Delaware march, contributing two penalties that resulted in first downs.

UM senior co-captain Paul Platek recovered a Gannon fumble at the Delaware 27 during the Hen's next series. Two plays later, UM sophomore fullback Tony Strickland went 12 yards up the middle, scoring his third touchdown of the season with 7:43 left in the half.

Tolbert returned the favor with 41 seconds left in the half, going over from five yards out after Delaware marched 64 yards though the UMass defense in eight plays, taking just 3:12.

The UMass defense got tough at the opening of the third quarter, stopping the Hens in their first series and getting the offense the ball in great field position as Kirk Williams blocked Mike Anderson's punt.

Palazzi took over at the Delaware 39. Al Neri picked up four yards before Palazzi hooked up with Rubinetti for 11 yards to the 24.

Neri, a 220-pound bruiser from Nassau Community College, then scored his fourth touchdown of the season, taking a quick handoff up the middle and fighting his way to the endzone with 11:33 to go. UMass led after Bonvini's kick, 17-13.

Gannon scored from two yards out with 1:13 left in the third period, completing an 82-yard drive by faking a dive over the top and sneaking in over the left side. The drive saw the junior quarterback complete three passes for 53 yards and run 10 yards himself as Delaware ran off four straight first downs, slicing through the UMass defense.

UMass started at the five with 1:10 left in the third quarter as Andrew Thomas fumbled the kickoff, picked up the ball and fell down in his tracks. Kevin Smellie then gained seven yards on two carries before Palazzi found junior flanker John Crowley open over the middle. Crowley, having beat his man, found himself in a foot race with safety Ken Lucas, and was dragged down at the Delaware 25 as time expired in the period. The play was good for 63 yards, UMass' second-longest completion of the season.

Palazzi opened the final period by throwing incomplete and was then sacked for a five-yard loss by linebacker Darrell Booker. Another incomplete pass set up a fourth-and-15 at the 30. Bonvini came on and was wide right on a 47-yard attempt. He is four-of-11 on field goals this season, as a team UMass is eight-of-19 on three-pointers.

"That cost us, missing getting some points after the long reception by Crowley," said Stull. "We didn't capitalize on a big chance."

Dwyer recovered a fumble on Delaware's next series, but Barrett fumbled it right back, as Delaware recovered at the Massachusetts 32 with 9:10 left.

Dwyer then stopped Tolbert for no gain before Bob Norris picked up three. On third down, Gannon dropped back to pass, but found himself pressured by linebacker Paul Manganaro. He tried a shovel pass, but Dwyer stepped in front of it and for the first time in his career, set off for the endzone, lumbering 28 yards for the score and setting up what was a bitter ending for UMass.

★field hockey sweeps two in Michigan

continued from page 12

three-team New England Regional Tournament behind the University of New Hampshire, who received a bye to the regional final, and BU, who was selected to host the tournament and receive the home field advantage.

Head coach Pam Hixon was unavailable for comment but had indicated last Thursday that UMass had to win both games in order to have any chance at the top regional seeding. Losing 3-0 to BU two weeks ago in Boston, and salvaging a tie to UNH, 1-1 three weeks ago in New Hampshire, it was apparent that the Minutewomen would have an uphill battle to receive the top seed.

With their backs against the wall, the Minutewomen shut down Michigan on artificial turf Saturday, getting goals from senior defender All-America Megan Donnelly, sophomore forward Tonia Kennedy and senior forward Chris Kocot.

Following Saturday's win, the Minutewomen returned to the turf Sunday knocking off Purdue and ending its regular season. The Minutewomen, equaling their highest scoring single-game output of the season, were led by Kennedy and freshman forward Ruth Vasapolli, who scored two goals each, and Donnelly, who scored her sixteenth goal of the season in 16 games.

"Pam (Hixon) said that we played probably our best field hockey of the season," Kocot said. "She said we played well together and took advantage of our opportunities to score."

Kocot said that despite the low seeding, the team felt good about its chances for this weekend's opening round and doesn't expect the Terriers to beat UMass, because their previous meeting was uncharacteristic of the Minutewomen.

"We played our worst game, they played their best," Kocot said.

★volleyball

continued from page 12

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 15-13, 15-5, 15-7. The spikers ended their regular season with a 34-7 mark, their best ever regular season finish.

The Minutewomen must now play a week-long waiting game to learn the fate of their post-season chances. A UMass victory over NU would have solidified a spot in the East Coast Athletic Conference playoffs and would have given the Minutewomen a reasonable shot at the NCAA Division II national tourney. ECAC bids will be announced next Monday.

"I would assume that Northeastern would go ahead of us in the (Northeast) rankings," said UMass head coach Elaine Sortino. "They have swept us the last two times we've seen them. I would be very surprised to see us stay ahead of them at this point in the season."

"We had a terrible time passing in game one and two," said Sortino. "We let them get out to a big early lead on serve reception. You can't let a good team get seven or eight cheap points like that."

The story in this match was NU's big hitter Monique Ellis. Ellis provided all of the Huskie offense, connecting on several booming kills. Ellis also came up with some good defensive plays as well. Overall, NU was inept without her.

"Win or lose, I just which that we could have left here with a better feeling," said Sortino. "This season has been just too good to feel so lousy right now."

Resume Typesetting
*High quality
*Letter perfect
*Customized layouts
*Superior to all other methods
Contact SGA Communications Office
304 Student Union
Ed Cunningham or Jim Emmett
5-1977
SGA Communications

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

Baha'i Fireside an informal introduction to the Baha'i Faith. Topic presented: "World Peace". 7:30 pm CC808 sponsored by UMass Baha'i Club

Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Counseling Collective is open Monday, Wednesday, Thursday 3-7; Tuesday 1-3. Drop by 453 SUB or call 5-2645!

Lutheran Student Fellowship will meet Wednesday 6:30-7:30 at Immanuel Lutheran Church for supper and a discussion on Oxfam. All are welcome.

Psi Chi - The national honor society in Psychology - brief introductory meeting Tobin 204 Wednesday Nov 13 7:00 pp

Free Introductory Lecture: Transcendental Meditation Program "Live Without Stress and Unfold Full Potential" Thu Nov 14 7:30 pm C ampus Ctr 905

Tau Beta Pi Final Meeting Wed Nov 13 Marston 221 at 6:00 PM. All initiates must attend!

AUDIO

JVC home speakers. Never been used SK-66, 4-way, full 5 year warranty. Great for dorm or home. $199 549-0174 evenings

AUTO FOR SALE

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1970 Dodge Coronet convertible. Many new parts. Reliable. $700.00 or BO 584-4509

VW 1970 runs good, some rust. $500 1-832-2931

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday Nov 13th over 30 companies represented. Presentations, luncheon, and career fair. Luncheon tickets on sale now in SOM Lobby thru Nov 8th all majors welcome

CREATIVE & INTERESTING PEOPLE

Alive with Dance, RSO is looking for people from all depts. to share their talents and ideas RSO involvement looks great on a resume and we can offer you a variety of experiences in programming, fundraising, finance, design and production. Come to our first meeting to see what we are all about November 13, Wed. at 6:30 pm in SBA 102 or call Liz at 546-4016 for more information

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Furnished bedroom in second story of a house. Close to town and campus. 163 Triangle St. #2 call Gail anytime before 11:00 pm 549-7692

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline. 365/month, avail 1/1/86 253-3634

1 bdrm Cliffside apt starts Jan 1 Kathy 665-8752 (even) 340/month

Large single room in house, Amherst Center. Available Jan 1st. 200/mo quiet non-smokers call 549-5425

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Safe Suntans 25-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Join alone: $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov 15

Ovation Accoustic 12-string guitar with built in microphone pick-up. Good condition. $400 or BO Alex 256-0545

Chevy Malibu 1973 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

Yabadabadoo UMass "Bed-Rock" Cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

FOUND

Brown leather jacket in Newman Center Lounge, call to identify. 549-2877

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stannel 584-3598

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2060

Drivers wanted $7.5/hr, 3-4 nights own car required, Pinocchio's Pizza apply in person, 1177 N. Pleasant, N. Amherst

Come to find out how you can become a New Students Program Counselor 11/13, 9 pm Leach Lounge

Full time Steward position, 5 evenings weekly, light inventory, pricing, stocking and bar back duties, excellent entry level food position apply in person Northampton Hilton Inn Rt 5

LOST

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mich 256-1069 or 256-1664

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN wa TUK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Eye glasses on 10/31 in Campus Center Auditorium call Dale 6-4039

Lost brown wallet Nov. 1 ID's and credit cards please call 549-5935.

Long black coat with puffed shoulders. Left in Herter 110 Mon nite 11/4. If found please call EM at 5-7711 or leave message at 5-2084. Reward!

Pair of photogrey lens glasses in brown vinyl case call Jon 549-0902

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassay Recording Studio offers 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

ORIENTATION

Find out how to become a summer counselor, 11/13 at 9 pm in Leach Lounge

PERSONALS

Cathy C 18 I've had my eye on you for awhile, and I just want to say you look marvelous Secret Admirer friend of a friend

This place is beginning to seem like a cross between General Hospital and Dynasty

PAP PS - I forgot "love always" in Fridays issue Love D

3R - November 15 is getting closer! Are you ready for your surprise?

Congratulations Linda and Scott Love your roomies cath Lisa and Trish

Marianne, A Greek affair? Moonlight, camels, and bunnies. Think of our future. Love, George Annette Geneau Have some compassion for me! I haven't had the real thing in 12 weeks and 4 days. Can't we use it together just like we did this summer on 16 Iroquois.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share new house in Shutesbury. Very clean, modern house which is 10 miles from UMass. Male or female, $125 plus $10 for utilities. Call anytime, available now. 367-9328

One bedroom with private bathroom in 2 bdrm Puffton apt 170/mo heat incl available Dec 1 for next semester call for more info 549-7627 great place!

One person to share Southwood apt new rug, nicely furnished 130 + $15 call 256-1764

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7652

Male bellydancer for hire. Parties, birthdays, etc. Reasonable rates 6-5579

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus Play it safe call 5-2131 for an escort ANYTIME

Quality Typing by Professional. Reasonable rates. Convenient. Call Heather 253-3163

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apt Cliffside F-4 starting January or February Bob 665-8219

TRAVEL

Do something January 5-12 Ski Vail Ted 546-4733

Party with 2000 other college students at the Killington Ski Fest. 5 days 5 nights from $186 Happy Hours daily LUV Tours call Frank or Grad at 549-6850 or Mark at 549-4173

TYPING SERVICE

You make it sound good, we make it look good for all your typing needs. word processing, graphs, spreadsheets. Superior quality and competitive rates call (evenings) 549-0050 or 527-7189

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

WANTED

Like English Best, Costello, Diverse Styles? Interested in doing original material & play base, drums? Call Gregg 6-5253 or Rick 6-6792

WANTED TO RENT

2 females need room anywhere in North Amherst will take over January lease call 549-3809

To take over lease in January of a two bedroom apartment on bus route call nights Laine 546-9678 Randy 546-6363

Couple with young child need small apartment for January 549-0413

SPORTS

UMass' dream dies hard, 27-24

Last-second TD sinks Minutemen's 1-AA playoff hopes

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

It was movie script perfect.

Mike Dwyer, the University of Massachusetts' 270-pound senior nose guard, had returned an interception 28 yards for a touchdown with 7:56 left to give UMass a 24-20 lead over the University of Delaware.

The Blue Hen's nine-game strangle hold over the Minutemen would end, the UMass winning streak would strech to five games and most importantly the Minutemen's 1-AA national playoff hopes would be very much alive.

But when Delaware quarterback Rich Gannon completed an 18-yard touchdown pass to halfback Fred Singleton with 55 seconds left in the game, all those hopes came to a grinding halt.

UM quarterback Dave Palazzi engineered a last-second comeback, working the Minutemen to the Delaware 25 with just eight seconds left, but Silvio Bonvini's 42-yard field goal attempt was blocked by Matt Haudenschield and Delaware won, 27-24 in one of the most exciting games Amherst has seen in some time.

"This hurts, a lot," said Dwyer, who's moment of glory was washed away. "I was so happy to score, everything was so great, then I watched him (Singleton) walk across the goal line. We've worked so hard only to have them beat us again."

Delaware, 7-3, can still look for a playoff berth with a win at home against Maine this Saturday. UMass, 6-4, will check their guts next week at New Hampshire, trying to end what has been an overall positive season on a positive note.

"Both teams played well, it was a great game," said UMass coach Bob Stull. "We made some key mistakes, but we also played hard. We shouldn't hang our heads."

UMass stopped Delaware after Dwyer's touchdown, forcing a punt after three plays, but the UMass offense was unable to put the game away as Palazzi was sacked for a 12-yard loss back to the Massachusetts eight. Dimitri Yavis punted the ball away to the Delaware 45 with 4:29 left. Gannon took it from there.

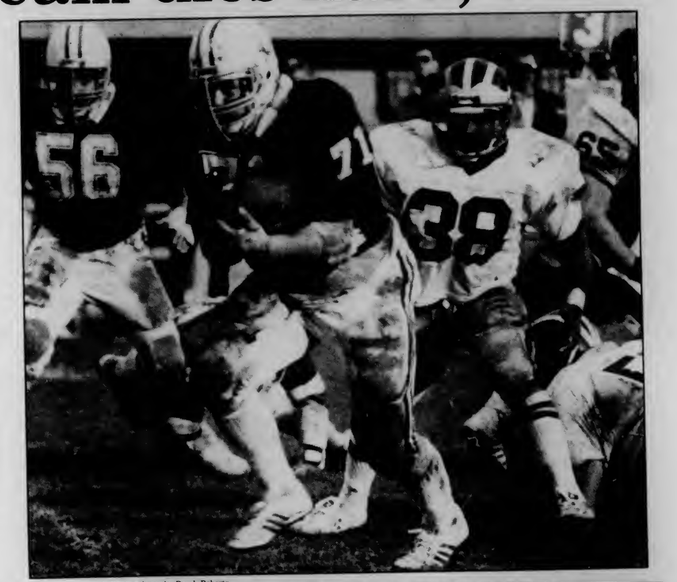
The Delaware junior, mixing up passes and runs, got the ball to the UMass six with 1:35 to play. On a third and two at the six, Gannon picked up three yards for a first down at the three.

His next play was a scoring pass to Jeff Jahrstofer, but the officials caught the Blue Hens for offensive pass interference, pushing them back to the 18-yard line with 1:03 left.

Gannon, looking for a small gain, threw a short pass to Singleton coming out of the backfield. UMass senior Carlos Silva, in as a fifth defensive back because of the passing situation, was in position but dove for the ball instead of the man. Singleton raced untouched into the endzone.

"It wasn't a bust in coverage, Carlos just missed the tackle," said Stull. "But you can't blame him for the loss, we didn't do some things that could've helped us."

Palazzi, having just 50 seconds, went to work. He completed a six-yard pass to Ted Barrett, an eight yard completion to Bart Fuller (on fourth down) that got the ball to the Massachusetts 42 with 26 seconds left.

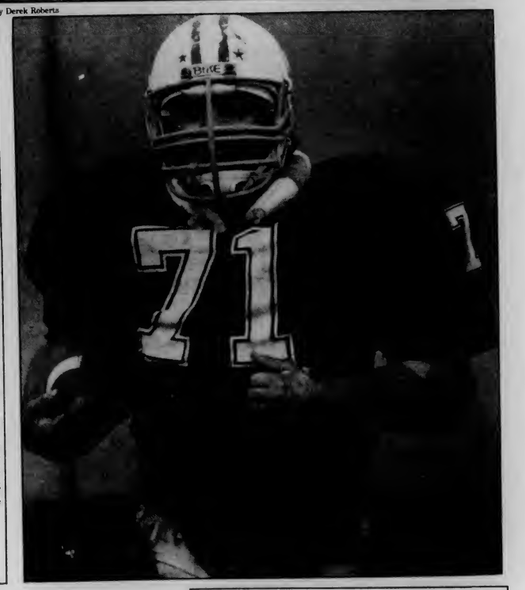


Two completions to freshman Dan Rubinetti gained 33 yards to the Delaware 25. Stull, electing to go for the tie, called on Bonvini, a freshman. Center Craig Wagner's snap was low and holder Jim Simeone barely got the ball down. Bonvini got the ball into the air, but Haudenschield came from the outside to bat it down.

'On a field goal, you need a kick snap, a good hold and a quick kick, it has to be bang, bang, bang. We didn't get that,' said Stull. 'It's too bad.'

The game started out on a strong note for UMass as Bonvini booted a 47-yard field goal with 10:02 left in the first quarter, capping UMass' first possession.

The Minutemen drove 53 yards in 15 plays, but stalled on the Delaware 17 as Palazzi was blind-sided by Joe



continued on page 11

Collegian photos by Derek Roberts

A lineman's dream — scoring a touchdown

Senior nose guard Mike Dwyer scored the first touchdown in his entire football career on Saturday. The 6-2, 270 pounder intercepted a pass by Delaware quarterback Rich Gannon in the fourth quarter and returned it 28 yards for a score (above). Dwyer was mobbed by the Minutemen before carrying the ball back to the bench. (right). The thrill lasted only a few minutes however, as Gannon threw a touchdown pass to Fred Singleton with 55 seconds left to lift Delaware to a 27-24 victory over UMass.

UM closes on NCAA bid

Stickers roll through Michigan

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

The NCAA national field hockey tournament selection committee announced its seedings Sunday, putting the University of Massachusetts in the tournament, but sending the Minutewomen to Boston, Saturday to battle Boston University in the tourney's first round.

Coming off a pair of impressive victories over the weekend in Ann Arbor, MI over the University of Michigan, 3-0, and Purdue University, 5-1, UMass had hoped that the two regular-season-ending games would enhance their chances for a more favorable tournament seeding.

Unfortunately, the Minutewomen, now 13-4-2 and sporting a 7-3-2 New England record, were essentially placed last in the

continued on page 11

Spikers lose at NU

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The only thing the University of Massachusetts volleyball team can do now is wait.

The Minutewomen finished second in this weekend's Northeastern Volleyball Classic, losing to host Northeastern in the finals, 15-6, 15-8, 15-7. UMass defeated Brown University, 15-11, 15-11, 15-10, and the

continued on page 11

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 48 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Wednesday, November 13, 1985

Viewers ponder nuclear risk with panelists

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Viewers in Amherst and cities nationwide last night addressed nuclear risk and the upcoming arms talks between the Soviet Union and the United States, via a telephone and satellite link with panelists in Washington.

In response to a question from a viewer at Hampshire College, one of six U.S. locations linked with Washington, Panelist Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said that the two superpowers are "poised and ready to kill each other."

"We ignore positive possibilities because we look at each other on our radar screens," Gore said.

The Washington panelists addressed questions from viewers in Amherst, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, Philadelphia and San Francisco in the discussion sponsored by the Union of Concerned Scientists. Last night's forum will be aired by 376 public television stations and cable television stations in the next few weeks.

Use of the media, through events such as last night's discussion, will facilitate an "informed and articulate populace," which can put pressure on President Reagan to end the arms race, panelist and UCS Chairman Henry Kendall said.

"There is a very real possibility that the arms race can be blunted," Kendall said, "but we must have the support of the public"

The Reagan administration's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative, often called "Star Wars," was characterized by most panelists as dangerous and counter-productive.

The proposed defense initiative is "provocative, dangerous, and tremendously costly," Kendall said.

continued on page 4

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

EASY DOES IT—Junior Jennie M. Anderson rides her unicycle despite a rain-slicked path yesterday near the Campus Pond. Forecasts call for occasional rain and drizzle today but the sun is expected to return by tomorrow afternoon.

Provost views problems in nursing dept.

By BETHANNE MOSKOV
Collegian Staff

The Division of Nursing at the University of Massachusetts may be eliminated because of its high expense, low student-faculty ratio and lack of scholarly productivity, according to a letter filed by University Provost Richard O'Brien.

Associate Provost Fern Johnson said yesterday that O'Brien, after reviewing each of the academic departments on campus, sent a letter to William A. Darrity, dean of the School of Health Sciences, criticizing the Division of Nursing and asking for an outline of changes to be made in an effort to improve the department.

"The problem with the department, according to the provost, is first that the student enrollment and the student-faculty ratio is down from the rest of the University," Johnson said.

"Based on the improvements that the Division of Nursing has submitted, a decision will be made for its future. The most drastic plan would be to eliminate the program altogether."
—Associate Provost Fern Johnson

According to the letter sent to Darrity, the student-faculty ratio in the Division of Nursing "has for many years been between four and six. This compares with average for the campus as a whole of 18."

Part of the problem with the ratio is that the program cost is too high for the number of students enrolled, Johnson said.

The Division of Nursing has an annual budget of $500,000, according to The Associated Press. It has a full-time faculty of 19, and an enrollment of 196 including 40 graduate students.

O'Brien also explained in his letter that the nursing faculty as a whole has had a low level of scholarly productivity, Johnson said. Part of the request for improvement made by the provost includes changes to be made in the nursing staff so that more scholarly works are published, she said.

A final copy of the plans for improvement made by the Division of Nursing was sent to the provost, who will hold his first meeting on the proposals today.

"Based on the improvements that the Division of Nursing has submitted, a decision will be made for its future. The most drastic plan would be to eliminate the program altogether,"Johnson said.

The final decisions on whether to accept the proposed changes or to take further action against the nursing program will be made by O'Brien, the Advisory Council on Nursing, and the Academic Priority Council.

Following the letter sent to Darrity, Provost O'Brien sent letters to state Sen. John Olver, D-Amherst, and state Rep. James Collins, D-Amherst, explaining the problems that are taking place in the Division of Nursing.

O'Brien, in his letters, stated that the cost of the nursing program is too high and there is too much waste to keep it going at its present level.

"In the absence of some very strong reasons there is a case to be made for getting out of the nursing business," the letters said.

The fate of the Division of Nursing should be decided by Jan. 15, 1986, Johnson said.

'Non-rescue' policy of Jews discussed

By JOSEPH R. TIGAN
Collegian Staff

Several plans to help rescue Jews from Adolf Hitler's extermination period of 1941-1945 were purposely delayed by the U.S. government until after the most severe damage was done, David S. Wyman, University of Massachusetts professor of history and Judaic studies said last night

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Author David S. Wyman speaks to a University of Massachusetts audience last night.

"The Roosevelt administration stood by and let Jews die without doing a thing," Wyman said in a speech at the Newman Center. "Numerous things could have been doen to save hundreds of thousands of lives."

Wyman, author of the book The Abandonment of the Jews: America and the Holocaust, 1941-1945, said this policy of non-rescue was because neither the U.S. nor England wanted large numbers of Jewish refugees to come out of Axis Europe.

"If refugees began flowing out of Axis Europe, the pressure would have been on the U.S. and England to find places for them to go," Wyman said.

According to Wyman, the U.S. went to great measures in delaying any rescue plans and keeping Jewish refugees out of America.

"The worst part about this situation was the fact that Americans were never confronted or truly tested by the Jewish extermination issue," Wyman said. "The Roosevelt administration, Christian church leaders and the mass media lended absolutely no support."

One thing that kept the issue away from American society was the lack of media coverage. Wyman said Jewish groups had to try and circulate information themselves, and hope to get a response.

"Mass media never gave the Holocaust issue the coverage it deserved. Very infrequently did it ever reach front page," Wyman said.

Also, the State Department was able to hold immigration numbers to a minimum. According to Wyman, 6000 refugees came into the U.S. each year during the extermination period, when thousands more could have been allowed in, in coordination with quotas at the time.

Inside:

Liberian coup fails.....2
Job outlook improves.....5
Less than Zero reviewed.....9
Soccer back in action.....16

"I dishonored myself. I devastated my family. Nobody could be any sorrier."
—Convicted spy Arthur J. Walker yesterday upon sentencing story, page 2.

WORLD/NATIONAL

AP Laserphoto

Convicted spy Arthur Walker

Convicted spy given 3 life terms

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Arthur J. Walker, a retired Navy officer convicted of supplying secrets to a Soviet spy ring run by his brother, was sentenced to life in prison yesterday by a judge who refused to "treat this as a slap-on-the-wrist case."

Walker, a 51-year-old retired Navy lieutenant commander, told U.S. District Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr. that he wished to "apologize to all the citizens of this country for what I did."

Clarke then sentenced Walker, of Virginia Beach, to the maximum of three life terms and four 10-year terms on seven counts of espionage, with the sentences to run concurrently. Walker, who was also fined $250,000, will be eligible for parole in 10 years.

His brother, John A. Walker Jr., 48, a retired Navy chief warrant officer, and John Walker's son, Navy seaman Michael L. Walker, 22, pleaded guilty to espionage Oct. 28.

Liberian coup is unsuccessful

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP)—President-elect Samuel K. Doe said in a radio broadcast yesterday that an attempt to overthrow his government in Liberia had failed and he urged the rebels led by a fugitive general to "lay down their arms immediately."

Doe's statement was broadcast on Elwa Radio, a Christian station that has been held by the insurgents earlier in the day. The broadcast, monitored in the nearby West African nation of Ivory Coast, indicated Doe's forces had gained the upper hand after a day of fighting with radio stations changing hands between rebels and loyalists.

"I take this opportunity to inform the nation that the coup has failed. I'm still the commander in chief of the armed forces of Liberia and the head of state," Doe said in the broadcast.

He said he had ordered a dusk-to-dawn curfew and closed Liberia's borders and its international airport to aid in the search for rebels led by Gen. Thomas Quiwonkpa.

Yesterday's attempted coup came less than a month after Doe's party was declared the winner of the first multi-party elections in Liberia, which was founded by freed American slaves in 1847. Doe, 35, was elected to a six-year term as president, but was not due to be sworn in until January.

The first broadcast report of a coup came on Radio Elwa, which announced that Quiwonkpa had taken over. The broadcast said Quiwonkpa declared a curfew, claimed his troops had surrounded Monrovia and said Doe had gone into hiding.

Thousands of Liberians were in the streets by mid-morning, many dancing and celebrating.

Rebel broadcasts then were heard on the government's Radio Liberia. Quiwonkpa's followers said they had arrested Doe's vice president-elect, Harry Moniba, and about a score of other government officials.

Radio Liberia was back in loyalist hands early in the afternoon, and at 2:23 p.m. an officer identifying himself as Col. Moses Wright went on Radio Elwa and urged all soldiers to obey Doe rather than the rebels.

3rd patient dies despite drug use

GRENOBLE, France (AP)—A third AIDS patient undergoing experimental treatment in France with the drug cyclosporine has died, the patient's doctor announced yesterday.

Dr. Max Micoud identified the patient as a 27-year-old man who had been treated with the drug for six days before his death on Saturday.

On Monday, doctors in Paris revealed that a 38-year-old male AIDS patient treated with the drug also had died Saturday.

In subsequent interviews, one of the doctors, Phililppe Even, said another patient had died after two days of treatment with cyclosporine in very early clinical tests last month, before the treatment was made public at a news conference.

But Even said results form the treatment of nine other patients were promising and the program was being expanded to five other French hospitals.

AP Laserphoto

IT'S WINTERTIME—A U.S. Postal employee digs out mailboxes in Truckee, Calif. after two feet of snow were dumped in the area yesterday. Five feet of the stuff fell on the state's mountains, snarling traffic around Los Angeles, and trapping hunters and hikers. At least 15 deaths have been blamed on the winter-like weather in the west since last week.

The Hot Spot 99.3 presents

Comedian

SEEN ON THE TONIGHT SHOW, SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE, DAVID LETTERMAN & HBO

LOOKOUT RODNEY DANGERFIELD, EDDY MURPHY & GEORGE CARLIN 1985's HOTTEST NEW FUNNY PERSON

CATCH CHANNEL 22 & WHMP 99.3 "THE HOT SPOT" FOR DETAILS

$1.00 off W/College I.D

Steven Wright

Friday, November 15, 8:00 p.m.
Springfield Symphony Hall

Tickets available at: Main Street Records, Northampton, U. MASS Fine Arts Center, All Stop & Shop Stores & the Springfield Civic Center Box Office.
MC/VISA 1-800-243-4842

A Hornor-Fox Production

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Anne McCrory
Copy Editor	Kelly Sieger
Layout Technician	Ansel Zinter
Photo Technician	Paul Desmarais
Production Supervisor	Ansel Zinter
Production:	Mark Parker, Gary Brennan, Tony Beugless, Nancy Rivers, Itaru Kato

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit -58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays,exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES

549-3840
228 Triangle St
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours 8 am - 12 pm M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun

3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

AA/EO office to begin looking for new director

Committee basing decision on variety of input

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

A search committee to find a new director for the Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Office at the University of Massachusetts will be designated by the end of this month, according to Provost Richard O'Brien.

O'Brien has been working since the beginning of the semester soliciting comments, criticism and suggestions from campus constituencies, in order to seat the "best possible" committee.

"This is a sensitive area, not one where one can afford to move carelessly," he said. "This is an open input sort of thing."

The office has been operated by acting director Ron Sinacore since director Thelma Griffith-Johnson took a leave of absence in October 1982. Griffith-Johnson died in August of cancer.

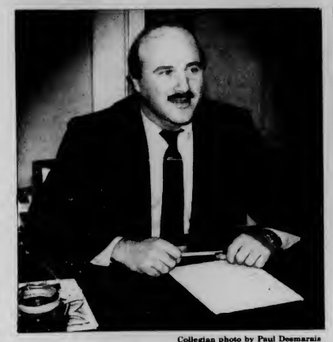
The office functions in the traditional area of affirmative action: it monitors University policies regarding hiring and treatment of employees and it investigates grievances from students, faculty and staff.

"We are looking not only for specific proposals, we are asking all interested groups for ideas as to what kind of director the office should have and what kind of search we should conduct," O'Brien said.

The search will be nationwide, he said.

Members of the department of Afro-American Studies, the Faculty Senate Committee on the Status of Minorities, The Office of Human Relations and the Professional Association at the University have been consulted on a formal basis. An ad hoc subcommittee of the Rules Committee from the Faculty Senate has also been asked for input.

"We like the progress so far," said Chester Davis, chairman of the Afro-American studies department. "There has never been a process like this before. (Provost O'Brien) has been touching bases with the various constituencies and this indicates to us a certain seriousness on his part."



"He obviously wants a wide range of views," Davis said.

Once the committee is convened, O'Brien said he would ask it to work "with all deliberate speed."

"I estimate we will not be looking at candidates until January or February, and we would be lucky if we got an appointment by July 1," he said.

"If we got an appointment sooner, I would be happier. The sooner the better for the institution. I want to get the best person possible for this post, and (if) we have to limp along for a while, then that's what we'll do."

O'Brien set the July to September range as the most realistic for the committee to find a suitable candidate.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Acting director of the Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Office Ron Sinacore.

Sinacore waiting out search

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

"Basketball officials must size up a situation quickly, they have to learn not to hesitate," says Ron Sinacore.

Sinacore, 35, who has been working in the Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Office at the University of Massachusetts for eight years, has been a basketball official at the high school and college levels for 11 years. Whether it be a basketball game or administrative duties, Sinacore likes to keep things flowing smoothly.

"They (basketball officials) make decisions under serious time constraints and they have to live by those decisions and take the heat that comes along with them," he says.

"I have been doing what I have to do to keep this office together," Sinacore said in an interview yesterday. "Keeping this office going is the most important thing to me right now."

Sinacore, who began his work at UMass as a graduate assistant to the affirmative action officer in Administration and Finance in 1978, became acting director of the Office of Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity (AA/EO) last October when Director Thelma Griffith-Johnson became ill. Griffith-Johnson died in August of cancer.

Sinacore will remain acting director until the search committee finds a replacement for Griffith-Johnson.

He said he has not made up his mind about his candidacy for the director's position. "I know what my current job is, and I am not sure if I want to move to another level," Sinacore said.

"In eight years of experience here at UMass, you tend to carry around a lot of baggage. The concept of affirmative action is far more important than personalities."

Sinacore has two master's degrees from SUNY Binghamton, one in public administration and one in systems design and analysis. He wants to expand the office's reliance on independent data sources, and shift away from "an ad hoc involvement in affirmative action related issues."

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

WALKIN' IN THE RAIN—Sophomores Susan McGillivray and Donald Donovan descend from Orchard Hill yesterday through the UMass Botanical Garden.

Varied views given on abortion ballot results

By SANDY BAILEY
Collegian Correspondent

Last week the national media focused its attention on Bristol, Conn., where voters were asked if the Supreme Court decision allowing abortion should be overturned.

After heated campaigning by groups on both sides of the abortion issue, voters said no to overturning the decision by a vote of approximately 9,000 to 7,000.

Despite the vote in Bristol, where the population is more than 50 percent Catholic, and a negative response to similar referenda last week in Dover and Derry, N.H., the participants in the abortion debate say it is far from over.

"Obviously we wanted to get more than 50 percent of the vote," said Rev. Patrick Mahoney, leader of the group Celebrate Life which petitioned to put the non-binding referendum on the Bristol ballot. But Mahoney added that he was pleased with the results, given that Connecticut "certainly is a liberal state."

Mahoney said his group has offered the pro-life movement a "non-violent, positive, American way to be involved."

"Response from around the country has been overwhelming," he said.

He said abortion exploits women because doctors profit from performing abortions and men can be less responsible in relationships with women because abortion is an option.

Catherine Blinder, spokeswoman for Citizens Against Referendum One (CARE 1) of Bristol, said she was "ecstatic about the vote there." "There is not a male alive who can tell women who exploits them," she said.

Blinder said the campaign acted to draw together progressive groups in the area, and they will continue by helping other communities that may face anti-abortion referenda. "People convince themselves that unborn children aren't really children, and that women's choices are more important," he said.

Deborah Kutenplon of the Committee for Equal Rights and Reproductive Freedom (CEERF) at the University of Massachusetts said the referendum was "a shot in the arm for women's reproductive rights."

She said that as a pregnancy counselor she has heard women say that they never thought they would have an abortion, but there they are. "Most of these groups are trying to make it illegal, period. If you get pregnant, you have the baby," Kutenplon said.

Mahoney believes the Supreme Court's stand on abortion will be modified within the next five years. But he said, "I don't know if you'll ever see it overturned."

Dance held for 'Divest 9'

A benefit dance will be held at 8 p.m. tonight in the Campus Center Auditorium to support a group of University of Massachusetts students arrested last spring at an anti-apartheid sit-in who has adopted the name 'Divest 9.'

The "Smash Apartheid Dance," sponsored by the Radical Student Union, will cost $5. The bands featured, all of whom will perform for free, are the Pajama Slave Dancers, Project Adventure, Pat on the Back, Watch the Teeth Kate, the Asexuals, the Funnel Dots, and the Habits.

Divest 9 is part of a group of 33 people, mostly UMass students, charged with trespassing when they refused to leave University Treasurer Robert Brandis office in Goodell Library last May 1. The group's members are the only ones not to have pleaded guilty in the case.

"The support of the dance will reflect support for us (Divest 9), and will show student opposition to apartheid as well as having a good time," said UMass graduate student Jonathan Frank, one of the defendants.

The proceeds will help pay the transportation costs of expert witnesses from across the country who will defend the group at its trial, beginning next Tuesday at the Hampshire District Court House in Northampton, said Beatrix Hoffman, a Divest 9 supporter.

The Divest 9 defendants are UMass students Frank, Matthew Shakespeare, Kathleen Lacey, Steven Schuster, Pamela Aronoff, Alex Welsh, John Everest, Graham Poor, and non-student Jay Allain, according to Hoffman.

—JEFFRY BARTASH

Career day attracts business reps

Representatives from more than 30 companies will attend the eighth annual career day today, hosted by the Undergraduate Business Club at the University of Massachusetts.

Career day activities will begin at 10 a.m. and end at 5 p.m. Morning information sessions will be held at 10 and 11. Company presentations will be made at the two sessions.

"There will be 14 companies speaking at the different sessions, you have to choose which you want to see," said Jodi Cohen, public relations coordinator for Career Day.

Following the morning sessions, there is a sold-out luncheon taking place from noon until 2 p.m. The luncheon, which will take place on the 10th floor of the Campus Center features Richard A. Stebbins, president of Bay Banks Valley Trust Company as the main speaker.

"It's primarily for business students, but all are welcome to join," Cohen said. She is optimistic that this year will be even more successful than past years. "It was crowded last year and I think that turned people off, but they only had a small room in the Campus Center. This year we have triple the space."

Among the other companies attending are IBM, Merrill Lynch, the Hyatt Regency and General Electric. There will be at least two representatives from each company, Cohen said.

—ILANA LEVENSON

Police arrest CC pie thrower

By JOHN YONCE
Collegian Staff

An Amherst College student was arrested Monday evening after he was observed running through the Campus Center concourse and throwing whipped cream pies at people, University of Massachusetts Police said.

The 18-year-old student was charged with being a disorderly person, police said. He struck a building manager in the face, police said.

In other police reports:

A water pipe and a "very small quantity of marijuana" were confiscated from a third floor room in Pierpont House Sunday night after officers observed the items through an open door, police said. The people in the room were advised not "to call attention to themselves," police said.

Police responded to a fight in progress at Hampshire Dining Commons Monday, police said. The altercation originally started as a food fight, police said, and no charges were lodged.

A 27-year-old male and a 19-year-old male who "couldn't take care of themselves" were observed by a plainclothes officer in the Southwest mall area Saturday, police said. The men were put in protective custody and the 19-year-old will be charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol, police said.

A 23-year-old Amherst man was arrested Saturday on a warrant from a previous charge, after police observed him consuming alcohol in the stands at McGuirk Alumni Stadium, police said.

A woman was transported to University Health Services at 2:51 a.m. Sunday after she struck her head on the second floor of Baker House, police said. Witnesses say the woman was leaning back in her chair and fell and hit her head on her bed, police said.

A soda vending machine caught fire in the lobby of Washington Tower Sunday morning, police said. The fire caused no damage other than to the machine.

★ star wars — continued from page 1

"It will be seen by the U.S.S.R. as an adjunct to our growing nuclear first strike capablity (because it may prohibit Soviet retaliation)," he said. If the United States develops the Star Wars system, the Soviet Union will build up its own weapons system to diminish the perceived threat of the system, Kendall said.

Gore said that the "introduction of defense systems would be extremely destabilizing" to a balance of power between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"The answer lies within ourselves," he said, "in discussions like summit meetings and the ongoing talks in Geneva."

But panelist Leslie Gelb, a New York Times reporter, said that although the two nations are positioned for success inGeneva, they are "unlikely to consummate it in a treaty by the end of the Reagan administration."

"There is no mutual trust," Gelb said, " and you don't take big steps without mutual trust."

About 80 people gathered in Hampshire College's Main Lecture Hall, where the panel discussion was broadcast live by satellite. Hampshire professor Alan Krass telephoned questions from the group to the panel in Washington.

ARE YOU OVER 25?
Would you like to meet other older students? If so
JOIN US
Nov 15 from 4 to 6 pm at 811 Campus Center.
For more information call 545-2148
Sponsored by the 25+ Club

Global Gifts of
Creswell Gallery
arts, crafts and gifts of color
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
10-5 Mon-Sat
549-6600
African Artifacts • Cards • Cloths • Dolls • Jewelry • Posters • Pottery • Prints

Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

Check us out.
• GM Authorized service
• Full line of parts
• Auto Body
• Rental Cars
Paige's Chevrolet
Dickinson St.
AMHERST
253-3444
GM QUALITY SERVICE PARTS
Mr. Goodwrench

CLASSICAL JAZZ REGGAE BLUES ROCK SOUL FOLK JAZZ ROCK SOUL CLASSICAL
#1 IN THE VALLEY!
DYNAMITE RECORDS
Maxell XLII90 $2.00
TDK SA90 — $2.00
New, Used, Buy, Sell and Trade
584-1580
THORNES
150 MAIN ST NORTHAMPTON

HEAVY METAL

THIS BUD'S® FOR YOU.™
BUDWEISER®-KING OF BEERS®-ANHEUSER-BUSCH INC.-ST LOUIS

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package
Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

FOCUS BUSINESS

$tudent $ense

By Christine Hughes and Peter Rice

Making a budget you can live on

Many times I've sat and listened to my grandfather quote Charles Dickens. (No doubt, he was attempting to get me to read more books.) He is very fond of Dickens, and especially of one piece in particular. His favorite selection is both amusing and educational. He loves it because he says it teaches a "valuable, little lesson." It goes something like this: "If Mr. Macabre earns 100 shillings a month and spends 101, he will always be an unhappy man. But if he earns 100 shillings a month and only spends 99, he will always be a happy man."

The "moral," of course, is not to spend more money than you can afford, because you'll always be trying to dig yourself out of debt. The more financially independent you become, the more meaning this "moral" will hold for you. The next time you are torn between buying that "on sale, today only" stereo, and paying the month's rent, you'll do better to remember old Mr. Macabre.

A lot of college students have a very hard time limiting their spending to what they can afford. For many, because their funds are so limited, it becomes twice as difficult to budget expenses successfully. As we all know, sometimes our money can run out before we realize it, or worse yet, before we have covered our necessary and fixed expenses. You may not be able to "magically" turn the money you have into more money, but you can make it cover more by working out a simple budget.

The easiest way to begin constructing a budget is by listing all your predicted expenses. That is, write down everything that you realistically think you'll be spending money on. Now, you can do this based on either a weekly, or a monthly time period. Choose whichever way best suits your immediate needs.

The next step is to take your completed list and arrange it in order of priorities and necessities. This accomplishes a few things. First, it graphically demonstrates to you the number of items that you require money for, and also what things you "must" spend on first. Second, it sets guidelines for you to follow so that frivolous items are not payed for before necessary items. In other words, your last $20 should go toward your phone bill, before it should go to that new hat that you didn't need but just had to have.

Third, a budget creates a kind of challenge for you. It allows you to not only see whether you can spend within your limits, but also to see if you can spend less, and actually save money. If you really follow the budget, it is very possible to come out ahead, and have money to put aside or use for entertainment.

One thing to remember in making your list is that different things are important to different people. Clothes might be a higher priority for one person, while putting money toward getting or maintaining a car might be more important for someone else. For example, for students living off campus, paying for groceries, rent, and the electric bill, are usually higher priorities than paying for cable TV and beer.

Once you have your list arranged in order, you should then determine how much money you have available per week or month, and literally divide it up among the priorities. That's the easy part. The hard part of keeping a budget comes in to sticking to it, and spending only the designated amounts on each priority.

You may try this and after a reasonable amount of time, realize that some of your allocated amounts were not quite on target. No problem. In fact, trying it out is the only way that you'll probably come up with a practical and useful budget.

Again, this system will not result in giving you more money than you had to start with. What it will do however, is make you more conscious of what you spend on, how often, how much, and also how it all adds up when you really begin to keep track. Those colds cans of soda, quick burgers, and badly needed "sugar boosts," are prime examples of daily expenditures not often thought about, but that really add up.

The most important thing to keep in mind is that setting up a budget is of no use to you unless you keep constant track of your spending. The two go hand in hand. By monitoring your pattern of spending, you will more easily be able to gauge your budget accordingly. You will know whether to follow the budget as planned, or to make the conclusive, necessary changes.

Constructing a budget on a regular basis is a good habit to get into. Even though you may not think you need one now, there may well come a time when you will. You never know what may happen...uh, oh, I don't think we budgeted enough for ink this mon.....

Christine Hughes and Peter Rice are former managers of the UMass Student Federal Credit Union. Their column appears regularly on the bi-weekly business page.

Next: how to find the best time to begin a long-term interest venture.

Job outlook looking up in Mass.

By SUZANNE WETLAUEER
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP)—The next 15 years will be good ones for people looking for work in New England as the number of jobs will probably continue to grow faster than the number of available workers, a government economist said yesterday.

"Without definite forecasts of economic growth, one can't be sure what will happen," said Katharine L. Bradbury, who works at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. "But this suggests that unemployment will continue to be low."

In an article published in September-October issue of the New England Economic Review, Bradbury predicted that the region's labor force will increase 21 percent by the year 2000, while the nation's labor force will grow 32 percent.

During the 1970s, she said, the number of workers grew faster then the number of jobs, causing unemployment in almost every region.

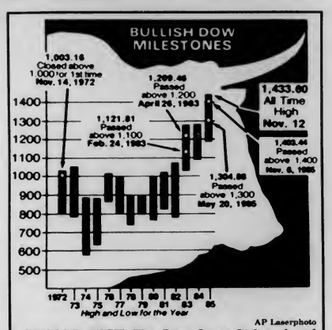
"For the country as a whole, the slowdown in labor force growth may permit some shrinkage in the unemployment rate that grew steadily from peak to peak over the business cycles of the 1970s and 1980s," Bradbury wrote.

"For New England, the slowing of labor force growth should allow the region to continue to enjoy favorable unemployment rates even if employment growth is not as strong as the nation's."

The average unemployment rate in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont was 4.5 percent in early 1985, the latest figures she used in her analysis. The national average was 7.1 percent in October.

Bradbury said that the region's continuing strong employment conditions are likely to set off two trends in the next 15 years: Unusually high teenage employment and an unusually high number of people working who ordinarily would not enter the workforce.

Data and population figures from the 1980 Census Report and the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics indicate that by the year 2000, most working New Englanders will be between the ages of 25 and 54, said Bradbury.



In other words, she said, there will be a shortage of teenagers.

She predicted that by the year 2000, 72 percent of theavailable New England workers will hold jobs, compared to 68 percent of the nation's labor force.

"It's hard to say" why more New Englanders chose to work, Bradbury said. "Men here work more than men elsewhere, and the rate of women working is above national average to a greater degree.

"Many factors probably explain it," she added. "Education nationally has been associated with it. New England's population has a higher average level of education. It could also be history and culture.

"I was visiting in Old Sturbridge Village on Sunday and the broom maker there was saying that New Englanders believe in hard work, thrift and God, in that order and that explained why they had done so well," she added. "That's an idea...but he was talking about a century ago."

AP Laserphoto

RECORD HIGH—The Dow Jones Index closed yesterday at 1,433.60, a new closing high for the New York Stock Exchange. The previous high of 1,403.44 was reached on Nov. 6. Particularly encouraging to Wall Street was the fact that the market managed to hold on the gains made Monday when a powerful surge in stock prices propelled the Dow index up more than 27 points for the best one-day performance in 10 months.

CBS chair discusses mergers

By DON LIPPER
Collegian Staff

Thomas Wyman, the chairman and chief executive officer of the much beleagured CBS Inc., is calling for changes in Securities and Exchange Commission regulations that would make "unfriendly takeovers" less likely.

Wyman, who recently spoke to a packed lecture hall at Amherst College, was invited by the political science department to give an account of last summer's highly-publicized takeover attempt of CBS by the Ted Turner group.

CBS's long battle to stave off an unfriendly takeover attmept has left Wyman very fearful of "merger-mania."

Glossary

Takeover: Purchasing a controlling percentage of a company's stock.

Unfriendly takeover: Purchasing a controlling interest in company's stock against the wishes of the management.

Merger: The joining together of two companies usually accomplished by takeover.

Junk bonds: A junk bond is like an IOU that a raider (see below) gives a stockholder promising to pay the stockholder a certain price for his/her stock. The stockholder understands that once the takeover is complete, the raider will sell away some of the assets of the company to pay back the junk bond.

Tender offer: An offer made to the shareholders of a company's stock, proposing to pay them more than market price for their shares.

Raider(s): A person (or company) that makes an unfriendly takeover bid.

Raider's philosophy: Only those companies who have let themselves get into a position where their capital is overextended and are therefore hard pressed to counter a takeover bid are vulnerable to our kind of activity and they deserve to be taken over.

Two-tier or creeping purchase offer: When someone makes tender offers to a percentage of the stockholders rather than to all of them. Two-tier comes with two distinct offers, creeping purchase is an unlimited series of offers for small segments of the company's stock.

—DON LIPPER

"There have been 17 mergers this year over a billion dollars (each). It's unbelievable. It's like a giant Pac-man game," Wyman said. "There's no awareness in this land that has translated itself into an intelligent response that recognizes how large and potentially destructive the process is. Five years ago, no one had heard of a junk bond."

The bulk of Ted Turner's tender offer to CBS stockholders was in the form of junk bonds. (See sidebar). Turner told stockholders that once he finished taking over CBS, he would sell off many of the corporation's other businesses, such as the very profitable record company (CBS Records) and many of the TV network's owned and operated stations in the major markets (New York, L.A. etc.). Turner failed to take over CBS, but a short while later took over MGM, a failing motion picture company that was still reeling from several financially unsuccessful films.

According to Wyman, the takeover attempt changed both CBS' corporate structure and the mood of its employees. "As a consequence of all this, we are a very different enterprise. Fortunately, we are in control of our destiny, but we have high levels of debt. As part of the restructuring we're committed to sell $300 million worth of assets."

Wyman called for three changes in the regulations of the SEC that would make unfriendly takeover less likely. First, "The law of the land should be that tender offers should be made in real money and that junk bonds at least should be a very limited part of any tender offer," Wyman said.

Second, Wyman said he thought longer time limits than the ones existing today should be required. "When a tender offer is made by a raider, a company should have the chance and time to think about alternatives and to think about potential combinations or other solutions that would be in the larger interest," he said.

Finally, said Wyman, it is imperative that tender offers be made to all shareholders. "In the so-called two-tier offer, or the 'creeping purchase' situation, you have a chance where a block of stock is identified, it is purchased and finally control of the company is achieved. And the last 40 percent of the shareholders who have recognized no premium whatsoever for their share other than how the market may have moved, suddenly find themselves in a situation where ownership has been changed and they just plain didn't participate. And it just isn't fair,' Wyman said.

"There are about 12 other safeguards that should also go into effect," Wyman concluded, "but I think those three are pretty fundamental."

Letters

Administrative motives

Isn't it about time Denny Madson and his gang put their money where their collective mouth is? The little position paper on violence, tolerance, and civility (Collegian, Nov.1) was nice, but what does it really mean? Are these administrators willing to back up these words with action?

I personally have a sneaking suspicion that part of the reason for the document was to appease people on campus who work with victim/survivors of violent crimes and people who work as educators against violent crimes.

I don't think there are more violent crimes happening on campus, but rather more crimes are being reported. I think people report violent crimes, especially crimes of sexual violence, when they know there are professionals they can talk to in a safe comfortable environment. I think the UMass Sensitive Crime Unit of Public Safety, Health Services, and the Everywoman's Center provide these professionals and services.

However, as more people interact with and use these services, the energy and resources of these services are drained.

Last fall, after several publicized rapes on campus, the SGA formed a rape task force. The original idea was more lighting, but through input from dedicated professionals at Public Safety, EWC, and Health Services, the focus of the task force was turned to supporting existing services and campus and community education.

Funding proposals went out. Some new lighting and call boxes went up, but little funding was committed to supporting counseling and educational services.

Madson et al want to avoid another public outcry. If they say they are concerned, perhaps they won't be asked to really get involved in working toward eliminating violence on campus and in our society. It's hard work.

One concrete way they can help without getting too involved is through increased funding of Public Safety, Health Services, and the Everywoman's Center. For the proposals they needn't look far—the proposals are on their desks.

Liisa Trocki
Belchertown

In lieu of accuracy

In Rusty Denton's column on the peril of lust (Nov. 5), he equated AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) with Venereal Disease. Although AIDS can be sexually transmitted, it may also be transmitted through other exchanges of bodily fluids.

Sex is not the cause of AIDS, nor will abstention from sex eliminate AIDS. The AIDS "germ" to which Denton refers is more specifically a virus. Exposure to this virus results in the body's production of AIDS antibodies and possibly, acquisition of the syndrome. These antibodies have been found in blood samples taken in Kenya over a decade ago, indicating that the virus existed there. In these times of frequent international travel, it was only a matter of time before the AIDS virus was spread to other parts of the world, and before people started to show the symptoms of AIDS.

It is frustrating that so many people feel free to spread so much misinformation. I encourage Denton to research his next column.

M. Lynne Murphy
Orchard Hill

Motion safe, sensible

I had a strong reaction to Bob Griffin's statements at the Undergraduate Student Senate meeting last week. For someone who was instrumental in starting the Student Government Rape Task Force, he's extremely narrow sighted on issues of women's safety.

One senator, Dave Martin from the Commuter Collective, introduced a motion at the senate to end meetings in time for everyone to be able to catch a bus home. Too often, senate meetings run past the last buses (South Amherst, Sunderland, North Amherst, Belchertown Road etc.) and senators have to catch rides, walk, or hitchhike home in the dark. For women senators this is an especially dangerous situation.

You don't have to read the campus police reports to know that women are being assaulted, beaten up, raped, harrassed sexually, and abused on campus. And, not all of that is happening behind closed doors...women have been attacked outside while walking home or going to the library or returning to their cars in P-lot. If the senate is concerned with the safety of women on campus, as others are, then it it has to broaden its ideas on rape prevention.

People who are concerned with the prevention of violence against women have to look deeper into the societal barriers to women's safety. If you are concerned with these issues, or need support, you can contact organizations that work for women's safety like the Everywoman's Center, SCERA (the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy) or the SGA's President's Office.

Chris Alibrandi, student coordinator
SCERA

 Super Sale ***
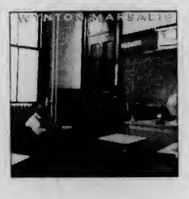
— Students Only —
14 Days of Greece
for $699



The Price Includes:
Flights, Lodging, Most Meals and More
Thanksgiving Package
$111 for 5 days
for more details read Thursdays paper

For reservations call:
University Travel & Tours Inc.
225 Main St.
Northampton, Mass 01060
tel. 584-9913

JUSTIN RYAN'S
50 cent drinks WED....
the Blitz Continues
with PARTY NITE
FIFTY CENT DRINKS!
BACK to BASICS with the best party music!! More Romantics, Madonna, Springsteen, Prince, Billy Idol, Chaka Khan - Guaranteed!!!!!!
Watch for our "Theme Parties" coming soon!!!!

YOU'VE NEVER HEARD ANYTHING LIKE IT.

WYNTON MARSALIS "BLACK CODES (FROM THE UNDERGROUND)" A new album of original jazz compositions from multi-Grammy winner Wynton Marsalis—the young trumpet sensation who draws on tradition to create jazz for today. You've never heard anything like it.

HERBIE HANCOCK AND FODAY MUSA SUSO "VILLAGE LIFE" Herbie Hancock's newest musical venture is a challenging, exotic collaboration with Foday Musa Suso (the brilliant West African musician first heard on "Sound-System"). It borrows liberally from African tribal music and is altogether unique to western ears. You've never heard anything like it.

DJAVAN "DJAVAN." Pronounced "Ja-Von" - he is called "one of the greatest artists in the world" by Quincy Jones. Singer/composer/guitarist Djavan is the current rage of Brazil. His sensual, innovative music has endeared him to musicians the world over. You've never heard anything like it.

WAYNE SHORTER "ATLANTIS" Wayne Shorter's first solo album of this decade is an astonishing mixture of jazz styles. From the techno-funk sound of Weather Report... to pure mainstream jazz...to smooth jazz/pop ... it seems hard to believe that any one man could create it all. You've never heard anything like it.

EXCEPTIONAL EXCEPTIONS TO THE RULES OF JAZZ.

ON COLUMBIA RECORDS AND CASSETTES.

*ALSO AVAILABLE ON COMPACT DISC

"COLUMBIA," ♥ ARE TRADEMARKS OF CBS INC. © 1985 CBS INC.

Appearing November 13-14 at Jonathan Swift's
Record Available at University Store for $5.99

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

SGA needs improvement

Does anyone know what really goes on in the Undergraduate Student Senate each Wednesday night?

More and more, we are finding out that nothing of consequence is coming out of these meetings.

This disturbs us.

Children who work and play together in nursery school are better behaved than our student senate. It's okay for children to play unfairly, to cry and scream when they don't get their way, because they are children. They don't know any better.

What should be occurring at senate meetings is students working in the best interest of other students. Personal gripes should not get in the way.

The business of the student senate is the business of 19,500 undergraduates on this campus. The two should have common goals. If anything, students have been *mis*represented, not represented by their student senators.

Words like immature, disrespectful, conniving, back-stabbing, and egotistical come to mind when describing student senators who have abused the position of elected representative and brought shame to our campus.

Such behavior is inexscusable. We ask that this childish behavior be halted, and that all senators act in a manner that will promote smoother, more efficient debate. This is in everyone's best interest. We are not asking for senators to agree completely with each other or not argue, but it is this senseless, petty, bickering which has deteriorated any resemblance of order, which is necessary for something to be accomplished.

At best, the goings on at senate meetings are more reminiscent of a barroom rather than a forum where students' rights are discussed. Both drunks and student senators should be held accountable for their actions.

Senators are supposed to, and we urge them all to, work for the common good of people on this campus. Contrary to popular belief, common good is not synonymous with how badly someone abuses Robert's Rules of Order.

The situation is bad. Personal vendettas and mind games have taken their toll on the student body. The sad fact is that there are bumbling, power-hungry people who not only have a lack of respect for one another, but have no respect for the students they represent. This could be avoided if senators left these personal dislikes and vendettas outside of the senate meeting room, where they belong. Debate should be centered around issues concerning all undergraduate students, not around a handful of senators hungry for the spotlight.

A major fact remains. The senate has a say in where the Student Activity Trust Fund is allocated. The fund is more than $1.7 million each year and comes straight from student's pockets. We urge all students who share a concern for where the money goes, to attend a meeting and see for themselves just how the assembly acts.

If the senate has become a purely symbolic body where issues are discussed merely for the sake of argument, then, for heaven's sake, let them use Monopoly money, not students' money.

What about their positive accomplishments? Senators are beaming with pride because they accomplished so much at last week's meeting.

They got half way through the agenda.

If it truly was such an effective meeting, why is it the exception rather than the rule?

How many issues would divide the student body the way they have divided the student senate? Think.

We can't help but wonder what motivations led these people to run for student representative. Our representatives should ask themselves if they are there for their resumes or for the students.

Unsigned editorials reflect the majority opinion of the Collegian Board of Editors.

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief — Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor — Peter Soderberg, Production Manager — Elizabeth Young, Business Manager — Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief — Anne McCrory, Managing Editor — Tom Middleton, News Editor — Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor — Peter Abraham, Sports Editor — Derek Roberts, Photo Editor — Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor — Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Tribute for Veteran's Day

Stephen Erickson

It was a dim and misty afternoon in the most powerful city in the Western World. The ground was soaking wet and becoming muddy under the feet of the thousands who had gathered there. Dotting the hill on which the Washington Monument stood, groups of men clad in green and camouflage congregated, growing more numerous until they formed a solid mass of humanity surrounding the Vietnam War Memorial. Civilians, soldiers, former soldiers, flags, wheel chairs, pomp and ragtag all charactized the scene. People talked quietly among themselves or stood in silence, on this day when the Vietnam Memorial was to be dedicated.

It was time to acknowledge that America's nightmare in Vietnam was not the fault of the GI's who fought there. They were not tools of some military-industrial complex. They were not baby killers. They are U.S. citizens who heeded the call to war of a democratic nation. We sent them to Vietnam. We treated them unfairly upon their return, and this particular day and this new monument were attempts to make amends to the living, the dead and perhaps our own national conscience as well.

I stood there in the crowd, trying to appreciate all of this. Several speeches were given, but none made much of an impression on me. Instead, I remember very clearly the conversation of a couple of veterans standing next to me. They were passing a bottle of Jack Daniels and speaking of places in Indo-China and former companions who were now but memories and names on a wall. The two men were white, and one glance behind them saw a lone black man standing there. He said "hello" and they compared military units and places they had served. Although no mention of it was made, the fact their skin colors were different seemed to intrude for an awkward moment on their conversation. Still clutching te whisky bottle, the white veteran from Wisconsin looked into the eyes of the black veteran from Washington D.C. and asked him if he'd like a drink adding, "You know, we were all in this together." They shared a strange communion of whisky, far away places, and lost friends that I expect no one who is not a veteran could fully appreciate.

In writing this, I had hoped to capture the significance of Veteran's Day. Walking through campus in the wee hours of Monday morning I happened on Alumni Hall where I noticed these words inscribed on the building: "We will keep faith with you who lie asleep." Having read this, it occured to me that Veterans Day represents a reaffirmation in the belief that past sacrifices must never be allowed to have been in vain, and for upholding this trust between the living and the dead, we owe our veterans a great debt of gratitude.

Central to the notion of Veteran's Day is the belief that some things are worth fighting for. Although people the world over have died defending their countries, the call of Americans to war has generally been something more than blind nationalism, and has usually embodied the belief that something higher than moral value or universal good was being served, whether that was actually the case or not. It is only through our willingness to take up arms in defense of our beliefs that we remain free. Should we ever decide that we will never go to war, no matter what the justification, then representative democracy based on individual liberty will cease to exist. To those individuals who have heeded the call in serving the values and interests of the United States, we owe our eternal thanks and constant vigilence.

Stephen Erickson is a Collegian columnist.

Accuracy in media needed

Gerry Scoppettuolo

Reading the Collegian lately has become a high-risk occupation for me. I can never be sure, before reading a column such as Rusty Denton's "Perils of wanton lust" just how much more difficult life will become for lesbian/gay students and employees of this University.

The editorial editor of the Collegian, by allowing untrue statements to be issued, masquerading as "facts," without regard to accuracy, is in fact contributing to a climate of hysteria and fear with respect to AIDS. But since the editors of the Collegian don't have to live with the repercussions that follow in the wake of the ignorance they have fostered, I hope that they will allow me, a gay male who does have to live and work in this community, an opportunity to undo some of the damage that has occurred.

Denton stated in his column that the federal government was spending $2 billion fighting AIDS and that this money would be better spend on alleviating hunger in this country. The truth is that in the most recent fiscal year which has just ended, the government spend $100 million on AIDS research—one-twentieth the sum claimed in the article. A little more than $200 million is being discussed for next year. In other words, the federal government is currently spending less than one-third of one percent on fighting AIDS as it spends on the Pentagon ($302 billion).

What is really damaging about the inaccuracies the Collegian doesn't mind allowing into print is that Denton's false claims about AIDS funding set the needs of the hungry and poor in this country against the needs of thousands of dying people, as if there were no poor people who are gay, or straight people who have AIDS. What was more infuriating is that my lesbian and gay sisters and brothers have always been in the forefront of movements for social justice and economic equality in this country—for all people.

Those of us, like myself, who have worked in the federal anti-poverty program in an America which once cared more for its poor than is now the case in the Age of Rambo, resent fundamentalist right-wingers like Denton who are now trying to divide the poor against gay people. Where are the efforts of people like Denton to alleviate the plight of the homeless, the poor and the sick? When we, gay and straight alike, protest cutbacks in food stamps and job-training programs we are told to wait for trickle-down Reaganomics. When we urge cutbacks in the swollen defense budget we are called unpatriotic.

I do not expect Collegian columnists to necessarily believe in my or anyone else's politics, but I do expect them to tell the truth with respect to the facts in their columns. Denton can have any opinion he wants to have about me, gay people in general, or anything else. Just don't go spreading false information in the Collegian about a matter of life and death to people we love. And if you really care about poor people, your help would be appreciated at any one of the survival centers in Amherst and Northampton that have been created to save the lives of the people who have fallen through the holes in Reagan's safety net.

Gerry Scoppetuolo is an advocate for research and training for SCERA.

Letters

Originality of paintings in doubt

I went to see the exhibit of Jerry Kearn's paintings yesterday and my initial impressions were very favorable. But something kept bothering me. From reading either the Collegian's review (headlined "Kearn's comic art: a must-see"), or the press release, or from seeing the show itself, one would have no idea that the cartoon images used in Kearn's paintings are indeed culled from actual comic books, and are not, except in the loosest sense, his creations. If the comic drawings were not as prominently used or as precisely copied, I would have thought little of it, but as it is, I feel credit should be given.

Except for the "superhero" drawing in "Missing" by the contemporary British artist, Brian Bolland, the images come from the E.C. line of comics published in the early 50s. "Three-mile Rapture" uses the work of Jack Davis (the falling boy) and Reed Crandall (the staked man), whose work is also copied for the absent "Road to Casablanca" painting. The drawings in "Repo Man" are the work of Johnny Craig, while Jack Kamen did the scene used in "Naked Brunch."

Of course, I realize these are just comic book artists, and he's a professor of art, but I doubt Kearn would as completely appropriate the work of any fine artist without acknowledging his debt, if not in the title, then elsewhere.

Scott Grammel
Northampton

The Collegian welcomes letters, column, and cartoon submissions. Submissions should be mailed to the Editorial Editor at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, or they can be dropped off at the Collegian classified ad counter in the basement of the Campus Center. Due to the volume of mail recieved, individual replies cannot be made.

Herrell's Ice Cream
Thomes Marketplace
Old South St. Entrance
Northampton
Open Noon 'till 11:30 Sun.-Thurs.
No'n 'till Midnight Fri. & Sat.
586-4837
Herrell's Ice Cream
The Original and Still the Best!

Luncheons
at the
TIME OUT
Spaghetti Specials Daily
Best Pasta in town
37 N. Pleasant St.

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!
Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS.
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA 782-7191
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-7601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 38 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

He's been chased, thrown through a window, and arrested. Eddie Murphy is a Detroit cop on vacation in Beverly Hills.
BEVERLY HILLS Cop
Thursday, Nov. 14th at 5, 7, 9, 11
Campus Center Auditorium
$1.50 at 5 $2.00 at 7, 9, 11
sponsored by N.E.A.G.

UTOPIA Student Special
SPAS
1 HOUR TUB for ½ HOUR PRICE
an incredible savings
every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday
Call for reservations 253-SPAS
175 University Drive, Amherst MA
(next to Stadium Liquors in the Price Chopper Mall)

HIGHENOTES
Balloon Delivery Service
introducing:
~ ROBERTO ~ MALE BELLY DANCER
413-549-1430
233 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

When It Comes To Price, We're the Underdog
Nike® Recognition
Leather Court Shoe
Women's sizes.
Reg. $32.99-36.99
$25 Low $28 High
Boys' sizes
Reg. $31.99-33.99
$24-$25 Low High
Olympian®
Leather High Top
Court Shoe
Men's sizes. Reg. $26.99.
$21
Nike® Convention
Leather Court Shoe
Men's sizes. Reg. $39-42.99
$31 Low $33 High
In our game, the best way to stay on top is to keep our prices under everybody elses. Even on the best-selling names and styles in athletic footwear, like Nike and Olympian leather court shoes. That way, we all come up winners.
OLYMPIAN
We thrive on competition.
Hampshire Mall, Rte. 9, Hadley

America Needs A Hero For Every Age.
From the Revolutionary War to the War in Viet Nam, in national crises and natural disasters, the National Guard has always been ready when America called.
Today is no different. The Guard still needs the kind of people who know peace and freedom don't come cheap. Who are willing to stand up and be counted when the chips are down.
If you're one of them—and you've got two days a month and two weeks a year to invest in something important—we've got a job, a pay check, and some pretty attractive benefits waiting for you.
Talk to your local Army Guard recruiter today.
Because "hero" doesn't have to be just a word. It can be the face you see when you look in the mirror.
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY National Guard
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 586-4110
100% FREE TUITION
To any Massachusetts Funded College or University

ARTS

Book written by L.A. youth adds up to Less Than Zero

Less Than Zero
By Bret Easton Ellis

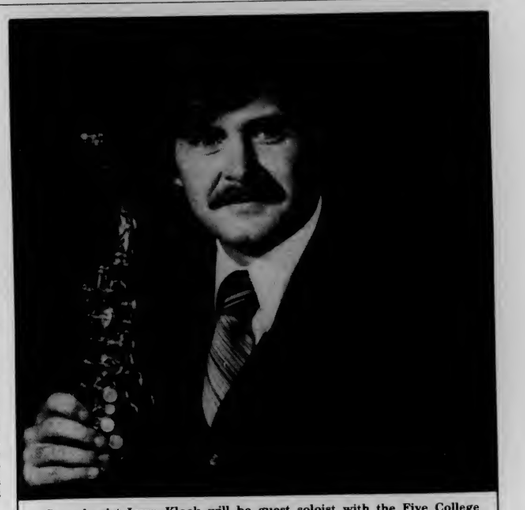
By BETHANNE MOSKOV
Collegian Staff

Less Than Zero, by Bret Easton Ellis, is a novel which has been called the Catcher in the Rye of this decade.

For its explict content, yes, I would call it that. But as far as its story line I would be more likely to call it the Clockwork Orange of this decade; society being a living hell with what seems like no restrictions, no goals and nobody who cares. For both Clay (the main character of Less Than Zero) and Alex (the main character of A Clockwork Orange) life is but a picture book of events containing few connections and no explanations. At least Alex is happy.

In an overview, Less Than Zero is a one-month look at a young man's racey and almost senseless life in Los Angeles. Clay has returned home to L.A. from a college in New Hampshire. Clay is unhappy because he hates everything, but there is nothing he can do to change it so he does his best to survive. He is caught up in the plastic, and glittery world of the elite.

Clay and his friends survive on drugs sex and MTV. No one seems to care who they sleep with or how much money they spend on coke. Clay leads his life day to day just barely surviving the routine.



When I finished the last paragraph of the book I closed it and sat for a few moments trying to pull it all together. While reading Less Than Zero I thought the idea benind the story would come to me, and I would understand it by the end. But at the conclusion of the story I was left with too many unanswered questions.

Through the course of the book Ellis takes his readers on a roller coaster ride through the emotions and experiences of Clay. Unsure of how he feels towards life, Clay does seem to value his friendships, only at certain times though. He thinks back to his past alot perhaps in an effot to forget the present that he is living.

Clay has some kind of sick perversion for seeing the worst possible thing happen. When his girlfriend Blair hits a coyote he can't take his eye off the dying beast. Clay is the last of his friends to leave the alley when they come across a dead junkie lying in the gutter. Even when he was forced into watching his friend Julian perform acts of homosexual prostitution Clay's eyes couldn't leave the scene.

Any conversation between characters in Less Than Zero is mundane and superficial. No has anything real to say to anyone else because nobody seems to care. Clay's friend Kim has to read magazines to find out where her mother is traveling to film her next movie. Clay and a few others stand around and take pictures of their friend at the party while she injects heroine into her arm. And when Clay's 13-year-old sister proudly announces that she has no problem getting her own cocaine, Clay stares out the window.

When I first started to read the book I couldn't put it down. Each little happening in Clay's life was a new adventure in literary thrills. However, midway through the book Clay's depressing life began to show through. It got me depressed, and eventually made me sick. Those thrills turned into cheap thrills. It got to the point where I was saying enough is enough.

Saxophonist Lynn Klock will be guest soloist with the Five College Chamber Soloists at 8 p.m. Thursday in Bezanson Recital Hall at UMass. Admission is free.

JOHN CAFFERTY AND THE BEAVER BROWN BAND
Special Guest the Stompers
Springfield Symphony Hall
December 10th-7:30pm
All Seats Reserved - $12.50
TICKETS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS AT FINE ARTS CENTER BOX OFFICE
PHONE CHARGES: (413)787-6600 or (800)243-4842
Produced in association with 96 TIC-FM
Tickets on Sale Fri., Nov. 15th!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY REBECCA WAGGONER
Love, Your housemates - Beansprout Kappy Boneranger

AMHERST CINEMA
Wednesday - Saturday
Buckaroo Banzai 7:00
Time Bandits 9:00
Double Feature $3.00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

26 MAIN ST. AMHERST 256-8331
JOHN DELLARIA SALONS

Adult theatre restrictions asked of Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP)— Communities should not be allowed to isolate adult movie theaters in an "industrial wasteland" without proof they will cause harm if located elsewhere, the Supreme Court was told yesterday.

Jack R. Burns, a lawyer representing theater owners from Washington State, said there should be "empirical evidence of a compelling nature" before communities effectively can ban adult theater from most commercial areas.

In a case attracting widespread attention from municipalities nationwide, the court heard arguments in an appeal by Renton, Wash., officials seeking to limit the location of new theaters showing sexually explicit films.

E. Barrett Prettyman Jr., a lawyer here representing Renton, urged the justices to allow communities to force the theaters to locate in certain parts of town and nowhere else.

Renton officials "didn't zone them away from commercial areas," Prettyman said. "We zoned them away from residential areas which happened to be mixed in with the commercial areas."

LeeAnne Hutchinson (Smith College) and Paul Hahn (Amherst College) participants in the Five-College Dance Department's fall faculty dance concert, 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday in Amherst College's Kirby Theatre.

Pauly Street

Tonight Nov. 13
Reggae Rockers
LOOSE CABOOSE
Shakin to the Reggae Beat
Tickets $4.00 at the door

Thursday Nov. 14
Miller Rock Series presents
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY and the JUKES
Tix $9.50 in advance

Coming Nov. 21
The One & Only
RAY CHARLES and the RAELETTES
and the Ray Charles Band
Tickets available all Datatix

Coming Dec. 12
Johnny Copeland and the Texas Twister

10 PLEASANT STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA
413 584 7774

CAROL'S HEAD QUARTERS
Former Employees of LORDS & LADIES
Carol, Sandy and Ingrid
A Full Service Salon
- Manicures - Cellophane Colors - Perms
Reasonable Rates Walk-Ins
115 Russell St, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA
1-413-584-9948
Student Discount w/valid ID

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd. Whately
1-665-2044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open: Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

For The Ultimate Study Break...
Relax your mind and recharge your body in the weightless, stimulus-free environment of Utopia Spas' flotation tank, $9.00 per hour
Utopia Spas
175 University Drive, Amherst
(413) 253-7727

Hampshire Business Machines Inc.
TYPEWRITERS
Sales, Service Rentals
Brothers, IBM. Smith Corona, etc
321 Main St. Amherst
549-6177

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

GRAND OPENING
川 菜
北京園
PEKING GARDEN
WE WELCOME YOU TO
We hope to introduce you to a new, authentic taste in Chinese cuisine. We emphasize the use of different Chinese spices in making a dish, such as fresh ginger root, scallion, fresh garlic, pepper corn, star anise, sesame seed, and of course, hot pepper. We also have a variety of Chinese sauces made from assorted beans and spices, will give a dish its unique, exotic flavor.
In our Menu we combine the most famous dishes from the south and the north to enable you to taste a wide range of genuine Chinese cooking. Our spicy dishes are prepared in three categories, mild, hot, and very hot. Please advise your waitress which category you desire. Our Chef has had 20 years of experience from all over the world, such as Mainland China, Hong Kong, and New York City. Therefore, we can guarantee you the finest in Chinese cuisine.
We sincerely hope that you will enjoy both our food and service. We welcome your comments and criticism.
Mandarin & Szechuan Restaurant
Luncheon Specials from $2.25 - $4.50
Mon-Sat 11:30 am - 3:00 pm (except Holidays)
Sunday Brunch served from 11:30 am - 3:00 pm
$6.95 per person $4.00 per child under ten
Banquet Room Available for larger parties
Cocktail Lounge
Full Liquor License
For take out orders and reservations please call 586-1202
Sun-Thurs 11 am - 10 pm; Fri & Sat 11 am - 11 pm
48 Russell Street
Hadley, Mass. 01035

EASTMAN KODAK
PRESENTS A COPIER EXPOSITION
at UMASS
Campus Center. Rm 163
Nov. 18th 1:00 PM - 8:00 PM
Nov. 19th 9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

ARTS

New album releases: Some hot, some not

By ELIZABETH LANGLOIS
Collegian Staff

Lots of new releases are all being issued just in time for early Christmas shopping. Here's a chance to spend some money:

Mars needs Guitars by the Hoodoo Gurus is not as immediately catchy as its predecessor, Stoneage Romeos. This is an album that reveals itself a little more each time you hear it and is every bit as good as the first album.

The Gurus lost their American contract, and this is available on Big Time Records. From cramps-style rock to straight ahead pop, the Gurus excel at it all. Real pretty songs like, "Show Some Emotion" and "Other Side of Paradise" sound like they could be right at home on top 40 radio. "Bittersweet" has already been released as a single.

Crashing Dream by L.A.'s Rain Parade is their first release for a major label (Island), and for old and new fans alike. This band doesn't disappoint. They've sharpened up their sound a bit from the meandering keyboard washes of their last two outings. Don't expect happy lyrics either. Expect great music. The band uses alot of slow slide guitar for a beautiful effect, not unlike the swells of violin from their first record. "Don't Feel Bad" sounds like their old stuff and "Gone West" uses a drum machine which sounds interesting.

Date With a Vampyre is a new EP out by The Screaming Tribesmen, a great Austrailian band. They've cleaned up their sound and present us with a fine batch of tunes. From "Two Blind Mice," a little reminiscent musically of the Church, to "High Time."

The Pink Opaque, a compilation of singles put out by the Cocteau Twins, is a nice package and the Twins first album release in the states. It presents the buying public with a solid argument as to why they should be stars in the U.S. as well as in the U.K. At times, they sound like Kate Bush (specifically Vocalist Elizabeth Fraser).

Mr. Robyn Hitchcock (ex-Softboy) has released a live document of his recent tour recorded over at the Marquee Club in England, called Gotta Let the Hen Out. It is a faithful reproduction of his live sound and includes "Listening to the Higsons" and a great version of "My Wife and My Dead Wife."

Gene Loves Jezebel, two Welsh men, one who dresses up as a woman, have released a real sleeper called Immigrant Awash with echo mannerisms (a la guitar) similar to U2's Edge, and some interesting vocals, this band is destined for stardom. Witness the splendor of "Cow" and the furiousity on "Always a Flame." A must-have for any collection.

The Cult are a singles band. They've released a few fine 12-inchers in the past year, most notable, "Resurrection Joe" but sadly, on their latest album, Love, they've fallen to rehashed metal cliches and tuneless vocals. Yawn.

The Thompson Twins fare little better on Here's to Future Days. This has all the makings of a rush job. Leader Tom Bailey suffered from exhaustion and this delayed things a few months. Where is the hand that was capable of such exquisite pop on their last few vinyl ventures? Except for "Lay Your Hands on Me," this album is a real drag. They used to be one of the few synth-pop outfits capable of working magic with melody and infusing exotic rhythms and warmth to synthetic sound.

Last off is the perfectly wonderful, beautiful single from Echo and the Bunnymen titled Bring on the Dancing Horses. Loaded with synths and strings doesn't drain from its power one bit.

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*
While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.
* Upon faculty approval

TCYP has openings for the following positions:
FOSTER CARE -mature individuals and families to provide a stable environment for needy adolescents.
RELIEF STAFF - to provide respite hours to youths in foster care. Situations vary according to need.
ADVOCATES - willing to share living accommodations with young adults needing orientation into independent living situations.
Stipends, training and support are available for all openings. For further information, call B.J. Vanasse at Tri-County Youth Program, 16 Armory St., Northampton, 586-6210.

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wallace's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

ARTHUR
WED. NOV. 13
5 P.M. - $1.50
7,9,11 P.M. - $2.00
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM

JASON & THE SCORCHERS
Thursday Nov. 21
Campus Center Auditorium
An evening of pure 'frolicking' fun!!!
Tickets $8.50 $10.00 at the door
and special guest
PAJAMA SLAVE DANCERS
UPC PRESENTS
Violent Femmes
AND SPECIAL GUEST
BLUEWALL
Sun. Nov. 24
Tickets $9.00 IN ADVANCE $10.00 AT THE DOOR
Tickets on sale Wed. Nov. 13th
at Tix Unlimited, Main Street Records, Faces and "For the Record".

STUDENT TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES
Copies of the Fall Student Telephone Directory will be available The week of Nov. 11th
On-Campus students will receive a directory through their Cluster Office.
Off-Campus students can pick up directories on the Campus Center Concourse.
Because only a limited number of directories are available, please pick up only one per room/house
(Faculty and staff distribution will follow in approximately one week.)
TIDBITS
IDB 545-1656
TIPS 545-1540

MANDATORY MEETING

ALL NUMMO NEWS STAFF MEMBERS ARE REQUIRED TO ATTEND AN EMERGENCY MEETING AT 4:15 P.M. IN RM 109, NEW AFRICA HOUSE. IT IS IMPERATIVE THAT YOU ATTEND.

Tonight Is Coors BEER NIGHT

Coors CHANGES Dance Club Coors

All Schnapps 99¢

FREE T-Shirts Hats Key Chains Posters

BAR DRINKS $1.25

RT. 9 AMHERST 256-8284

Roger

former manager of John Bellaire

now appearing at:

Michael's Hair Studio

Carriage Shops, Amherst Upper Level

549-6973

NURSING: CHECK IT OUT

At New England Deaconess Hospital School of Nursing. Now is the time to apply. You could even start planning your courses to qualify for our two-year advanced placement program.

Just call Joy Erb, recruitment coordinator, at (617) 732-8343.

Come join us at our Fall Open House, Sundays, 2-4 p.m.: October 27, December 1; Tuesdays, 4-6 p.m.: October 29, December 3.

NEW ENGLAND DEACONESS HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING

One Autumn Street, Boston, MA 02215

Committed to the concept of equal opportunity in education

Pearl Street

AND

Miller High Life Rock Series

Presents

SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY and the JUKES

DOORS OPEN 8:00 P.M.

DON'T BE LATE FOR THE PARTY FREE T-SHIRTS, HATS, AND ALL KINDS OF GOODIES TIX IN ADVANCE AT ALL DATATIX OUTLETS $9.50

AND AT MAIN ST. REC'S IN NORTHAMPTON

10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

CAREER DAY '85

Wednesday, November 13

Over 30 companies represented!
Presentation, Luncheon and Career Fair
Luncheon tickets on sale in SOM lobby
until Nov. 8

Those wishing to attend only presentation
and Career Fair
are welcome from 10:00 am - 5:00 pm,
1st floor Campus Center
Open to all students - any major!

Sponsored by
the Undergraduate Business Club

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Weather

Today: Overcast with occasional rain or drizzle; high 50-55.
Tonight: Rain, drizzle, patchy fog, lows near 40.
Tomorrow: Drizzle will give way to partially sunny skies by afternoon. Highs in the 50s.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Woe's Moes

By Maureen Hayes

Bat Brain

Bill Dearing

Today's Menu

LUNCH
Cheeseburger
Bacon-Onion Quiche

BASICS LUNCH
Golden Burgers
Hungarian Noodle Bake

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Gravy
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Tartar Sauce, Cocktail Sauce

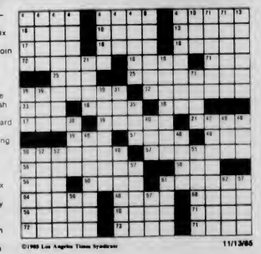
BASICS DINNER
Barley-Soybean Casserole
Fried Shrimp Dinner
Tartar Sauce, Cocktail Sauce

Attention All Copy Eds, AMEs and Reporters

Former Collegian managing editor Ray Beauchemin, now a copy editor at the Hartford Courant, will be giving a workshop at 4 p.m. on Thursday in the newsroom. This should be worth it—please make an effort ot attend.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Cries of disgust
5 Bedeviler
9 Fish spears
14 Rani's employee
15 Pearl Harbor's site
16 Love, Italian style
17 Caribbean locale
18 Hold back
19 Persian gold coin
20 Mountain in E Turkey
22 Henry or Clare Boothe
24 Finale
25 —— desperandum
26 Gypsy dance style
28 Low-cost houses
32 Garden State capital
33 New word for newlyweds?
34 No. in Frankfurt
36 Caravansary
37 Turned a —— ear
39 Granite: Prefix
41 Play parts
45 Old French coin
47 Support
49 Dash off
50 Tunisia's neighbor
54 Taco or crepe
56 Lively Spanish dance
58 U.S. govt. board
59 12 doz
60 Do a gardening chore
61 Upstart
64 Of blood
66 Spruce
68 Within: Prefix
69 An Astaire
70 Jack a-dandy
71 Repeatedly
72 Meddled
73 Egyptian sun god
74 Not as much

DOWN
1 Spotted cavy
2 Manchurian river
3 Cuban dance
4 Star of bridge and screen
5 Station
6 Devour
7 Mantel
8 Din
9 Keepers, of a sort
10 Latin I verb
11 Stir up
12 "El Caudillo"
13 Forward
21 —— a Dale
23 Sambalike dance
27 Town in Sicily
28 Milkweed feature
29 Regret
30 Rumbalike dance
31 Form of address
35 Capture
38 Nurture
40 Hammock activity
42 Stately dance of old
43 —— Tok of Oz
44 Observe
46 Inched
48 Hilltop
50 Hunting hound
51 Texas city of song
52 Folklore beings
53 List
55 Breakfast fare
57 Music hall
61 Tommy's weapon
62 Shoshoneans
63 Drags
65 October's is brown
67 Confusion

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	L	A		C	A	N	E		B	A	I	N
L	O	I	N	E		A	G	E	D		E	E
D	O	I	N	N	A	R	I	E	D		R	A	I	S
A	W	A	I	S		S	P	I	E	D	A	M
		S	I	T	I	N	G		E	L	I	E
		G	E	R	M		M	E	R	M	A	N
J	O	H	N	W	A	Y	N	E		S	A	L	E
E	G	O		B	R	I	N	E		L	O	A
E	E	L	S		A	N	N	M	I	L	L	E	R
P	E	E	R	E	D		S	T	I	L	L	O
				E	X	I	T		T	O	W	E	I	N
S	T	R	E	E	T	S	A	N	D	M	E	N	I	E	S
H	O	O	P	S		M	A	R	I	A	S	T	O	R
I	N	L	E	T		E	V	I	C	E		T	E	N	I
P	E	E	R		R	E	P	S		R	I	A

11/13/85

©1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

What if you don't get into the grad school of your choice?

Of course, you may get into another school, but why settle? Prepare for the LSAT, GMAT, GRE, MCAT or any grad school entrance exam with the best test prep organization— Stanley H. Kaplan.

For nearly 50 years, Kaplan's test-taking techniques have prepared over 1 million students for admission and licensing tests of all kinds. So call. Why go to just any grad school, when you can go to the right one?

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD
The world's leading test prep organization.

Intersession Classes Enrolling Now
MCAT, GMAT
GRE, LSAT
Take advantage of our
FREE SPEEDREADING LESSON
at your convenience

GET A $5.00 STORE CREDIT TOWARDS NEXT PURCHASE OVER $10- WHEN YOU BUY A PAIR OF
★ 501 or ★ CORDS or ★ JEANS
Levi's at Saturday Clothes
N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-9729

Hockey player's parents permit organ removal

STRATFORD, N.J. (AP)—The parents of hockey star Pelle Lindbergh said their good-byes to their brain-dead son yesterday after giving doctors permission to remove his organs for transplant donations.

Philadelphia Flyers team physician Edward Viner said that the organs probably would be removed "within the next 24 hours" but that Lindbergh's elderly parents wanted more time with their only son before allowing the operation to begin.

"Privately, they must hope there could be a miracle...but they're anxious not to lost the potential of helping others," Viner said of the family's decision to donate Lindbergh's vital organs.

"From a purely medical point of view, he's been dead since 5:40 a.m. Sunday," said Viner, who described Lindbergh's existence as "as state of semi-living."

Sigge Lindbergh flew from Sweden Monday to his son's bedside, where the goaltender's mother, Anna-Lisa, and fiance, Kerstin Pietzsch, have kept a vigil since the accident.

Lindbergh, 26, was legally drunk when he left an afterhours bar and drove his red Porsche 930 into a concrete wall in front of Somerdale elementary school, authorities said.

Two passengers, Kathyleen McNeal, 22, of Ridley Park, Pa., and Edward T. Parvin, 28, of Mount Ephraim, also were injured in the accident.

McNeal, who is on the same floor with Lindbergh at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital-Stratford Divisoin, was listed in stable condition yesterday. Parvin was in critical condition with a skull fracture at Cooper Hospital-University Medical Center in Camden.

Lindbergh's brain stem and spinal cord were irreversibly damaged by the crash, in which he also suffered fractures of the hip, leg and jaw, doctors said.

Dr. Louis Gallo, a staff surgeon at Kennedy Memorial Hospital, said Lindbergh's parents had signed a release allowing donation of his organs. Asked when the operation would begin, he replied, "We are awaiting their order to allow us to do that."

His relatives "have accepted the finality of his condition. They want more private time with him," Viner said.

Pietzsch has acted as interpreter for Lindbergh's parents, who speak no English. "His fiance indicated they were very concerned the organs be used to help someone else," he said.

Burial will be in Sweden, although no plans have been made, he added.

Lindberg, voted the Vezina Trophy last year as the National Hockey League's leading goalie, was a member of the 1980 Swedish Olympic team which won the bronze medal at Lake Placid.

Tests taken in the hospital emergency room showed Lindbergh's blood alcohol content at .24 percent, far above the .10 percent limit at which a New Jersey driver is considered legally drunk.

YVONNE'S
· CARRIBBEANA RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials
with Super Island Vegetarian and Regular dishes
Prices from $2.50 and up
50¢ DRAFT BEER
with all lunches
Route 9, Hadley, same block as Soda City
586-4389
Lunch Hours 11:30-3:00 pm Monday - Friday
Dinner Hours 5:00-10:00 pm Every Night

Our recruiting philosophy is very simple: Outstanding people attract outstanding clients.

Patrick J. Wade Jr.
Partner in Charge, Northeast Region

Our firm's greatest strength is its people, and that's a tradition we intend to continue. We want the best to work with us.

Our partners and staff have the highest technical skills. And they're people who care, people who teach, people who understand today's accounting profession.

They understand that technical quality has to be developed equally with quality business judgment.

On the job and in our training program they work to impart the key strengths that prepare staff for increasing responsibilities, and help them develop the judgment to reach sound business decisions.

For it is our people, after all, who create our quality that works for business.

Deloitte Haskins+Sells
USA

Navy Gold:
Forged in a Tradition of Excellence
Because the Officers wearing it are the best in the world at what they do
. . . they have to be

It takes a special breed of aviator to meet the challenges of Naval Aviation. Strong, dedicated professionals who can control the world's most sophisticated aircraft. There's no room over the oceans for aviators that are second-best.

Beneath the surface pulses a unique environment few will ever challenge. Only an uncompromised standard of excellence earns a submariner his dolphins. The Navy's Nuclear Propulsion Officers wear them.

To find out if you're qualified, see the Navy Representative that will be in the Campus Center on November 14, 1985 or call collect (518) 462-6119.
Minority Students Encouraged to Apply

Navy Officers Get Responsibility Fast.

★ football

continued from page 16

Heartbreakers: UMass has lost four games by a combined 19 points. The Minutemen have also found difficult ways to lose. Consider this: Richmond-UMass lost on a punt return; Harvard-UMass lost on a deflected pass that went for a touchdown; Rhode Island-UMass lost on a reverse and Delaware-UMass lost in the last minute and missed a field goal with eight second left.

Minutemen-Patriots connection: The Minutemen and the New England Patriots had their streak snapped on Sunday when the Pats beat the Colts. For nine weeks, every time UMass won or lost, the Pats did the same thing. Going into last week, both Massachusetts teams were a game out in their division and sported 6-3 records.

Double take: Senior cornerback Chris Wood has been included on two programs the past two seasons that honored departing UMass seniors by displaying their pictures. He could've graduated last season, but decided to use his year of eligibility and remain in school. Linebacker Steve Silva faces a similiar problem this year, to make sure he got some glory his picture was on the cover this season.

Statistically: Linebacker Vito Perrone has 45 tackles in the last three games. . .senior co-captain Paul Platek is averaging over eight yards a punt return. . .freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi is 28-of-51 for 417 yards in his last two games. . .Dimitri Yavis is averaging 39.5 yards-per-punt. . .the UM defense is allowing 11 points-per-game, and only 22 points overall in the first quarter and 21 in the fourth period. In fact, over the last eight games, no opponent has scored in the first quarter. . .the Minutemen averaged 9,740 for six home games. . .the top four scorers on the Minutemen this season (Palazzi, fullback Al Neri, kicker Silvio Bonvini and fullback Tony Strickland) did not play for UM last year. . .junior flanker John Crowley is averaging 17 yards a catch. . .Neri has 500 yards on the season. . .senior co-captain George Barnwell is questionable for UNH with a bruised shoulder. He needs only 12 yards to go into second on the UM all-time rushing list. . .Andrew Thomas is averaging over 20 yards a kickoff return. . .Dwyer leads UM with 12.5 quarterback sacks, John McKeown leads with 126 tackles.

★ field hockey

continued from page 16

University of Maryland (13-6-3). The South regional, hosted by North Carolina, includes Old Dominion (17-5-0) and 2-1 losers to UMass, and the University of Virginia (12-6-0) and 2-1 losers to UMass in UM's season opener.

Boston University, 15-2-2 and ninth ranked nationally, enters the game with a nine-game winning streak which includes victories over Virginia, Springfield and UMass. . . BU defeated Virginia, 1-0; Springfield, 2-1 and UMass, 3-0. . .Hixon felt that BU took the game from UMass, saying that the team had been offensively flat. . . BU boasts impressive numbers, outscoring its opponents 38-9, and outshooting them 360-99. . . Offensively the Terriers are led by senior midfield co-captain Terry Geldart (10 goals, 4 assists), junior back Kim Swatek (1 goal, 11 assists) and junior forward Sue Wante (7 goals, 2 assists). . . BU also boasts two All-New England selections, senior midfield co-captain Karen Godfrey (1 goal, 3 assists) and junior defender June O'Hara. . .Both Geldart and Godfrey are four-year starters. . . In goal, the Terriers have junior Mary Linehan who has an 0.44 goals against average with a school-record 13 shutouts and has not been scored upon in her last 600 minutes spanning 10 games. . . The Terriers' two loses have come to UConn, 4-1 in the season's second game, and to UNH, 1-0 at midseason.

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone
Petite - Regular and Half Sizes
WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes -
Nickels, Jazz and Paloma
Merchandise sold only in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts
(20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

Resume Typesetting
*High quality
*Letter perfect
*Customized layouts
*Superior to all other methods
Contact SGA Communications Office
304 Student Union
Ed Cunningham or Jim Emmett
5-1977
SGA Communications

Lord, lead me to J.B.'s!

JBs HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES
253-7018

Is this YOU?
If it is come in tonight (Wed. 11/13) & receive a complimentary REG. BEEF REG. FRIES and SMALL COKE!!
P.S. Look for your picture and win.
11 am - 2 am 7 days
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group membership. Call 253-2528 for details

All new Alive With Dance RSO will hold it's first meeting, Wed. Nov. 13th at 6:30 pm in SBA 102 All majors welcome!!

Panel Discussion topical issues on South Afrca Thursday, Nov. 14 7 pm Red Converse Rm Amherst College

Pi Sigma Alpha Political Science Honor Society meeting Nov. 14 at 4 pm in Mach W21

AUTO FOR SALE

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1970 Dodge Coronet convertible. Many new parts Reliable $700.00 or BO 584-4939

VW 1970 runs good, some rust. $500 1-532-2931

BUY OIL CHEAP!

Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. For information contact Off Campus Housing, 423 Student Union 545-0865

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party DJ. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 546-9691

Rock-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester 10's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Furnished bedroom in second story of a house. Close to town and campus. 163 Triangle St #2 call Gail anytime before 11:00 pm 549-7692

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline, 365/month, avail 1/1/86 253-3634

1 bdrm Cliffside apt starts Jan 1 Kathy 665-8782 (eves) 340/month

Large single room in house, Amherst Center. Available Jan 1st. 200/mo quiet non-smokers call 549-6425

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on bus line, avail immediately 253-9043

FOR SALE

Lab Series 100w guitar amplifier exc $275 or BO call Rob 549-4141

Safe Suntans 25-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Join alone: $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial season and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions. Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 15

Chevy Malibu 1973 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

Tabadahadoo UMass "Bed-Rock" Cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

Government Homes from $1 (u repair). Also delinquent tax property. Call 1-805-687-6000 ext. GH-9616 for information

IBM Graphics Printer exc condition $200 call Arnie 253-5143

4 foot Boa Constrictor and beautiful 27 gallon hexterrarium 160 Tom 253-7797

OHM C2 3 way speakers 175 pair Tom 253-7797

FOUND

Brown leather jacket in Newman Center Lounge, call to identify. 549-2677

One pair of Ray-Ban Sunglasses with prescription lens. Call Joe 546-5353

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stansel 584-3596

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Come to find out how you can become a New Students Program Counselor 11/13, 9 pm Leach Lounge

Full time Steward position, 5 evenings weekly, light inventory, pricing, stocking and bar back duties, excellent entry level food position apply in person Northampton Hilton Inn Rt 5

The hardest job you'll ever love. Find out more 11/14 6:30 pm Baker Classroom or 8 pm Coolidge 12th Floor Lounge

LOST

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mitch 256-1069 or 256-1664

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Lost brown wallet Nov. 1 ID's and credit cards please call 549-5935

Long black coat with puffed shoulders. Left in Herter 110 Mon nite 11/4. If found please call EM at 6-7711 or leave message at 5-2084. Reward!

Pair of photogrey lens glasses in brown vinyl case call Joe 549-9902

Paul Dias I'm so sorry for everything. Friends" Chris

MOVER

Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

MUSIC

Attention Bands Musicians Embassy Recording Studio offers 16 track state of the art recording for less. Great for demo tapes Amherst 24 hours 549-7640

ORIENTATION

Find out how to become a summer counselor, 11/13 at 9 pm in Leach Lounge

PERSONALS

Don't worry Beth and Sarah - we've already called Health Services to make sr appointment to take care of what you caught on the IT couch.

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Beware: Club Ed is having a Birthday!! Cold Becks, Pizza, Cheeto, and Colc Cheese-its for all. Come and wish Ed "A" a Happy B-day! Call Ed at 6-3265 or stop by after 10:00 TONITE and JAM with the Beautiful People!! Love and Hugs, Ed and Ed

To the curly haired guy in 2207 JQA I think you're beautiful Female JQA Resident

Hey Norma Have a great 21st birthday! Hope you get your scrumpy chicken dog! Love your roomies

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Edwid, Happy Birthday to my indecisive little frosted flake of love. Carolyn

Leora Hasten It's your birthday!!! Have agreat day - I hope you're feeling fine! Let's party love, Jana

Happy 20th Lisa Crowe! We love you, Baby! Marv D. Ragel et al

Hot Annette, Pat won't share with me either

Joel . .here's your personal! Have a good one and chill out! Luv_Jo & Kel

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable style located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share new house in Shutesbury. Very clean, modern house which is 10 miles from UMass. Male or female, $125 plus $10 for utilities. Call anytime, available now. 367-9328

One bedroom with private bathroom in 2 bdrm Puffton apt 170/mo heat incl available Dec 1 for next semester call for more info 549-7627 great place!!

One person to share Southwood apt new rug, nicely furnished 130 + $15 call 256-1764

1 bedroom in house, 1 mile from campus. one sixth of utilities, $145 per month, male only, call 256-6228 anytime

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7652

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Expert Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2131 for an escort. ANYTIME

Thinking about Graduate School? If, when, where, how contact the Pre-Graduate Advisor - CASIAC, Machmer Hall E-21. For appointments, call 545-2191 or 545-2192.

SKI SWITZERLAND

Spring Break '86"
Round Trip Air
7 Nights Hotel
Breakfast & Dinner Daily
Beer Parties
$699
call Brian 665-4248
Chris 665-3079
Marie 549-0179
Arranged by Classic Tours

SUMMER COUNSELOR JOBS

Info Session 11/14, 6:30 pm, Baker class room, 8 pm Coolidge 12th floor lounge

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apt Cliffside F-4 starting January or February Bob 665-8219

Apt or house wanted. Beginning Jan 15 minutes or less to UMass 546-6153

TRAVEL

Party with 2000 other college students at the Killington Ski Fest. 5 days 5 nights from $188 Happy Hours daily. LUV Tours call Frank or Grad at 549-6650 or Mark at 549-4173

Have an adventure January 5-12 Ski Vail information Ted Selig 546-4733

TYPING SERVICE

You make it sound good, we make it look good for all your typing needs, word processing, graphs, spreadsheets. Superior quality and competitive rates call (evenings) 549-0050 or 527-7189

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0267

WANTED TO RENT

To take over lease in January of a two bedroom apartment on bus route call nights Laine 546-9678 Randy 546-6363

$25 reward if you can find us a room in Brandywine for 2 girls Spring semester call 549-5042 ask for Karen

SPORTS

Sports information photo

Fullback Al Neri leads the University of Massachusetts football team with 500 yards of rushing.

UMass football notebook

Goals remain for UM at New Hampshire

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

Saturday's game in Durham against the University of New Hampshire will tell a lot about the University of Massachusetts football team.

The Minutemen, 6-4, are coming off a heartbreaking 27-24 loss to Delaware and have no chance at making the division 1-AA national playoffs. The Wildcats, 45-40 losers to Maine this past Saturday, are also out of playoff contention at 6-3.

UMass, with a victory, can accomplish a lot. A 7-4 season would give UMass its most wins since 1980 and an impressive 4-1 record in the Yankee Conference.

Should Rhode Island be upset by Connecticut, a UMass victory would give the Minutemen a share of the Yankee Conference championship. Last season, UM's 14-10 upset of UNH was used to build on for this season. A victory Saturday would be a good ending to what has been a solid 1985 and would set the stage for 1986.

"The players are pretty upset with themselves," said UMass defensive coordinator Jim Reid. "They realize what they have to do, we've still got some goals left to accomplish."

Minuteman Mutterings: The Minutemen are 30-13-3 against UNH over the years, winning seven of the last eight games. The Wildcats have lost two straight, allowing 75 points. Against Maine, quarterback Rich Byrne threw for a school record 366 yards and four touchdowns. He was also intercepted five times. UNH tailback Andre Garron returned from a kidney injury and picked up 71 yards against Maine. He has 807 yards in seven games this season.

Honors: UM nose guard Mike Dwyer was named ECAC 1-AA defensive player-of-the-week with 13 tackles, a fumble recovery and a 28-yard interception return for a touchdown. "It the first time I've scored a touchdown, ever, and I mean ever," said Dwyer, who was a placekicker at Barnstable High down the Cape. Dwyer also played lacrosse for the Red Raiders.

continued on page 15

Women's soccer tournament notebook

Minutewomen will host BC

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

After a week of conditioning and hitting the books, the top-seeded University of Massachusetts women's soccer team is back to soccer and preparing for Sunday's NCAA quarter-final match with Boston College.

The 15-0-0 Minutewomen face the eighth ranked Eagles (13-4-1) for a berth in the Final Four, Sunday at noon at Boyden Field, where UMass is 4-0 in NCAA playoff play, dating back to 1981.

Coach Kalekeni Banda and the squad are also hoping for a good turnout to ensure the home-field advantage.

Massachusetts spent last week working on its conditioning, staying sharp and catching up on schoolwork. "We stressed more on academics last week because this week is more important," senior Sue Bird said.

"We're not going to do much changing now," Banda said. The squad will be working on tactics and strategy as they prepare for only their third game in the past three weeks.

Since knocking off Boston College 2-0 on Oct. 26, UMass has played once beating Springfield, 5-0, while BC has played three times, winning all three.

"At this point of the season, there is really no advantage," Banda said. "The only advantage looking for you is a win."

Boston College had to go into double overtime to knock off ninth ranked Brown (9-4-3) last Friday in Providence, 3-2, to earn the trip to Amherst.

The Eagles' top scorer foward Betsy Ready (11 goals, three assists, 25 points) scored all three BC goals. UMass routed the Bruins by a 6-0 score earlier this season.

Banda is also looking for student support Sunday afternoon. "I hope to see a lot of people out there," he said. "If we don't have that crowd support, we'll lose that home-field advantage."

He mentioned that the NCAA tends to base its awarding of the home-field on crowd attendance as it looks where it can make the most money.

Last year, UMass trounced Boston College, 5-0 in the regular season before going to double overtime to beat the Eagles, 3-2 in the first round of the NCAA playoffs.

UMass' scoring is much more balanced than it was a year ago going into its fourth consecutive NCAA tournament. Last year, UMass had only two players, Jolie DePauw (12-5-29) and Cathy Spence (6-7-19) who had close to twenty points. DePauw had seven game-winning goals.

This year, five players have 20 or more points. Freshman Beth Roundtree (10-4-24) and sophomore foward Monica Seta (9-6-24) lead the team. Midfielder Carolyn Micheel (5-13-23), foward Cathy Cassady (7-8-22), and Spence (9-3-21), a foward, all score.

Foward Michele Powers (8-1-19) and fullback Debbie Belkin (7-5-19) have also contributed.

Belkin and Roundtree lead the team with three game-winning goals.

In other playoff action around the country, three of the six first-round games went to penalty kicks to decide the victor. Third-ranked George Mason (15-2-1) went to a shootout to knock off 10th ranked William and Mary.

California-Santa Barbara (17-4-1) knocked off previously undefeated UCal-Hayward (17-1) in a shootout and N.C. State also went to a shootout to eliminate Radford.

Fifth ranked Colorado College (15-4) beat Wisconsin 1-0 in a Denver snowstrom and fourth-ranked Cortland State remained undefeated (18-0-4) with a 2-1 win over Connecticut.

Quarterfinal pairings are UMass vs. BC, George Mason vs. Cortland State, North Carolina vs. N.C. State and Colorado vs. UCal-Santa Barbara.

SOCCER KICKS: UMass and Boston College are two of seven teams to participate in all four NCAA tournaments, along with Cortland State, North Carolina, George Mason, Brown and UConn...Spence, who regularly comes off the bench, has a streak of scoring at least a point in the last three UM playoff games dating back to 1984...UMass owns a 7-0-1 series advantage over BC...BC lost four in a row at one point this season, as before going on their present three-game winning streak.

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Kalekeni Banda is, like the sign says, 15-0-0 this season.

UM has outscored its opponents 65-2. That is short of the UM mark of 67 set in 1979 over 14 games...UMass has given up two goals which should break the mark of eight set in 1978 (16 games) and 1982 (19 games)...In NCAA tournament action, UMass is 5-3 over the last three years. national third place finishes in 1983 and 1984 are the high-water marks for the program.

Tournament Outlook

Massachusetts teams in NCAA playoffs this fall

Women's Soccer: The Minutewomen, 15-0-0, are ranked first in the nation and seeded first in the NCAA Division 1 playoffs.

UMass will play Boston College (13-4-1) at home on Boyden Field on Sunday at noon. The Minutewomen defeated the Eagles earlier this season, 2-0. Last year, UMass went to double overtime to beat BC in the first round of the playoffs, 3-2.

With a win, UMass will advance to the Final Four for the third straight year, playing the winner of the George Mason/Cortland State game.

Field Hockey: UMass is 13-4-2 and ranked 10th in the nation. The Minutewomen will play Boston University in Boston on Saturday at 1 p.m. The winner of that game will face New Hampshire at BU at 1 p.m. on Sunday. The Minutewomen lost to the Terriers, 3-0 earlier this season. The winner of the regional title advances to the Final Four against the Mideast Regional winner, either Connecticut, Penn State or Maryland.

Field hockey tournament notebook

UM has tough road to Final Four

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

With its final two regular season victories, the tenth ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team assured itself of a berth in the New England regional NCAA national tournament which will commence Saturday in Boston.

The Minutewomen, 13-4-2, will play the first round tournament host Boston University at 1 p.m. with the winner advancing to the second round to face the third ranked University of New Hampshire on Sunday.

The NCAA National Tournament is broken down into four regions, the West, Mideast, New England, and the South. Each region commences play Saturday with its opening round and concludes Sunday with its second round. The winners of Sunday's game advance to the Final Four which will be held on the campus of three-time defending national champion Old Dominion next Saturday and Sunday.

The four sites have been determined by the top four seeds in the nation, all of whom receive first round byes. The West regional site is at top-ranked Northwestern (18-1-0), the Mideast regional site will be at the second-ranked University of Connecticut (16-2-0), and the South regional site will be at the fourth-ranked University of North Carolina (13-3-0).

University of Massachusetts head coach Pam Hixon said earlier this year that she felt that this year's championship hunt is wide open with any one team having a legitimate shot at the national title.

"If you look at what's happening around the country, no one has established itself as unbeatable. On any given day, anyone can beat anyone," Hixon said.

The West regional, hosted by Northwestern, also includes Iowa (18-3-1), and 2-0 winners over UMass in the season's second week, and Stanford (9-3-1). The Mideast regional, hosted by UConn, 2-1 winners over UMass two weeks ago at NOPE, includes Penn State (16-3-1), and the

continued on page 15

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 49 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Thursday, November 14, 1985

Arena plan awaits vote by Trustees

Stadium turf also considered

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

Plans for a multi-purpose arena at the University of Massachusetts are awaiting approval by the University Board of Trustees, according to the dean of the School of Physical Education.

David C. Bischoff said yesterday that a vote by the trustees may come before the end of this calendar year or early in 1986.

The 8,000-seat facility would include an ice hockey rink and a basketball court to be used by UMass teams. The arena would also be used for concerts, graduation ceremonies and other University functions.

The building would be located across from the Physical Plant, where there are currently barns. As part of the same improvement package, artificial turf would be placed in McGuirk Alumni Staduim along with lights. That facility, now used only for football games and commencement, would then become accessible to the lacrosse, soccer and field hockey teams as well as intramural sports.

Bischoff said that funding for the arena would come from both the Massachusetts state Legislature and student fees, with students not being assessed until the building was completed.

House majority leader George Keverian (D-Everett) and William Mullin (D-Ludlow), the vice-chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, have both voiced support of the plan.

The Legislature had earlier given $3 million to build a hockey rink, but that money is expected to go for renovations at the University Health Center.

"This is something that's is needed by the University," Bischoff said. "We are one of the only major universities in the nation not to have a suitable facility."

The 53-year old Curry Hicks Cage is the largest facility at UMass, holding 4,100 people. The new arena would be the cornerstone of the University's efforts to build a nationally competitive athletic program. UMass, in hockey-rich Massachusetts, is the only major school not to field a hockey team in New England.

Both the University of Connecticut and Boston College have recently approved plans for new arenas.

Bischoff said that plans call for the student fees not to exceed $50 a semester for students attending UMass in the future. The facility, optmistically, could be completed by the early 1990s at a cost Bischoff estimated to be between $19 and $21 million.

Dani Burgess, co-president of the Student Government Association and student representative to the trustees, disputed Bischoff's statements.

"He's (Bischoff) lying," Burgess said. "It's going to cost students $150 a year and he knows that." Burgess also claimed that the arena would not receive support from the Legislature.

"They've given the money for the hockey rink, there's no reason to expect them to be so kind and generous in the future to us," Burgess said.

Bischoff, however, said that the school is making it a priority to keep the fee under the $50 level and stressed that the Legislature does support the plan.

"This is something a lot of people want," he said. "It's needed and no students would be charged except those that will use it. I think the Legislature understands its importance."

Bischoff said that a feasibility study commissioned last year will be completed Dec. 1 and that coaches and others involved are being asked for input.

"This is an important step for the University," the dean noted. "It's been a long time in coming."

Collegian Photo by Michelle Segall

ZEROING IN- Stockbridge student Mark Copponi puts his eyes to a survey transit yesterday by the New Africa House for a class assignment on topographical mapping. At left, his partner Chris Fallon looks on.

Senate alters handling of agenda

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

After more than an hour of debate, the Undergraduate Student Senate last night voted to amend its by-laws concerning senate procedure, a decision that will have a major impact on the assembly beginning next week.

The move, approved by a voice vote, calls for an amendment in the existing senate by-laws regarding the placing of motions on the agenda. The senate has been operating under a system where the presidents' and officers' reports, as well as the committee reports, have preceded items under old business on the agenda. This has meant that in order for old business to have been taken up for debate, the assembly would have to hear from the senate presidents, treasurer and speaker first.

Last night's measure, which will replace for the most part the present committed agenda procedure, will place all old business from prior weeks in front of the other reports. The committed agenda procedure is an existing procedure in the by-laws which has not been effectively carried out this semester.

However, Senate Speaker John Ruddock said last night he would still favor carrying out the committed agenda procedure in future meetings, and added that this procedure, if utilized to its fullest, is the best solution to increasing efficiency in senate debate. Ruddock, who yielded the speaker's chair to argue against the procedure amendment, said the senate can "bring up motions that could be more adequately dealt with in committee."

The original motion's sponsor, Bill Collins, said the committed agenda procedure is "obsolete" and that to rearrange the agenda will bring efficiency and fairness to the senate. Collins' motion was first amended by Michael Cerrato, and again by John Crowley and Jordan Rosner.

The approval's impact will be major because all motions by senators, committee chairs and officers alike will be placed under new business in the order in which they were handed into the speaker's office. Anything under new business becomes old business the following week, thus these motions are given priority the next week, regardless of the sponsor's position in the senate.

Ruddock said the senate should consider its vote on the amendment "since it's of a permanent nature." He asked that the senate allow the committees to recommend to the assembly on motions, which the committed agenda process calls for.

"The committed agenda just doesn't work," said Jordan Rosner, chairman of the budgets committee. The new amendment "brings equity and fairness to everyone in the senate."

Inside:

UMass smoking policy tightened.....3
Basketball photo essay.....7
Murder suspect takes own life.....19

"We can't expect secretaries to sneak smokes in the restrooms."
—Warren Shumacher, chairman of the Health Council, on the need for a more effective smoking policy on campus.

Photo image to be reproduced in atlas

By TERRY EGAN
Collegian Correspondent

A satellite photographic image of New England created by the University of Massachusetts Digital Image Analysis Laboratory (DIAL) will be published in a two-page spread in an upcoming National Geographic Society atlas, according to DIAL Director Duncan Chesley.

Chesley and DIAL partner David Oliver spent three months creating the image using digital information taken from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's LANDSAT satellite 525 miles from the earth.

The whole image is made up of millions of smaller images arranged to create a larger mosaic. Each of the smaller images are originally numerical values which represent color and intensity. Using computers in a paint-by-numbers process, millions of color spots were assembled to create the picture.

National Geographic Society editor William Garrett became interested in DIAL's work when he visited UMass with the Chinese Ambassador to the United States. Garrett toured DIAL facilities in the Graduate Research Center, where he saw a smaller picture that had "just been finished," Oliver said.

continued on page 8

WORLD/NATIONAL

ROYAL GOODBYE — Princess Diana and Prince Charles, heirs to the British throne, wave to the crowd at Palm Beach International Airport in Florida yesterday before boarding on a return flight to England and concluding their visit to the United States. AP Laserpnoto

Experimental medicine 'promising' against AIDS

BOSTON (AP) - An experimental medicine that appears to dissolve the AIDS virus without harming the human body is a "promising new candidate" in the war against the lethal disease, researchers report.

The researchers caution, however, that their results are very preliminary, and the drug has not been tested in AIDS patients. But if it works, the medicine will represent an entirely new approach to fighting germs.

The drug is called AL 721. It disrupts the outer coat, or envelope, of the AIDS virus so it cannot invade healthy cells. In the test tuve, the medicine was able to protect vulnerable white blood cells from infection by the virus.

AL 721 removes cholesterol from the virus' envelope, changing its structure. Without an intact envelope, the virus is powerless.

One of the researchers, Dr. Fulton Crews of the University of Florida, said experts have long known that solvents can kill viruses. But until now, no one has considered assaulting them inside the human body by drawing out the cholesterol that is part of their outer membranes.

"Cholesterol makes membranes rigied and hard," Crews said. "So when you pull the cholesterol out, the membrane does, in essence melt."

However, the drug does not have a disruptive effect on the cholesterol contained in normal human cells, and researchers believe that the drug's apparent safety could be a major advantage.

"This compound is very nontoxic," said Dr. Prem Sarin of the National Cancer Institute. "It doesn't do anything to normal cells at the concentration we used."

The summit opponents

● Reagan can't lose

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Whatever the outcome, President Reagan is likely to return from the superpower summit with a big surge in his popularity at home and a newly polished image as being more of a peacemaker than a hardliner toward the Soviet Union.

But even before he leaves for Geneva, the president is playing down expectations, ruling out any agreement on arms control, saying he's "not a great fan of communiques" and using words like "I'm not pessimistic."

Absent any accord, however, the mere fact that a president meets with the Soviet leader pays good dividends, according to presidential scholars.

"It's a no-lose proposition," said Stephen Hess, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution who has worked for Presidents Nixon, Ford and Eisenhower.

"Even when a summit doesn't produce anything, the president gains" — if from nothing else, "a rally-around-the-flag syndrome," Hess said.

Lyndon B. Johnson, for example, came away virtually empty-handed from the Glassboro, N.J., summit with Alexei Kosygin in 1967, yet his popularity rating shot up 11 points, Hess recalled.

Professor Stephen J. Wayne, a specialist on the presidency at George Washington University, said Reagan should see his already high popularity rating increase by 5 to 10 percent, at least for the short term.

However, he predicted, the surge in polls would recede if no major accomplishment emerges in time from the meeting.

With the superpowers deeply divided over space weapons and missiles defenses, it appears virtually certain there will be no agreement at the summit on arms control.

● Gorbachev stresses arms

MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev's concern for the Soviet economy gives new impetus toward improving U.S. - Soviet relations, but he will not be pushed at the Geneva summit into positions that the Kremlin might later regret.

In the months since the meeting with President Reagan was announced, the Soviet Union has taken the public position that nucler arms should be the main business.

Gorbachev and his spokesmen have been hitting at the isseu relentlessly but have conceded there is little chance of any breakthrough at the two-day summit, which begins Tuesday. At the same time, the Soviets have outlined their counter-atack on human rights and regional issues, indicating they do not plan to give ground.

In the years before the summit, the Soviet Union has faced criticism from the West for its crackdown in Poland, the intervention in Afghanistan, the downing of the South Korean airlinger and human rights concerns. The Kremlin also walked out of the 1983 arms control talks and underwent three leadership changes.

Next week's meeting is a political boost for Gorbachev, and any positive developments will give the 54- year-leader momentum as he forges domestic policies and heads into the all-important National Communist Party Congress in February.

However, in the days leading up to the summit it appeared the prospects of a joint U.S. - Soviet declartion, especially on arms control, were dim.

Soviet commentaries preparing the public for the summit began to reflect the Washington position that the meeting at best constitute a "new start" in superpower relations and that it was unrealisitic to expect meaningful results.

AP Laserphoto

GOODEN PLENTY — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, flanked by his sister, Betty Gooden Jones, left, and fiancee Carlene Pearson, had a lot to celebrate yesterday in New York. First was his upcoming 21st birthday as the cake indicates and then a big present, the Cy Young Award he was selected to receive yesterday by the Baseball Writers Association.

Children face concert ban

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - After trying unsuccesfully to tame the lyrics of heavy metal rock music at concerts, the City Council here is considering prohibiting children under 13 from attending rock shows that depict explicit violence and illicit sex.

Mayor Henry Cisneros says a proposed ordinance, the first of its kind in the nation, reflects "common sense," but opponents call it misguided and argue that "parents ought to decide and not the government."

At issue are performances at the Convention Center Arena, owned by SAN ANTONIO, the nation's 10th largest city.

The ordinance, which comes up for debate today, would bar anyone younger than 13 from concerts at which sadistic or masochistic sex, rape, incest, bestiality and exhibitionism are depicted on stage.

Earlier this year, the council considered way of banning objectional lyrics at rock concerts. When City Attorney Lowell Denton determined any such action would be unconstitutional, council members took aim at concert theatrics.

Parents supportin the restriction found a surprising ally in Cisneros, a liberal Democrat.

"I think reasonable people would agree those activities ought not to be entertainment for children," Cisneros said. "We're following a common sense rule here."

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....David Sumnmersby
Copy Editor.....Nancy Stern
Layout Technician.....Conor Plunkett
Photo Technician.....Michelle Segall
Production Supervisor.....Conor Plunkett
Production: Sonja Sabels, Kelly Sieger, Naomi Goldberg, Leslie Nakajima, Sandy "the new kid," Ken Levenson.

nassau see florida
WILL HOLD YOUR BED
SPRINGBREAK
CALL NOW! 665-4861
COUNCIL TRAVEL SERVICES
79 SO PLEASANT ST AMHERST

From the Bop to the Break to the Byte.
Computers create the latest dance craze.
Read about it in Talking Clones.
Coming on November 20th
Published by Zenith Data Systems

TAPES
$1.35 EACH
TDK D-90
MAXELL LN-90
SONY C-90
SAVE
minimum order of TEN
TDK SA-90 2.25 ea
MAIL CHECK TO: TF WHOLESALE/RETAIL P.O. 666 AMHERST 01002
90 minutes tapes 2 albums

Collegian Photo by Michelle Segall

FALL CHORES- Todd Desforges, foreground, and two other workers in the Physical Plant grounds crew rake leaves by the Whitmore Administration building yesterday.

Faculty Senate views a tougher smoking policy

By LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

A tighter enforcement policy of existing smoking policies for campus buildings will be considered today in the Faculty Senate meeting.

"This policy is a reiteration of existing state laws and personnel procedures," said Warren Schumacher, chairman of the Health Council which proposed the policy. He said the council's aim was to formulate a specific policy which would designate smoking and non-smoking areas in all public areas.

The new policy states that smokers must be provided with a smoking area apart from those who choose not to smoke. Smoking would be prohibited in classrooms, auditoriums, food preparation areas and within private offices at the discretion of the department head.

Schumacher said the policy seeks to protect the rights of smokers as well as non-smokers within the confines of public safety. "Finding appropriate space on campus for smokers to excercise their rights will be the hardest problem," he said.

Schumacher said if implemented, the policy would put demands on the administration to find places for people to smoke. He said the greatest problem would be in semi-private offices where it would be up to the department head to find an adequate smoking area. "We can't expect secretaries to sneak smokes in the restrooms," he said.

"This policy puts pressure on the administration to enforce the old policy that states the rights of both the smoker and the non-smoker," Schumacher said.

The senate will vote on motions to recommend adoption of the policy and to request that the administration issue a progress report on the policy before Feb. 15, 1986.

In other business, the senate will vote on a motion to adopt the Graduate Student Grievance Policy, designed to provide graduate students with an appeals process.

Everywoman's Center is allotted more space

By SHERYL JEAN
Collegian Staff

After a long history of space problems, the Everywoman's Center is moving one-third of its services to a new location in order to increase its size, Special Assistant to the Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs, Sarah Boy, said.

The center in Wilder Hall has been allotted 1,250 square feet of the Nelson White House on East Pleasant Street, which formerly housed the Women's Educational Equity Project.

The director's office and staffs of three programs are moving to the new space, Boy said. The programs include the Third World Women's Advisors Legal Advocates and the Counsel Advocates.

"In essence, we tried to look at each program and move the most external programs to the new house," Ruth Weekes Washington, the center's director said.

"The move to Nelson White House makes room for more private space available for counseling at Wilder Hall," Washington said.

The move to a new location doesn't necessarily mean an expansion of current programs, Boy said.

The center has been at Wilder Hall since 1978, Washington said. By 1980, the Center was to have moved to a larger and more accessible space, she said.

The center has grown tremendously since 1978 in terms of programs and staff, Washington said.

Director of Educational Access and Outreach, Gloria de Guevara, who provides advice and counseling for five University centers including the Everywoman's Center, said that the center has expressed a need for more space ever since moving into Wilder.

"I have only been at EAO (the center) since 1983 and the first thing called to my attention was the center's need for space," de Guevara said.

"Everywoman's Center will continue to advocate for permanent space with the goal for the center to stay together," Washington said.

"Student Affairs (office) acknowledging that we needed more space gives us leverage in term of permanent space," Washington said.

The space was allocated to the center in September, but they must wait for building preparations and other plannings before moving, she said.

Counseling Collective offers support

By NANCY KLINGENER
Collegian Staff

Offering support, not advice, is the purpose of the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Counseling Collective at the University of Massachusetts, according to members of the collective.

The 1985 collective is nine undergraduates, one graduate and one graduate student. They operate out of a small room on the fourth floor of the Student Union Building, with office hours from 3 to 7 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday and 1 to 3 p.m. on Tuesday. Each collective member counsels for approximately two hours per week.

"The kind of counseling we do assumes that anyone who comes in can solve their own problems," said Lesley Power, a member of the collective.

Paula Jabloner, another member of the collective, said, "We're there to listen to what they have to say, not to tell them what to do."

"You really have someone to listen to you, maybe for the first time in your life," Jabloner said. The collective counsels about 200 people each semester, not all of whom are UMass students. The collective has a phone line used by people from outside the University community, such as high school students.

A large amount of the counseling is to people who are first coming out of the closet, who need someone to talk to about their decision. "I think that's an important need because the "out" community isn't that large on campus - it isn't that large anywhere," Power said.

Members of the collective said, however, that counseling is not restriced to gays, bisexuals, and lesbians coming out, but that often people just want to talk about the stresses of University life. Coming out at the University is "just another major pressure on them that they have to resolve," said John Arnold, a member of the collective

Paul Throne, another member of the collective, said that an advantage of the collective is that they "not only provide information on lesbians, gays, and bisexuals to anyone, but that they provide information on anything to lesbians, gays, and bisexuals."

The counseling collective is an autonomous unit, operating separately from the Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance. They recently voted to separate themselves financially from the alliance, from which they had previously received funding. "We want to present ourselves as something different," Power said. . "People at an earlier stage of accepting themselves might find us a gentler alternative."

The collective has been operating for 10 years. It was originally the Gay Men's Counseling Collective.

Puffton cockroach infested

A meeting of Puffton Village residents and members of the University of Massachusetts Legal Services Office will be held tonight to formally establish a tenant's union.

The action is mostly in response to an infestation of cockroaches in Puffton apartments. The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room, 174.

Legal services Attorney Tom Coish said, "Tenants are entitled under state law to apartments that comply with the state Sanitary Code and that code requires that apartments be free of cockroach infestation."

The meeting is open to all Puffton Village residents, and students are eligible for representation from legal services in solving their problems with Puffton Village.

Collegian Photos by Derek Roberts

SOM CAREER DAY ACTIVITIES- In photo at left, President of BayBanks Valley Trust Co., Richard A. Stebbins gives the keynote address at the annual School of Management Career Day yesterday during a luncheon on the 10th floor of the Campus Center. At right, swarms of management students check out booths with representatives from over 40 companies.

University
Travel & Tours, Inc.

Winter & Thanksgiving Break

2 weeks around sunny
Greece $699
3 weeks around Europe
$999

Prices include air flights, hotel accommodations, breakfast, transportation to and from airports and hotels, and much more.

5 days to Montreal
$199
3 days to Boston
$99

Includes: transportation, hotel accommodations, breakfast, sightseeing tour, tips and all taxes.

For Information Call:
UNIVERSITY TRAVEL and TOURS INC.
225 Main St. Northampton
(413) 584-9913

UNWANTED HAIR?
Have it removed the Electronic Way!
Call NEW REFLECTIONS
586-8371
No Needles, No Pain, No Hair

ARE YOU OVER 25?
Would you like to meet other older students? If so
JOIN US
Nov 15 from 4 to 6 pm at 811 Campus Center.
For more information call 545-2148
Sponsored by the 25+ Club

- New to Our Menu -
MEXICAN PIZZA
Crispy Flour Tortilla Chips covered with a Tangy Tomato Sauce, your choice of Toppings and lots of Melted Mozzarella Cheese. . .

...Offering Quality Mexican Foods

TACO VILLA

NORTHAMPTON 21 CENTER ST 584 0671 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine
AMHERST 41 BOLTWOOD WALK 256 8217 Beer & Wine Served
SPRINGFIELD 749 SUMNER AVE 788 0919 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

We ship Holiday Gift Boxes.
Choose from a wide variety of cheeses, coffee and condiments.

THE CHEESE SHOP

79 Main Street, across from Plumbleys

Imported Cheeses Coffee Beans
Bulk Tea Fresh Pasta
Delicious Giant Cookies and other Baked Goods
Gourmet Groceries
Daily until 6; Saturday until 5; Sundays 9-1

TRADER FRED'S
LABELS FOR LESS
"HURRICANE FRED SALE"

100% Cotton Heavy Weight
"CHAMOIS SHIRTS $9.99 ea.!

MENS

	reg.	OUR PRICE
8" Leather Waterproof Insulated Hi's Herman Survivors	reg. $85	$49.99
Mesh Leather ¾ high Adidas Basketball Sneakers	reg. $38	$19.99
100% Cotton Rugby Shirts	reg. $24	OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $8.99
70% Cotton Button Down Oxford Dress Shirts	reg. $20	OUR PRICE $8.99 2 for $15
Pleated Denim Brittania Jeans	reg. $28	OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $8.99
100% Cotton Corduroy Slacks	reg. $18	OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $5.99

LADIES

	reg.
100% Cotton Tomboy Vests	reg. $19.99	OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $4.99
Limited Express 100% cotton Oversized Plaids	reg. $36	OUR PRICE $9.99
Forenza 100% Cotton Khaki Slacks	reg. $36	OUR PRICE $9.99
Forenza Baggy Jeans	reg. $32	OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $9.99
Mass Confusion Huraches	reg. $38	OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $8.99
"Sporto-Style" Nylon Winter Boot	reg. $32	OUR PRICE $12.99

UNBELIEVABLE SAVINGS
NEW SHIPMENTS DAILY

FREE SURF & BATH TOWELS
WITH ANY PURCHASE OVER $25.00
WHILE SUPPLIES LAST

IF YOU DIDN'T BUY IT AT TRADER FREDS, YOU PAID TOO MUCH!

48 North Pleasant St., Amherst
in the new Tucker Taft Building
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-9
Sun. 12-5
253-7155

Collegian Photo by Michelle Segall

An employee of Superior Caulking and Waterproofing Inc. runs a caulking machine to patch up leaks on an outside wall of the tunnel which connects the Campus Center with the garage.

Tunnel repairs underway

Every year University of Massachusetts students pay a Building Authority Fee that enables the University to finance repairs for its buildings, such as dormitories and dining commons.

Currrently one project being financed by the annual fee of $261 is taking place above the tunnel connecting the campus center concourse to the parking garage.

Physical Plant Project engineer John Czach said Superior Caulking and Waterproofing Inc. of Belchertown is repairing and waterproofing the wall and ceiling junction of the tunnel.

"On a rainy day you could see the water pouring in," Czach said.

In addition to caulking, the company will install a new waterproof membrane. The cost of the project is slightly more than $89,000, Czach said.

"This is part of a comprehensive waterproofing project going on around the Campus Center. It is a portion of a much larger job," Czach said.

Jim Shaw, foreman of the project, said his crew has been working more than two weeks and expects to finish within three. Czach said the company has done work for the University before in the Orchard Hill Residential Area.

-JEFFRY BARTASH

Studded glove confiscated

A leather glove covered with sharp studs was confiscated from a 20-year-old student Tuesday evening on the first floor of the Campus Center, University of Massachusetts police said.

The studded glove is considered martial arts equipment and carrying it is a misdemeanor under the firearms stature, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

STUDENT TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES

Copies of the Fall Student Telephone Directory will be available The week of Nov. 11th

On-Campus students will receive a directory through their Cluster Office.

Off-Campus students can pick up directories on the Campus Center Concourse.

Because only a limited number of directories are available, please pick up only one per room house

(Faculty and staff distribution will follow in approximately one week.)

EASTMAN KODAK
PRESENTS A COPIER EXPOSITION
at UMASS

Campus Center. Rm 163
Nov. 18th 1:00 PM - 8:00 PM
Nov. 19th 9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

SALE!
- FRI./SAT./SUN.
NOV. 15, 16, 17
OPEN FRI. 'TIL 9:00

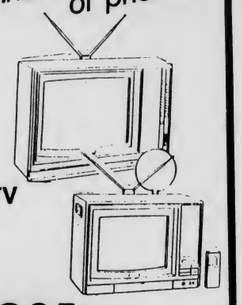
HAND CRAFTED WOOL SWEATERS

Imported from Peru
Reg. $38.95
Now $24.95

. . . a colorful selection of unique designs and patterns

A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst / Daily 10-6, Sun. 12-5
FACES

adirondack music



Bally Video Arcade game

Buy this game and we'll give you Bally's basic video cart plus a cart of your choice. All for the amazing price of a $400 value

$29.95

SONY at unheard of prices

KV1991 19" Color TV cable ready plus a whole lot more

KV1391 R 13" Color TV wireless remote random access, cable ready plus much more

your choice $299.95

TDK HST 120 High Grade Videotape $5.99

Bib Video Cleaners
the perfect solution
$9.95

Sony VHS Cassette Holder
$20.00 value..... $9.95
Audio Cassette Case..... $9.95

NIKKO/JAMO SYSTEM

NIKKO NR 320 28 w/ch receiver with 3 year warranty

NIKKO ND 550 Dolby cassette deck, soft touch operations

NIKKO NP 550 turntable semi-automatic

JAMO P 180 3 way loudspeakers

a $950 value ONLY $449.95

Sony Profeel KX 1901
19" Color Monitor
RGB Inputs
High Resolution
plus much more ONLY $350.00

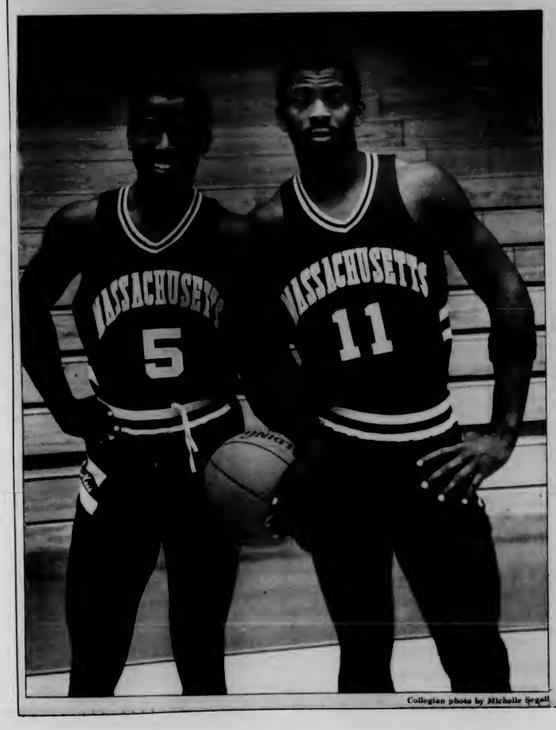
NEW HOURS
Mon.-Sat. 10-6
Thursday 10-7

15 EAST PLEASANT ST. AMHERST
All Sales Cash Only • MC/VISA/Check add 3%
All Quantities limited • Subject to prior sale
Not responsible for typographical errors

Announcing New Lines now in stock
Dual Advent
Mission Genesis

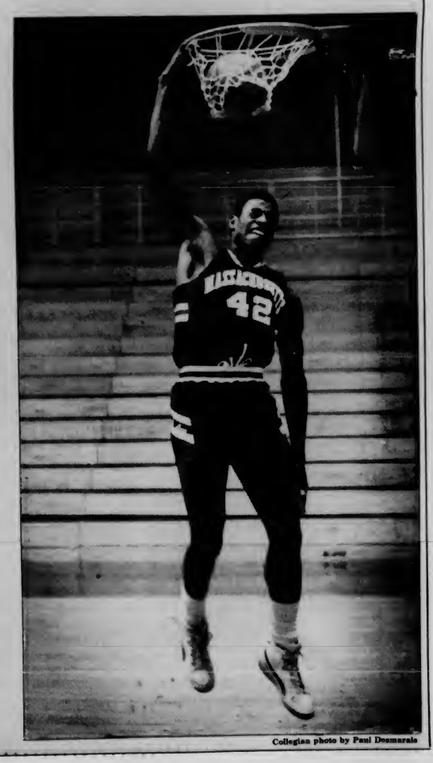
Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall



Basketball — UMass style

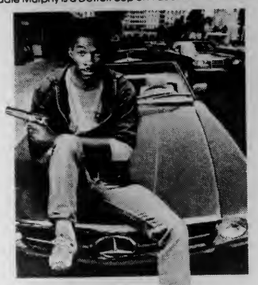
The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, preparing for it's home opener in nine days against Merrimack, took some time out of practice at the newly-renovated Curry Hicks Cage yesterday.



To the left, transfer John Milum throws down a dunk while freshman forward Duane Chase and assistant coach Dennis Jackson share a laugh (above).

Freshman center Sean Mosby (bottom right) tosses down a jam while one of the best backcourts in the Atlantic 10, junior captain Carl Smith (left) and sophomore Lorenzo Sutton (right) pose for a pre-season picture (bottom left).

The Minutemen will face Merrimack on Nov. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cage, be there early because the 4,100 seats are expected to be filled quickly.



Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

He's been chased, thrown through a window, and arrested.
Eddie Murphy is a Detroit cop on vacation in Beverly Hills.

Tonight
BEVERLY HILLS Cop

PARAMOUNT PICTURES PRESENTS A DON SIMPSON/JERRY BRUCKHEIMER PRODUCTION IN ASSOCIATION WITH EDDIE MURPHY PRODUCTIONS
A MARTIN BREST FILM EDDIE MURPHY BEVERLY HILLS COP SCREENPLAY BY DANIEL PETRIE JR. STORY BY DANIEL SACK AND DANIEL PETRIE JR.
PRODUCED BY DON SIMPSON AND JERRY BRUCKHEIMER DIRECTED BY MARTIN BREST
A PARAMOUNT PICTURE
R

Thursday, Nov. 14th at 5, 7, 9, 11
Campus Center Auditorium
$1.50 at 5 $2.00 at 7, 9, 11
sponsored by N.E.A.G.

Collegian Photo by Michelle Segall

ROOF CONSTRUCTION- Workers lay down sheeting and perform other duties towards the formation of a new gymnasium at Amherst College being built to replace a similar building on that campus that was destroyed by fire last spring.

Student speaks on education

The Central American Solidarity Association and the UMass campaign for the University of El Salvador will be sponsoring a lecture by Salvadoran student Mario Davila at 7:30 tonight in the Shirley Graham DuBois Library of the New Africa House.

Davila was a student at the University of El Salvador during the time of its violent takeover by the Salvadoran National Guard in 1980.

Davila will speak of his experiences attending an underground educational association, campaign coordinator Jamie Gamble said.

Gamble said that students had to hold classes in the homes of professors and out of storefronts during 1980-84 when the school was under military control.

Gamble said that attendance of the event will express solidarity for the campaign's cause.

'I'd like people to support their appreciation for education and the freedom we have here (in the United States) for higher education,' Gamble said.

The National Guard stormed the University of El Salvador in 1980 and destroyed over $60 million of the university's resources. The university housed the most established medical school in central America, which was also destroyed.

-RHONDA SWANN

★ DIAL

continued from page 1

"Three weeks later Garrett called and requested the New England image," Oliver said. "I told him for money, we can do anything."

The image will be reproduced in the National Geographic Society's "Atlas of North America: Space Age Portrait of a Continent."

Established in 1980, DIAL is designed to provide image processing capabilities to UMass students and faculty as well as private researchers. The DIAL staff, Chesley and Oliver, provide consultation to users of the facilities and develop the system to process new applications.

GET YOUR CAREER OFF THE GROUND.

Launch hour. Throttles are at full power as a supersonic roar sweeps across the flight deck. And you're the pilot.

The catapult fires and G forces slam you back into your seat. Seconds later, you're punching a hole in the clouds and looking good.

Nothing beats the excitement of Navy flying. And no other job can match the kind of management responsibility you get so quickly in the Navy.

The rewards are there, too. Around-the-world travel opportunities with a great starting salary of $19,200. As much as $33,600 after four years with promotions and pay increases.

Take off for tomorrow in the Navy. With top-level training to help you build technical and managerial skills you'll use for a lifetime. Don't just settle into a job; launch a career. See your Navy Recruiter or CALL 800-327-NAVY.

NAVY OFFICERS GET RESPONSIBILITY FAST.

SURE RENT-A-CAR
Good reliable rentals at a better than fair price.
CARS, TRUCKS, VANS
Low Daily & Wknd. Rates
50 Russell St., (Rte. 9)
Hadley, Ma.
tel 584-2319
-Just over Coolidge Bridge-

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Stratton

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

Collegian Photo by Paul Desmarais

OVER THE COUNTER JOB- Kelly Molaughlin, a mathamatics major, weeds out the trash from food trays passing along the conveyor belt in Berkshire Dining Commons Tuesday.

ROYAL CRANE ORIENTAL FOOD MARKET
360 College St., Amherst
Rte 9 East 253-5658

with a large variety of AUTHENTIC ORIENTAL

• Fresh Produce • Sauces & Spices
• Noodles • Frozen & Canned Goods
• Cooking Implements & Supplies
• Homemade take-out food
• New items arriving every week
• Gourmet foods at everyday prices
• Asian cookbooks at Publisher's prices
• Large Indian Inventory
Decorative Oriental Tableware and accessories for Christmas giving
• Open 10-8; Sat. open 9-8

Don't be left out of the Sun!
You can have your tan, too.

• Private rooms
• soft music
• call for a brochure and information
• guaranteed tan
1st visit free with this ad!
Utopia Spas.
175 University Drive Amherst
253-7727
SPAS
Mon. 4 P.M. 1 A.M.
Tu-Sun. 11 A.M. 1 A.M.
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE
Collegian
Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegian Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

NOW OPEN
WORCESTER
MUNCHY

Binders
Notebooks
Paper
Backpacks
Clothing
Gifts
Cosmetics
Health and Beauty Aids
Candy
Tobacco
Cards
Calendars
Clocks
Batteries
Electrical Supplies
Magazines
Memo Board
Ice Cream

Grocery
Cold Soda
Juice
Pop Tarts
Glassware
Cups
Decals
Pennants
Chips
Cookies
Popcorn
Umbrellas
Newspapers
Tote Bags
Film
School Supplies
Typewriter Ribbons
Pencils
Pens

There's no need to hurry!
Our convenient hours allow you to shop early or late.

Munchy Open
Mon-Sun
8 am - 9 pm

UNIVERSITY STORE

UMASS ALPINE SKI COURSE
at
MT. TOM
4 Lesson, 4 Week
1 Credit Course
Classes begin first week in February.
Offered Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights
$50
(includes transportation)
Sign up at GPE Office
Rm 227 Boyden

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Time to take action now

Roth/Burgess

Once again it is time to take action. We have written enough proposals, sat in too many meetings and talked in too many circles. There are five varsity sports teams on this campus which are threatened with demotion to club status in less than one month; now more than ever, we need your help and energy to save them.

A few weeks ago, we detailed for you the situation which will decide the fate of the men's and women's tennis teams, the men's and women's ski teams and the men's golf team. Those same facts still stand' we have been given an ultimatum. Either the University provides a few more athletic scholarships and upgrades sports like football . . . or else. No one is quite sure what the or else means, but there is no doubt that these five teams are included within its wrath. Funding to these teams will be completely cut off. As one of the most diverse state universities in the nation, we are faced with the loss of a substantial portion of our sports program.

These teams are asking you to help provide them the opportunity to remain at varsity status. Without such standing, they will be extremely disadvantaged when trying to retain transportation to and from events, medical training and care, and quality competition, just to name a few. Also, as many alumni have stated in their letters of support, sports like tennis and skiing are "lifetime" activities. The golf links, tennis courts and ski slopes will always be here. Why not maintain the teams for the sake and reputation of the University, as well as for the opportunit given to individuals and groups, toward their own achievement of excellence?

Throughout the next two weeks, the members of these athletic teams, the Student Government Association and various other members of the University community, will be directing a letter drive of support for these teams. Last spring, a huge and very successful effort was launched to acquire support from parents, alumni, and faculty. Now it is time to ask you to support your peers. Stop by the information tables and sent out a letter to your state representative or senator, or to a member of the University Board of Trustees. If you have a spare hour to help us spread the word—stop by the president's office and sign up to help. We must show a massive amount of support and interest to the decision makers. We need to make them realize that this decision will effect 18,300 undergraduate students, not just a few hundred. Isn't it time that our concerns command attention and are addressed?

For the cost of one major athletic scholarship, approximately $7500, the University can financy the women's tennis or ski team (among other teams) for the entire season. For the sake of fairness and in the name of diversity, it is time for action on the part of students. Take the opportunity to set the priorities which the University officials should be watching. After all, whose university is it?

Stacy Roth and Dani Burgess are the SGA co-presidents.

Relationship is two-way

Deborah Kutenplon

My Spanish teacher used to try to make class interesting and even entertaining for us. The energy he expended was well beyond the call of duty. Frequently, he even risked jokes!

But nobody ever laughed. Most people responded to the entire course with minimal attention and still less appreciation for the professor's dedication. I think they simply believed it did not matter how they acted, that it affected neither the class nor the teacher.

When I was in high school, I believed that my teachers had powerful effects on me—through their opinions, their grading, the way they spent my time in their classes—but that I had no effect on them. I know differently now. The relationship is two-way. An excited and challenging class rewards teachers so that they will have more energy to put into teaching. A single student who appreciates instructors' work may remind them of why they chose the profession.

Teachers are people, and they respond to other people. They are as affected by their students as students are by their teachers. Sometimes we forget that, as students. It's easy to start feeling powerless when we spend our days going to rooms to be lectured to on topics we may or may not find relevant, in ways we may or may not want to learn.

This is not a lecture to get you to be nice to your professors. It is a plea to realize the power you hold, and claim that power for good. Your student role gives you a temporary practice ground for power you can use throughout your life.

Power is not a dirty word. It is not synonymous with domination, or power over somebody else, although power can be mis-used that way. Rather, in and of itself, power is the ability to act, to create, to add your energy to the pool. Power is the realization that when you walk into a room, the room is changed. Whether you choose to use that influence positively is important, for nobody else can offer exactly what you can. What gifts you do not bring to the situation will be lost to it.

I know a student who confronted a teacher for not including lesbian and gay families in his course on alternative families. He asked her to TA the course to provide that perspective.

Another student told his professor how much he appreciated her infectious excitement about her subject matter. It made her day.

And, do know those how hard-nosed science teachers don't need anything from anybody, especially not from students? One chemistry TA, a friend of mine, had students nominate him for an outstanding teacher's award. I've never seen him more moved. He did not care whether or not he won, but simply that his students had responded to his caring and his hard work.

The expression of our power as students is limited, granted. We can make somebody's day; we probably cannot change his life. But we can move on from there—the motion is the same even when the aim is farther.

The same belief in the importance of our actions that improves a class can also improve a world. The 60s sit-ins which catalyzed the black Civil Rights movement were organized by students. The Vietnam war protests, central in that struggle, spread across college campuses much like divestment actions are doing today.

Being students gives us a great opportunity to practice using our power. Start small. Try smiling, confronting, saying thanks after a particularly good lecture. We each have a lot of power in our lives. We need only claim it.

Deborah Kutenplon is a Collegian columnist.

The Collegian welcomes letters, column, and cartoon submissions. Submissions should be mailed to the Editorial Editor at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, or they can be dropped off at the Collegian classified ad counter in the basement of the Campus Center. Due to the volume of mail recieved, individual replies cannot be made.

Everything predestined

Herb Ramy

I am a man without a future. You might ask how I know this. Am I omniscient? Well, yes, but that is beside the point. You see, I am informed of my destiny daily by countless engineering and business majors, whom we all know comprise the bulk of God's chosen people, and it is probably safe to assume that God's chosen would not lie.

If this sounds to you like the rantings of a bitter and impoverished English major, then you're absolutely right, but you would rant, too, it you heard this same question day after day.

"So you're an English major. What are you going to do with that, teach?"

Well, for everyone's information, there are a multitude of lucrative occupations open to my brethen and I. Certainly we could become lawyers or technical writers for some large firm, but did you know that 80 percent of all McDonalds' employees, international terrorists, toll booth attendants, stenographers, K-Mart shoppers, bail bondsmen, ice cream truck drivers, car salesmen, game show hosts, jay walkers, and physical plant workers were at one time English majors. Its also probably a good bet that the guy with the big head sitting in front of you at the movies is one of us too.

Of course, these jobs can't compare to the wonderful positions held by God's chosen. It must be great to be able to go to work every day at 9 a.m. knowing that you'll be doing the same thing you did yesterday, no hassles, no worries. At 5 p.m., you can go home knowing that your spouse, dog, and 2.3 children will be waiting for you at your home which is still carrying an $80,000 mortgage.

For two glorious weeks each year, you'll pack the family into your new Chevy Voyager and head up to that little cabin you rented last year to just get away from it all. You'll probably choose the same place because the television reception was so good the year before.

Years later, you'll retire, a little disappointed at not having made vice-president of the firm. Thats OK though, because you still get the watch and that great pension. What a life!

So you see, by the above definition, I am a man without a future. I'm not sitting around waiting for my already planned out future to happen. I'm not sure where I'll be tomorrow, let alone five years from now.

Thank God.

Herb Ramy is a Collegian columnist.

Letters
Advertisement misleading

This letter is in response to the current advertisement of the book Education's Smoking Gun which appeared in the Collegian. The advertisement uses an analogy between the illiteracy in American with the Third World assumed illiteracy. The heading states "dunce! Twenty-five million adult Americans are totally illiterate. Is America creating a permanent underclass . . . an academic third world?"

This statement perpetuates the ignorance of Americans about any foreign country, particularly those of the Third World. It implies that to be a Third World citizen, is to be illiterate and only those students of these countries who excell are exceptions, the credit for their intelligence placed with western culturization. In Third World countries such as Cuba and Guyana, education is stressed, therefore literacy rates are among the highest in the world. High illiteracy rates in Third World countries are usually caused by political or financial restraint. In a country such as the United States, where education is readily available at all levels, the illiteracy percentage is appalling. It is unfair to label this illiteracy "Third World academics."

Ths ad has been in the Collegian, a newspaper which represents the entire student body, much of which is made up of minority groups (such as women, Third World students, and handicapped students). We feel that if a student finds an ad degrading or discriminating in any way, he or she should bring the issue to the public's attention. One person can not ban an article, such as a book, because of his or her personal taste, but collaboration within the student body dealing with such issues as these can reduce existing prejudices and discriminations found in such public notices and advertisements as the above discussed.

Sara Moginot
Eon John
Amherst

Umbrellas and the blues

Ilana Levenson

I used to think that carrying an umbrella was an intelligent thing to do on days when it was obvious that, within a matter of minutes, the sad clouds would let it all out.

That way, I thought to myself, when they just couldn't hold back anymore, I would be ready. I remember taking my time strolling from one class to the next confidently, knowing that I had my new umbrella with me.

Others would whiz past me at world record pace. By looking at the horrified looks on their faces, one would think that the first drop would be deadly poisonous. Sure enough, the sound of the rain drops began to fill the air. I smartly pulled out my portable "tote" umbrella. I tried to push the automatic button that is supposed to make it open fully "within seconds."

Much to my disappointment, the thing didn't budge. After slapping it around a little, I persuaded it to open. But by this time, I was quite wet, not to mention annoyed. I still had a pretty long walk.

What had started out as light rain had quickly become a determined shower. It was raining at an angle, so my tote wasn't helping a bit. I seemed to be getting just as wet as all the speed racers without umbrellas.

Suddenly, the sly wind took my seemingly innocent umbrella and forced it inside out, just like in Mary Poppins. I tried to rescue my tote as quickly as possible, dedicated owner that I was, but it was too late. One of its limbs had been permanently damaged. As I walked around with the water streaming off of the webbed umbrella, I felt like a dish who couldn't get out of the rinse cycle.

In the distance, my destination came into sight. My shoes squeaked alternately, sounding like a thousand mice as I walked into my class. All eyes were on me. I opened my drippy backpack to retrieve my notebook only to find that it, too, had been cursed by this umbrella and was sopping wet. I glared at my umbrella after I put it down.

Somehow, I survived class, feeling like a piece of old celery. By the end of class, I was only semi-uncomfortably damp. I quickly picked up my unfriendly tote. It had been waiting for me and sprayed me just enough to make me fully uncomfortable once again.

I re-entered the rain battle with umbrella in hand. This time I held it at an angle to shield me against the shots fired at me. Since this blocked my view, I ended up being knocked down by someone else who was as foolish as I and also carried an umbrella. I fell into one of the large pools of water that forms during a rainstorm as a result of the uneven sidewalks around campus. Drenched and embarrassed, I sat there for a moment before rising. The other fool tossed a lame "sorry" in my general direction and continued sloshing along on his merry way. It was at that moment that I decided to discard my unfaithful umbrella.

After launching it like a missile into the air, I looked at it, dead, on the ground. Feeling like I had just removed an albatross from around my necfk, I held my palms to the rain to completely wash my hands of it. Now, rid of the tote, I strode confidently, with my head held high and my pants all wet.

Ilana Levenson is a member of the Collegian staff.

Letters
Senate leaders are out of touch

Why is it that many of the major concerns that bothered the students in September are still unresolved as we approach the end of the semester? I must agree with Alex Guest's and Paul Wingle's column of Nov. 6, "Senate beset by quarrels" when they state that it is "—the responsibility of the senators to recognize your concerns . . ." However, Guest and Wingle neglect to mention that the problem of inaction is largely due to the ineffectiveness of SGA co-presidents, Stacey Roth and Dani Burgess. They have achieved little, if anything, during their term in office and this is primarily because they fail to recognize the true concerns of the students.

Roth and Burgess' major accomplishment to date, has been the passage of a resolution calling for an alcohol-free week. First, it is not their place or position to tell students that abstaining from alcohol, or any substance for that matter, is necessarily good. Secondly, I am very disappointed at the counter-productivity of this motion. After so many students have been fighting the alcohol policy from its inception, Roth and Burgess, for some unintelligible reason, decide to support the other side. They should fight proposals like this, not make them.

The second resolution by our "progressive" co-presidents calls for the ROTC program to alter its policy concerning lesbians and gay men or remove its program from campus. Wouldn't this do more harm than good? The ROTC provides scholarships to many students who might not otherwise be able to attend this University. Forcing the ROTC off campus would force many innocent students off campus as well (unless the senate would be willing to continue funding by increasing the SATF fee). I'm sure there must be a more diplomatic way to deal with this issue. Moreover, I'm sure that there are issues of greater importance that they should deal with instead.

Most recently, Roth and Burgess proposed a resolution to endorse the United Nations, (they originally wanted a United Nations flag at all senate meetings). The co-presidents, Stacey Roth and Dani Burgess. They have achieved little, if anything, during their term in office and this is primarily because they fail to recognize the true concerns of the students.

Roth and Burgess' major accomplishment to date, has been the passage of a resolution calling for an alcohol-free week. First, it is not their place or position to tell students that abstaining from alcohol, or any substance for that matter, is necessarily good. Secondly, I am very disappointed at the counter-productivity of this motion. After so many students have been fighting the alcohol policy from its inception, Roth and Burgess, for some unintelligible reason, decide to support the other side. They should fight proposals like this, not make them.

The second resolution by our "progressive" co-presidents calls for the ROTC program to alter its policy concerning lesbians and gay men or remove its program from campus. Wouldn't this do more harm than good? The ROTC provides scholarships to many students who might not otherwise be able to attend this University. Forcing the ROTC off campus would force many innocent students off campus

Joe Demeo, senator
Southwest

It's easy to label, not think

Corinna Moebius

Myth: all minorities commit welfare fraud. Myth: Asians are innately good at math and science. Myth: all Puerto Ricans steal. Myth: all blacks are good at sports. Myth: all whites seek to oppress. Myth: Native Americans are wild and savage. Myth: Japanese are untrustworthy. Myth: black men are more sexually endowed than white men. Myth: racism doesn't exist anymore.

Oppression is alive and well in the present world. It thrives in the undercurrent of media and messages, which are subtle yet effective. It lives on campus, in each dormitory, on each floor. It affects you. Racism is judgement on the basis of race. It is nothing new. Throughout history, during wars and slavery and immigration, racism has played its part. Early in our own life history we are corrupted with "classifying vision," grouping individuals according to their skin color. Our stereotyping stems from our fear of what is different, what is not understood. We look at a stranger and immediately make judgements on account of how that person looks. Individuals are stamped with labels which reduce them to objects.

Catch yourself, catch your society in the act of making these assumptions. Stop, mid-thought, and ask yourself, "why?" Did you actually believe in the implications of that racist joke? Have you been supporting an organization which discriminates? As students who will soon hold a responsibility which encompasses a world far greater than this University, we cannot afford to be apathetic and ignorant about this issue. Yes, it is a "touchy subject"–so carefully is it avoided. Sometimes it is too frightening to acknowledge the existence of an oppressive force. Apartheid. Ghettos. Reservations. Concentration camps. Don't try to escape the issue. It surrounds all of us.

"People think that Asians are innately good at math and engineering. Many of us study in those areas because we have trouble with English," said one student. "Yeah, I'm here on a football scholarship," said a black UMass student, "but I'm majoring in business." One Puerto Rican friend of mine confessed once that when he first came to UMass he was the butt of jokes and teasing because of his inability to speak English, and on account of others' preconception of Hispanics. "They still do it sometimes, and they say they don't mean it. But it hurts."

It does hurt. It can be pretty frustrating to realize you are being judged by the color of your skin. All of us are vulnerable to oppression. All of us, too, have the power to make these judgements. Don't wait until it gets obvious. Start fighting racism now. Anybody and everybody can make a difference. SCERA is one of a number of groups on campus which is trying to eliminate racial discrimination on campus through research and advocacy. But that is not enough without the support and awareness of students, teachers and administrators here. Racism permeates our society and our campus, but this University should never encourage the continuation of such an ignorant and destructive practice. It should instead be educating us to accept and understand one another.

This column is the first in a series of three articles about oppression, and was written by Corinna Moebius, a media campaign worker for SCERA.

Contempt for workers is endemic

A few weeks ago the Collegian published a column by a UMass student that contained a gratuitous insult to janitors, and by implication, to all manual workers whose jobs are absolutely necessary, but low in prestige. Yesterday the Collegian printed an Oliphant cartoon attacking auto workers that appealed to the same "worker as dumb ox" stereotype that your columnist, however "liberal" she might otherwise be, also chose to perpetuate. Contempt for working people is endemic in this society, particularly among middle class college students who have never worked, so it is no surprise to find this attitude frequently expressed in the Collegian.

The irony is that, as much as some students may despise the men and women who labor in the factories and fields, the workers produce the surplus wealth that makes higher education possible. Our opportunity to spend years developing our intellectual capacities flows directly from the sweat of the working class. Beyond paying the taxes that make institutions like UMass possible, working people make the paper and print the books, put up the buildings and maintain them, and produce the food, clothing and all the other things students consume. Without the brain and muscle of working people, the wheels of this University would cease to turn. Yet instead of showing workers the respect, appreciation, and solidarity they truly deserve, many students smugly look down on them.

First, honor picket lines. Locally, some workers at the Lord Jeffrey Inn have been fired, and they ask you not to eat there. If the Lord Jeff management begins hiring students as part time scabs, do not apply, and urge your friends not to apply.

Second, honor consumer boycotts. Right now, there is a boycott of Coors beer, called to protest that company's neo-facist union-busting tactics. Don't drink Coors scab beer.

Third, treat campus workers with respect. For example, if a cashier at the Hatch asks to see your student ID, don't throw a tantrum. How would you like being yelled at by spoiled brats ten times a day?

Fourth, and finally, use your time at UMass to educate yourself about the history of labor and the struggle of working people for freedom and justice. You can take courses, or just take books out of the library, but the knowledge you gain will benefit you for the rest of your life. Don't forget, after you graduate and hit the streets looking for a job, you too will be a worker.

Frank Callahan
Northampton

All letters submitted for publication must be signed and include the author's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Letters must be typewritten and double spaced at 67 characters per line. Column submissions should be between 40 and 60 lines. All submissions are subject to editing for clarity and length. —Editor.

The Ski Haus & The Sound Company

SKI • STEREO • VIDEO WAREHOUSE SALE

Thursday, Friday, Saturday & Sunday Only at the Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley

SALE HOURS
Thursday, Friday & Saturday
10 AM -10 PM
Sunday
Noon - 5 PM

VISA · MasterCharge

THOUSANDS OF ITEMS ON SALE...

SUPER DEAL BINDINGS

	REG	SALE
SALOMON 137	$65	$39.90
SALOMON 337	$95	$49.90
SALOMON 637	$105	$69.90
TYROLIA 170	$85	$39.95

SUPER DEAL SKIS

	REG	SALE
BLIZZARD UNO	$190	$99.95
DYNASTAR VISA	$195	$110.00
ROSSIGNOL E350	$190	$124.95
K2 312	$240	$136.95

SUPER DEAL BOOTS

	REG	SALE
TECHNICA TORANADO	$115	$79.95
KOFLACH SNOWBIRD	$175	$79.95
NORDICA STRATO	$140	$83.95
SOLOMON SX50	$175	$119.95
LANGE Z FLO	$225	$157.50

SUPER DEAL SKIWEAR

	REG	SALE
EMILIO PARKAS	$110	$66.00
SUB ZERO PARKAS	$140	$84.00
GRANDOE GLOVES	$35	$19.95
MNS. & LDS. SKI BIBS	$80	$39.95

Sports B
MEN's - WOMEN's - JUNIOR
PARKAS
20% OFF

TYROLIA
SKI WEAR
20% OFF

SALOMON

	REG	NOW
137 BINDINGS	$65.90	$39.90
337 BINDINGS	$95.90	$49.90
637 BINDINGS	$105.90	$69.90
SX 50 BOOTS	$175.00	$119.95
SX 80 BOOTS	$225.00	$149.95
GLOVES	$42.00	$29.95

LANGE

	REG	NOW
Z FLO	$200.00	$157.95
Z S	$275.00	$178.95
LT	$225.00	$175.95
LE	$225.00	$175.95

PRE SKIS
1000 SERIES
REG. $250 NOW $169.95
1200 S
REG. $260 NOW $189.95

ROSSIGNOL SKIS

	REG	NOW
E350	$190.00	$135.90
E750	$255.00	$179.95
E850	$270.00	$190.87
FP COMP	$275.00	$199.95

NORDICA BOOTS

	REG	NOW
STRATA	$140.00	$83.95
NL 350	$175.95	$84.95
NM 520	$125.95	$84.95
TRIDENT	$250.00	$191.95

Koflach BOOTS

	REG	NOW
SNOWBIRD	$175.00	$79.95
COMFORT	$175.00	$129.95
TURBO	$225.00	$139.95
COMP 211	$235.00	$179.95

SKI PANTS

	REG	NOW
EMILIO BIBS	$80	$39.95
ENTRANT BIBS	$115	$89.95
GORTEX PANT	$125	$99.95

BLIZZARD SKIS

	REG	NOW
UNO	$190.00	$99.95
FIREBIRD RACER	$240.00	$149.95

TECNICA BOOTS

	REG	NOW
SUPER PRINCES	$115.00	$79.95
SUPER TORANADO	$115.00	$79.95
STAR	$175.00	$139.95
COSMOS	$175.00	$139.95

SUB ZERO
DOWN PARKAS
REG. $140 NOW $84.00

EUROPA ENTRANT
THINSULATE
PARKAS
REG. $150 NOW $119.95

SKIS DYNASTAR

	WAS	NOW
VISA	$195.00	$110.00
CS 2	$260.00	$129.95
LASER	$235	$149.95
AIRFLO OMEGA	$255	$179.95
EQUIPE SL	$275	$199.95

SKI HAUS SPORTHAUS

Quantity limited. No rainchecks. Not responsible for typographical errors

STEREO RECEIVERS

SAVE $130
$69

SCOTT 25 Watt AM/FM Stereo Receiver

	REG	NOW
TECHNICS 912 35 WATT AM/FM RECEIVER	($200)	$89
TECHNICS 150 35 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($220)	$129
TECHNICS 925 40 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($270)	$139
AKAI 25 32 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($260)	$149
AKAI 35 48 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($350)	$189
HARMAN KARDON 330 DELUXE 20 WATT RECEIVER	($280)	$189
TECHNICS 938 55 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($360)	$219
AKAI 45 65 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($360)	$269
HARMAN KARDON 380 DELUXE 30 WATT RECEIVER	($360)	$269
TECHNICS 550 70 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($399)	$269
HARMAN KARDON 490 DELUXE DIGITAL RECEIVER	($440)	$319
LUXMAN 102 DELUXE 60 WATT DIGITAL RECEIVER	($600)	$359

VIDEO RECORDERS

SAVE $110
$299

Quasar 8 Hour Wireless Remote-Cable Ready VCR

	REG	NOW
PANASONIC COLOR VIDEO CAMERA	($500)	$199
SANYO BETA VCR	($350)	$199
PANASONIC 6 TO 1 COLOR VIDEO CAMERA	($700)	$299
FISHER CABLE READY WIRELESS REMOTE VCR	($500)	$348
SANSUI 9000 4 HEAD VIDEO RECORDER	($800)	$399
PANASONIC AUTO FOCUS MINI COLOR CAMERA	($800)	$499
PANASONIC 1525 4 HEAD VIDEO RECORDER	($700)	$499
HITACHI VHS HIFI 5 HEAD VCR	($1100)	$519
PANASONIC 1430 VHS-HIFI VCR	($900)	$549
FISHER 830-4HEAD MTS STEREO VCR	($800)	$549
HITACHI V3P PORTABLE VCR	($1100)	$599
PANASONIC 1530 4 HEAD STEREO VCR	($900)	$599
PANASONIC 1630 4 HEAD STEREO VCR WITH RANDOM ACCESS TUNER	($900)	$699
OLYMPUS 105/208 4 HEAD STEREO PORTABLE DOCKING VCR	($1100)	$849
FISHER 840 MTS STEREO VHS HIFI STEREO 4 HEAD CABLE READY WIRELESS REMOTE VCR	($1000)	$799

CASSETTE RECORDERS

SAVE $100
$59

TEAC Dolby B Soft Touch Metal Tape Cassette

	REG	NOW
TECHNICS B-12 DOLBY CASSETTE	($120)	$69
FISHER DOUBLE DOLBY CASSETTE	($160)	$79
TECHNICS B24 DOUBLE DOLBY CASSETTE	($260)	$119
TECHNICS B14 DOLBY B/C CASSETTE	($200)	$139
TEAC 555 AUTO REVERSE DOLBY B/C CASSETTE	($280)	$159
HARMON KARDON 91 SOLENOID DOLBY CASSETTE	($290)	$189
TECHNICS 245X DOLBY B/C & DBX	($330)	$199
TECHNICS AUTO REVERSE DOLBY B/C CASSETTE	($330)	$199
HARMON KARDON 191 SOLENOID DOLBY B/C CASSETTE	($380)	$289
HARMON KARDON 291 DOLBY B/C HX PRO SOLENOID CASSETTE	($425)	$339

CAR STEREO

SAVE $60
$19

EL-TECH Car AM/FM stereo Cassette Tape Player

	REG	NOW
SPECO 6 X 9 20 OUNCE COAX SPEAKERS	($60)	$19
AUDIOBAHN PASSIVE EQUALIZER	($80)	$49
CLARION 3150 AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE	($180)	$79
AUDIOBAHN 100 WATT CAR STEREO AMP	($140)	$79
PANASONIC 6868 AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE	($140)	$89
PANASONIC 50 WATT CAR AMP WITH 7 BAND EQUALIZER	($140)	$89
CLARION AUTO REVERSE AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE	($220)	$119
PANASONIC 100 WATT CAR AMP WITH 7 BAND EQUALIZER	($200)	$139
JENSEN DIGITAL AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE	($240)	$139
PANASONIC DIGITAL AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE	($240)	$149
AUDIOBAHN AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE WITH DOLBY	($220)	$159
PANASONIC 50 WATT AUTO REVERSE DIGITAL AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE	($300)	$239

30% off all ALPINE CAR STEREO EQUIPMENT

MAXELL UDXII C-90 CASSETTE $1.69
Limit 10

STEREO SYSTEMS

SAVE $250
$449.99

50 Watt AM/FM Double Cassette Stereo Rack Music System

Technics

	REG	NOW
FISHER AM/FM STEREO PHONO CASSETTE MUSIC SYSTEM	($200)	$128
FISHER DOUBLE CASSETTE AM/FM STEREO PHONO MUSIC SYSTEM	($269)	$168
FISHER 50 WATT DOUBLE CASSETTE AM/FM STEREO RACK MUSIC SYSTEM	($600)	$448
FISHER 70 WATT DOUBLE CASSETTE AM/FM STEREO RACK MUSIC SYSTEM	($750)	$448
FISHER 100 WATT DOUBLE CASSETTE AM/FM STEREO RACK MUSIC SYSTEM	($1100)	$698
PANASONIC AM/FM STEREO MINI DOUBLE CASSETTE PORTABLE (box)	($150)	$109
PANASONIC 80 PORTABLE DOUBLE CASSETTE AM/FM STEREO (box)	($200)	$159

COLOR TELEVISION

SAVE $70
$199
Panasonic
13 inch solid state Color Television

	REG	NOW
RCA 13" COLOR T.V.	($320)	$219
ADMIRAL 19" WIRELESS REMOTE COLOR TV	($360)	$229
EMERSON 13" WIRELESS REMOTE COLOR TV	($350)	$239
HITACHI 19" SOLID STATE COLOR TV	($400)	$269
PANASONIC 19" SOLID STATE COLOR TV	($430)	$269
RCA 19" WIRELESS REMOTE COLOR TV	($480)	$329
HITACHI 19" WIRELESS REMOTE CONTROL	($500)	$339
PANASONIC 1952 19" CABLE READY WIRELESS REMOTE COLOR TV	($600)	$399
SONY 19" TRINITRON COLOR WITH WIRELESS REMOTE	($600)	$399
FISHER 19" MTS STEREO COLOR TV WITH WIRELESS REMOTE	($600)	$499
PANASONIC 25" PORTABLE COLOR TV	($700)	$499
RCA 25" COLOR MONITOR TV	($800)	$599
PANASONIC 25" WIRELESS REMOTE COLOR CONSOLE TV	($849)	$599
SONY 26" TRINITRON WIRELESS REMOTE COLOR CONSOLE TV	($900)	$649

T-120 VHS VIDEO TAPE $3.99
Limited 10

The Sound Compan

Quantity limited. No rainchecks. Not responsible for typographical errors

ARTS

Audre Lorde brings poetry to Amherst College

By REBECCA THATCHER
Collegian Staff

Renowned Poet Audre Lorde will speak and read her poetry at 8 tonight in the Johnson Chapel at Amherst College. Lorde is a black lesbian poet with an important history.

The year was 1979 and the place was the Second Sex conference in New York City.

Poet Audre Lorde rose to speak on a panel titled "The Personal Is Political." With grace, power and courage she delivered her speech, "The Master's Tools will Never Dismantle the Master's House."

"It is a particular academic arrogance to assume any discussion of feminist theory in this time and in this place without examining our many differences, and without a significant input from poor women, black and third-world women, and lesbians," Lorde said.

She chastised her listeners for advocating tolerance of difference between women, calling it the "grossest reformism."

"Difference must be not merely tolerated, but seen as a fund of necessary polarities between which our creativity can spark like a dialectic.

She asked, "If white american feminist theory need not deal with the differences between us and the resulting differences in aspects of our oppressions, then what do you do with the fact that the women who clean your houses and tend your children while attend conferences on feminist theory are, for the most part, poor and third-world women? What is the theory behind racist feminism?"

She called on white women to stop demanding that black women educate them as to black women's existence, difference and "relative roles in our joint survival."

She concluded by urging her audience to closely examine their own lives and prejudices.

"Racism and homophobia are real conditions of all our lives in this place and in this time. I urge each one of us here to reach down into that deep place of knowledge inside herself and touch that terror and loathing of any difference that lives there. See whose face it wears. Then the personal and the political can begin to illuminate all our choices."

With this speech and her many published works of poetry and prose, the poet has earned a place as a radical and visionary thinker.

As Adrienne Rich recently said of Lorde, "for the complexity of her vision, for her moral courage and the catalytic passion of her language, (Lorde) has already become, for many, an indispensable poet."

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
"The BEST Chinese Food"

Boneless Bar-B-Q Spare Ribs
Small $2.80 Large or $4.60

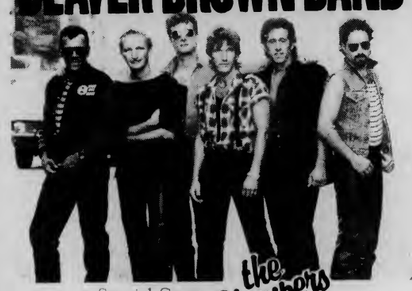
Luncheon Specials
From $2.25 served 11 a.m. -3 p.m.

New Buffet & Sunday Brunch
Buffet Served 5-8
Mon.-Thurs.
Brunch Served
Sunday 11:30-3
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.25

1) Beef with Fresh Mushrooms
2) Chicken Fingers
3) Chicken Wings
4) Chinese BBQ Pork
5) Broccoli in Oyster Sauce
6) Sweet & Sour Chicken
7) Pan Fried Rice
8) Pan Fried Noodles with Chicken
9) Pan Fried Ravioli
10) Hot + Sour Soup

Luncheon Specials & Take-out Service
Full Cocktail Menu
Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11 p.m.

10 Belchertown Road
at Rte. 9, Amherst
256-0252



EARN MONEY FOR COLLEGE
LOADERS & UNLOADERS
$8/hr • PART-TIME EVENINGS & EARLY MORNING HOURS
We offer steady employment, paid vacations and health benefits. Interviews will be held every Wednesday 9am—1pm
UNITED PARCEL SERVICE
120 Wayside Avenue
West Springfield, MA 01089

JASON & THE SCORCHERS
Thursday Nov. 21
Campus Center Auditorium
An evening of pure 'frolicking' fun!!!
Tickets $8.50 in advance $10.00 at the door
and special guest PAJAMA SLAVE DANCERS

UPC PRESENTS
Violent Femmes
AND SPECIAL GUEST
BLUEWALL
Sun. Nov. 24
Tickets $9.00 IN ADVANCE $10.00 AT THE DOOR
Tickets on sale Wed. Nov. 13th
at Tix Unlimited, Main Street Records, Faces and "For the Record".

JOHN CAFFERTY AND THE BEAVER BROWN BAND

Special Guest the Stompers
Springfield Symphony Hall
December 10th-7:30pm
All Seats Reserved - $12.50
TICKETS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS AT FINE ARTS CENTER BOX OFFICE
PHONE CHARGES: (413)787-6600 or (800)243-4842
Produced in association with 96TICFM
Tickets on Sale Fri., Nov. 15th!

ARTS

Collegian photo by Brian Guarnotta

John Flansburgh (left) and John Linnel of They Might be Giants. The band played at the Iron Horse Tuesday night.

live wire

by Peter Wissoker

Short column this week. Everything abbreviated. Stop.

Tonight: Southside Johnny. Asbury Jukes. Pearl Steet. Should be fun.

PSD(Pajama Slave Dancers). Elm Pub. Westfield.

Tommorow: Doc Watson. Iron Horse.

Steve Wright. Springfield Symphony Hall.

Next week: Ray Charles and the Raelettes, Jason and the Scorchers, Violent Femmes. Not all on the same bill.

Adrian Belew. With the Bears.

Monday: Toads in New Haven.

Saturday: Nothing really. Do your homework.

Sunday: Astrid Gilberto.(Woman. Iphegenia.) Iron Horse.

Monday: Bears. Suzanne Vega. Sold out. Iron Horse. Hang around outside.

Until next week...

Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes come to Pearl Street tonight.

They Might Be Giants

By BRIAN GUARNOTTA
Collegian Staff

Going to the Iron Horse to see a band called They might be Giants, I was a bit anxious.

This anxiety was quickly calmed by the sober atmosphere of this humble club. The environment quickly changed as the crowd perked up once the happy duo of guitar player, John Flansburgh, and accordian player, John Linnel, hit the stage. Although they were musically sound, the show became very jocular.

The combination of lyrics and stage props proved to be really entertaining and almost circus-like. They made their mark with such songs as,"Youth culture killed my dog.""Cow town," and "Nothing is going to change my clothes."

Their stage props led to even more amusement with toys such as a square cardboard guitar, a lizard head, a large mexican hat and last, but most impressive, huge paper mache hands. The accordian, an almost obselete instrument added to the frolic. The last song, "Number three," involved the crowd in the show as they held up cue cards with the lyrics.

The only weakness of the show was the actual stage size and the sound. Both were limiting, and seemed to suffocate the performers. The players, who hail from Lincoln-Sudbury Massachusetts, are due back within a month. I would definitely recommend seeing them.

HAIRCUTS $8.50 with this coupon
CALL STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr., Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85 C

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

THE FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
TONIGHT!

ASPEN WIND QUINTET
Thursday, November 14 8 pm.
Tickets: $6

Easy Street
TONIGHT
Thursday Nov. 14
Miller Rock Series presents
SOUTHSIDE JOHNNY and the JUKES
Tix $9.50 in advance
Coming Nov. 21
The One & Only
RAY CHARLES and the RAELETTES and the Ray Charles Band
Tickets available all Datatix
Coming Dec. 12
Johnny Copeland and the Texas Twister
10 PEARL STREET
NORTHAMPTON MA
413 584 7771

Pleasant St. Theater
"CRIME AND PASSION SERVED SIZZLING"
- Bruce Williamson, Playboy

It wasn't simply love. It was a case of cold-blooded passion.
Dance With A Stranger
R
times: at 5:45, 7:55, 10:05 p.m.
(also at 3:40 Sat. and Sun.)
To the victor goes the American Dream.
Alamo Bay
times: 5:30, 7:40, 9:40
(also at 3:30 Sat and Sun)
27 Pleasant St./Northampton 586-0935

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MABOU MINES' "Cold Harbor"
A bleak & beautiful study of General Ulysses S. Grant
Sunday, November 17 8 pm.
Tickets $12.10

"The Best of America" —TIME Magazine
Gregg Smith Singers
Wednesday, November 20 8 pm.
Tickets $15.13

JOFFREY II DANCERS
presenting
"Once Upon A Time"
Stories about the life of Hans Christian Andersen
Friday, November 22 8 pm.
Tickets $16.14.12

Five College Students Half Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center, and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413)545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

Crimes found captivating

By MARGOT WIATROWSKI
Collegian Correspondent

The award winning play, Crimes of the Heart, set in rural Mississippi in the early 1970's, tells the story of three sisters whose lives have been drawn together by the deteriorating condition of their grandfather, who is living out the rest of his days in the local hospital.

Marie Lanzillo's strong portrayal of the youngest sister Babe, who has just been released on bail after shooting her husband in the stomach, sets the stage for the hilarious plights which continuously haunt the family. The older sisters, Lenny and Meg (played by Amy Goudreau and Jennifer Daniels) are plagued with various difficulties, from a forgotten birthday to an overly mentioned failed singing career. The hysterical atmosphere of the story is intensified by the impressive performance of Marie Hart, who portrays the bossy, obnoxious cousin 'Chick.'

Since no household is complete without an argument or two, the fireworks of a fight between Lenny and Chick should more than satisfy the audience hungry for the dirt of a family feud.

There is a lot to be said about the production itself. The set, designed by Clark Bowlen and Jeffrey Fiola, adds a note of home-like harmony to the touching scene where Babe tries to kill herself by sticking her head into the gas oven and lighting matches. The costumes were fitting to the rural setting in 1974, and the lighting designer, Colin Brown, made me feel right at home with the mellow atmosphere of the country kitchen.

The performance seemed a little long, over a period of time, but the touching, hilarious story shone and held quite a captivated audience.

Amy Goudreau, Marie Lanzillo, and Jennifer Daniels in the UMass Theatre production of Crimes of the Heart, Nov. 12-16 at 8:00 p.m. and a 2:00 p.m. matinee the 16th in the Curtain Theatre, of the Fine Arts Center.

James H. McManus eating place
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP) Rte. 9 • Hadley-Amherst 256-6889

CONVENIENT to CAMPUS!

• BREAKFAST SERVED ANY TIME
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
• BEER & WINE SERVED 'TIL MIDNITE
• PLENTY OF PARKING

LORD'S & LADY'S HAIR SALONS SM
The Hampshire Mall
586-7913
20% off Student Discount*
not valid w/specials exp. Dec. 31

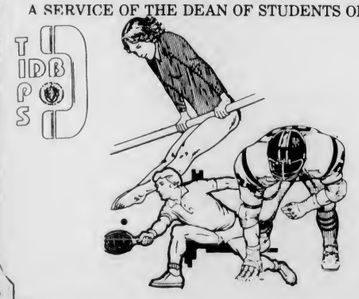
TUESDAY "PERFECT PERMS":
Reg. $53.00 & up ..... Now $39.95 & up

WEDNESDAY CUTS:
Women ... Reg. $18.00 ..... Now $14.00
Men ..... Reg. $16.00 ..... Now $12.00

Walk-in Service Welcome • No Appointments Necessary.
Not to be confused with Frank Stiriacci's Lords & Ladies

ATLETIC FACILITIES at UMass

For information on Athletic Facilities and events at UMass call:



TAPED INFORMATION PHONE SERVICE
545-1540

Ask for tapes by number

2453 Gym Schedule
2459 Pool Schedule
2471 Racquetball/Squash Court Schedules
24. Weight Room Schedule
247. Athletic Events
2678 Intramurals at UMass

For a complete listing of information tapes, come by the IDB-TIPS Office in Whitmore Rm. 227

A SERVICE OF THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE

AVAILABLE

Friendly room-mate. Quiet and smart. Able to sort through complicated issues. Will share work load. Problem solving is my specialty. Flexible. Clever. Fun. Good looking.

I'm the IBM Portable PC. To find out how to take me home, stop by the IBM information booth in the Campus Center this Thursday and Friday, November 14th and 15th. You'll find me surprisingly affordable.

P.S. Bring a friend.

IBM

SHAANN'S APPAREL PLUS
CLOSE-OUT SALE
LADY'S LINE IN SUNDERLAND
from 15% to 50% OFF ALL MERCHANDISE STORE WIDE
Rte. 116 — Sunderland — 665-3878
Tailoring for all kinds of Alterations
One Day Service Available
8 am - 6 pm
Mon - Sat

Popcorn's Back at the TIME OUT

37 N. Pleasant St.
Proper ID Required
Don't Drink and Drive

Yesterday & Today Records

Grateful Dead Psychadelic
Grand Opening
Punk Jazz Blues
Top CASH PAID for USED:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's
An Alternative Record Store
96 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 253-9209

London School of Economics and Political Science
A chance to study and live in London

Junior-year programs. Postgraduate Diplomas. One-Year Master's Degrees and Research Opportunities in the Social Sciences.

The wide range of subjects includes:
Accounting and Finance • Actuarial Science • Anthropology • Business Studies • Economics • Econometrics • Economic History • European Studies • Geography • Government • Industrial Relations • International History • International Relations • Law • Management Science • Operational Research • Personnel Management • Philosophy • Population Studies • Politics • Regional and Urban Planning Studies • Sea-Use Policy • Social Administration • Social Planning in Developing Countries • Social Work • Sociology • Social Psychology • Statistical and Mathematical Sciences • Systems Anaylsis •

Application forms from:
Admissions Registrar, L.S.E., Houghton Street, London WC2A 2AE, England, stating whether undergraduate or postgraduate and quoting Room 10.

LSE

COLLEGE DRUG
9-9 weekdays/9-6 Sat/9-3 Sun
4 Main Street, Amherst. Phone 253-2523

9 oz. Keri lotion Sale price $3.99
WITH COUPON $2.99

Valuable Coupon
$1.00 OFF
Keri lotion 9 oz.
good thru Nov. 27 or while supplies last

IBM
IBM Portable PC
$1075.00*
DEMONSTRATION THIS THURS. 11/14 THROUGH FRI. 11/15

Orders will be taken on Nov. 18 - 21 this special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.

* Certain restrictions apply see store for details

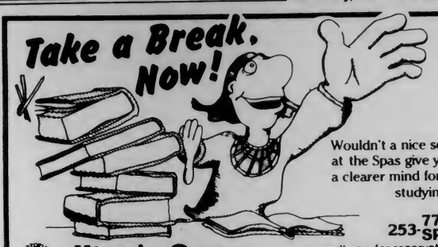
Located in The Campus Center 545-2619
UNIVERSITY STORE

★ Grand Opening ★
SPORTSWEAR
FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA

BIKE® Numbered Football Jersey
Reg. $15.00 $5.99

BIKE® SHORTS
Reg. $8.00 $2.99

BIKE® Football Mesh Shirts
Reg. $15.00 $5.99



WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99

All N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
20% OFF

• Team Jackets
• Sweat Shirts
• NFL Telephones
• Wall Plaques
• Coffee Mugs
• Beer Mugs
• Stadium Blankets
• Beach Towels
• Watches
• Alarm Clocks
• Infant Wear
• Toddler NFL Wear

Bruno's
- Quality Pizza - Subs - 256-0222
FREE DELIVERY
Sun. - Wed. 4 pm to 2 am
Thurs. - Fri. - Sat. 4 pm to 3 am

Season's Sunday Brunch Buffet
It's your choice and what a choice! Season's specialties from traditional Bacon & Eggs to Seafood Casseroles to Scrumptious Desserts. Season's Sunday Buffet from Eleven to Three only $7.95
All major credit cards accepted
Experience the Joy of Dining with family and friends at
Seasons
529 Belchertown Road Amherst (413) 253-9909

Take a Break. Now!

Wouldn't a nice soak at the Spas give you a clearer mind for studying?
Utopia Spas
175 University Drive, Amherst
253-7727
SPAS
call now for reservations
Mon. 4 P.M. 1 A.M. Tu.-Sun. 11 A.M. 1 A.M.
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

The Special Charm of One of a Kind Jewelry
Antique and unique styles available in a wide range of prices.
J. AUSTIN JEWELER
on the common, amherst, 253-3986
mon.-sat. 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

FRI. AFTERNOON AT JUSTIN RYAN'S
50¢ Drinks
CLIFF MYERS HAPPIEST HOUR FRI. AFTERNOON 3:00-?
FREE 3-4PM BUFFET!

jam on the side...
Enjoy a piping hot slice of live jazz every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night from 9 to 12 pm.
plus complimentary hors d'oeuvres in the cozy ambience of The Loft at Seasons Restaurant.
Seasons
529 Belchertown Road • Amherst • 253-9909

Lodestone
25% off all In-Wear, Matinique
Thru Saturday 11-16
13 North Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002
48 Main Street Brattleboro, VT 05301

NEW ENGLAND

Suspect in officer's death kills himself

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The prime suspect in the death of one police officer and the critical wounding of another killed himself yesterday as police moved in on his hiding place, officials said.

Hampden County District Attorney Matthew J. Ryan said Eduardo Ortiz, 18, apparently shot himself yesterday afternoon after police surrounded the building where he was hiding.

Authorities said the two police officers "never had a chance" when they were shot Tuesday night while approaching a car on a city street.

"They were taken completely by surprise," Ryan said. "There's no indication that they stopped the car for anything more than a routine check."

Ryan said three shots were fired at the two officers. The first missed Patrolman Michael J. Schiavina, who approached the car on the driver's side, where Eduardo was seated. The second shot hit Schiavina, 28, in the chest.

Schiavina, who had joined the force three years ago and whose sister, Maura, is a Massachusetts state trooper, died late Tuesday night in Mercy Hospital.

The third shot struck Patrolman Alain Beuregard, 29, in the face as he approached the car from the passenger's side, Ryan said. Beuregard, who joined the force in March 1980, was in critical and "unstable" condition yesterday afternoon, according to a spokesman for the Springfield Unit of Baystate Medical Center. Ryan said Beuregard was attached to life support systems and termed his chance of living "very slim."

The Ortiz brothers, Eduardo and Juan, 32, were identified immediately as suspects in the shooting.

AP Laserphoto

Detectives and funeral home workers remove body of accused police killer Eduardo Ortiz, 18, who shot himself yesterday after police surrounded the building in Springfield where he was hiding out.

Gays, Lesbians, reveal identities at earlier ages

BOSTON (AP) — Gays, lesbians and biseuxals are acknowledging their sexual preferences at earlier ages, some before they have had sexual encounters, say counselors who work with support groups for such young people.

Media attention and acknowledgements by well-known figures that they are gay have led to the earlier acknowledgements, some by teens as young as 15, The Boston Globe reported yesterday.

"Kids are coming out at a much earlier age than they used to," said Kevin Cranston, a student at Harvard Divinity School and a social worker with gays. "They're coming out before they have sex. They're establishing their identities and having happier adolexcences.

"It used to be that a gay young person had sex and dealt with the consequences afterwards.

"Today, some of these kids date and wait for the right person to come along. AIDS has strongly reinforced that prudence. By reversing the order, many gay people have healthier sex and healthier lives," he said.

Jean Riseman, a social worker, helped establish Gay and Lesbian Liberated Youth of the North Shore for people aged 14 to 22.

"What's so nice about GALLYNS is seeinng the kids play the piano together, go out to eat pizza, do all the things other kids take for granted," she told the Globe. "This kind of thing didn't happen even 10 years ago."

John Dixon, adult adviser to GALLYNS, said, "The most tragic thing about being a gay adolexcent is you have no peers or role models."

Some counselors are becoming better equipped to deal with gay youths because they are expressing their sexual preferences at an earlier age, said Weston Jenks, director and founder of counseling at Boston College.

"Not everyone who has had a homosexual experience or inclination is gay," he said.

Convict wins right to trial

Boston (AP)— A Stoneham man convicted of murder won the right to a new trial when the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled the trial judge allowed the prosecution to present improper character evidence.

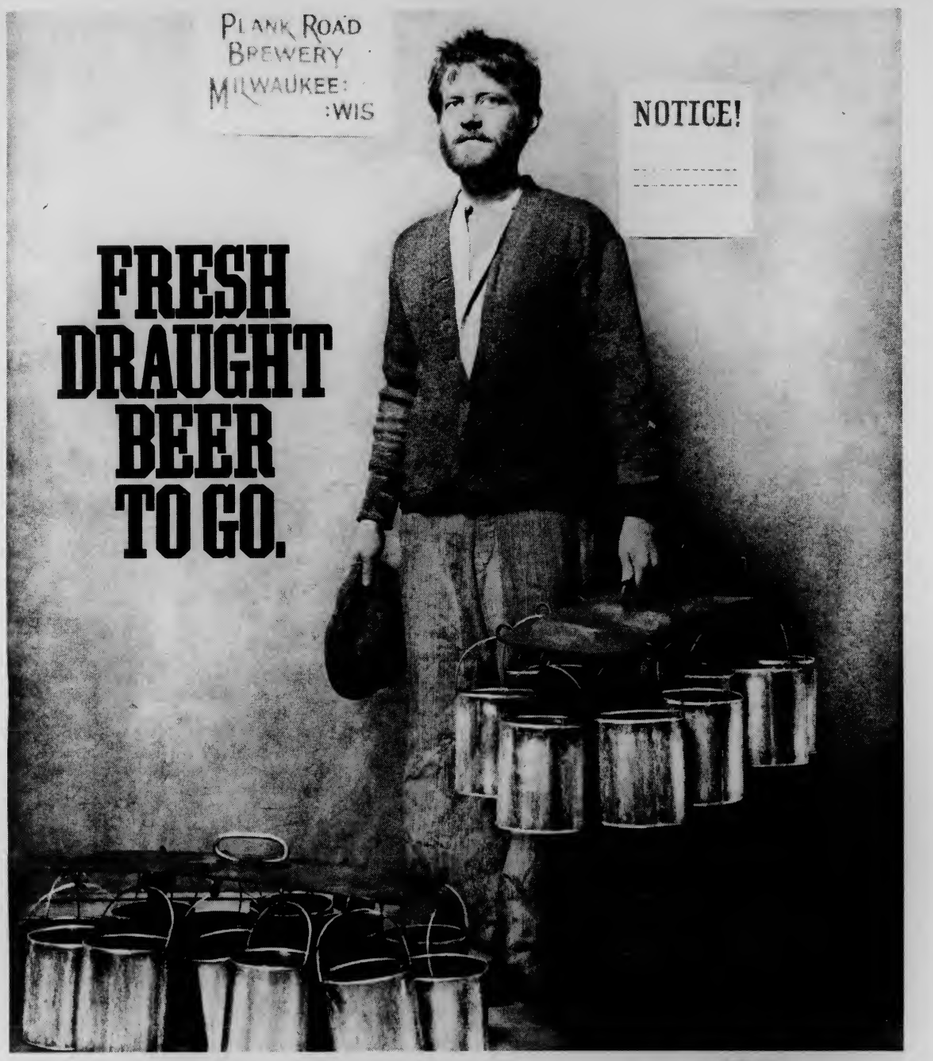
The high court said yesterday Judge Rudolph F. Pierce, who was sitting in Middlesex Superior Court in the 1982 trial, erred in allowing a psychiatrist to testify about verbal threats defendant Randall W. Trapp made in 1977.

The court also remanded Trapp's case for a new trial because it said the judge shouldn't have admitted "hearsay" disciplinary reports from a corrections officer about Trapp's jail conduct while he awaited trial.

Massport wins rights to shipyard

BOSTON (AP) - Massachusetts Port Authority officials, saying they don't want condominiums nearby, edged out several developers with a $10 million bid for 18.5 acres owned by Boston Shipyard Corp.

The authority's bid was the highest of three submitted Tuesday in final bidding in U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the property in the city's East Boston section.



Boston Shipyard has been operating under Chapter 11 protection from creditiors for more than one year and recently laid off its 350 employees.

The acquisition would give Massport, which originally bid $5.5 million for the property, nearly complete control of a section of East Boston waterfront extending to Logan International Airport.

TONIGHT AT CHANGES
Dance Club
NO COVER
All Schnapps 99¢
BAR DRINKS $1.25
NO COVER
THE PLACE TO DANCE
CHANGES
Rt. 9 Amherst 256 8284

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco - imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes - imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

Amherst's latest piano bar
oejays
Cafe • Restaurant • Piano Bar
• DAILY LUNCH & DINNER SPECIALS
• STARTING SOON . . . SUNDAY BRUNCH
• WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS
• 10 OZ. MOLSON DRAFTS $1.00 all the time
Entertainment
Thursday Andy Latte 9-12 Jazz Stylist
Friday Art Andrews 6-9
Direct from NYC Josh Rosenblum 9-12
Sat. David Rutherford 6-9 Will Haigh 9-12
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, Ma. 253-3605 major credit cards accepted first past Barb's

FRESH DRAUGHT BEER TO GO.

Ask most beer drinkers and they'll likely agree: nothing tastes better than beer from a keg.

Ever since the days young men delivered bucketfuls to your door, keg beer has always been fresher. That's because it isn't cooked to preserve it like most bottled and canned beers.

Well, now we've found a way to deliver the same fresh draft taste in a bottle. A beer specially cold-filtered instead of cooked, so it tastes like it was drawn straight from the keg.

Plank Road Original Draught. Keg beer in a bottle.

PLANK ROAD™
Original Draught

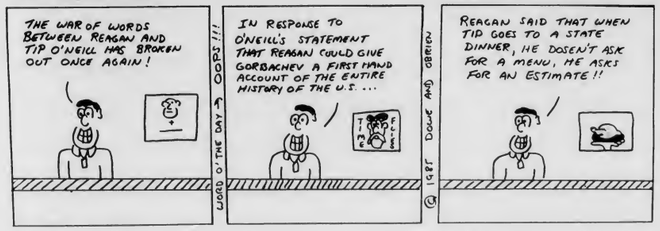
©1985 Miller Brewing Co. Milwaukee, WI

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed



Gordy

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Woe's Moes

By Maureen Hayes

Bat Brain

Bill Dearing

Weather

Today

Variable cloudiness with highs in the 50s. Tomorrow: Partly sunny with highs near 50.

Today's Menu

LUNCH
Cavatelli Supreme
Hotg Corned Beef on Rye

BASICS LUNCH
Shrimp Salad Roll
California Quiche

DINNER
Roast Turkey/Bread Dressing
Gravy, Cranberry Sauce
Ham and Chesse Florentine
DESSERT SPECIAL

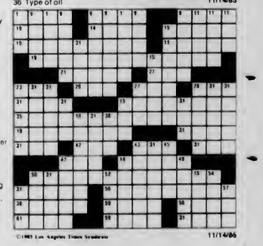
BASICS DINNER
Broccoli and Cheese Strudel
Roast Turkey/Bread Dressing
Gravy, Cranberry Sauce
DESSERT SPECIAL

Attention all Copy Eds, AMEs and Reporters

Former Collegian managing editor Ray Beauchemin, now a copy editor at the Hartford Courant, will be given a workshop at 4 p.m. TODAY in the newsroom. This should be worth it—please make an effort to attend.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Ripens
5 Movie pet
9 Supplemented (with "out")
13 One of an Germanic people
14 Modernista
15 Type of dress
16 Plaster admixtures
18 Lizards
19 Old wives' tales
21 Theatricalize
22 Giant great
23 Petrol
26 Daughter of Cadmus
27 Anecdotes
28 Comparative suffix
31 Fit
33 Capable of being nullified
35 Good luck charms
39 Like a bear ready for winter
40 Buffalo's county
41 French "connections"
42 New Deal agcy
43 —— Na Na
46 Kindergartner
47 "—— was saying ..."
48 Floor in a maison
50 Bad luck
55 Rasp
56 —— ahead
58 Like a bireme
59 Emancipate
60 Aware of
61 Parrots
62 Spanish painter
63 "—— a grand night ..."

DOWN
1 Sci. of farming
2 Paases
3 "—— Brute!"
4 Form
5 Apartment, in old Greece
6 Looks after
7 Hotel Sacher specialty
8 Type of holly
9 T.S. or George
10 Furnace of a type
11 Namesakes of a Spanish queen
12 Ile —— Pins
15 Excited, in music
17 Saint, called Apostle of the Franks
20 Soniferous
23 Solecism
24 Up
25 Glides
27 CBS rival
28 French composer Jacques ——
29 Town near Ventura, Calif.
30 Plant anew
32 Misplay
33 Rear
34 Abbr on a city map
36 Type of oil
37 Spooky
38 King of Judah
43 Muster
44 Actor's goal role
45 Chiefs
47 Johnson namesakes
48 Accustom
49 Pierre's 3 Down
50 Soccer play
51 Loser in a "fabulous" race
52 Dial markings
53 Copper
54 Bowlers and derbies
55 Gazelle
57 Extinct bird

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

P	I	A	H	S		P	I	E	S	T		G	A	F	F	S
A	M	A	H		O	A	H	U		A	M	O	R	E
C	U	B	A		S	I	E	M		T	O	M	A	N
A	R	A	B	A	T		L	U	C	E		R	E	N	D
			N	I	L			P	L	A	M	E	N	C	O
P	R	E		A	B	S		T	R	E	N	T	O	N
O	U	A	R		N	E	I	N		I	N	N
D	E	A	F		G	R	A	N	D		A	C	T	S
			E	C	U		B	A	C	K		H	I	L	E
A	L	G	E	R	I	A		P	A	N	C	A	K	E
F	I	A	N	D	A	N	G	O		A	E	C
G	R	O		W	E	S	E	D		S	P	R	O	U	T
K	E	M	A	L		N	E	A	T		E	N	T	O
A	D	E	L	E		D	U	D	E		A	N	E	W
N	O	S	E	D		A	M	D	I	N		L	E	S	S

11/14/85

©1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/14/85

Carolyn Micheel: Sophomore's a big "assist" to women's soccer

By ROGER CHAPMAN Collegian Staff

If there exists a single word that could describe Carolyn Micheel, that word would definitely be 'winner'.

Micheel hails from Columbia, Maryland, an area with a highly respected reputation for turning out quality, blue-chip soccer players. The sophomore midfielder has been a winner for most of her soccer career and has continued that winning tradition playing for the top-ranked University of Massachusetts women's soccer team.

"She is one of the more skillful players on the team," said head coach Kalekeni Banda. "She's got the stuff. A good shot plus good technique. She can compete with anybody in the country."

Micheel's list of accomplishments is impressive. She was named to the Howard County All-County team all four years during her high school career and was twice named Player of the Year her junior and senior years. She was a member of the Maryland State Select team for four years. She also played for several club teams and led Oakland Mills High School, a perennial scholastic soccer power in Maryland, to two county and state championships. Add to this a third place finish at the Final Four last season as a freshman, a perfect 15-0-0 record this season and another probable appearance in this year's Final Four, and you have the ingredients of a very successful career.

But despite enjoying a stellar high school career, Micheel was not heavily recruited by other schools. Her reasons for attending UMass were pretty basic.

"I basically had to go out and do my own work contacting coaches," said Micheel. "I liked the fact that UMass had finished third in the country (in 1983) and played that type of competitive and serious soccer."

"I was very scared at first because I didn't know what to expect," said Micheel. "But after a while I had a pretty good idea of who was going to play where."

Micheel ended the regular season with five goals and 13 assists, breaking the UMass record for assists in a season. Her 23 points placed her as the number two scorer behind freshman forward Beth Roundtree.

"I'm very pleased that Carolyn was able to break the assist record," said Banda. "That just tells you what kind of a role she plays on the field. She makes things happen by always looking for the right passes. She gets those assists because she's thinking. She makes that one extra pass."

"If you don't have people on your team that can score goals you can't get any assists," said a modest Micheel. "It was a good feeling to break the record."

Micheel's leadership doesn't stop on the statistic sheet. On a team that has only two seniors and two juniors, Micheel is often looked upon to provide leadership on a very young team.

"We have a lot of sophomores on the team, so we ask them to help out the captains on the field," said Banda. "Carolyn goes in wanting to win every single game. That attitude has helped us in a lot of games."

"I want to keep improving and become more reliable," said Micheel. "I just want to contribute as much as I possibly can."

Contribute and more. This Sunday, the Minutewomen will take the field against an upstart Boston College squad on their quest for a first ever national championship. You can bet that Carolyn Micheel will be leading the charge.

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*
While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.
* Upon faculty approval

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES
549-3840
228 Triangle St
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
Gas Saving Tune-up
4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95
Lube, Oil & Filter
$17.99
Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil, and safety check
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wahmo's Store
549-4704

★freshmen

continued from page 24

system well," Hixon said. "Pam (Bustin) does much the same as Julie. She's got good speed and moves the ball well. With an indoor season behind her, she'll be very good in the future.

"Colleen (Reilly) has been our biggest surprise so far. We needed someone who could hit the ball well. She has emerged as our sweeper."

On offense, the Minutewomen have been bolstered by the addition of Vasapolli and DeAngelis. Vasapolli scored two goals this past weekend and is showing signs of becoming a scoring threat.

"We haven't gotten much scoring from her so far, but she'll develop into a good goal scorer. We've seen a lot of improvement in her, " Hixon said.

"Right now my role is to help out on defense and pick up the open man," Vasapolli said.

Hixon describes DeAngelis as having similar talents to junior forward Lisa Griswold saying that she too is very quick, deceptive and a good one-on-one player.

"She's a sparkplug, a very good addition to this team," Hixon said.

DeAngelis said that making the adjustment from high school to college level field hockey is something that she thought must be very difficult for all freshmen to make.

"There is so much difference between high school and college, the intensity is just so much different. Practices are more intense than our state playoff games," DeAngelis said. "It takes time to get used to it."

DeAngelis said that it was both exciting and scary in her first start and that going into the NCAA tournament she has not been able to rid herself of those same feelings.

"I've been thinking about the tournament 24 hours a day. Once we lose, its over," she said.

She also said that she wanted the team to keep winning for herself and for the seniors.

"This could be the seniors' last game. I want to go out and give everything I can so that the seniors can keep playing," she said. "If I were a senior I wouldn't want my season to end."

Football helps blood drive

The University of Massachusetts football team will team up with the American Red Cross this coming Tuesday to help the blood drive at UMass.

On Tuesday in the Campus Center, some of the Minutemen (including quarterback Dave Palazzi and linebacker John McKeown) will help out the Red Cross as well as donate blood themselves.

"This is a good cause and we want to help anyway we can," said UMass coach Bob Stull. "I'd like to see a lot of people show up."

This Tuesday, meet the Minutemen and help out a worthwhile cause, give blood.

★basketball

continued from page 24

year," said Hicks. "We just want to win."

HOOP SCOOPS: The UMass radio network will include flagship station WHMP-AM, WBEC-AM in Pittsfield and WIXY, a country and western station in East Longmeadow. . .Sutton has a pulled leg muscle and Emerson has been bothered by a bad back. . .Brown has been UM's leading scorer in pre-season scrimmages, shooting 60 percent from the floor. . .Chase has been the second leading scorer. . .Jones has nine rebounds in a scrimmage on Saturday and has, according to Gerlufsen, been the biggest surprise of the pre-season. "He's a much better jumper and shooter than I expected," said the coach.

If I were only at J.B.'s!
JBs
HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES
253-7018
Is this YOU?
If it is come in tonight (Thurs 11/14) & receive a FREE REG. BEEF REG. FRIES and SMALL COKE!!
P.S. Look for your picture and win.
11 am - 2 am 7 days
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone
Petite - Regular and Half Sizes
WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes - Nickels, Jazz and Paloma
Merchandise sold only in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts
(20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

TGIF - Come celebrate Friday night with singing and fun Christian fellowship! 7 pm tomorrow night at the Campus Center

25¢ Club is meeting this Friday November 15th 4:30-6 pm 811 CC Join us see you there

Prophets and Other Heretics: Today's topic deals with the question of authority. Rev. Esther Hargis facilitates discussion, 12:15-1:15, 428 SUB

Southwest Residents - Get involved! Weekly Southwest Assembly meeting tonight, 7:00 pm in Hampden's Southside Room. All are welcome.

Attention Lesbians The UMass Lesbian Union will meet Thursday 11-14 at 5:30 pm, 409G Student Union

AUTO FOR SALE

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1970 Dodge Coronet convertible. Many new parts. Reliable. $700.00 or BO 584-4939

VW 1970 runs good, some rust. $500 1-532-2931

1978 Nova runs good dependable 300.00 Allison 6-5406 evenings

1971 Dodge Wagon 85,000 miles, standard transmission, V-8, runs well. $500 or best offer. Jon 253-9456

1977 Monte Carlo runs and looks excellent. Must be seen. Rally wheels, snow tires. 549-2804 Craig

VW Rabit 76, good condition, new tires, $800 or BO 549-9680 night

74 Peugot diesel. Standard, excellent condition sun roof! 256-1807 Tracey

BUY OIL CHEAP!

Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. For information contact Off Campus Housing, 423 Student Union 545-0865

ENTERTAINMENT

TURN THE TABLES professional club/party D.J. 5 yr experience. Lowest rates 586-9691

Rent-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt, on busline. 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline, 365/month, avail 1/1/86 253-3634

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on bus line, avail immediately 253-9043

FOR SALE

Safe Suntans 25-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Join alone $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $20. Act now. Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions. Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 15

Chevy Malibe 1973 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

Tabuladadoo. UMass "Bed-Rock" Cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

IBM Graphics Printer exc condition $200 call Arnie 253-5143

4 foot Boa Constrictor and beautiful 27 gallon hexterrarium 160 Tom 253-7797

OHM C3 3 way speakers 175 pair Tom 253-7797

FOUND

One pair of Ray-Ban Sunglasses with prescription lens. Call Joe 546-5353

Andrew Zampariolo I found your fishing license. Call Gary and identify 546-5366

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact: David Stansel 584-3596

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Full time Steward position, 5 evenings weekly, light inventory, pricing, stocking and bar back duties, excellent entry level food position apply in person Northampton Hilton Inn Rt 9

The hardest job you'll ever love. Find out more 11/14 6:30 pm Baker Classroom or 8 pm Coolidge 12th Floor Lounge

Summer jobs in 1986. Hawaii - France - California - Britain, . . . jobs for everyone any STATE and COUNTRY. Adventure or career related. Room/board provided. MONEY BACK GUARANTEED APPLY NOW! Send $5 MONEY ORDER (no personal checks accepted) to: t.r. ADVENTURES 309 Washington Street, PO Box 5, Westwood, MA 02090

Position available - Southwest Area Government is looking for a Publicity Coordinator to organize a SW Newsletter and publicity for SWAG events. Applications available at the SWAG office in Hampden and are due Wed November 20th, 545-0960

MUST OWN VAN to make deliveries from Springfield to Amherst/Northampton area P/U in E. Mass 617-528-1506

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

KEVIN

Happy Anniversary, Muggs! It's been the best year of my life. I love you. Kim

LOST

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mitch 256-1069 or 256-1664

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Last brown wallet Nov. 1 ID's and credit cards please call 549-5935

Long black coat with puffed shoulders. Left in Herter 110 Mon nite 11/4. If found please call E.M at 6-7711 or leave message at 5-2084. Reward

Pair of photogrey lens glasses in brown vinyl case call Jon 549-0902

Paul Dias I'm so sorry for everything Friends? Chris

Lost wallet Tuesday Oct 22 3rd floor SUB at Collegian stack. Call me back Alex 5-0194

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 546-3437

G.A.F. - Winter, Spring, Summer, Fall All you've got to do is call, cause you've got a friend. Love Jo

WITOLD BZDEL - You look marvelous! Good luck. Love always, BoBo

Its almost November 15. Get psyched!

Ed. This may not be original, but I only copy from the best: Happy Birthday! I love you, Harriet Happy Birthday Lowly! Love Orange and Banana Pee!

Hey Bouvini, What in THE hell. Great kick on Sat. Hope you're having as much fun as I am - Thanks for being a friend! Love you. Mystery Woman

"I love big things, uh, I mean big clothes."

Bowie - I WTMLTY. Yup. Come in Chuck Gidget

Happy 21st Birthday Lisa Freedman! May you grow healthy, wealthy, and wise. Did someone order a pizza! Love, Lisa, Justine and Mikelle

Cheryl you're the cutest! Now, are you just as huggable too? Hope to find out. The Penguin

Dr. Faboo Where is our champagne! The Smart Bunch.

Pat Ferris, Compassion for you"! I seem to remember cobwebs in the Lunar Room on 16 Iroquous! You had your share! I think that its time you go cold turkey. Melissa is considering life in a convent! Surrender or else!

Annette and Pat - Where's your compassion for me! Still mad cus I ruined Butterfly in the shower this summer? Look I desperately need M & B. It's been too long! Will you share? Please! Love, Wendy-O

Dan, You're the best roommate We're going drinking on Friday HAPPY BIRTHDAY Michael

Cheryl Goguen (MYBatUM) is 21! Hope it was a happy one. Remember, when the sun goes down, the celebration begins. Watch out Amherst, this could get dangerous. Love T P.S. I'll dial, you get the bucket.

Happy one year, Dave. Thanks for all the great times. Love, Robin

DEBBIE

Well here it is, your very own personal. When do I get to have some of Mom's lasagna" Norm

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To North Carolina for Thanksgiving or anywhere south of Washington for Thanksgiving can leave anytime will help with gas Eric 546-4630

Ithaca bound - need ride Friday Nov 15, returning Sunday Nov 17. Please leave message call Janet 665-8289

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

To share new house in Shutesbury. Very clean, modern house which is 10 miles from UMass. Male or female. $125 plus $10 for utilities. Call anytime, available now. 367-9328

One bedroom with private bathroom in 2 bdrm. Puffton apt. 170/mo heat. incl available Dec 1 for next semester call for more info 549-7827 great place!!

One person to share Southwood apt new ring, nicely furnished 130 + $15 call 256-1764

1 bedroom in house, 1 mile from campus. one sixth of utilities, $145 per month, male only, call 256-6228 anytime

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 254-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7682

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

SKI SWITZERLAND

Spring Break "86"
Round Trip Air
7 Nights Hotel
Breakfast & Dinner Daily
Beer Parties
$699
call Brian 665-4248
Chris 665-3079
Marie 549-0179
Arranged by Classic Tours

SUMMER COUNSELOR JOBS

Info Session 11/14, 6:30 pm, Baker class room, 8 pm Coolidge 12th floor lounge

TO SUBLET

Apt or house wanted. Beginning Jan 15 minutes or less to UMass 546-6153

TRAVEL

Party with 2000 other college students at the Killington Ski Fest. 5 days 5 nights from $188 Happy Hours daily LUV Tours call Frank or Grad at 549-6850 or Mark at 549-4173

Have an adventure January 5-12 Ski Vail information Ted Selig 546-4733

TYPING SERVICE

You make it sound good, we make it look good for all your typing needs, word processing, graphs, spreadsheets. Superior quality and competitive rates call (evenings) 549-0060 or 527-7189

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

Two outgoing females looking for a room to rent (male/female), starting Jan/Feb preferably Amherst call Melanie 546-8518 after 10:00 pm

WANTED TO RENT

To take over lease in January of a two bedroom apartment on bus route call nights Laine 546-9678 Randy 546-6363

$25 reward if you can find us a room in Brandywine for 2 girls Spring semester call 549-5042 ask for Karen

Room Wanted - close to campus or in town please leave message call Janet 665-8289

Two girls looking for an apartment in North Amherst for spring call 549-6149

SPORTS

Basketball notebook

Talented newcomers mark new UM era

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

It was your basic inbounds pass, Duane Chase made it special.

"We were running a simple in-bounds play," explained University of Massachusetts men's basketball coach Ron Gerlufsen. "When Duane jumped up, grabbed the ball above the rim and he just didn't dunk it, he crushed it through the net. It was an incredible play."

It also be the type of play long-suffering fans of UMass basketball could come to expect from Chase, one of eight talented newcomers that will play major roles for the Minutemen this season.

"It's a new thing for me as a coach," said Gerlufsen, who is entering his third year at the UMass helm. "It's a challenge to mold all of these guys into the team. We have a lot to learn."

Chase, a 6-6 forward from Baltimore, provided some entertainment at yesterday's UMass media day in the newly refurbished Curry Hicks Cage, throwing some major-league dunks down.

"I seem to excite people with my style of play," said Chase. "Hopefully I'll go over well here at the Cage."

Fans that venture out to the Cage for the opener Nov. 23 against Merrimack will not recognize the old building. A new floor, balcony and paint job have left the venerable hoop palace looking like a new arena.

"I keep telling the new guys what it's like playing here," said junior captain Carl Smith. "People here lose their minds when we play well, I'm looking forward to some excitement."

Chase joins 6-4 David Brown, 6-6 Joe Fennell, 6-6 Ben Jones, 6-9 John Milum, 6-7 Sean Mosby, 5-10 Mike Mundy and 6-8 Fitzhugh Tarry as newcomers to the Minutemen. Milum is a transfer from Iona and will be eligible seven games into the season. Jones is a transfer from Gainesville (GA) Junior College and will have two years at UMass. Tarry is a redshirt freshman with four years to play.

"They're quick learners," said the coach. "We'd like to find out now what each guy can do and I think we're getting there as far as molding a team."

Smith, a 5-11 point guard who holds the UM and Atlantic 10 season-assist record with 212 his freshman year, joins sophomore Lorenzo Sutton in the UMass backcourt to form a potent combination.

"I'm pretty comfortable being the captain and taking some leadership," said Smith. "With all the kids all of the older guys have to take the leadership role.

Other UM veterans include 6-10 center Tom Emerson, 6-7 forward Wilbert Hicks, 6-5 swingman Matt Ryan, 6-3 point guard Jackie Sheehan and 6-3 guard Bill Hampton.

"It's a lot of learning right now, getting used to each other," said Ryan. "Personally, I'm hoping for a better season and looking to contribute anyway I can."

At yesterday's media day, the players posed for a team picture, joked with reporters and seemed pretty loose.

"We're looking forward to the season, we have so much talent and enthusiasm this

continued on page 23

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

A sign of things to come, freshman forward Duane Chase dunks during practise yesterday at the cage. UMass opens Nov. 23 against Merrimack.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

University of Massachusetts field hockey coach Pam Hixon has had up to five freshmen start for her this season. The Minutemen, 13-4-2, open NCAA tournament play on Saturday.

The freshmen of influence

They've helped spark field hockey into tourney

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

One month ago, the 10th-ranked University of Massachusetts was about to face its biggest test of the season, hosting nationally ranked Temple and three-time defending national champion Old Dominion.

Offensively flat in its previous outing, a 1-1 tie to unranked Northeastern, head coach Pam Hixon sat down key starters, replacing them with freshmen eager to impress. Inserted into the lineup was sweeper Colleen Reilly, defensive backs Pam Bustin and Julie Stuart, along with forwards Kathy DeAngelis and Ruth Vasapolli.

None of them had started since high school. But taking the opportunity, the quintet provided the team with a winning spark as UMass swept both teams, restablishing the Minutewomen as a national contender.

"They just went out, played and did what they were told. That was what we needed," Hixon said. "The freshmen sparked us, picked us up. They made everyone else go and forced the more experienced players to assume their proper leadership roles."

Without the newly found enthusiasm, the Minutewomen, 6-2-1 and ninth ranked at the time, might have witnessed the death of their tournament hopes that weekend.

"That was a big weekend for us, the freshman brought new life to us and reaffirmed our belief in ourselves as contenders," senior defensive All-America Megan Donnelly said earlier this season.

Since that weekend, the five freshman, along with first-year defensive back Chris Gutheil, who provided needed depth to the defensive corps that was necessary during Donnelly's three-game absence while playing for the U.S. National Team, have had a big influence on the tournament-bound Minutewomen providing a spark both on and off the field.

"They brought new enthusiasm to the team, it's good to see," Donnelly said.

Statistically, their impact has been slight, scoring a combined four goals with one assist, but their impact is one measured in intensity and on-the-field presence.

That intensity and presence will be key factors in this weekend's opening round NCAA tournament commencing Saturday against Boston University in Boston. For UMass to sweep the weekend and gain a spot in the Final Four, the freshmen and the rest of the team will have to give 100 percent all weekend, Hixon said.

After a successful weekend playing on artificial turf in Michigan, Hixon said that she felt the freshmen now have the confidence and intensity to perform well in the tournament. Saturday's game will be on the artificial turf of BU's Nickerson Field, something the freshmen have had to adjust to since few high schools play on artificial surface.

"Playing on artificial turf was something they needed to learn, something that needed time to be brought out. After their performance last weekend, I would say they've made the adjustment," Hixon said.

Hixon said that all of her freshmen have the potential to be excellent field hockey players, but that like everyone else, they are always learning and doing something new.

"They've been learning ever since the first game. But as I've said all year, no one's starting spot is safe," Hixon said. "If someone has a great practice, she could start. If someone isn't playing well, someone else could take her place."

Hixon has been pleased with the performance of her freshman thus far but said that each must perform to her level of expectation and perform each specific job Hixon expects to be carried out. Hixon described each as distinct players from one another.

"Our defenders have a thankless job. (Julie Stuart) has had to make an adjustment from being a forward, but she's a plugger, a hard worker and fits into our

continued on page 23

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Freshman forward Ruth Vasapolli scored a pair of goals against Purdue to help UMass cement its berth into the NCAA tournament.

Inside

Inside today's Collegian there's a special photo essay on the upcoming UMass men's basketball season (page 7) and a feature on women's soccer star Carolyn Micheel on page 23. Tomorrow: previews of this weekend's NCAA tournament action and a look at the Minutemen's final football game of the season, Saturday at New Hampshire.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 49 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Friday, November 15, 1985

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

THE CASK OF AMONTILLADO?—Mason Tony Galvin works yesterday with James Foley on an addition to the Veterinary Hospital in Amherst, which will be completed in February

Faculty Senate for appeals process

BY SEAN CASEY and LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

The graduate student grievance procedure, designed to provide graduate students with an appeals process, was unanimously approved yesterday at the Faculty Senate meeting.

The only discussion was where the procedure would be sent next. If the plan is to be implemented on both the Amherst and Boston campuses, approval from the Board of Trustees is required.

"The Faculty Senate was probably the biggest hurdle since faculty members would be the people most likely to fall under the purview of the procedure," said John Hayes, the graduate senate executive officer who has been working on the procedure since last May.

Dean Alphange, a faculty member of the Graduate Council which drafted the proposal, said a grievance policy had been submitted in 1977, but had not passed the University president's office. Alphange said the present policy "sought to simplify procedures," and remove the role of lawyers, who had been included in the original policy.

A grievance may be submitted to the Ombud's Office by any graduate student, and the office must first try to resolve the situation through informal communication between the parties. If no progress is made in the conflict after 15 days of informal discussion, the parties then have the option to utilize the mediation process.

The next step in the procedure for a still unresolved conflict is the submission of written statements to the Ombud's Office. This must be done within 60 days of the initial involvement of the Ombud's Office.

A hearing panel is then selected, comprised of one person chosen by the student, one selected by the respondent ,the subject of the grievance, and a third member to be selected jointly by the other two panel members.

After the hearing, the panel will submit a signed report containing its findings and its decision, and their decision will be binding unless either party appeals it to the graduate dean, whose decision will then be final and binding.

Alphange said the proposal in 1977 was an entirely different plan. "That procedure had lawyers involved throughout the process, so it did not have as much opportunity to resolve the process through informal dialogue."

In the current procedure, a party's observer may not be a lawyer unless the other party in the grievance is a lawyer. A non-participatory observer for either party may be a lawyer.

Another concern for graduate students was the amount of time allowed in the entire process, which under the new process may not excede 78 days.

Nursing may stay

By LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

The Division of Nursing at the University of Massachusetts will probably not be eliminated, Provost Richard O'Brien told the Faculty Senate yesterday.

"I am optimistic that on the basis of this document (a report prepared by the nursing division), we will be able to arrive at a mutually satisfying agreement," he said.

O'Brien said that in the course of a nursing division review, he had discovered that the productivity level of the division "departed very far from the norms." The administration requested that the division address the problems by November 1.

"We received a very useful document with thoughtful suggestions to improve the program," O'Brien said. He said the document was being studied, and he hoped to respond to the faculty as soon as possible to recommend a course of action for the division.

"The derogatory marks are intolerable to us," M. Christine King, a member of the nursing division, said. "Our program compares very favorably to peer institutions. I think our professors have validated our excellence."

In other senate business, the senate unanimously and without discussion passed a policy designed to tighten smoking restrictions in campus buildings. The policy states that smokers must be provided with a smoking area apart from those who choose not to smoke. Smoking is prohibited from classrooms, auditoriums and food preperation areas. In a seperate motion, the senate requested that the administration recommend suggestions for enforcing the policy.

In an address to the senate, O'Brien said that the threat of Accuracy in Academia on campus raises a question as to what extent non-registered students or nonstudents can be allowed to sit in on courses. O'Brien said no formal University policy exists, but that it is within the jurisdiction of the individual faculty to decide. AIA seeks to eliminate "outright falsehood" by monitoring university professors for liberal biases. "The environment of informers creates an atmosphere of intimidation," Chancellor Joseph Duffey said. "More than anything else we should be opposed to this secrecy and labelling."

Task force to alter graduation format

By ANDREW WOLFF
Collegian Staff

Provost Richard O'Brien and Vice Chancellor Deirdre Ling are expected to meet this morning to review plans to change the format for the Class of 1986 graduation ceremony as part of a long range plan designed to clamp down on the usually unorganized event.

The plans, part of an interim report offered by the Commencement Task Force, call for better enforcement of stadium policy that bans alcohol from the premises, adding undergraduate names to the commencement booklet and shortening the ceremony, according to Mary Spellicy, coordinator for special events and a member of the 15 member task force.

Ling said she does not expect to make any final decisions as a result of today's meeting. Rather, some more recommendations are expected.

"The interest in the no-alcohol policy is strong enough to get cooperation from people concerned, meaning the students," Spellicy said yesterday. "They [students] have to recognize this is their ceremonies and ask 'How does it look?' "

The effort to clean up the ceremonies—the main charge of the task force—comes after last year's commencement when a barrage of letters from parents, alumni and trustees complained about the way the ceremonies were handled, according to Stacey Roth, Student Government Association co-president.

"After last year, they [administrators] got a lot of pressure," Roth said.

Part of the complaints, Roth said, centered around parents of graduates passing bottles of champagne from the stands to the graduates on the stadium field, where commencement excercises are held. To eliminate that, officials hope to use a wooden storm fence to separate the graduates from the stands.

The plans for the fence are not part of the proposals Ling and O'Brien are expected to consider today, Roth said.

However, they are expected to look at better ways to enforce the alcohol policy, improve the public address system, make the stage more visible to the audience, attract faculty members and allow more student input into selecting a commencement speaker.

Also to be considered some time soon is the possibility of having two ceremonies—one in the morning for the entire student body and another in the afternoon that would split the graduates into groups possibly according to school. During the afternoon, graduates would receive their actual diplomas in front of a smaller audience as a way to personalize the ceremony, Roth said.

Under the current format, graduates receive a case for their diploma, but do not receive the actual document until some time in the fall.

The task force, which met for the first time in late August, is headed by Fredrick Byron, dean of faculty of natural science and mathematics and has been convening every two weeks since then, Spellicy said.

Inn Employees seek support

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Employees of the Lord Jeffery Inn are expected to launch a drive for community support of their opposition of the inn management today.

"Our strategy is to get out to the community to resist the economic crunch the management is engaging in," employees union director Rob Traber said. Fifty employees were laid off when management of the inn, which is 70 percent-owned by Amherst College, indefinitley closed restaurant and bar operations Nov. 6.

"With the kind of economic coercion which the college is applying, the (laid-off) employees could use donations immediately," Traber said. Traber will announce the employees' plan for soliciting local support at a press conference at 5:30 tonight in front of the inn.

The closing of the Lord Jeffery restaurant came after a 60 percent decline in restaurant business during a picket by inn

continued on page 3

Inside:

Reagan discusses summit.....2
Flicks for the weekend.....10
NCAA playoffs this weekend.....16

"I'm sure many of you are sick of hearing and reading about the Undergraduate Student Senate."
—Caroline Murray, see letter page 7.

WORLD/NATIONAL

The volcano Nevado Del Ruiz erupted Wednesday night, killing possibly thousands in the town of Armaro, Colombia below.

Volcano erupts in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - A volcano that had been rumbling to life for months erupted early yesterday, melting its snowcap and sending down torrents of mud that buried four sleeping towns and may have killed more than 20,000 people.

Blazing volcanic ash cascaded into the Andes valleys. Lava began flowing from the cone yesterday afternoon.

The Langunilla River became a rushing wall of mud that destroyed at least 85 percent of Armero, a coffee-farming town of 50,000 people 30 miles from the Nevado del Ruiz volcano and 105 miles northwest of Bogota.

"Armero doesn't exist anymore," Red Cross rescue worker Fernando Duque said in an interview from the scene on Todelar radio.

The three other towns, on the mountain river between the volcano and Armero, had a total population of about 20,000.

Caracol radio said the ash fall was so heavy at 1 p.m. Thursday that "it looked like it was night time." It quoted a national university geologist as saying the lava flow had begun. They did not say how large the flow was or give its direction.

A Civil Defense spokesman, Maj. Hugo Ardila, told a noon news conference in Bogota that about 10,000 people had been found alive in Armero up to that time.

One of them, Edeliberto Nieto, told IRCN radio: "We heard a frightening noise, and then a blast of wind hit us and we saw fire falling from the sky. It was horrible, so horrible! My wife was killed. My mother was killed. My little girl who would have been four years old tomorrow died. One of my sisters was killed and one of my little nephews."

Today's staff:

Night Editor.....John Yonce
Copy Editor.....Jim Patriquin
Layout Technician.....BethAnne Moskov
Photo Technician.....Maria Bull
Production Supervisor.....Norm Achin
Production.....Laura Bell, Pam Marchand, Amy Constant, Paula Saucier, Lynn Smiley.

Correction:

State Representative George Kevarian, D-Everett, is the speaker of the state House of Representatives, not the majority leader as indicated in yesterday's Collegian.

Soviet embassy ignores letter to Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., and the wife of imprisoned Soviet dissident Anatoly Scharansky were rebuffed yesterday at the Soviet Embassy when they attempted to deliver a letter signed by a majority of the Senate seeking Scharansky's freedom.

Kerry rang the bell at the embassy gate repeatedly and shouted over the fence for someone to take the letter, but no one came.

Kerry, Avital Scharansky and a score or more people protesting the Soviet's treatment of Jews than marched to a nearby mailbox and deposited the letter addressed to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"I think when we all stood behind those closed gates we could, a little bit, feel like my husband is feeling, imprisoned more than eight and a half years," Mrs. Scharansky said.

Kerry said the letter, initiated by fellow Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, was signed by 84 senators at the time it was mailed and that he expected more signatures would be collected.

"As you prepare for the summit in Geneva with President Reagan," the letter said, "your attention must not be diverted from a personal tragedy that continues to cast a dark shadow on Soviet-American relaions—the continued unjustifiable imprisonment of Anatoly Scharansky."

Reagan aims for peace

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., and the wife of imprisoned Soviet dissident Anatoly Scharansky were rebuffed yesterday at the Soviet Embassy when they attempted to deliver a letter signed by a majority of the Senate seeking Scharansky's freedom.

Kerry rang the bell at the embassy gate repeatedly and shouted over the fence for someone to take the letter, but no one came.

Kerry, Avital Scharansky and a score or more people protesting the Soviet's treatment of Jews than marched to a nearby mailbox and deposited the letter addressed to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"I think when we all stood behind those closed gates we could, a little bit, feel like my husband is feeling, imprisoned more than eight and a half years," Mrs. Scharansky said.

Kerry said the letter, initiated by fellow Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, was signed by 84 senators at the time it was mailed and that he expected more signatures would be collected.

Joe Kennedy may run

BOSTON (AP) - Two months after his cousin dropped out of the race, Joseph P. Kennedy II is considering a run for Congress next fall in the district being vacated by retiring U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

Kennedy, 32, the eldest son of the late U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, has commissioned a poll of his chances in the 8th Congressional District as "one of a whole range of options he is considering," spokesman Steven Rothstein said yesterday.

His cousin, Edward M. Kennedy Jr., son of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced last September he would not be a candidate for the seat.

CHANCELLOR RESIGNS—Kasper Marking, chancellor of the 25,000-student University System of New Hampshire, resigned yesterday, effective in June. Kasper, who held the position for almost two years, said he would pursue "other opportunities."

YOUR ONE STOP CHRISTMAS SHOP
The Old Mill
ROUTE 63
NORTH AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 01059
1 mile north of UMass 549-2667

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*
While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.
* Upon faculty approval

University Travel & Tours, Inc.

Winter & Thanksgiving Break

2 weeks around sunny Greece $699

3 weeks around Europe $999

5 days to Montreal $199

3 days to Boston $99

Prices include air flights, hotel accommodations, breakfast, transportation to and from airports and hotels, and much more.

Includes: transportation, hotel accommodations, breakfast, sightseeing tour, tips and all taxes.

For Information Call:
UNIVERSITY TRAVEL and TOURS INC.
225 Main St. Northampton
(413) 584-9913

Rule changes may increase efficiency

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Undergraduate Student Senate, expressing a desire to increase efficiency in its weekly meetings, has initiated a rules change that it hopes will empower "the average senator."

The rules change, which the senate approved by a voice vote Wednesday night, amends senate by-laws concerning the order and placement of business on the body's agendas. In the past, motions submitted by the senate officers and committee chairs could have been considered early in the meetings. Old business left from prior meetings and new business would then be considered, but only after all the officer and committee chair reports.

News Analysis

This situation, plus the fact that many motions submitted by non-officers and non-chairs have been left at the bottom of agendas, has prompted the senate's decision to change the agenda procedure. Under the amendment, all motions submitted to the speaker will be given priority on a time of receipt basis. All of them will be placed under new business during the week of submission and put under old business the following week if they aren't considered.

The second phase of the amendment would change the agenda's order so that all the old business will be considered right after the call to order and any brief announcements. So, the presidents', senate officers', and committee chairs' reports would only be heard after all the motions are considered.

Since motions would be considered on a time stamp basis, a senator's position would have no influence as to when their motion is considered.

"As the senate, we all have one vote, and one vote shouldn't be weighed more than another," said Denise Forbes, a senator who proposed the amendment. The amendment, Forbes said, is a "more effective way to get the senate to be potentially more efficient."

Mark DeNyse, the co-chair of the Rents and Fees Committee, said, "We'll be dealing with it (old business) right away." He said the senate had to change to become more efficient and under the amendment "every senator's motion is treated equally as if the president submitted a motion."

Since all unconsidered business would become old business, the concern for a pile-up at the start of each meeting was voiced by Senate Speaker John Ruddock.

continued on page 6

U. El Salv. invasion discussed

By SHERYL JEAN
Collegain Staff

Mario Davila was a student at the University of El Salvador when it was invaded in 1980 by more than 800 soldiers.

He discussed the invasion and what is happening on that campus now, in addition to speaking about El Salvodor's problems in a lecture at New Africa House last night.

"The reason why we were taken over was because we (the University) were condemning the government for its oppression of people and asking it to recognize the sociological and economic problems in our country," Davila said.

"It was June 26,1980 at about 10 in the morning when I saw many tanks coming through the gates, helicopters landing on the roofs and soldiers all over campus," Davila said.

"I saw people trying to hide anywhere, even in trash cans," Davila said. "I saw many people being killed and tortured."

"The campaign now is to rebuild the University, mainly through the help of university students sending equipment to El Salvador," Davila said.

When the students returned to the University in 1984, it was a shell without books or desks or anything, Davila said.

"The government does nothing and never has," Davila said. President Duarte was in office at the time of the invasion of the University, he said.

Collegian photo by Brian Guarnotta

Mario Davila

"The University has always been autonomous, and we would like to keep it that way," Davila said. The University of El Salvador is the only public university in that country, he said.

"Before closing in 1980 the University had low fees and gave many scholarships, but now the government is putting alot of pressure on the students," Davila said.

The University in 1980 had about 30,000 students and staff and upon reopening in 1984, there were only about 2,000 people, Davila said.

He said the only solution to El Salvador's problems is discontinuing military aid from the United States.

He said he was honored to speak on behalf of those who couldn't be there. He said that American students are the only ones who can help through delegations and sending equipment.

Vigil for university today

Students and faculty from the University of Massachusetts will gather at noon today on the Student Union Building steps to take part in a simultaneous Five College vigil in support of the University of El Salvador.

The purpose of the vigil is "to raise awareness on campus about the situation in El Salvador. We enjoy academic freedom to a large extent, but others in El Salvador don't," said Debbie Neubauer, a member of the University of El Salvador Campaign.

Eight hundred members of the El Salvador military stormed the University on June 26, 1980 and killed more than 60 student and faculty members. After four years of military occupation, the University reopened in May of 1984 and is now struggling to rebuild.

"We're trying to unite ourselves with academic freedom, and realize the importance of education," said Karin Gardner, co-chairwoman of the Black Student Union at Amherst College. The vigil in Amherst College will not take place today because of a lack of communication with the University of El Salvador. A petition to support demands for full adequate financial aid to the University of El Salvador will be circulated throughout Amherst College and plans for a vigil are underway and will probably take place before Thanksgiving.

Sponsored by the University of El Salvador Campaign, the vigil is to promote knowledge of the repression at the University of El Salvador, Neubauer said.

—FRANCI RICHARDSON

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

TWISTED HEAVY METAL—The sculpture "Variation on Theme II" is displayed in front of the Merrill Center at Amherst College.

Collegian photo by Maria Bull

HOMELESS AT HAMPSHIRE—Sherry Saxton, a student at Hampshire College, is off early to a rehearsal yesterday of "Top Girls," currently playing at at the school.

★ Lord Jeff

continued from page 1

employees, begun Oct. 25. The 70 employees, all members of local 217 Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, protested the management's proposed two-tier wage system. Under the proposed system, new employees would be entitled to less shift flexibility and a lower pay-rate than current employees, who would also lose shift flexibilty.

But wages at the inn are 15 to 25 percent higher that those of its local competitors, which has resulted in a $500,000 loss by the inn over the last five years, inn negotiator Kent Faerber said at a meeting of the Amherst College Faculty Nov. 5.

"They (the inn management) see two choices," Traber said. "To be a good employer, or to make money, with no in-between."

Negotiations between inn employees and management are currently frozen, after a meeting encouraged by a federal mediator Nov. 8 yielded no compromise.

The University of Massachusetts Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, the Massachusetts Faculty Union and the UMass Student Government Association have endorsed the efforts of inn employees, Traber said.

Driver almost hits plain-clothes cop

A 17-year-old New York resident "almost ran over a plain-clothes (police) officer" Wednesday night on Stadium Road, University of Massachusetts police said.

The driver of the car was cited for reckless driving and driving an unregistered motor vehicle, police said.

In other police reports:

A 18-speed bicycle was reported stolen from the 17th floor lounge of John Quincy Adams House Wednesday afternoon. The bike was locked but not secured to anything. It was taken sometime between Saturday and Sunday, police said.

A 1968 Dodge valued at $1000 was reported stolen from parking lot 40 Wednesday night. It was recovered less than a half an hour later in parking lot 63. "The owner possibly forgot where he parked it," police said. It was unlocked.

$150 in coins was taken from the Campus Center Video Parlor Wednesday afternoon. The front of a video game was pried open, police said.

A 1977 Plymouth received $150 in damages when the driver's side window was smashed Wednesday afternoon in the McGuirk Alumni Stadium P lot. It happened sometime since October 28, police said.

A 22-year-old man was issued a trespassing notice and was removed from the Campus Center Concourse Wedenesday night. He was confronted by a police officer and showed a UMass ID with a validation sticker for fall 1985 which was confiscated. He had been "removed from the University (before)," police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

F.Y.I.:

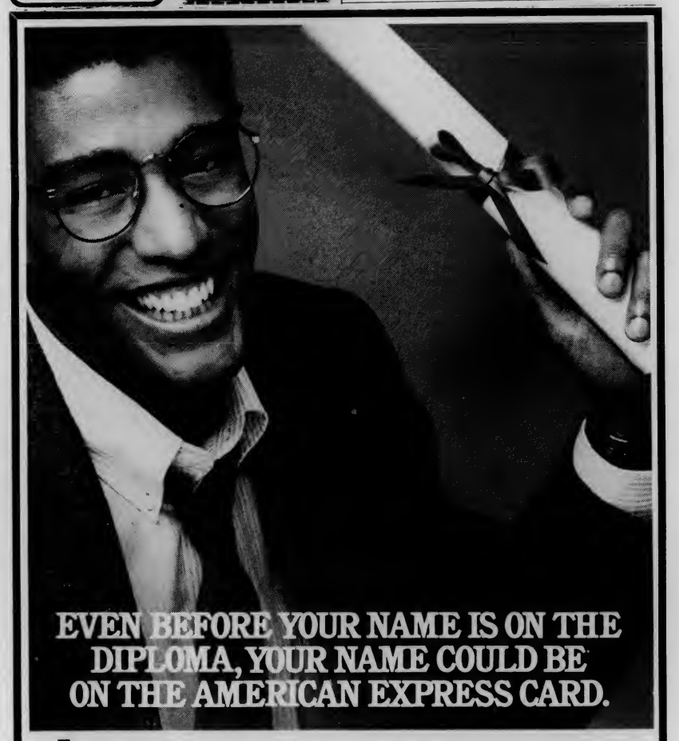
Spring 1986 course schedule pamphlets will be available to students from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today on the Campus Center concourse. Starting Monday, the schedule pamphlets will be available at the Registrar's Office, the Whitmore Information Desk and the first floor lobby of Whitmore. Only one pamphlet will be given to each person.

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco - imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes - imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines: Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

Evening Wear?
The Happy Cowboy Flannel Nightshirt . . . of course.
J·RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
29 MASONIC ST •NORTHAMPTON•584-8308
Just around the corner from Ben's
Mon-Sat 10-6 Thurs 10-8 Sun 12-5

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

The Old Mill
YOUR ONE STOP CHRISTMAS SHOP
ROUTE 63 549-2667
NORTH AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 01059
1 Mile North of UMass



RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst
Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

HAIRCUTS
$8.50
with this coupon
CALL
STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr., Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85

Herrell's Ice Cream
Thomas Marketplace
Old South St Entrance
Northampton
Open Noon 'till 11:30 Sun. Thurs
Noon 'till Midnight Fri & Sat
586-4837
Herrell's Ice Cream
The Original and Still the Best!

PLANT DISEASES:
FEAST/FAMINE
Plant Pathology 100
MWF 10 AM, Spring 1986
3 Credits
Call 545-2280
Plant Disease and Human History
Disease Resistant Plants
Biological Control
Diseases That Threaten World Food Supplies

DELANO'S
FINE FOOD & SPIRITS
Mon & Tues Nite
Free Taco Bar*
* 9 - till it lasts!
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Heineken
57 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

EVEN BEFORE YOUR NAME IS ON THE DIPLOMA, YOUR NAME COULD BE ON THE AMERICAN EXPRESS CARD.

It's not too long until you'll be walking up to get your degree. But there's something you could get right now that will help you in any walk of life. The American Express® Card.

Because if you're a senior and you've accepted a $10,000 career-oriented job, you could get the American Express Card.

That's it. No gimmicks. (And even if you don't have a job right now, don't worry. This offer is still good for 12 months after you graduate.) This is a special offer from American Express because, as graduating seniors, we think you're kind of special. In fact, we believe in your future. And this is the best way we know to prove it.

Of course, the American Express Card will prove to be a great help to you in your career—for travel and for entertaining. And, to entertain yourself, you can use it to buy some new clothes for work or some new things for home. In addition, the Card is also a great way to help you begin to establish your credit history.

So call 1-800-THE-CARD and ask to have a Special Student Application sent to you. Or look for one on campus. The American Express Card. Don't leave school without it.℠

Prosecution of psychiatrist delayed by resigning lawyer

BOSTON (AP) - A lawyer prosecuting "gross misconduct" charges against a Northampton psychiatrist has resigned, delaying resumption of the state medical board's disciplinary hearings against Dr. Rodolph H. Turcotte, a spokeswoman for the board said.

Hearings scheduled for next week in Boston at the state Board of Registration in Medicine have been canceled until a new lawyer is hired, said board spokeswoman Nin Bellotti.

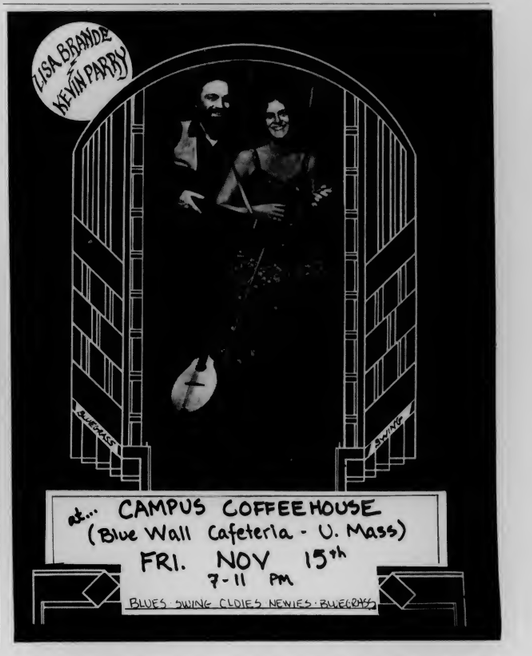
The attorney, Louis Scrima, said he left his job Oct. 30 as a lawyer with the medical board to work for the city of Boston in labor relations.

Turcotte, 65, former chief of psychiatry at Northampton State Hospital who has been running a private practice at his home, has said the misconduct charges are without substance.

Turcotte is charged with manipulating one of his former patients, Jonathan Frey of Williamsburg, for his personal gain and entrusting one of his teen-age daughters into Frey's care even though the two had a sexual relationship.

He has offered to surrender his medical license, but he refused to sign a statement promising never to attempt practice again.

His lawyer, Peter Huntsman of Hartford, Conn., said it was Frey who betrayed his doctor's trust.



The medical board's lawyer, Louis Scrima, charged at disciplinary hearings in September that Turcotte fostered a relationship between his own daughter and Frey in 1976. At the time, Frey was recently divorced and had just inherited two large trust funds. The girl was then 14.

AP Laserphoto

NUCLEAR TEACHER—Prof. Richard Morrison of the University of New Haven, will teach "Introduction to Nuclear Weapons" at the school in the spring. Morrison will teach the effects of nuclear weapons and how to build a nuclear bomb.

Region

UMASS ALPINE SKI COURSE at MT. TOM
4 Lesson, 4 Week
1 Credit Course
Classes begin first week in February.
Offered Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights
$50
(includes transportation)
Sign up at GPE Office
Rm 227 Boyden

★ Grand Opening ★
SPORTSWEAR FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA

BIKE® Numbered Football Jersey
Reg. $15.00 $5.99

BIKE® SHORTS
Reg. $8.00 $2.99

BIKE® Football Mesh Shirts
Reg. $15.00 $5.99

WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99

All N.F.L. Football MLBB Baseball 20% OFF

- Team Jackets
- Sweat Shirts
- NFL Telephones
- Wall Plaques
- Coffee Mugs
- Beer Mugs
- Stadium Blankets
- Beach Towels
- Watches
- Alarm Clocks
- Infant Wear
- Toddler NFL Wear

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals

Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

• LPs • BLANKS • CASS • 45s

MAGS • IMPORTS

AL-BUM'S

NEW ENLARGED STOCK OF RECORDED CASSETTES $3.99-$7.99
ALL CDs IN STOCK $12.99

DON'T FORGET WE
BUY • SELL • TRADE
USED LPs, CASSETTES & CDs

ALBUMS•181 N. PLEASANT STREET•AMHERST •253-7137

SUNGLASSES

POSTERS • PINS • ACCESSORIES

OOPS!

Now's the time to call...

North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

JUSTIN RYAN'S

50¢ DRINKS
$2.00 COVER

Rte. 9, Amherst 256-1059
corner of University Dr.

★ News analysis—continued from page 3

Ruddock, a vocal opponent of the amendment said the senate acted "hastily" in its approval. The amendment "relieves committees of a lot of responsibility but it will thrust that responsibility onto the senate agenda."

The previous by-law procedure, referred to as committed agenda, called for the speaker to refer motions to the appropriate committees. A recommendation on how the senate should vote would then be made from the committee. This procedure was not utilized before this past meeting, and with the amendment passage, it has been scratched from the by-laws.

The problem of inefficiency has plagued the senate all semester and many senators hope this amendment will contribute to smoother running meetings.

"Things will start happening again," said Jordan Rosner, chairman of the Budgets Committee. Under the previous system, Rosner said, "the average senator's motions would never have been gotten to."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

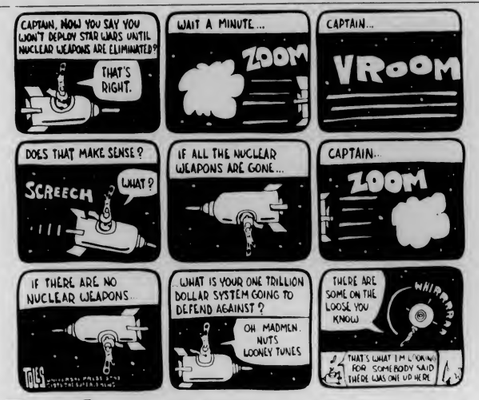
Security is lax, inefficient

Donna Restaino

As a resident of the Southwest Residential Area, I have observed the dorm security and I question its efficiency. I have spoken with a resident assistant, several security receptionists, and I have also read the security notebook in order to obtain facts about the security system.

Reading the security notebook, I found the goal of security: to work with residence hall staff, students, faculty, University staff, and police to provide a safe and secure environment for students, guests and building users. Often, I find that this goal is not achieved. The monitoring of guest and resident access to the 41 dorms is not always effective. In fact, while I was reading the security notebook, the security receptionist left to get something and asked me to "watch his stuff and let anybody in."

I have often entered buildings without being checked for my ID and I have also enterd buildings through doors that are supposed to be locked. The handbook states that the doors are supposed to be locked and checked every 45 minutes to be certain that they remain locked for the night. Obviously, this is not the case and therefore it is not very difficult for outsiders to enter our buildings.



Another service provided by security, as stated in the handbook, is working with the residence hall staff in educating students about security issues. I can honestly say that I have never been "educated" about security issues or policies. The only "education" I ever received was an upperclassman telling me that I need my ID and key to enter my dorm every night. After asking some friends, I found that they were not informed about security any more than I was. Instead of being "educated" or informed about the system, I learned on my own simply by experiencing it.

I must admit that some of the blame should be placed on the residents. Many are apathetic about the situation—leaving cans in doors to keep them open and opening doors for strangers. However, much of the blame falls on the employees who are also apathetic about their jobs. They obviously do not take their jobs seriously enough, and this, along with the resident's apathy, creates such problems as robberies, rapes, and assaults. Unfortunately, I think the only way the residents and employees will change their ways is by something serious happening that affects them personally.

The security problem is a difficult one to solve. It must be very hard to maintain a safe environment at a university of this size. Perhaps students are not responsible enough for the security position. If this is true, maybe people other than students should be hired; unfortunately that would take away a lot of student employment opporunities. One solution might be to hire one professional security guard for each dorm. He or she would probably take the job more seriously and keep the students on their toes.

There might not be a clear-cut solution to our security problem but I think there should at least be some awareness that our security system is not really as secure as it could be. I think that more of the robberies, rapes, and assaults should be publicized in the Collegian. This would show the frequency and severity of the problem, and therefore, make people worry and think about what is really going on. This awareness might result in a more concerned, and consequently, a more secure environment.

Donna Restaino is a UMass student

Random notes

Larry Bouchie

John Duff, chancellor of higher education, has been accepted for the position of head of the Chicago Public Library. Apparently, Duff's recent problems with allegations that he solicited political contributions did not soil him in the eyes of the library board—the vote was 5-2 in his favor.

And, while Duff hammers out a contract before he formall accepts the job, many names are being bantied about as predecessors. Some local favorites are Barbara Newell, who resigned as head of the Florida state college system last summer and who is now in residence at Harvard, and David Bartley, a former speaker for the house of representatives and current president of Holyoke Community College.

The Boston Globe had a list in Wednesday's edition, including Robert Tranquanda, chancellor of the UMass Medical School, David Knapp, UMass president, William O'Neil, vice president of the Massachusetts College of Art, and Joseph Finnegan, vice chancellor of fiscal affairs for the regents.

* * *

On campus, Chancellor Joseph Duffey yesterday led an informal discussion with University students and professors (from both sides of the political spectrum), to discuss Accuracy In Academia. Globe reporter Renee Loth, formerly of the Boston Phoenix, was also in attendance, as she is working on a story about the group.

While most of those in attendance agreed that UMass has nothing to hide, many of those present expressed concern that the issue is not accuracy, but one of political motivation.

* * *

Inefficiency in the Undergraduate Student Senate may soon be allieviated with the passage of a senate procedure amendment, approved by a voice vote Wednesday night. Motions will now be considered according to the time they are received by the senate speaker, as opposed to a senator's position in the assembly.

Under the previous system, the president's, officers', and committee chair reports, which preceded main motions, could themselves contain motions. This meant that those officers' and chairs' motions were prioritized, because they preceded all other motions. Let's hope that all senators can now utilize this reform to its fullest potential, and keep senate business moving steadily.

* * *

I'm ashamed to admit that, though I'm a senior, it wasn't until recently I discovered the People's Market. Nestled behind Earthfoods in the Student Union, the market offers appealing natural foods and beverages and, my favorite, true, hot coffee.

Larry Bouchie is a Collegian columnist.

Letters

We're on a roll, let's not blow it

Now that the game "Assassin" has made the Collegian's front page, it's time for an editorial opinion. Am I getting old, or does everyone look upon this game with the same head scratching that I do? I hope it's the latter.

Every college institution (and evidently "institution" is a play on words) has had its identifying peculiarities—gamewise. Michigan State University was obsessed with Dungeons and Dragons in the late 1970's. It grew to such pathetic proportions that one player skipped town for New Orleans, to be rendered home again by a private investigator.

Now UMass has stepped into the ring. As I read the paper from day to day, I see people are alarmed because "gunmen" lurked the streets with what the police called "plastic weapons." It's (for once) no media scam. Even I, as I walked out of the bathroom of my campus abode, have been assaulted by my mutated bunkies. When this happens, I look upon them with sheer perplexity, but they look back at me with unforsaken relief, because I'm not one of them. Of course, they're on the lookout for their fellow assassins. Adversly, I'm getting a great sense of intimidating powers to know I put the fear of God into three or four people when all I was doing was answering the call of nature. Think about that the next time the natural effect of a barley malt leads you to the commode.

How is it, though, that a quality University as this one has students indulging so intensely on a game of make believe? Are we not offered enough by the administration? Maybe the social life is lacking. I don't really know what is lacking, nor is it my greatest concern. But, when this kind of flash-in-the-pan pastime makes the news, it also makes an image of the University. UMass has just about shaken the image of being a zoo. Granted, we can be a bit unruly at time, but no different than any other school with a student body of over 20,000 people. We're on a roll, let's not blow it.

In May, when I get my degree, I want to admire it, not laugh at it. I should remember the craziness we all went through to keep our sanity so we could graduate, not the Neanderthals who crept the campus by night with their finger-triggered phallic symbols.

Of course, Assassin doesn't pose any weighted threat, but it deserves (dis)honorable mention. After all, Michigan State wasn't ruined by Dungeons and Dragons. It's still in Michigan, if that's any consolation. Best of all, the whole issue has given me something to chuckle about, and something to laugh at with my friends over a couple of cold ones. Otherwise they laugh at me.

Peter J. DePuy
Sylvan

Reported plea was inaccurate

In Wednesday's Collegian there was a mistake in the article "Dance held for 'Divest 9'" The article stated "the group's members are the only ones not to have pleaded guilty (emphasis added) in the case." The majority of the arrested members of the April First Coalition submitted to fact sufficient and the case was dismissed. The members of Divest 9 could not morally plead anything but not guilty and are taking the case to trial on Tuesday-Thursday, Nov. 19-21.

Kai Alexis Price
April First Coalition

Student senator's motives vague

I'm sure many of you are sick of hearing and reading about the Undergraduate Student Senate. Well, so am I—but the difference is that I'm a senator. At my first meeting in September, I was amazed. I couldn't believe the behavior displayed on the senate floor, and worse, I felt that I could accomplish nothing because I had not memorized Robert's Rules of Order. As of last night, I had not said anything at the meetings other than aye or nay. But last night, an important amendment to the by-laws came up which I think I agree with.

The problem was that not everyone (myself included) really knew what the motion meant after its many amendments. Well, after voting for the motion, I decided to make my own motion to reconsider (which basically means we'll have another vote next week). No sooner had my motion faied and I thought my hands would finally stop shaking when I saw Bill Collins, president of SWAG, making a bee-line towards me.

He said, and I quote, "Enough people hate (the Speaker), you should be intelligent enough not to join us." Then he said, with a sweep of his arm embodying the entire senate, "...everyone in the senate is so stupid...." Now, what does that mean? Does it mean that Collins thought my vote was for him and not a motion affecting the senate? Does it mean the senate, as a whole, is a popularity contest and since I'm "unknown" I shouldn't speak?

Not only would I like to know the answers to these questions (since I'm so stupid) but I would also like to ask Collins and many of his cohorts to stop harassing, heckling, bullying, and disrupting the entire senate procedure. I know that it will take me a long time to get up enough guts to speak again on the floor—and for that I'm sorry, because I represent students of UMass, not the Bill Collins Fan Club.

Caroline Murray, senator
Commuter Area Government

RUSSELL'S
LIQUORS
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

BEER:
Bud 12 oz. cans suitcase.....$11.99 case + dep.
Busch 12 oz. cans suitcase.....$9.95 case + dep.
Utica Club 12 oz. long necks.....$6.49 case + dep.
Heinekens, Amstel.....$3.99 6/pk + dep.
Ballantine Beer.....$3.40 12/pk + dep.
LIQUOR & WINE:
Champagnes.....$2.99 + up 750 ml
Flavored Schnapps -all sizes and flavors
Wine Coolers. . .you name it - WE'VE GOT IT!!!

WE'RE SETTING THEM UP-SO YOU CAN MOCK-EM' DOWN!
FALL "SPECIAL"
Saturday 9am to 5pm
Sunday's 9 am to 2 pm
BOWLING
99¢ A Game
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St., Northampton
584-4830

Sophia bookshop

Way Of Cartouche
an Oracle Of Ancient Egyptian Magic, with cards.
$19.95
103 North Pleasant Street
Amherst 253-5574

A Return Engagement
"To Hear Her Is A Joyous Thing"
Debbie Friedman

Concert Performer, Composer, Recording Artist, Liturgist
For People Of All Ages
Saturday, November 16, 8:00 P.M.
Johnson Chapel, Amherst College
Donation...Adults $3.00
Students $1.00
Sponsored By Five College Hillel
In Cooperation with Smith/Amherst Hillel

Special Student / Youth Fares to SCANDINAVIA
On Scheduled Airlines!
The inexpensive way to get to Scandinavia.
Winter Rates:
New York to Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm
from $215 one way, $350 roundtrip
Chicago to Copenhagen
from $215 one way, $350 roundtrip
Chicago to Oslo, Stockholm
from $255 one way, $430 roundtrip
and tours designed especially for students to the
SOVIET UNION
For Information Call:
WHOLE WORLD TRAVEL
17 E. 45th St., New York, NY 10017
(212) 986-9470

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE
Collegian
Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegian Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

WARE SHOE OUTLET

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Mass.
Woman's, name brand, all leather shoes. The latest fashions seen in all the better stores and catalogs are now here!
Starting as low as $20!
Open everyday 9-4:30
Sun. at 12 noon
413-967-7412

BLACK AFFAIRS

Very few minorities hold top-level jobs

BOSTON (AP)—Fewer blacks hold top-level jobs in businesses in the Boston metropolitan area now than three years ago, although racial tensions have eased, employment is booming, and there are more blacks in Boston, according to a published report.

Three years ago, when federal officials called on Boston firms to integrate their work force, especially at the executive level, 2.5 percent of the top jobs in corporations inside Route 128 were held by blacks, according to figures analyzed by The Boston Globe.

Now, the percentage is down 2.4, according to the latest figures compiled for federal officials. And the number of blacks working for private companies has dropped from 6.5 percent to 6.3 percent.

Corporate officials say they are moving steadily toward increasing the number of blacks in executive jobs, but many black leaders find the pace slow and are considering such actions as selective buying campaigns and lawsuits.

"We need direct action by local and national community groups," Jack E. Robinson, president of the Boston chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the Globe.

"Hopefully the business community will respond voluntarily. Otherwise, we will have to resort to selective buying. Or we will investigate the possibility of litigation against firms which handle government funds," he said.

At City Hall, Boston's first black city collector-treasurer George Russell, has kind words for Mayor Raymond L. Flynn on the issue.

"The criticism always leveled at government is that it moves too slowly, but this mayor has moved decisively," he told the Globe.

"If the mayor can find qualified blacks to assume major responsibilities at senior levels, why can't the corporations?" Russell asked.

John Larkin Thompson, president of Massachusetts Blue Cross-Blue Shield and chairman of the Vault, an organization of Boston's largest and most powerful executives, said that companies, unlike government administrations, do not "turn all their managers over every four years."

Corporate officials said that developing black executives "through the pipeline" ensures their progress and creates less antagonism from white workers.

"The focus is on building pools," of black managers from which corporations can draw when promotions become available, Peter Bertschmann, vice president of the New England Telephone Co., told the Globe.

Blacks have held middle management jobs at Boston companies for more than 10 years. The problem has been moving up from there.

"I've spent a lot of time with blacks...who hit a wall five years into their jobs," said Meldon Hollis, former affirmative action officer at Harvard University.

"Many bright, young, black kids were hustled into firms with promises of a future in management. After five years, they find themselves passed over for management promotions.

"They wonder whether they're not so bright after all, or whether it's racism. It's very painful and confusing."

Exhibit reflects sadness

By KIMBERLY A. BURGE
Collegian Staff

As part of Native American Awareness Month, an exhibit of Native American arts and crafts have been on display in the Augusta Savage Art Gallery. The exhibit titled: "A Celebration of Native American Art" will be there until November 22nd.

There are various forms of art done by Native Americans including oil paintings, watercolors, stencils, drawings, and handmade crafts. The paintings reflect the life, times, and struggle of the Native American.

Many of the handmade crafts are items that Native Americans use in their everyday lives such as a cradleboard made from straw, moccasins made from deer skin, dancing beads made from wood, and a ceremonial head dress made from eagle feathers. A handmade patchwork quilt and several shawls were on display as well as a few of the clothes which Native Americans wear everyday.

One patron remarked that he found the exhibit to be "Very sad because there seemed to be no life to them. It's almost like there's a feeling of death." His statement is true because when you walk in, you can almost feel and see the sadness as you gaze at the paintings and look at the many crafts that have been so painstakingly made by the hands of a race of people who were the first true Americans and who are now being oppressed, moved to reservations, and being ignored by the American public.

The lives of Native Americans from diverse cultures are rarely mentioned in books, and there is very little examination of the contributions that Native American men and women have made to the areas of art, poetry, literature, music, and science. Today's system continues to show the on-going invisibility of Native American peoples, cultures, and oppression.

Announcements

A panel discussion on "The Role of Native American Women" will be held at 1 p.m. on Saturday in the Campus Center, Room 168.

The fraternity of Phi Beta Sigma Inc. will be having their second annual social at 8 p.m. tonight on the 11th floor of the Campus Center.

"Computers are Chic..." So says artist Andy Wacko.
Read about it in Talking Clones.
Coming on November 20th
Published by Zenith Data Systems

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
1-665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open:
Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS
THE GREAT SKI SNATCH

$500,000
WORTH OF TOP NAME
WINTER CLOTHING
&
SKI EQUIPMENT
PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED
NOV 21 - 23
T F HIGH NOON TIL 10 P.M.
S 10AM TIL 4PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
UMASS, AMHERST

SALE!
FRI./SAT./SUN.
NOV. 15, 16, 17
OPEN FRI. 'TIL 9:00
HAND CRAFTED WOOL SWEATERS

Imported from Peru
Reg. $38.95
Now $24.95
. . . a colorful selection of unique designs and patterns
A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst Daily 10-6, Sun. 12-5
FACES

Laurie Weiss, an intern with a local lawyer last spring said, "My internship has been the most important part of my education. This experience has clarified and expanded my personal and professional goals." To start YOUR internship contact the UNIVERSITY INTERNSHIP PROGRAM 16 Curry Hicks 545-0727

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
When the copy is as important as the number!
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES

549-3840
228 Triangle St
2nd floor above
Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA.
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 373-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 38 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

ARTS

By DON LIPPER
Collegian Staff

Even though Halloween was weeks ago, monsters seem to be the major theme of many new movies this week; characters battle Hollywood monsters or behave like the actual monsters humans can be.

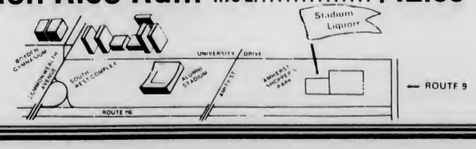
This week heralds the return of one of the biggest grossing box office blockbusters in cinematic history. Yes, film fans, after a 10 year absence from the screen, Godzilla returns!

Godzilla 1985 blasts its way into the Mt. Farms Mall, this Friday, in a new Technicolor, digital sound, dolby stereo destructive romp through Tokyo. In the English language version of this movie, we have the same horrible dubbing that made Japanese movies famous. And like the first Godzilla movie we have Raymond Burr as the American journalist watching the monster. The years haven't exactly been kind to Burr. Let's put it this way, the guy's a globe.

The folks in Japan went crazy a few months ago when this movie came out. I expect it'll do grat here too. Now, no one around here thinks Godzilla 1985 is meaningful cinema, it's trash. But it's great trash, fun trash. It's got to be one of the quickest ways to send yourself into mindless oblivion.

The other monster movie at the Mt. Farms Mall is Once Bitten a teen-age sex comedy with lovely Lauren Hutton as the vampire who gives everlasting hickeys (To be reviewed).

Pleasant Street Theatre is showing two films that show the monsterous side of real human beings. Dance with a Stranger is supposed to be a very intense movie about a passionate love triangle that leads to murder. The movie is based on the true story of Ruth Ellis, the last woman to be hanged in England. The details of her affair and the murder so angered the British society of the 1920's they demanded her execution. I hear this is very good (To be reviewed).



Weekend Best Bets: The Amherst Cinema has a fun double feature this weekend. Buckaroo Banzai is a take-off on all those strange sci-fi serials. A silly movie to be seen in a silly mood. Time Bandits comes from Monty Python Director Terry Jones and is produced by Ex-Beatle Geogre Harrison. It's a strange fairy tale about a kid who is abducted by a bunch of time traveling dwarves who are escaping the wrath of their boss, the supreme being.

Jonathan Reid
Buy one suit at $150.00 and get the SECOND $150.00 SUIT FREE ! !

located at Hampshire Mall in Hadley

AMHERST CINEMA
Friday and Saturday
Buckaroo Banzai 7:00
Time Bandits 9:00
Sunday - Tuesday
From Here to Eternity 7:00
Cat on a Hot Tin Roof 9:05
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

Kegs ★
Beer ★
STADIUM LIQUORS
Amherst
Mass
Wine ★
Soda ★
Minutemen. . . Beat UNH
Catch our great in store specials

SPECIALS
St. Pauli = 14.50 - 5.00 = 9.50 + 1.20 cs. mail in refund
Busch.....$4.90 + .60 12 pk.
Molson.....$3.35 + .30 6 pk.
Burati Asti Spumante.....$6.39
Almaden Mt. Wines 4 L.....$7.49
Vodka 1.75 L.....$9.95
Burnett's Gin 1.75 L.....$12.99
Ron Rico Rum 1.75 L.....$12.99

175 University Drive
253-5595

ARTS

George Adams/Don Pullen Quartet jazz Amherst

By GLENN SIEGEL
Collegian Correspondent

The members of the George Adams/Don Pullen Quartet had a busy day prior to their appearance at Amherst College's Buckley Recital Hall on Wednesday evening.

A mere 24 hours earlier, the group had performed in Spain. They made their way to Madrid, braved an air traffic controller's slowdown and flew to New York, where they turned around and headed for New England.

If they were feeling the effects of intercontinental travel, it didn't show. They treated an enthusiastic audience to a set of high energy, technically dazzling music.

The co-leaders are each distinctive soloists possessing readily identifiable sounds. Tenor saxophonist George Adams seemed to play on top of the notes, liberally sprinkling his playing with overblown honks and squeals, in the best Texas blues tradition. With all his leaps, Adams' solos invariably landed on their feet.

Pianist Don Pullen painted the keyboard with smudges of sound, using the backs of his hands, knuckles and long fingers in his incessant forays up and down his instrument. Unlike Cecil Taylor, the pianist to whom he is most naturally compared, Pullen always returned to the melodic and rhythmic reference point of each of the five compositions the quartet performed.

With Dannie Richmond on drums and Cammeron Brown on bass, the group's impeccable sense of time was assured. Pullen's "Song for the Old Country," began slowly behind Brown's bowed bass, then burst into what could have been, in different hands, a lovely Italian lullabye.

The pianists' other original, "Sing Me a Song Everlasting," was a sumptuous ballad, with some delicate single-note playing by Pullen. Adams' lower register vibrato wafted images of Hawkins and Webster into the rafters.

The evening's highlight was a piece called "Necessary Blues or Thank You Very Much Mr. Monk." Opening in a fast walk, the musicians left the stage one by one, leaving Pullen alone with his piano. His extended solo was a study in dynamics.

Adams came next, accompanied only by Richmond. Amidst his rapid fire trills, he quoted Monk's "Well You Needn't" and "Round Midnight." Richmond's solo which followed was the most evocative of Monk's style, perfectly capturing the sparse, idiosyncratic phrasing that was his trade mark.

The straight ahead blues that concluded the evening, featured Adams on vocals as well as sax. It brought the crowd to its feet.

Amherst guitarist Freddie Bryant and his quartet opened the evening and despite some sound problems, gave a good account of themselves, with tenor man Don Braden and drummer Taro Okamoto especially effective.

Better off Dead is wacky entertaining but lacks consistency

Better off Dead Starring John Cusack Directed by Savage Steve Holland
By HERB RAMY & MATT MACHERA
Collegian Staff

John Cusack, star of last year's hit The Sure Thing returns in another surprisingly good film, Better Off Dead.

While The Sure Thing is not considered a high class comedy, it is refined when compared to Better Off Dead. Here, we have humor gone mad in much the same vein as Airplane.

Though the movie was good, it was not so because of an outstanding or original plot. To call it loose would be a major understatement. The main character loses his girlfriend to the captain of the ski team. He begins to commit suicide a number of times, but changes his mind every time. He eventually tries to win his girlfriend back, but instead falls in love with the girl across the street and they live happily ever after.

Luckily the film does not suffer heavily from the simplicity of the plot. This is because the director does not rely heavily on it to carry the film. Instead he counts on individual scenes and acting to make us laugh.

Often these individual scenes seemed to come out of nowhere. For example, while the mother is scooping a disgusting green substance onto her son's plate for dinner, it (the dinner) walks off the plate. This scene didn't do much to move the story along, but on its own it was extremely funny.

While the movie did use some off the wall ideas to make itwork, its strongest point was the acting. The supporting cast was extremely good. David Ogden Stiers (M.A.S.H.'s Charles) in particular perfectly played a father trying to cope with an adolescent son and an air head wife.

Even with the supporting cast as good as they were, the movie would not have worked without John Cusack. In only his second starring role, Cusack has proven himself to be an excellent comedian.

His timing is so good that it is hard to believe he is such a young performer. Scenes that might not have worked turn out funny because of a simple facial expression or change in the tone of Cusack's voice.

The only way to describe this film would be to call it a bunch of hilarious scenes just barely linked together. It was like watching a comedian continually hurling one liners at you. The lack of plot did make the picture a little tiring towards the end, though on the whole it was well worth seeing.

Daily Collegian
Advertising that works!!
Call: 545-3500

C & C LIQUORS
61 Main St., Amherst
Next to Town Hall
FOR FREE DELIVERY OF $20 MINIMUM ORDER. (OFF UMASS CAMPUS)
Dial 253-3091
All Prices In Store Cash Only
Almaden Mt. Wines 1.5 Liter $3.75
Captain Morgan spiced Rum 750 ml $6.49
Coors Coors Light Miller Light Rolling Rock $11.99 dep.
Ballantine Beer 12 pk $3.80 dep
Cordon Negro Sparkling Wine 750 ml $4.99

amc THEATRES
ANNOUNCE THE EXPANSION OF
amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 4 TO amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 6
TO SERVE THE PUBLIC BETTER WITH
• STATE OF THE ART PROJECTION • DISCOUNT TWILITE & MATINEES
• DOLBY STEREO SOUND • ERGONOMIC SEATS
Grand Opening FRIDAY NOVEMBER 22nd
Back to the Future | Jagged Edge | That was Then This is Now
After Hours | Santa Claus the movie 11/27 | Rocky IV 11/27
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL 584-7550

amc THEATRES
$2.50 MATINEE & TWILITE SHOW
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
Relax, you're never... BETTER OFF DEAD
A killer is loose. TO LIVE AND DIE IN L. A.
GENE HACKMAN DILLON TARGET
A Terry Comedy ONCE BITTEN
GODZILLA 1985 ALL NEW!
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
STEVEN SPIELBERG Presents BACK To The FUTURE
Wild and Wonderful! After Hours
Glenn Close Jeff Bridges JAGGED EDGE
Emilio Estevez in THAT WAS THEN, THIS IS NOW
RAINBOW BRITE AND THE STAR STEALER
THE amc LATE SHOWS:
FRI & SAT at 12:15 - SEATS $ 3.50
ROCKY HORROR
FRIGHT NIGHT
PINK FLOYD THE WALL
THE BREAKFAST CLUB

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MABOU MINES' "Cold Harbor"
A bleak & beautiful study of General Ulysses S. Grant
Sunday, November 17 8 pm.
Tickets $12.10
"The Best of America" —TIME Magazine
Gregg Smith Singers
Wednesday, November 20 8 pm.
Tickets $15.13

JOFFREY II DANCERS
presenting
"Once Upon A Time"
Stories about the life of Hans Christian Andersen
Friday, November 22 8 pm.
Tickets $16.14.12
Five College Students Half-Price. Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center, and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413) 545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

Year after year, semester after semester, the college plan from Fidelity Union Life has been the most accepted, most popular life insurance program on campuses all over America. Find out why.

Fidelity UnionLife

Call the Fidelity Union Life Field Associate in your area:

Ronald J. Nathan Agency
20 Gatehouse Rd.,
Amherst, MA
Tel: 256-8351

It's FRIDAY! Are You Ready For An ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT?

How about taking a dive into a nice relaxing Hot Tub at Utopia Spas? Imagine the soothing music of your choice playing in your private room. Ahhhhh! That's awesome!

½ hour and hour rates available
Open Mon. 4 PM-1 AM,
Tues.-Sun. 11 AM-1 AM
call now for reservations

UTOPIA SPAS
165 University Drive, Amherst
253-7727
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

安城中國飯店
Amherst Chinese Foods
Best Mandarin Food
62-64 MAIN ST., AMHERST
BEER & WINE LICENSE
Fresh Vegetables from Our Own Farm
CLOSED WEDNESDAY
WE DO NOT USE MSG OR ARTICIAL COLORING
253-7835

THINK ABOUT GRADUATE SCHOOL!

Come and meet representatives from accredited graduate schools throughout the United States at the GRE/CGS Forum on Graduate Education in your area

BOSTON
Saturday, November 16, 1985
Hyatt Regency Cambridge
575 Memorial Drive
9:00 am - 4:00 pm

WORKSHOPS
10:00 am - 10:00 am: PRE-FORUM Workshop on Admissions and Financial Aid
11:00 am - 12:00 pm: Graduate Study in Computer Science, Engineering and Mathematics and — Graduate Study in Biological, Health and Physical Sciences
12:30 pm - 1:30 pm: GRE General Test and Subject Test Preparation
2:30 pm - 3:30 pm: Graduate Study in Economics, Psychology and other Social Sciences and Graduate Study in Education and Humanities

REGISTRATION begins at 8:30 am. FEE $3 payable at the door
GRADUATE SCHOOL EXHIBITS WILL BE OPEN FROM 10:00 am – 4:00 pm

Jointly sponsored by the Graduate Record Examinations Board and the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Spirit Haus
Wine Tasting
1982 Bordeaux
To be held at
Seasons Restaurant (Rte. 9)
Sponsored by
Spirit Haus
Dec. 3, 1985 7:30 P.M.
$25 per person
Spirit Haus Inc.
338 College St. Amherst, MA
Reservations and payment to be made in advance
256-8433 253-5384

EASTMAN KODAK
PRESENTS A COPIER EXPOSITION at UMASS
Campus Center. Rm 163
Nov. 18th 1:00 PM - 8:00 PM
Nov. 19th 9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

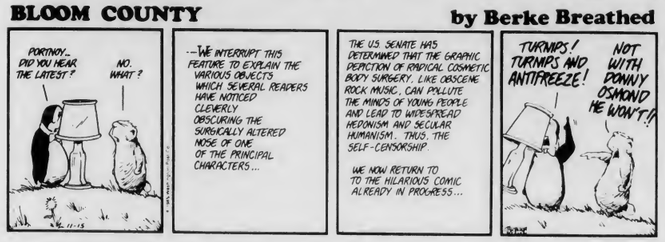
FOUR SEASONS
Wines/Liquors

BEER SPECIALS
BUSCH.....$8.99
GENESEE BEER.....$7.99.....ALE.....$8.99
LOWENBRAU.....$11.75
MICHELOB/MICHELOB LIGHT.....$11.75
HEINEKEN.....$13.75
MOOSEHEAD.....six $3.99/$12.99 cs.

LIQUOR SPECIALS
VODKA & GIN.....1.75 L.....$8.99
RUM.....1.75 L.....$10.99
J & B.....1.75 L.....$21.99
MALIBU RUM.....750 ml.....$6.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT.....750 ml.....$7.49

WINE SPECIALS
ALMADEN WINES.....1.5 L.....$3.99
SEBASTIANI.....1.5 L.....$4.99
FRENCH COLUMBARD, CHENIN BLANC, PINOT NORI, ZINFANDEL.....1.5.....$5.99
SEGRAM'S WINE COOLER.....$2.99

Route 9, Hadley 584-8174



Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Gordy

By Gorde

Attention All Staff:

There will be a Sexism Workshop next Wednesday, 11/20 at 7 p.m. Everyone could benefit from this, so make an effort to attend.

The Collegian
is good family reading.

Weather

Today:

Sunny, windy and cool. Highs in the 40s.

Tonight:

Clear and quite cold. Lows 15 to 20

Today's Menu

FRIDAY, NOV. 15

LUNCH
Torpedo Grinder
Tuna a la King
Savory Garden Biscuit

BASICS LUNCH
Vegetable Grinder
Tuna a la King
Savory Garden Biscuit

DINNER
Salisbury Steak/Gravy,
French Fried Onion Rings
Spaghetti/Red Clam Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Spinach Wheat Croquettes/Cheese Sauce
Hi-Protein Spaghetti/Red Clam Sauce

SATURDAY, NOV. 16

BRUNCH
Scrambled Eggs
Corned Beef Hash
Ham and Swiss on Rye

BASICS BRUNCH
Scrambled Eggs
Almond Chicken and Rice Casserole

DINNER
Sausage Grinder
Fish Fry/Tartar Sauce
Turkey Salad Plate

BASICS DINNER
Vegetable Hot Pot
Fish Fry/Tartar Sauce

SUNDAY, NOV.17

BRUNCH
Baked Eggs Au Gratin
Hamburg on Roll

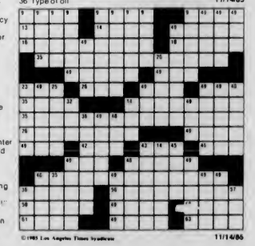
BASICS BRUNCH
Baked Eggs Au Gratin
Bean Burgers

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef/Gravy
Macaroni and Cheese
Fruit Plate with Cranberry Bread

BASICS DINNER
Szechwan Style Eggplant with Tofu
Macaroni and Cheese Fruit Plate with Cranberry Bread

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Ripens
5 Movie pet
9 Supplemented (with "out")
13 One of an Germanic people
14 Modernists
15 Type of dress
16 Plaster admixtures
18 Lizards
19 Old wives' tales
21 Theatricalize
22 Giant great
23 Petrol
26 Daughter of Cadmus
27 Anecdotes
28 Comparative suffix
31 Fit
33 Capable of being nullified
35 Good luck charms
39 Like a bear ready for winter
40 Buffalo's county
41 French "connections"
42 New Deal agcy.
43 — Na Na
46 Kindergartner
47 "— was saying..."
48 Floor in a maison
50 Bad luck
55 Rasp
56 — ahead
58 Like a bireme
59 Emancipate
60 Aware of
61 Parrots
62 Spanish painter
63 "— a grand night..."

DOWN
1 Sci. of farming
2 Passes
3 "— Brute!"
4 Form
5 Apartment, in old Greece
6 Looks after
7 Hotel Sacher specialty
8 Type of holly
9 T.S. or George
10 Furnace of a type
11 Namesakes of a Spanish queen
12 Ile — Pins
15 Excited, in music
17 Saint, called Apostle of the Franks
20 Soniferous
23 Solecism
24 Up
25 Glides
27 CBS rival
28 French composer Jacques —
29 Town near Ventura, Calif.
30 Plant anew
32 Misplay
33 Rear
34 Abbr. on a city map
36 Type of oil
37 Spooky
38 King of Judah
43 Mustier
44 Actor's goal role
45 Chiefs
47 Johnson namesakes
48 Accustom
49 Pierre's 3 Down
50 Soccer play
51 Loser in a "fabulous" race
52 Dial markings
53 Copper
54 Bowlers and derbies
55 Gazelle
57 Extinct bird

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

P	A	H	S		P	E	S	T		G	A	F	F	S
A	M	A	H		O	A	H	U		A	M	O	R	E
C	U	B	A		S	T	E	M		T	O	M	A	N
A	R	A	R	A	T		L	U	C	E		E	N	D
		N	I	L			E	L	A	M	E	N	C	O
P	R	E	F	A	B	S		T	R	E	N	T	O	N
O	U	R		N	E	I	N		I	N	N
D	E	A	F		G	R	A	N	O		A	C	T	S
			E	G	U		B	A	C	K	H	I	E
A	L	G	E	R	I	A		P	A	N	C	A	K	E
F	A	I	N	O	A	N	G	O		A	E	C
G	R	O		W	E	E	D		S	P	R	O	U	T
M	E	M	A	I	L		N	E	A	T		E	N	T	O
A	D	E	L	E		D	U	D	E		A	N	E	W
N	O	S	E	D		A	M	O	N		L	E	S	S

11/14/85

© 1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/14/85

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE Collegian

Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegain Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

שבת

Shabbat Services
Every Friday Evening
7:00 p.m. Dukes Room
310 Student Union

ALL ARE WELCOME

Let's welcome the Shabbat together with joy and song!

Sponsored by B'nai B'rith Hillel

POLITICAL SCIENCE, ECONOMICS, MATHEMATICS MAJORS:

Fellowships up to $9000 plus tuition each year for four years of study toward a Ph.D. in Political Science

- Rated among the top dozen departments in the United States
- Considered "pound for pound" the best department in the country
- Best placement record of any political science department
- Two recent presidents of the American Political Science Association
- Two recent winners of the APSA's 'Best Book' of the year award
- Small enough for personal attention

Will train students in quantitative techniques; flexible program for those with good quantitative backgrounds

UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER

For more information write to:
Director of Graduate Studies
Department of Political Science
Harkness 323
University of Rochester
Rochester, NY 14627

THE SPOKE

A Drinkery to Meet, Relax and Enjoy

12 oz. Drafts 75¢
Pitchers $3.75

Spoke Long — Sleeve T's are in!

Beer Of The Month
Molson Golden
$1.25

Spoke Drink of the Week - Whiskey Sour $1.25

We will be closing Sat. Nov. 16th at 5:30 PM for a private function

35 EAST PLEASANT, AMHERST, MA 01002

UMASS ALPINE SKI COURSE
at
MT. TOM
4 Lesson, 4 Week
1 Credit Course
Classes begin first week in February.
Offered Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights
$50
(includes transportation)
Sign up at GPE Office
Rm 227 Boyden

IBM
IBM Portable PC
$1075.00*
DEMONSTRATION THIS THURS. 11/14 THROUGH FRI. 11/15

Orders will be taken on Nov. 18 - 21 this special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.

* Certain restrictions apply see store for details

Located in The Campus Center 545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE

★ soccer

continued from page 16

champions, can attest to that. "We were closed down by good speed in the back," Tar Heel coach Anson Dorrance said after UM beat UNC, 2-0, Oct. 12. "UMass has speed and techinque."

Banda's squad has outscored its opponents 6.5-2 but its strength isn't in the offense, it's in the defense. Fullbacks Sue Bird, a senior co-captain, Debbie Belkin (seven goals, five assists, 19 points), and Chris Schmitt frequently feed the offense.

And the UMass fowards, led by team high scorers Beth Roundtree (10-4-24) and Monica Seta (9-6-24) keep the ball in the opposing end by playing defense.

The midfield controls the flow of play and no one does it better than All-American Kristen Bowsher. The sophomore doesn't score much (5-6-16), but she sets up a lot of chances. Carolyn Micheel is the one to look for when you think assist. She leads the team with 13.

"We want to make out game look as simple as we can," Banda said. "We have to go out and play with a sense of urgency. We can't hold back. We have to take it to them."

It's a level of play that the Eagles, 15-4-1, may not be able to keep up with. BC is a slower team than UMass, but kept up for a while on the turf at Chestnut Hill.

BC's biggest threat is foward Betsy Ready (8-3-19), the team's leading scorer who scored all three goals against Brown. Midfielder Maria Montouri (4-7-15) is also a threat for the Eagles.

The Eagles will go with keeper Sue Hughey (1.45 GAA) in net.

"On grass, it's going to be a totally different game," Belkin said. "The game will probably be just as tough but there will be much more pressure.

"We've just got to go out and do whatever it takes not to let them win."

The Minutewomen, who are 4-0 in NCAA playoff action at Boyden dating back to 1981, are confident, but not cocky.

"I think we'll dazzle them with skills," Holland said. "Skill-wise, we're a faster team."

However the teams matchup on paper doesn't matter to the Minutewomen. They just want to play. "I hate waiting around. It's a pain," Micheel said.

Kickoff is Sunday at noon, Boyden Field.

Ticket info

Due to NCAA regulations, the University of Massachusetts athletic department will be charging admission to the women's soccer quarterfinal game between UMass and Boston College on Sunday.

Admission is $1 for all students and $2 for adults. Tickets for the game can be purchased at Upper Boyden Field, the sight of the game, prior to gametime.

The game is scheduled for noon.

★ field hockey

continued from page 16

pionship and that there has been so much parity among teams this season that every team is beatable. . . Senior defensive All-America Megan Donnelly has thought about winning the national championship at least once every day that she's played for UMass and had promised herself four years ago that she wouldn't wear any rings on her fingers until she received her first championship ring. Her fingers have been bare since her promise was made. . . .Should UMass lose Saturday, the game will mark the end of the collegiate careers of seniors Donnelly, forward Chris Kocot, forward Judy Morgan and goal keeper Kathryn Rowe. . . . If defense does indeed win national championships, UMass will be leaning on possibly three freshman starters.

Rowe has seven-and-a-half shutouts, combining with sophomore Lynn Carlson for the eighth. . . .Donnelly leads the UMass offense with 17 goals in 16 games. Junior Lisa Griswold has nine goals on the season and Kocot has five. . . Sophomore Tonia Kennedy and freshman Ruth Vasapolli had a great weekend against Michigan and Purdue, combining for five of UMass' eight goals against the two teams. . . Hixon said that Kennedy has been playing well since suffering a hip-pointer injury at midseason. . . Sophomore Amy Robertson leads UMass with five assists.

Swimmers host UConn

By FRED NADEL
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusettes womens swim team faces the University of Connecticut today at Boyden Pool at 7 P.M.

Last Saturday the minutewomen were tripped by Smith College of Northampton.

The team also suffered the loss of the teams top diver, Debbie Mullin. During the three-meter diving competition, Mullin seperated her shoulder. The report on Mullin is she could be out until Christmas. UMass coach Bob Newcomb will be looking to Jean Cowen and Georgia Wood to fill the void left by Mullin.

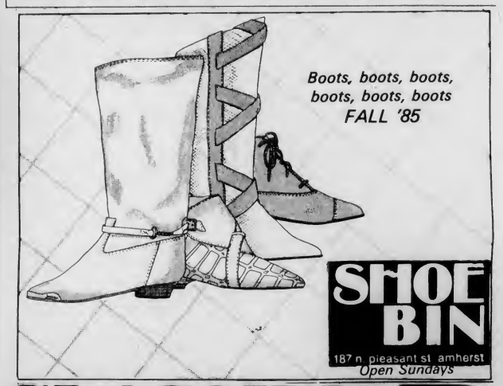
The Huskies are also not completely healthy. Sue Lyons, one of their top swimmers had a severely sprained ankle, and did not swim last week against Northeastern. UConn is still a strong team with one of the top swimmers in New England, Dana Redman leading the team.

Newcomb is looking for a strong performance from his backstrokers and divers in order to win the meet. UConn is strong in diving, but if the divers manage some second places, Newcomb feels the team could have an excellent chance to win.

Last season, UConn beat UM convincingly and a victory this season would be sweet vengence for Newcomb. The team hopes to capitalize on UConn's weaknesses, and Newcomb will vary his lineup to do so. The team has put in a hard week of training, and will be ready for the meet.

Is this man any relation to you?

If he is tell him to come to J.B.'s for a Free Large Coke.



AP Photo

I'm tellin'ya, J.B.'s is great!!

JBs HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

P.S. More pictures next week!!

11 am - 2 am 7 days
253-7018
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

Boots, boots, boots, boots, boots, boots FALL '85

SHOE BIN
187 n pleasant st amherst
Open Sundays

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Racquetball Court Time Now Available Downtown Amherst. Individual or group memberships. Call 253-2528 for details

25² Club is meeting this Friday November 15th 4:30-6 pm 811 CC Join us see you there

CCEBMS will hold registration in the Library at NAH Nov 19 thru 26th hours 8:30-3:30

Topic: Central America. The Progressive Film Series ends the semester with Nicaragua and Harvest of Fear, tonight 7:30 pm, CC 163

AUTO FOR SALE

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1970 Dodge Coronet convertible. Many new parts. Reliable. $700.00 or BO 584-4939

1975 Nova runs good dependable 300.00 Allison 6-5406 evenings

1971 Dodge Wagon 85,000 miles, standard transmission, V-8, runs well. $500 or best offer. Jon 253-9456

1977 Monte Carlo runs and looks excellent. Must be seen. Rally wheels, snow tires. 549-2804 Craig

VW Rabit 76, good condition, new tires, $800 or BO 549-6690 night

74 Peugot diesel. Standard, excellent condition sun roof 256-1807 Tracey

BUY OIL CHEAP!

Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. For information contact Off Campus Housing, 423 Student Union 545-0865

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals 549-7144

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline, 365/month, avail 1/1/86 253-3634

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on bus line, avail immediately 253-9043

FOR SALE

Safe Santans 25-50% Off Just in time for winter. The best prices you'll see all year. Join alone: $29 for 10 sessions. With a friend only $29. Act now Take a free trial session and you'll automatically be entered in a drawing for a free 20 sessions. Le Bon Soleil. The best for less. 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-9454 expires Nov. 15

Chevy Malibu 1973 $850 new parts call Dave 549-7424

Yabadabadoo UMass "Bed-Rock" Cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

4 foot Boa Constrictor and beautiful 27 gallon hexterrarium 160 Tom 253-7797

OHM C2 3 way speakers 175 pair Tom 253-7797

13' all wood Penyan boat with 25 horse engine, trailer & more call 549-1032 (Mark)

Water Bed $250.00 call 549-0194

Fender Super-Six Amp. Twin heads. Six tens. Also G & L Cavilier. Excellent guitar black. Just got set up and intonised. Designed by Leo Fender himself. 700 new last year. Right now $400 549-0385

FOUND

Andrew Zampariolo I found your fishing license. Call Gary and identify 546-6366

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stasnel 584-3596

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2060

Full time Steward position, 5 evenings weekly, light inventory, pricing, stocking and bar back duties, excellent entry level food position apply in person Northampton Hilton Inn Rt 5

Position available - Southwest Area Government is looking for a Publicity Coordinator to organize a SW Newsletter and publicity for SWAG events. Applications available at the SWAG office in Hampden and are due Wed November 20th, 545-0960

Delivery Drivers. Own car required. 3-4 nights $7.4/hr. Apply in person. Pinocchio's Pizza 1177 No. Pleasant, No Amherst.

Summer Jobs in Amherst. Go to Webster Main Lounge 11/18 at 6:30 pm for details

Want to meet 5,000 people in 8 weeks? Go to Webster Lounge 11/18 at 6:30 pm for details

Part-time temporary positions available for the Annual Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Program. Starting date November 22 until December 24. For more information call 586-5243

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

LOST

Lost mens Seiko watch on Boyden Fields 10/28 has sentimental value reward if found call Mitch 256-1069 or 256-1664

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Long black coat with puffed shoulders. Left in Herter 110 Mon nite 11/4. If found please call EM at 6-7711 or leave message at 5-2084. Reward!

Pair of photogrey lens glasses in brown vinyl case call Jon 549-0902

Paul Dias I'm so sorry for everything Friends? Chris

Lost wallet Tuesday Oct 22 3rd floor SUB at Collegian stack. Call me back Alex 5-0194

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

MY GREEN BERET (SAR)

. . . I miss you already. . . .

PERSONALS

G., Happy Birthday! Love ya J . G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Hey kids, Cheer up, if it will make you happy, we'll plan our strike.

Happy 18th!! to Sherri Laporte. best Wishes from InAh and The Meter

SR - Tonight's the night . . . surprise.

Tim and Pete - Happy 20th, Tim and happy belated 19th, Sneaky Pete. You two are the greatest! Lots of love, Ellen

Lisa and Katrina, Thanks for dinner, cookies and the brusses. A Frosh couldn't ask for better friends . well maybe! Love always, Double Stuff

Hey First Time Patriots Fan I have the cuffs. Do you have the kisses? From the guy who is too precious

Chicken Legs - Happy Birthday! Don't do anything I wouldn't do! Monkey Feet

JMC Happy 22nd Birthday I love you! FS

Night Rufus! 1985 is almost over, but we're not. You're almost out of here, but I'm not. That makes no difference, distance can never take away flashlight tag, sleeping, laughing, snooze alarms, alcohol, Bosum Buddies, Friends! Forever Friends, Johnboy P.S. Hope your happy arroJA!

Tammy T - You sleep with him, you sleep with me! Funny ha ha!

Lori Fab - Hi Honey!

Lonni I'll never forget the night we spent together last weekend unfortunately neither will my neighbors Love always DS

UM Football its been an experience good luck on Sat. your favorite D.C. Ladys

Sunshine: As before and much much more, I love you!!! You make life an absolute pleasure. With endless love, Andy

John Crane Girls: Sorry this isn't what you expected, but here's your personal anyway! Just go to Health Services. Luff Hallways, Jenn

Mark It would have been one year today. Wish you could remember the good times. I do. - LA

Jennifer Smith - Happy 21st Birthday!!! I think you're one cool person! – Love Chiquita

SSG Bluestein! Did you and the Bum take off! Miss ya! Curious George

DBL - I'm all yours so take advantage of the situation. GM renewed - can you handle it? BF & FL

Noelle My number 1 chooch You're everything to me, I'll love you always. Love Peter

KATAMATAT Greetings from Bellview you are an awesome roomie what a crying shame love ya Lizzie

To my bitchhiker: That six week-long ride was something very special. If I see you hitching again I might pick you up and never drop you off! XOXOX

K- I so much enjoy having your for a leading lady. I don't like to think of you moving to another scene. We still have many good things to share. –J

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To North Carolina for Thanksgiving or anywhere south of Washington for Thanksgiving can leave anytime will help with gas Eric 546-4630

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Cir 774-2740

One bedroom with private bathroom in 2 bdrm Puffton apt 170/mo heat incl available Dec 1 for next semester call for more info 549-7827 great place!!

One person to share Southwood apt new rug, nicely furnished 130 + $15 call 256-1764

1 bedroom in house, 1 mile from campus. one sixth of utilities, $145 per month, male only, call 256-6228 anytime

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6895 evenings

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 666-7652

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus Play it safe call 5-2125 for an escort ANYTIME

SKI SWITZERLAND

Spring Break '86"
Round Trip Air
7 Nights Hotel
Breakfast & Dinner Daily
Beer Parties
$699
call Brian 665-4248
Chris 665-3079
Marie 549-0179
Arranged by Classic Tours

SOMETHING REFUGNANT

This space brought to by by Madog's Microbiology and Hazardous Waste Dump

TO SUBLET

Apt or house wanted. Beginning Jan 15 minutes or less to UMass 546-6153

TRAVEL

Have an adventure January 5-12 Ski Vail information Ted Selig 546-4733

TYPING SERVICE

You make it sound good, we make it look good for all your typing needs, word processing, graphs, spreadsheets. Superior quality and competitive rates call (evenings) 549-0050 or 527-7189

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

Two outgoing females looking for a room to rent (male/female), starting Jan/Feb preferably Amherst call Melanie 546-8518 after 10:00 pm

WANTED TO RENT

$25 reward if you can find us a room in Brandywine for 2 girls Spring semester call 549-5042 ask for Karen

Two girls looking for an apartment in North Amherst for spring call 549-6149

To take over 2 bdrm apartment lease in January. Call 546-5337 or 546-5257

Two NCAA showdowns for UM

• Women's soccer hosts BC

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The long waiting game is over for the No. 1 University of Massachusetts women's soccer team.

The undefeated Minutewomen haven't played since they stopped Springfield, 5-0 two weeks ago. Sunday at noon, UMass faces eighth ranked Boston College at Boyden Field in the NCAA quarter-finals and the right to travel to next week's Final Four.

A UMass victory ensures the Minutewomen its third consecutive trip to the Final Four, to be held at George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia next Saturday and Sunday.

There will be a $1 admission charge for all students due to NCAA regulations. Adults will play $2. UMass has averaged 1000 fans its last two home games, North Carolina and Springfield.

But first the 15-0-0 Minutewomen have to get by a pesky Eagle squad that took UMass into overtime before falling 3-2 in the first round of last year's tournament.

UMass defeated Boston College, 2-0 on Oct. 26, but have played only one game since (Springfield). The Eagles, in the meantime, have won three in a row including last Friday's 3-2 overtime victory over Brown in the first round of the tourney.

"I don't find that as a drawback," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said. "It's kept us fresh and its given us time to evaluate our team. It's been a time to reflect.

The time off has also made the UMass players eager and nervous.

"When you have time off, it usually makes you want to play more," fullback Debbie Belkin said. "You miss it so much, your pysched to get back."

Starting goalie Jan Holland (0.08 goals against average, 11.5 shutouts) has been nervous all week. "I've been tied up (with nervousness) for the past week. There's a lot of pressure on us.

"But, when it comes down to it, we're ready to play."

And the way Massachusetts plays is with speed and defense.

North Carolina, the defending NCAA

continued on page 15

• Field hockey plays at BU

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

There is a sign hung in the women's locker room in NOPE, home of the 10th-ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team.

It reads: If you score you might win, if they don't score you will win. Defense Wins Championships- Roll UMass.

This is it.

The tenth ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team puts its season on the line tommorrow as it tangles with ninth-ranked Boston University at 1 p.m. on Nickerson Field in Boston.

The winner moves on to the second round on Sunday to play a rested University of New Hampshire which received a bye into the second round. Sunday's winner advances to the Final Four, scheduled for next Saturday and Sunday on the campus of three-time defending national champion Old Dominion.

For the Minutewomen, 13-4-2, survival and revenge are the motivations for winning this all-important head-on collision with the Terriers, 15-2-2. A loss ends the season for UMass. A victory carries UMass one step closer to the national championship.

"There is no past and no future. At this point it doesn't matter who we play because nothing matters," UMass head coach Pam Hixon said. "You only get one shot."

For the Minutewomen, this will be their second shot at the Terriers who beat UMass, 3-0, on Nickerson just two weeks ago. Consensus among team members and the coaching staff is that BU got lucky in their first meeting and that the previous loss could work in the favor of UMass.

"They might be a bit cocky and take us for granted, but they can't do that because we're loose, we'll take advantage," Hixon said. "We're sitting in a good position because they've never been to the tournament before and have to play on emotion whereas we have tradition and pride for us to defend."

Free Hits: Hixon said that regardless of what UMass does, she said that the team that gets hot will win the national cham-

continued on page 15

SPORTS

Minutemen: one more goal

Win at UNH would cap season

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

It was a tough week for the University of Massachusetts football team.

Last Saturday's 26-24 last-minute loss to Delaware did not sit well with the Minutemen. The game knocked them out of the playoffs and kept Delaware's undefeated streak against UMass alive.

Going into the final game of the season, tomorrow against the University of New Hampshire in Durham, UMass stands on the verge of a respectable 7-4 record, or at the brink of a 6-5 record.

"We're on a mission," said UM freshman linebacker John McKeown. "We were really down after Delaware, but once we started thinking about UNH, we started getting aggressive again. We're a 7-4 football team, not a 6-5 one. We aren't going to let down."

They better not. The Wildcats, 6-3, have lost two straight (allowing 75 points) and still vividly recall last season's 14-10 UMass victory that kept them out of the playoffs. Beating UMass has been one of coach Bill Bowes' chief goals for this season.

This Yankee Conference battle (1 p.m. at Cowell Stadium) will tell a lot about both teams. Specifically, are the Wildcats on the way down and and are the Minutemen and their 1985 recovery for real?

'They'll be ready for us, I know that," said UM head coach Bob Stull. "Beating us would do a lot for them as a team. However, we have our reasons for wanting this one, too. We built on the UNH win last season and I'd like to the same for nest year with a good game on Saturday. I'm confident."

Stull then pulled an index card out of his desk on which he had written his pre-season prediction after two-a-day practices in August.

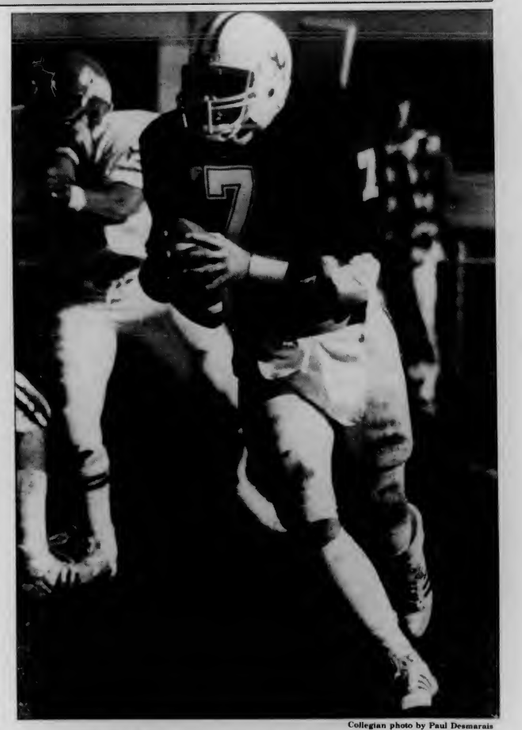
Written in the corner was 7-4, Stull's prediction. The back contained a list of teams he felt UMass had a good chance at beating, those he felt would be hard to beat and finally, a list of toss-ups. UNH was a toss-up.

"It'll be a battle, they're a physically big team, a rugged team and an excellent defensive team despite their recent games," said the coach.

UNH has All-American tailback Andre Garron, a 5-11, 190 pound pro prospect who has rushed for 807 yards in seven games in what has been an injury-filled season. Garron will be looking to keep his string of 1,000 yard season intact with a big game in front of the home crowd. The tailback has rushed for over 1,000 yards in all three of his collegiate seasons.

UNH quarterback Rich Byrne, the lowest-rated passer in the conference, unleashed the best game in his career in a 45-40 loss to Maine last week, throwing for a school record 366 yards and four touchdowns.

"It gives us something to think about," said McKeown. "They are basically an I formation team that tries to run down your throats. They may try to catch us off-guard with more of a passing attack, but we've seen better offensive teams then they are, so I know we'll be ready for whatever they do."



McKeown and UM freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi will also have a personal mission, looking to impress the rest of the conference with an eye on the Rookie-of-the-Year award. UMass will have senior co-captain George Barnwell back in the starting lineup at tailback. Barnwell, UM's second leading rusher this season with 436 yards this season, the senior needs only 12 yards to pass Rich Jessamy on the UMass career rushing list. He has also yet to score this season.

Palazzi will be looking to keep his two-game string of 200-plus yards of passing going. Junior flanker John Crowley and freshman split end Dan Rubinetti have been his main targets.

On defense, the wrath of senior nose guard Mike Dwyer should be felt by UNH. UM's own refrigerator, the 6-2, 275-pound Dwyer intercepted a pass and returned it 28 yards for a touchdown last week. He has been playing well as of late and along with tackle Eddie Sullivan hopes to control the line of scrimmage.

Another recent defensive standout has been linebacker Vito Perrone with 45 tackles over the last three games. The UMass kicking game is in need of improvement with only eight-of-19 field goals being converted this season.

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: The game can be heard on WTTT (1430-AM), WSPR (1270-AM) and WMUA (91.1-FM). . .the Minutemen lead the season series with UNH 30-13-3 and have won seven of the last eight games. . .a reporter walked into the UM football office on Wednesday and said, "Good morning gentlemen," to defensive coaches Jim Reid and Mike Hodges. "There are no gentlemen on defense," Reid answered back. . .UNH is 2-2 in the conference.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

University of Massachusetts quarterback Dave Palazzi leads the Minutemen against New Hampshire on Saturday

Weekend sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:

Today

Women's Swimming: Connecticut, Boyden pool, 7 p.m.

Saturday

Football at New Hampshire, Cowell Stadium, 1 p.m.

Field Hockey: NCAA first round game vs. Boston University, at BU, 1 p.m.

Gymnastics: Alumni Meet, Boyden, 7 p.m.

Sunday

Women's Soccer: NCAA quarterfinal game against Boston College, Boyden Field, noon. Tickets: $1 students, $2 adults.

Field Hockey: NCAA quarterfinal game (with win over BU) against New Hampshire at BU, 1 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 51 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Monday, November 18, 1985

Women's soccer rolls to Final 4

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The top-ranked University of Massachusetts women's soccer team overcame a sloppy field and eighth-ranked Boston College, 3-0 in the quarterfinals of the NCAA tournament yesterday at Boyden Field, claiming a spot in the Final Four for the third consecutive year.

Sophomore All-America Kristen Bowsher scored two goals as the undefeated Minutewomen overcame about a half-inch of wet snow and mud to register their 16th straight win and earn the right to face third-ranked George Mason Saturday in the national semifinals at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va.

The winner qualifies for the championship final on Sunday against the North Carolina/Colorado College victor. UMass has finished third the past two years at the Final Four.

It was the fourth game the Minutewomen have won at Boyden in less-than-ideal conditions this year. UMass also outlasted Brown (6-0), Connecticut (1-0) and Rutgers (2-1) in the rain and mud.

"It (the conditions) helped them more than it helped us," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said. "Our forwards couldn't really dribble the ball and it was very hard to pass.

"The whole week we practiced in the mud. We were ready to play. We were more hungry than any time I've seen this year."

The snow slowed UMass' speedy passing game but the Minutewomen's skills enabled the team to dominate, as they outshot the Eagles (13-5-10) 10-2, in the first half.

"They (UM) are very skilled and very fast," said Eagle goalkeeper Sue Hughey, who made 13 saves in the game.

UMass' first goal showed the speed and skill of the Minutewomen. Freshman Michele Powers slipped near midfield but still controlled the ball, passing it to sophomore Cathy Spence, on the run, down the right side of the field.

Spence lofted a high crossing pass over a BC defender, dropping the feed in front of Bowsher, who popped the ball high into the net with 16:25 to go in the first half.

"They (UMass) work so well together that it makes it tough to defend against,"

continued on page 16

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

UMass senior co-captain Jaime Watson (8) tries to avoid Boston College defender during yesterday's NCAA quarterfinal playoff game at Boyden Field. UMass won 3-0 to advance to the semi-finals.

Meeting yields no decision

By ANDREW WOLFF
Collegian Staff

Provost Richard O'Brien said yesterday "a little more homework" must be done about changing the commencement format for the Class of 1986 before he makes any final decisions.

O'Brien's comments come after he and Deirdre Ling, vice chancellor for University relations and development, met Friday morning to review a battery of interim proposals offered by the Commencement Task Force.

"It [the meeting] was a first review to begin to put together the whole business and to get other people involved," O'Brien said.

Although it was not discussed during the meeting, the possibility of having mini-ceremonies instead of one large commencement will be examined before the end of the semester, when preliminary recommendations from O'Brien will be made, O'Brien said.

"It's one of those practical things in principle," O'Brien said. "Some of those minis would be very large and that is one of the things we have to talk about."

Among the proposals discussed Friday were plans to better enforce the stadium's liquor policy banning alcohol from the premises, O'Brien said.

"I like the idea of it," O'Brien said. "I'm not yet certain about how to achieve it."

First snow blankets an unprepared Amherst

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

People walking on the University of Massachusetts' pathways face muddy conditions today after Amherst was unexpectedly hit by its first snowstorm of the season Saturday afternoon.

The storm prompted UMass students to carry on the tradition of gathering in the hundreds to bombard Amherst College with snowballs.

Amherst had about two to three inches of snowfall, according to Peggy Bratsenis, WGGB-TV Newswatch 40 forecaster.

Amherst Police Sgt. Richard Buckley said that Saturday "was a horror story. We didn't have the manpower to respond to all the accidents."

At least 12 accidents were related to the road conditions, he said.

"Cars were off the road all over the place," Buckley said and added that incidents where automobiles went dead in the road were left uninvestigated because of the high amount of calls to the department.

The National Weather Service first began to forecast the snow early Saturday, but the 1986 Old Farmer's Almanac predicted the snow accurately. In the almanac's New England forecast for this winter, it predicted the first snow, other than in mountainous areas, to fall for the period from Nov. 16 to Nov. 19.

John Costigan, an employee of Ben's Service, Inc., said allfive of its towtrucks were responding to calls throughout the snow and rain and was "steady for a couple hours after the rain ended."

The unexpected snow also caused the usual amount of excitement as a crowd of students, estimated between 500 to 600, made its way through Amherst to Amherst College for a snowball fight.

The group, which began organizing in the Orchard Hill, gathered support on its way to Southwest. After a brief snowball fight in Southwest, the crowd headed down Fearing Street toward Amherst Center.

At Amherst College, "The crowd banged up a couple of dorms," said Kumar Dasgupta, a resident of Webster House and member of the group. "The crowd threw snowballs at Amherst students and then left."

Chris Tarantino, a resident of Webster House, said the crowd started with about 20 students and grew as it crossed campus to Southwest. One student, Tarantino said, who was at the front of the crowd carried a UMass flag on the way to Amherst College.

When the crowd first organized, Tarantino said it "went to Central and killed the dorms there." Later at Amherst College, she said at first "nobody (Amherst students) would come out because they were horrified."

Amherst College security confirmed that several windows and lights were broken during the incident, which most students said lasted for about 20 minutes.

INSIDE

U.S.-Soviet summit a day away.....2
Lord Jeff job action continues.....3
Football ends with win; record at 7-4.....12

"Cars were off the road all over the place."
—Amherst Police Sgt. William Buckley referring to Saturday's snow storm.

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

Amherst Center takes on the winter look Saturday as storm leaves behind a blanket of wet snow. Amherst police said they were caught off guard by the storm and said they could not tend to all the accidents it caused.

Rising concern precedes summit

Europe worried

LONDON (AP)—America's European allies say they hold "no exaggerated illusions," but hope this week's Geneva summit leads to "a better basis of confidence" when arms negotiators return to work in the months ahead.

Interviews with allied officials showed underlying concern that President Reagan's drive for a space-based nuclear missile defense, popularly known as "Star Wars," could sour summit achievements.

The Netherlands government, which decided earlier this month to authorize deployment of 48 NATO cruise missiles despite widespread public opposition, doesn't expect an arms reduction agreement.

A summit push toward effective nuclear arms control and a resulting easing of East-West relations is of particular importance to West Germany, America's chief continental ally.

The West German and East German governments, forced into rival power blocs by post-war superpower politics, always treat U.S.-Soviet relations as the yardstick for potentially improved inter-German ties.

Heinrich Windelen, Bonn's minister for intra-German relations, said, "Just the fact that the leaders of the two alliances are talking creates a good background for more positive developments in intra-German politics."

Specifically, Bonn's hope is that a favorable summit outcome could allow East German Communist Chief Erich Honecker to make a first-ever official visit to West Germany. Honecker canceled such a visit last year under Soviet pressure.

An aide to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher—long a proponent of increased East-West dialogue—said it would be "grossly unreasonable to think there will be substantive agreement on arms control.. We hope the summit will pave the way for serious negotiations."

British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said that if the Soviet Union is willing, "there will be an opportunity for agreement on the broad guide-lines for arms control within which experts on both sides could be set to work."

Britain and other NATO allies are particularly concerned that the United States, in pursuing the Strategic Defense Initiative, stays within Article 5 of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with the Soviet Union. This bans development, testing or deployment of new ABM systems.

But as a French foreign ministry spokesman said, "France does not exclude a certain form of entente" from the summit.

"We hope for a relative success, but we have no exaggerated illusions," said the spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be named.

Moscow skeptical

GENEVA (AP)—President Reagan, inspecting summit sites yesterday as he prepared to meet his Kremlin counterpart, sought to brush aside evidence of administration discord on arms policy. but the Soviets turned up the heat and described the episode as an attempt "to torpedo the arms control process."

Reagan's spokesman, Larry Speakes, said, "We are not changing our views one whit" as a result of the leak of the "Weinburger letter."

In the letter, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinburger, who was left off the U.S. summit delegation, warned Reagan against agreeing to several arms positions when he meets Tuesday and Wednesday with Mikhail Gobrachev.

The Soviet leader arrives here today, but he was well represented by a Kremlin official who told reporters the summit will be a "trial-by-fire" test of Reagan's commitment to arms control, and denounced in advance the arms policies Reagan brings with him to the summit table.

A key member of the American delegation, insisting on anonymity, said he thought the summit would produce some U.S.-Soviet agreements. He said odds that they would agree to hold periodic summit meetings, were "more than 50 percent." And he said, it was "highly likely" that the summit would produce an agreement for the two superpowers to guard against proliferation of nuclear weapons to other countries.

National Security Advisor Robert McFarlane, part of the administration blitz on the Sunday TV talk shows, said "if we try hard," there might be agreements on cultural exchanges, opening new Soviet and American consular offices and the resumption of air service between the two countries.

McFarlane, on NBC's "Meet the Press," sought to erase the picture of internal discord painted by the Weinberger letter, and said the administration stands as one on the key issues.

Weinburger, an outspoken hard-liner who is represented by two subordinates in the U.S. summit delegation, advised the president to oppose any joint commitment to continue observance of the unratified 1979 Salt II treaty and to oppose any interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile ABM treaty that would restrict testing of the president "Star Wars" defense program.

Speakes told reporters Reagan had no intention of making any decisions about a SALT II extention until the issue can be taken up next month after Reagan hears the views of Weinberger, Secretary of State George Shultz and others.

McFarlane called the letter leak "unfortunate" and told hundreds of reporters at the International Press Center here that Weinberger feels the same way and "is taking steps to find out how it occurred."

Administration officials were apparently hoping the Soviets would not take the matter seriously, and Speakes told reporters, "I'd be willing to put five bucks right here that General Secretary Gorbachev will not say a word about the Weinberger letter."

But Soviet official George Arbatov, briefing reporters here yesterday, was quick to discuss the subject, describing the Weinberger letter as "a direct attempt to torpedo the arms control process" and saying it exposed a struggle between administration moderates and conservatives.

At a news conference, he said the Soviets would like to believe Reagan is committed to arms control, adding, "In the next two days we will see, in fact this will be a case of trail by fire. We'll see just how serious those words are before the whole world."

The president, walking from the 18th-century Maison de Saussure where he is staying to a meeting with top advisers, was asked if he thought someone was trying to sabotage the summit by leaking the letter.

"No," the president replied firmly. As to whether he would fire Weinberger, Reagan said, "You want a two-word anser or one?" When a reporter said, "Two," the president replied, "Hell, no."

Pro-lifers criticized

CAMBRIDGE (AP)—Conservative groups that want to ban abortion have begun to tackle birth control, and their policies ultimately will perpetuate a class of poorly paid laborers, the president of the National Organization for Women said yesterday.

"Birth control is an absolute necessity for the survival of the human race with any kind of dignity that the species would want to maintain," said Eleanor Smeal.

She said the effect of the policies promoted by some conservative groups would be to further polarize society between the rich and the poor.

"Abortion for the poor has already been limited," Ms. Smeal told several hundred students and others at Harvard University, pointing out that only 10 states, including Massachusetts, pay for abortions under the Medicaid program.

She said poor women can't come up with the $200-$300 needed for an abortion. "The poor do not have credit," she said.

Meanwhile, bombings of abortion clinics and other protests are causing some clinics to lose their insurance of their leases, which will make it increasingly difficult for middle class women to get an abortion, Ms. Smeal said.

"Abortion clinics all over the country are closing," she said.

"The terrorism is starting to have its effect.

"What's happening to the rich? Nothing. They can afford to get abortions anywhere," she said. "Private doctors do it for them."

Town to be moved

AMERO, Columbia (AP)—The local government vowed yesterday to rebuild the Andean farming town of Armero, destroyed when a volcanic eruption set off a gigantic mudslide that buried Armero and killed more than 21,000 people.

"What we don't know is where we will erect the new Armero," said Eduardo Alzate, governor of the Tolima province. In an interview with RON radio in Lerida, a nearby town where survivors were receiving aid, Alzate said new locations would have to be discussed with Armero's survivors and the area's farmers, because Armero was an important marketing center.

Health Minister Rafael Zubiria said Saturday night that Armero would be made into a cemetary, because it was not possible to recover the thousand of bodies.

The town was covered by a 15-foot-deep river of mud that swept down the Navado del Ruiz volcano early Thursday. The volcano eruption melted an ice cap, overflowing a river.

The Health Ministry said at least 21,559 persons were dead or missing in Armero and other towns in the valley, another 19,185 were homeless and at least 2,453 were seriously injured.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Gillespie, who toured the disaster area Saturday, said few people stranded by the mud flow remained to be rescued.

The dead include about 8,000 children, said Jaine Benitez Tobon, director of the National Family Welfare Institute.

Rescue workers on the scene said they have recovered only about 800 bodies.

Scores of helicopters, including 12 U.S. Air Force helicopters, buzzed over the sea of mud covering most of the Armero Valley, looking for survivors.

A 12-year-old girl trapped with just her head above the mud and a pool of water died Saturday despite intense rescue efforts, according to a radio report.

The International Red Cross said in Geneva that the Red Cross branch in the Armero district was virtually wiped out by the disaster, with 71 of the 82 members killed. It quoted one Colombian Red Cross helper as saying, "Only those who could run uphill fast got out."

AP Laserphoto

Rescue and Red Cross workers rush with supplies Saturday from a plane at Maraquite, Columbia, to aid victims of last Thursday's mud slide.

TODAY'S STAFF:

Night Editor — Andrew Wolff
Copy Editor — Steve Higgins
Layout Technician — Leslie Goldstein
Photo Technician — Paul Desmarais
Production Supervisor — BethAnne Moskov
Production — Nancy Rivers, Paula Saucier, Mark Parker, Rob Catalono, Dave Boardman, Andy Diskes,

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit-58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exam and vacation periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

UTOPIA
SPAS
Student Special
1 HOUR TUB for ½ HOUR PRICE
an incredible savings
every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday
Call for reservations 253-SPAS
175 University Drive, Amherst MA
(next to Stadium Liquors in the Price Chopper Mall)

Buy a Zenith PC and get the Monitor FREE!
Watch for details in Talking Clones.
Coming on November 20th
Published by Zenith Data Systems

Collegian photo by Neil Beckerman

DOWN ON THE FARM—Stacey Barlow, freshman Animal Science major, tends to horse at Amatty Stable Saturday afternoon.

Weight-lifters raise money

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

The first annual lift-a-thon sponsored by the Pioneer Weight Club on Saturday raised an estimated $1600 for the March of Dimes to help the fight against birth defects.

About 60 participants raised the money through pledges based on the number of pounds they could lift, or how many repititions of a weight exercise they could do. The pledges recieved varied according to how much a participant was sponsored for a particular exercise.

"People went out and got pledges" Tom Fortier, owner of the Pioneer Weight Club said, adding that "they could bicycle for ten minutes and get a dollar a minute."

"There are many gyms that do many different things for causes like this," Fortier said. Fortier decided that he wanted to participate in a fund raiser and contacted the March of Dimes.

The exact number of dollars raised has not been totaled yet, though estimates put the amount at $1,600 is expected.

"But, we're shooting for 1,800" Fortier said.

The money raised will go to local research designed to help eliminate birth defects.

"We decided to go for the local birth defect center in Springfield" Fortier said.

The lift-a-thon was open to all weightlifters regardless of professional or amateur status. Awards will be given to the top money raisers. So far, UMass student Chris Colby leads. All participants received a free t-shirt.

Workers seek local support

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The impasse between management of the Lord Jeffery Inn and its employees continued this weekend and in an attempt to drum up support for itself, the union plans to take its case to the community.

Members of Hotel and Restaurant Local 217 are planning to talk to Amherst College employees and nearby colleges, faculty and students along with weekly Friday night picketing, union representative Rob Traber said.

Last Friday, about 70 people picketed in front of the inn for about 90 minutes in the cold.

No new negotiations are planned, Traber said. The last meeting between the two sides was last Tuesday.

The 70 employees of the Lord Jeff have been working without a contract since Oct. 24. The Inn laid off 50 employees Nov. 6, closing down the food and business beverage department indefinitely, citing a lack of business.

Disputes center on management's proposals for a two-tiered wage system,insurance benefits and scheduling.

"The college has resorted to economic strong-arm tactics," Traber said. "The college has decided it can't talk its employees into submission, it is now trying to scare and starve us into it.

"We're going to take the fight to where it really is," Traber said. "The community will support us."

Students and employees from UMass and the area joined picketers Friday night marching and chanting in the cold.

"I think Amherst College (has to give). When something's wrong, it's always blamed on the workers," David Valade of UMass said. Valade and other members of the UM Radical Student Union marched.

Inn assistant manager Daniel Workman said the proposals do not hurt the present workers benefits. And one union member, who declined to be named, said she doesn't support the protests because, "I don't think we're losing anything."

Workman said the Inn has a projected deficit of $200,000 this year. The Inn has been doing repairs, such as painting, during the work action, he said.

Some Amherst College professors and students were also in attendance Friday night in support of the workers.

Student aims to show crisis

A slide presentation on social problems in Colombia will be shown at 4 p.m. today in Machmer E-27 at the University of Massachusetts.

The slide show will be presented by UMass student and Social Thought and Political Economy major, Liz Stern, who returned in June from Bogota, Colombia.

Stern, who spent a year and a half in Colombia as an exchange student, said the exchange was to have lasted five months, but that she stayed in Colombia to understand the culture.

"Americans have little conception as to what's going on in the rest of the world," she said. "I'd like to show people a little bit of what it's like to live in another country."

Stern said Colombia faced problems with unemployment and adequate health care. "There is a tremendous problem with children dying due to malnutrition and unclean water," she said. "If you don't have money for medical care you won't get treatment in hospitals. You can die in the waiting room."

Stern said insecticides and fertilizers, which are illegal in the United States are sold to Third World countries. "This poses an immediate danger to peasants and their families and a grave danger to people who drink the polluted water."

Stern said she flew over, but had not traveled in the area recently ravaged by a volcano.

More than 22,000 people were killed in the eruption last Wednesday in Armero, Colombia, according to the Boston Globe.

—LESLEY CLARK

SOLITUDE—A lone man treks along the tracks near Fitzwilly's in Northampton Saturday afternoon.

Rights advocate to address equality

The former President of the Women's Association of the People's National Party (PNP) in Jamaica, who was instrumental in pushing legislation requiring equal pay for equal work in that country, will deliver two lectures tomorrow at the University of Massachusetts and at Amherst College on gender and race issues in the Caribbean.

At 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163C Beverly Manley will speak on "Black Women in the Caribbean." At 4 p.m. in the Gerald Grace Penny Black Cultural Center, Octagon, Amherst College, Manley will give a lecture titled, "Race, Politics, and Gender in the Caribbean."

Manley is currently doing research for her dissertation on research and development issues with an emphasis on women and is also working on a regional radio program for women. She is currently a consultant on communications, women and development.

Manley's visit is sponsored by various UMass and Amherst College departments and programs and she is travelling under the auspices of the Institute for Policy Studies in Washington DC.

At 4:30 p.m. on Thursday in 902 Campus Center, there will be a planning meeting for the annual International Women's Event. Chris Alibrandi, student coordinator for the Student Center for Educational Research Advocacy (SCERA) said she "is interested in making this year's event accesible to all women regardless of their political beliefs," and encourages all people, especially students to get involved.

—SUSAN EATON

Exhibit tracks disabled

A special exhibition on the mentally retarded opens tomorrow in Memorial Hall at the University of Massachusetts.

Titled "Our Neglected Minority," the exhibit runs through Nov. 22 and is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The exhibition was put together by Paul Jones who is the public relations director for the Walter E. Fernald State School in Belmont, the state's largest instutution for developmentally disabled adults and the oldest public residential facility for the mentally retarded.

continued on page 5

Professor to address scientific thought

Visiting professor at Smith College, Alistair Crombie, will present a lecture titled "Styles of Scientific Thinking in the European Tradition."

The lecture, sponsored by the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities at the University of Massachusetts, will be held at 4 p.m. today in Campus Center room 917.

Crombie is a graduate in natural science from Melbourne and Cambridge Universities. Before retiring from a teaching position at the University of Oxford, Crombie was responsible for introducing the history of scientific and medical thought into normal courses. He has been president of the British Society for the History of Science and of the International Academy of the History of Science. Crombie was the original editor of the British Journal for the Philosophy of Science and the co-founding editor of the annual review History of Science.

—LESLEY CLARK

AIDS
Facts • Perceptions • Myths

A community education program that will present the most current information about the disease AIDS.

Wednesday, November 20
7:00-9:30 pm
Mahar Auditorium
University of Massachusetts

SPEAKERS:
John Mazullo, M.D.
Member of Governor's Task Force on AIDS
Ann Marie Silvia
Health Education Coordinator of the Massachusetts AIDS Action Committee

SPONSORED BY:
Massachusetts AIDS Action Committee
University Health Services

Open to the public at no charge
For more information contact Health Education at 549-2671 ext. 181

Board of Governors

ATTENTION
All RSO and Student Coops

the 85/86 Recommendations for Student Space in the CC/SU will be posted outside of Room 817 (Campus Center)

All questions should be directed to Space Allocation/EDO Coordinator

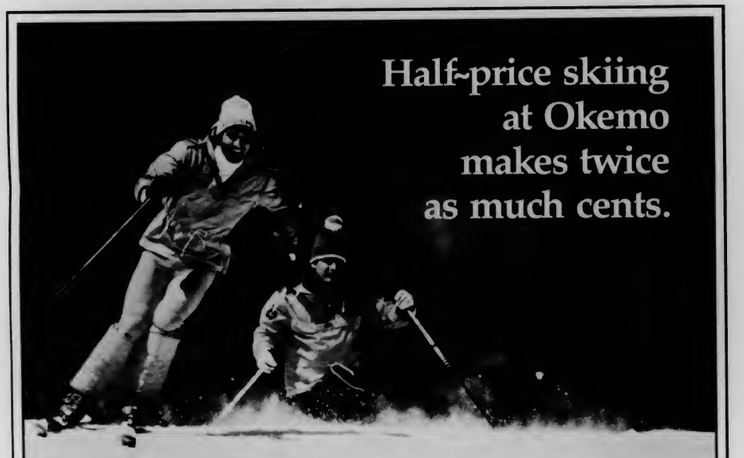
OOPS!

Now's the time to call...

North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

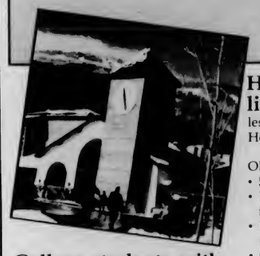
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*



While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.

* Upon faculty approval



COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES

549-3840
228 Triangle St
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun

3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

Half-price skiing at Okemo makes twice as much cents.

Half-price discount on lift tickets mid-week

lesser discounts weekends and Holiday periods 12/25/85–1/1/86, 2/15– 2/21/85.

Okemo has:
- 58 trails and slopes
- Has the fourth highest vertical drop in Vermont
- Has eight major lifts including a new 4-passenger chairlift.
- Covers over 60% of its skiable terrain with snowmaking.
- Receives an annual snowfall of over 12 feet.
- Is the only Eastern ski resort with a major town at its base.
- Has a 4½ mile novice trail from the summit.
- Has two of the steepest gladed areas in the Northeast.

College students with valid ID's are eligible for Okemo's Special College Discount at the Okemo Mountain Lodge. Condominiums surrounding the Base Area feature full kitchens, fireplaces, telephones and cable color TV. Ski-in, ski-out accomodations conveniently located to all mountain facilities.

Half-price skiing is twice the fun.

Write or call for more information:
Lodging Service . . . 802-228-5571
Snow Reports 802-228-5222
General Information 802-228-4041

OKEMO

Okemo Mountain RFD 1, Box CA, Ludlow, Vermont 05149

continued from page 3

Many of the documents and photographs were found in the basement of the Fernald School, and illustrate the improvements in the treatment of the mentally retarded.

The exhibition contains original photographs, documents and teaching tools from the 1840s through 1985, many of which tell the history of the Fernald School and the history of the mentally retarded in this country.

Included in the exhibition is a copy of "The Declaration of General and Specific Rights of the Mentally Retarded," which was passed by the UN General Assembly in 1971. The declaration states that mentally retarded people have the same basic rights as other citizens and have rights to protection from from abuse, degradation and exploitation.

The showing is sponsored by The Alumni Office.

—SUSAN EATON

continued from page 1

Stacey Roth, student government association co-president and member of the 15-person task force, last week said some suggestions for better enforcement include body or visual searches of students before they enter the stadium.

She also said the committee will investigate placing fencing around the field in an effort to stop spectators from passing bottles to students.

O'Brien said he and Ling also reviewed ways to shorten the exercises, which could include eliminating certain parts of the ceremonies. He would not be more specific.

The effort to improve the ceremonies—the main charge of the task force—comes after last year's commencement when a barrage of letters from parents, alumni and trustees complained about the way the ceremonies were handled, according to Roth.

University Travel & Tours, Inc.

Winter & Thanksgiving Break

2 weeks around sunny Greece
$699

14 different programs around Europe
$999

5 days to Montreal
$199

3 days to Boston
$99

Prices include air flights, hotel accommodations, breakfast, transportation to and from airports and hotels, and much more.

Includes: transportation, hotel accommodations, breakfast, sightseeing tour, tips and all taxes.

For Information Call:
UNIVERSITY TRAVEL and TOURS INC.
225 Main St. Northampton
(413) 584-9913

Family Resale Clothing

ONCE MORE WITH FEELING

Affordable prices on antique items, winter clothing and gift shopping needs.

Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant
Amherst, MA
549-3772

SAVE $2.00

Get the bigger look of personal posters for less.

Your favorite 35 mm color photos can look great as gorgeous posters from Kodak. Just bring us your 35 mm color negatives, slides or prints. You'll get back 12 by 18-inch personal poster from Kodak's own labs. Personal pr *ers by Kodak make ideal gifts for friends and relatives. Offer good November 4–20, 1985. See us today for details.

Open
Mon-Fri 9-5

Ask for PROCESSING BY Kodak

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION

RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wetroba's Store
549-4704

Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Stratton

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

The Wesley Chin
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
1 665 3044

Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood

DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield: south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.

Open:
Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

Learning from the past

At last week's Undergraduate Student Senate meeting, a motion arose to place one representative from the Jewish caucus on the Coordinating Committee. (At present, approximately 17 percent of the campus population is Jewish.) The motion passed almost unanimously. We are writing in response to the attitudes put forth by two of the three Third World Caucas representatives present at the meeting. They voted against the motion and we hope their views are not representative of the Third World at large.

One representative from the Third World Caucus spoke against the motion by implying that ten years ago, Third World students had to take over offices and demand representation in the Undergraduate Student Senate. That struggle was clearly difficult, justified, and unfortunately, at that time, necessary. Was he implying that Jewish people must now do the same? As white gentiles who hate to see oppressed peoples pitted against each other, our question is: Does history have to repeat itself? Do people still have to invade offices to gain fair representation and equal rights, or have we learned from our mistakes?

Why would members of one oppressed people speak out against the advancement of another oppressed people? Anti-Semitism and racism are the same oppression, simply directed at different groups. The answer is clear. To end all forms of oppression, all those oppressed must unite and fight side-by-side for equality.

The notion of unity is not ours alone. It has been expressed for years by many writers. We would like to leave you with the following paraphrase of The Hangman (author unknown) which sums up our views exceptionally well:

"They first came for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist.
Then they came for the Jews,
and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew.
Then they came for the homosexuals, the Catholics, the blacks,... and I didn't speak up because I wasn't homosexual, Catholic, black,...
Then they came for me,
and by that time, no one was left to speak up."

Suzanne A. Gauger, senator
Crabtree
Karin E. Gauger, senator
Commuter Area Government

Zionism is not racism

On Nov. 10, I was confronted with the accusation that Jews are racists; that we believe ourselves to be superior people and as a result, only associate with fellow Jews. Ironically, that day marked the beginning of an awareness week to dispute the claim that "Zionism is Racism."

I would like to refute that accusation first and foremost by referring to this same day in 1938. It was on this night 37 years ago in Germany that a government organized pogrom was launched, resulting in the mistreatment and murder of thousands of Jews, Jewish shop windows were smashed, and synagogues were burned. This became knows as "Kristallnacht," "Night of the Broken Glass." This was followed by the Holocaust in which six million Jews were annihilated in the concentration camps. These events emphasized the need for a recognized, Jewish homeland in the land of Israel. Zionism is the reaffirmation of Jews as a nation, not as a race.

In 1975, The General Assembly of the United Nations passed a resolution that stated Zionism is a form of racism and racial descrimination. In order to have that resolution (3379) repealed, it is crucial that its unjustified claims be refuted. The resolution has not succeeded in eliminating or undermining the goals of Zionism but has served to spread and deepen hatred of the Jewish people, and to intensify anti-Semitism.

In response to the question that I have been asked, no, Zionism is not racism, but rather its antithesis. It makes no reference to racism nor does it advocate racial descrimination of any kind. Simply, Zionism is the ongoing pursuit of a national homeland...a place to call home...in a little land called Eretz Yisrael, the land of Israel.

Julie Lynn Bergstein
Amherst

Grand Opening
SPORTSWEAR FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA

WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99

All
N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
20% OFF

Governors Program Council presents:
The Razz-Bang Dance Bonanza
Sick of the Bars or Don't have an ID?

Last Chance for Fun before Thanksgiving at the Bluewall, Nov. 23
9 pm to 1 am
$2.00 Admission
with D.J. Peter Gold

SOMETIMES IT TAKES AN ARMY TO PAY BACK YOUR COLLEGE LOAN.

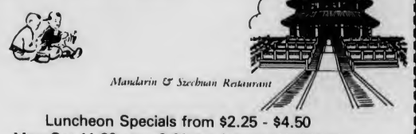
Paying back your college loan can be a long, uphill battle. But the Army's Loan Repayment Program makes it easy.

Each year you serve as a soldier, the Army will reduce your college debt by 1/3 or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. So after serving just 3 years, your college loan will be completely paid off.

You're eligible for this program with a National Direct Student Loan or a Guaranteed Student Loan or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975. And the loan can't be in default.

And just because you've left college, don't think you'll stop learning in the Army. Our skill training offers a wealth of valuable high-tech career-oriented skills. Call your local Army Recruiter to find out more.

586-9334
Northampton Army Office
241 King St.



ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

GRAND OPENING
川 菜
北京園
PEKING GARDEN

WE WELCOME YOU TO
We hope to introduce you to a new, authentic taste in Chinese cuisine. We emphasize the use of different Chinese spices in making a dish, such as fresh ginger root, scallion, fresh garlic, pepper corn, star anise, sesame seed, and of course, hot pepper. We also have a variety of Chinese sauces made from assorted beans and spices, will give a dish its unique, exotic flavor.

In our Menu we combine the most famous dishes from the south and the north to enable you to taste a wide range of genuine Chinese cooking. Our spicy dishes are prepared in three categories, mild, hot, and very hot. Please advise your waitress which category you desire. Our Chef has had 20 years of experience from all over the world, such as Mainland China, Hong Kong, and New York City. Therefore, we can guarantee you the finest in Chinese cuisine.

We sincerely hope that you will enjoy both our food and service. We welcome your comments and criticism.

Mandarin & Szechuan Restaurant

Luncheon Specials from $2.25 - $4.50
Mon-Sat 11:30 am - 3:00 pm (except Holidays)

Sunday Brunch served from 11:30 am - 3:00 pm
$6.95 per person $4.00 per child under ten

Banquet Room Available for larger parties

Cocktail Lounge
Full Liquor License

For take out orders and reservations please call 586-1202
Sun-Thurs 11 am - 10 pm; Fri & Sat 11 am - 11 pm

48 Russell Street
Hadley, Mass. 01035

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Politics not so simplistic

Brian Culverhouse

In their editorial titled "SGA needs improvement" (Nov. 13), the Collegian Board of Editors issued a bitter indictment against the Undergraduate Student Senate.

As a new senator I have witnessed this spectacle, with great dismay and consternation, and must admit that much of what the Board reports is only too true.

However, I take offense to their indiscriminate analogy comparing the senate and senators to nursery school children and "drunks." This blanket characterization, simply stated, does a disservice to the majority of conscientious senators, and is, therefore, deceptive.

Having said this, regrettably, there are indeed several (mostly veteran) senators whose behavior in the senate I have found to be consistently disruptive, rude, and largely detrimental to any attempt to conduct an orderly meeting.

I whole-heartedly support the Board's call for an end to "this childish behavior" by this small but vocal minority, and for a return to a semblance of order and efficient debate. Obviously, I too am annoyed that senate meetings are long, regularly disruptive, and to date have yet to complete an evening's entire agenda.

However, I am perplexed by the solutions outlined in the Board's editorial, which seem to me as unsettlingly naive—especially when coming from members of an institution which we rely upon daily to provide informed and, above all, accurate information.

They seem not to grasp the simple reality that politics is most often a dirty business. And when we are talking about the workings (or, currently, the lack thereof) of the Undergraduate Student Senate, the nature of politics is precisely the point. I see their view as a manifestation of a distinctly American notion that public service (including the media which serves the public) can be aloof from partisan politics. This is a fallacy to be sure.

I must also confess that their assessment that certain senators are "bumbling" and "power hungry" also rings only too true. But again, I find their solution equally simplistic– henceforth senators are to leave their "personal dislikes and vendettas outside of the senate meeting room, where they belong." Yet, desirable as this may be, is this really possible?

It appears that the Board needs to be reminded that the Undergraduate Student Senate embodies a vast array of divergent opinions, personal preferences and ideologies, in a word—politics. Here we are ultimately talking about the workings (and shortcomings) of a representative democracy. The implication of the Board's solution is to divest the politics from the democracy, and again the question is whether this is possible or desirable. I think not on both counts.

The crucial point which I'm afraid the Board missed completely is that the central problem which has plagued the senate results from a profound disrespect, by a few, for the rules of order which govern the body—a point made repeatedly by the speaker. And I'm afraid that the senate will continue down its current path until such time when these few, disruptive senators begin to respect the rules of order which exist, or when the silent majority of senators become fed up with these blatant infringements upon their rights, and the interests of their constituents, and demand that these senators be firmly reprimanded or, if necessary, expelled from the senate. Only then will there be anything approaching the semblance of partisan-free harmony which the Board believes (I think erroneously) is the natural condition of a body politic.

Finally, I think it's worth a moment of indulgence to ponder the societal implications of the recent controversies surrounding the Undergraduate Student Senate. We work within a representative democratic system which, ideally, is merely a reflection of the sentiments and sensibilities of its constituent base. And student government associations are typically one place where a society's future leaders arise from. All this being so, I shudder to think what this future leadership has in store for us.

Brian Culverhouse is a Commuter Area Senator.

Letters
Much more to Dining Commons

I would like to respond to Herb Ramy's comments (Nov. 7) about the workers in the Dining Commons. Along with the people who work there everyday, I serve five nights a week. While I can not comment on the particular instance that occurred with Ramy and one server, I can say that I am appalled with his speculationns about "..the wonderful lunch ladies. When not drinking coffee or smoking cigarettes, they're just full of ways to make your life hell." I have worked with a number of different women in the Dining Commons and all have been fun, yet extremely diligent.

Contrary to Ramy's opinion, the students are the ones who make our lives hell. Everyday, we come across rude and childish behavior from the students who make our jobs a chore. Have people forgotten about the words 'thank you' and 'please'? Have people forgotten about basic manners?

Some may assume that the servers in the DC's have it easy; that they just serve the food and wash a few tables. Believe me, it is not that easy working under very hot conditions, standing on your feet all day, not being able to take a sip of water because you are too busy, and on top of everything else, having students scream at you because they don't like the choice of menu. Just to set the record straight (this is not directed toward Ramy), the servers have nothing to do with how the food is cooked. If you don't like something, there are suggestion boxes in all of the DC's. If you have a complaint or, yes, a compliment, please feel free to use them.

The next time you eat a meal, remember the human being who is behind the counter, be patient, and yes, give us a smile, it will make for a more pleasant environment for all.

Pattee McGarry
Amherst

Nursing program in perspective

As a nursing student, I would like to present a more positive image of the department than given in the Nov. 13 Collegian article. The UMass nursing program is highly regarded throughout Massachusetts, as well as the rest of the country. Board scores have been considerably high in the past. As a result, students have landed good positions in hospitals throughout the country.

The article gave the impression that enrollement for the nursing program is low. On the contrary, the number of applicants is high. However, it is difficult to accept many more students because clinical groups visiting local hospitals must be small. The program itself is both selective and competitive.

Finally, the Umass nursing program is the only baccalaureate program in western Massachusetts. Eliminiating the program would take away the privileges of many nursing students in the area.

Marla Zirkes
Southwest

The bars lack a certain. . .

Mary Cresse

My editor tells me I can't use names, for that would be libel. God forbid; so instead I'm asking you to use your imagination, look up club listings if you like, but please agree with me that since the demise of The Drake (you can call it the Village Inn, I'll call it the Drake), there are no good bars left in the Pioneer Valley.

Call it the Junior Yuppie Syndrome, but there's no place void of trendiness and the permeating sense of Valley attitude that helped kill the Drake in the first place.

I was kicked out of a bar in Northampton at 12:45 a.m. last Saturday because I committed the crime of asking for a Bud after the bar had closed. Having had two drinks the entire night, I wasn't exactly a raving drunk; nevertheless I wanted one before my ride came.

"The bar is closed," the bartender intoned simply, as if I were a five-year-old. "It's time to go home now."

My mouth said "fine"; my brain said, "Look, I'm the one with the money and I'll decide how much I can drink and when I want to go home, thank you."

A minor occurence, yes, but proof again of the attitude of bars in Amherst and Northampton—especially the latter—thinking they're late-night equivalents of the espresso and croissant set. As if it's a favor to patronize the place.

If bar owners have forgotten this basic rule of business, I'll remind them—a bar should be a place where people can go to simply hang out, but comfortable, and forget about authority instead of being stifled by it. Granted, bars must comply with increasingly strict state drinking laws—and enforcing them is admirable—but stricter laws are no excuse for the officiousness and condescension with which bar employees treat patrons–"Hey, people! Let's go! It's almost one," cried a pushy, hippie bouncer recently at my (formely) punk (formely) favorite hangout.

Almost one o'clock? Listen, when I pay $3 to see a second-rate garage band on a Saturday night, I expect them to play until at least one. And what's this "people?" Where am I, a seventh grade gym class? "People, could we get the volleyball over here? The blue team has to serve."

Note, here, too: I'm not talking about clubs where rowdiness is a regular problem, where bouncers have to move herds of Guess-clad dumbsters and bimbettes off a palm-sized dance floor (God knows, the mousse/hair spray/air ratio is enough to set the place aflame); I'm talking about neighborhood hangouts. Where people wear black.

And the music. It's horrible.

I used to hit a local "alternative night" in part because the music was always good—English Beat, B-52s, good bop stuff—only now I'm subjected to spine-jarring, primal 70s disco. Is this a form of penance for being out on a weeknight? The tunes are the same all 'round town. Apparently, Gloria Gaynor has survived.

Another thing—dress. Is there no flair for the avant-garde anymore? I don't know about you, but I feel slightly betrayed when I dress up to go to a club and face a bartender wearing a Bart's t-shirt. Do you regular readers of the Collegian notice there aren't too many clubs reviews in lately? Did you ever stop to think that those of us who used to write them are now on the road to Boston or New York?

I suppose I'll be hitting the bars in the future (there is a good one that I'm not telling anyone about), but until then I'll be trying to survive my remaining semester with my latest solution—buy a case, invite over some friends, cook a dinner, and dance! The Drake may be dead, but me and the '52s are having our own party out of bounds—at home.

Mary Cresse is a Collegian columnist.

All letters submitted for publication must be signed and include the author's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Letters must be typewritten and double spaced at 67 characters per line. Column submissions should be between 40 and 60 lines. All submissions are subject to editing for clarity and length. —Editor.

DOVE
Secretarial Services

Fast, Accurate Typing of

- Resumes
- Term Papers
- Dissertations

79 South Pleasant St.
Amherst, Mass 01002
256-1335
253-7480

Monday Night Football
at the
TIME OUT

Popcorn All Night

Juke box will be unplugged for the game.

GIANTS v.s. REDSKINS
37 N. Pleasant St.
Proper ID Required
Don't Drink and Drive

Yesterday & Today Records

Grateful Dead Psychadelic
Grand Opening
Punk Jazz
Blues

Top CASH PAID for USED:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's

An Alternative Record Store
96 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 253-9209

SWISS ALMOND CHOCOLATE
COSTA-RICAN
FRENCH ROAST

COFFEE RAFFLE
AT
PEOPLE'S MARKET
$1.00/chance to win
100 Cups of Fresh Ground Gourmet Coffee
Enter Soon -- Drawing Nov. 22nd
COLUMBIAN

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE Collegian

Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegian Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

See Capt. Schiffer in the Campus Center Concourse
Today and Tomorrow, between 10 and 2 or call 1-800-255-USMC

Thursday Nov. 21
Campus Center Auditorium

& THE JASON SCORCHERS
and special guest
PAJAMA SLAVE DANCERS
Tickets $8.50
$10.00 at the door
VIOLENT FEMMES SOLD OUT!
at Tix Unlimited, Main Street Records, Faces and "For the Record".

Wind Quintet filled with energy

ARTS

By MIKE GERVASI
Collegian Correspondent

The audience at the Fine Arts Center had its eyes opened last Thursday night when it hosted the energetic Aspen Wind Quintet.

The five players - Flutist Barli Nugent, Oboist Claudia Coonce, Clarinetist David Krakauer, Bassoonist Timothy Ward, and Horn Player Kaitilin Mahoney - have been together since 1981. They are listed by name because besides making up a fine ensemble, they are each accomplished on their own.

Starting the show with Rameau's "Suite in G," they explored a wide emotional range. Here, they also showed how tightly they could play, almost anticipating each other.

After the intermission, the quartet played Hans Abrahamsen's "Walden". Here they laid down precise textures and displayed a very fine balance. The composer, a graduate of the Royal Danish Conservatory of Music, was sitting in the audience and gave the players the thumbs up.

Greg Smith conducts The Greg Smith Singers who will perform at 8:00 p.m. on Nov. 20 at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Tickets sold at the Fine Arts Center 545-2511.

The last piece on the program was Nielson's "Quintet for Winds," opus 43) a piece that allowed each player the opportunity to hog the spotlight for a short time. Each player exceled. They rounded out the show with a really fun encore, "Humereske," by Alexander Zemlinsky. Throughout the entire program, this group displayed qualities that make them more than just promising young players. One quality is the subtle balance they achieved during even the most demanding passages. No instrument ever fell on of place each contributed well to the overall sound. They also played with an energy that was infectious.

All in all, this was a fine performance by fine performers. Not an enjoyable concert by promising young musicians but by polished professionals.

The University Dancers will perform at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall December 4-6. Tickets sold at Fine Arts Center 545-2511.

Concert Special with NEW MAN
"Bad Boys"
Voted best of NEW New Artists
Thurs. Nov. 21 8:00
YOU MUST BE 18
Positive ID required
17 Flat St. Brattleboro VT
802-254-8257

AMHERST CINEMA
Monday & Tuesday
From Here to Eternity 7:00
Cat on a Hot Tin Roof 9:30
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5436

RENT-A-WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst
Rent-A-Wreck
(Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2980

HAIRCUTS
$8.50
with this coupon
CALL
STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Dr.,
Amherst, MA
549-5610
expires 11-30-85 C

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN. 19-24

TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING HOTEL or CONDO

ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES, NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT.

HOTEL PACKAGE ONLY $189
CONDO PACKAGE ONLY $139

Sign-up before Nov. 15th and get a free T-shirt
LAGNAF 86
Vermont Drinking Age is 18 yrs.
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

NATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM
INFORMATION MEETINGS

There will be four information meetings for students interested in applying for the National Student Exchange Program for Fall, 1986.

Tuesday, November 12*	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 13	4-5 pm	CC 805
Tuesday, November 19	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 20	4-5 pm	CC 803

* financial aid information session

Students applying to restricted schools: Univ. of Hawaii/Manoa & Hilo; Univ. of So. Florida; Cal State Chico, Northridge & Sonoma; and College of the Virgin Islands must attend one of these information sessions.

Come see our wide selection of fine Christmas Cards!

A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 1 p.m.

DELANO'S

FINE FOOD & SPIRITS
FREE TACO BAR
MON & TUES NIGHT
9 — till it lasts
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Heineken
57 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

Ann Fields

Country Pie Restaurant & Take Home Pie Shop

Our Menu Offers A Wide Variety of Food Dishes • Soups • Salads • Grinders • Chowders • Quiches • Sandwiches • Beef-Eaters Specials • A Full Dinner Menu Including Delicious Steak & Fresh Seafood • Plus Pasta Specialties & Poultry • Over 35 Varieties Of Our Delicious Homemade Pies

OUR MOST UNIQUE PIE SHOP

Over 35 Varieties of Pies made right before your eyes. All made with fresh produce for you to take home or enjoy products right here.

Experience the flavor and aroma of homemade food

FULL MENU • FULL LIQUOR LICENSE

• SOMETHING VERY UNIQUE IN FAMILY DINING

Delicious Dinner Specials

Four Nights a Week (Specials Not Available On Holidays)

• MONDAY •

- YANKEE POT ROAST..... 5.95
- U.S.D.A. CHOICE 8 OUNCE N.Y. STRIP STEAK..... 7.95
- BEEF LIVER W/ONIONS OR BACON..... 4.50
- BAKED STUFFED CHICKEN.. 5.25

• TUESDAY •

- YANKEE POT ROAST..... 5.95
- CHICKEN PARMESAN W/SPAGHETTI..... 4.95
- BAKED FILET OF SOLE..... 6.95
- U.S.D.A. CHOICE 8 OUNCE N.Y. STRIP STEAK..... 7.95

• WEDNESDAY •

- BAKED STUFFED SHRIMP... 7.50
- SPAGHETTI W/MEATBALLS OR SAUSAGE..... 4.50
- U.S.D.A. CHOICE 8 OUNCE N.Y. STRIP STEAK..... 7.95
- HAM STEAK..... 5.25

• THURSDAY •

- MILK FED VEAL PARMESAN W/SPAGHETTI..... 7.45
- BAKED STUFFED SCROD.... 5.95
- U.S.D.A. CHOICE 8 OUNCE N.Y. STRIP STEAK..... 7.95
- FISH & CHIPS..... 5.25

Above specials include salad, vegetable and potato, coffee or soft beverage (dinners with pasta do not include vegetable or potato). Also included with all dinners is a complimentary glass of our house wine or a slice of our homemade pie.

Served Monday Thru Thursday.... 4 PM - 10 PM

PLUS $7.95

Friday, Saturday and Sunday

Roast Prime Rib of Beef Incl. Salad, Roll, Butter, Vegetable and Potato

Enjoy a pie with your friends & family for Thanksgiving!

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

7 am to 10 pm Sun thru Thurs; to 12 pm Friday & Saturday

401 Russell St., Rt. 9, Hadley, MA • Tel. 584-0311

NOW OPEN

WORCESTER MUNCHY

Binders	Grocery
Notebooks	Cold Soda
Paper	Juice
Backpacks	Pop Tarts
Clothing	Glassware
Gifts	Cups
Cosmetics	Decals
Health and Beauty Aids	Pennants
Candy	Chips
Tobacco	Cookies
Cards	Popcorn
Calendars	Umbrellas
Clocks	Newspapers
Batteries	Tote Bags
Electrical Supplies	Film
Magazines	School Supplies
Memo Board	Typewriter Ribbons
Ice Cream	Pencils
	Pens

There's no need to hurry! Our convenient hours allow you to shop early or late.

Munchy Open Mon-Sun 8 am - 9 pm

UNIVERSITY STORE

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

FELLOWSHIPS FOR

GRADUATE STUDY DURING

1986 - 87

The National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta announces that fourteen fellowships for graduate study will be awarded for use during the 1986-87 academic year. The amount of each fellowship is $3,000. Applicants will be judged on academic record, recommendations submitted, the soundness of the proposed project and its purpose, and financial need.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta graduating with a cumulative average of 3.50 is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have achieved this average at the end of the first semester of this year.

Application blanks can be obtained at the Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore from Ms. Gladys Rodriquez, Assistant Dean of Students, Chapter Advisor.

Deadline is January 15, 1986

workshop on

Sexual Violence on College Campuses

• date rape • sexual harassment

Tues. Nov. 19 7:30-10 pm

in Southwest Women's Center MacKimmie

24 Hour Rush RESUME SERVICE

CopyCat Print Shop

"When the copy is as important as the original"

549-3840 — Hours:

228 Triangle St. — 8 am - midnight M-F

2nd floor above — 11 am - 7 pm Sat

Computer Works — 12 pm - 9 pm Sun

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP

"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"

108 North Pleasant St., Amherst

— Western Union Agent —

Complete lines of:

Pipes & Pipe Accessories

Tobacco - imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes

Cigarettes imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)

Full range of domestic & imported cigars

Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes

Newspapers, Mass State Lottery

Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs

Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas

— New England Telephone Agent —

253-7896

let us do your wash-dry-fold and hand pressing

10-5 P.M. MON-SAT

SELF SERVICE

7 DAYS - 7 A.M - 10 P.M.

549-1665

SPEEDWASH

Quality Laundry

11 Pray St. Amherst, MA

ARTS

Musicians collaborate to protest Apartheid with 'Sun City' album

Sun City (Manhattan) Artists United Against Apartheid

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

Sun City is a high priced, Las Vegas-type town in South Africa which offers lucrative contracts for western musicians to come and play.

'I ain't gonna play Sun City' is the cry of performers from Bonnie Raitt to Lou Reed to Afrika Bambaataa on a new single/album by Artists United Against Aparteid. The proceeds from the project go to The Africa Fund which educates people about apartheid and helps the families of South African political prisoners.

The album features two versions of the Sun City single. One with rappers and one without. The one without features some fun guitar playing by Pete Townsend. What is really great about this album is that it is a true cross-cultural/white and black project against apartheid.

There is a piece by Peter Gabriel, a rap by a number of New York rappers as well as Peter Wolf and Gil Scott-Heron. There is a song similar to Paul Hardcastle's "19," with the news montage done by Danny Schechter (The News Dissector) and an instrumental featuring Miles Davis, Stanley Jordan, Herbie Hancock, Ron Carter and others.

Every song on Sun City is as good as the politics it stands for. It's incredibly refreshing to hear rappers and rockers talking politics instead of "girls."

The album, produced by Little Steven, also has an extra song by Bono with Keith Richards and Ron Wood. This is the only weak song on the album. But who cares. That's only a matter of opinion.

This is one of the most important concept albums of the decade and I whole heartedly recommend that you go out and buy it. And whatever you do, don't defeat the purpose and tape it.

CHANCELLOR'S LECTURE SERIES

1985 • 1986

VIRGINIA A. BEAL

Department of Food Science and Nutrition

THE CHALLENGE OF NUTRITION

Why is the public bombarded by conflicting nutrition information? Why cannot nutritional scientists agree about dietary recommendations? Does food intake in childhood affect adult health and longevity? Does a fat child become a fat adult? How much do we really know about human nutrition?

NOVEMBER 21, 1985 • 8 PM • MEMORIAL HALL

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Free and open to all • Refreshments to follow lecture

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS

THE GREAT SKI SNATCH

$500,000

WORTH OF TOP NAME

WINTER CLOTHING

&

SKI EQUIPMENT

PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED

FOR MORE INFO 545-3437

NOV 21 - 23

T, F — HIGH NOON TIL 10 P.M.

S — 10AM TIL 4PM

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM

UMASS, AMHERST

ARTS

ARTFUL OBSERVATIONS

Hollywood and the film industry are finally recognizing the true nature and strength of today's women.

So-called women's films, such as Plenty, Agnes of God, Sweet Dreams, Marie and Jagged Edge are far removed from the kind of old fashioned Hollywood movie in which a big studio star - Joan Crawford, Bette Davis and more recently Jacqueline Bisset - would suffer the trials and tribulations of loveless marriages, backstreet romances and unwed motherhood.

Women are finally being portrayed as the strong-willed courageous people they are and they can be.

In Plenty, Meryl Streep plays a woman troubled by lost illusions. In Sweet Dreams, Jessica Lange plays the real-life country and western star Patsy Cline. Glenn Close is cast as a top-notch criminal lawyer in Jagged Edge.

In Marie, Sissy Spacek also plays a career woman - the real-life incorruptible chairwoman of Tennessee's State Board of Parole and Pardons.

In Agnes of God, Jane Fonda plays another professional woman - a chain-smoking psychiatrist - and Anne Bancroft plays a worldly mother superior.

However, New York Times Film Critic Vincent Canby recently took the opportunity to suggest that these new women's films might indeed be guilty of "sexism in reverse."

Says Canby: "In not one of these films does the woman protagonist have a relationship of any importance with a man who comes up to her ankle bone, and only in a couple does the actress-star play opposite an actor of comparable talent and screen presence."

As a result, Canby says, most of these "new" women's films seem just as superficial and just as sexist, "in reverse," as the "1970s buddy-buddy films exemplified by "The Sting."

First, there is no such thing as "sexism in reverse." If these women's films are sexist, which I hold that they are not, then they are sexist and that's that. It is strictly up to the individual audience member to decide how he or she likes to see women portrayed in films.

These films are doing for women what films have been doing for men for years; reinforcing the positive and proving the ultimate strength and morality of the gender. Women are as strong as men, and it is about time that Hollywood and film makers recognized this.

Canby argues that while these films demonstrate and support the strength of the female leads, they do so "at a certain cost to dramatic coherence." When was the last time a film critic said the same thing about movies which show men in the intelligent, macho, gun-toting role and where the women kowtow to the mens' every need and desire?

Clint Eastwood, Superman and James Bond all have their women, but they are stereotypical cooks, maids and sex objects. If the women in thes films are not there for the comfort and support of their leading men, then they too, are virtually non-existent.

There are weak, bewildered men in the world, too, only Hollywood has denied their existence for so long that when they finally do appear on the screen, and especially when they appear next to women who are stronger than they, critics—namely male critics like Canby—feel they have to cry foul.

There should be more films like these. They should be appreciated for their reality and originality, and not examined under the microscope of sterotypes.

Jill Lang is a Collegian staff member.

COURSE OFFERED IN SPRING 1986

"PRACTICUM IN MATHEMATICS TUTORING"

This is a PASS/FAIL, 3 credit course

After successful completion of the course students are eligible to be paid for tutoring the following semester

Pre-Requisite: Successful completion of four 100 level (or above) Mathematics courses

Course meets on Tuesday from 4 - 6 p.m.

Tutoring practicum is by arrangement (2 hrs/wk)

Pre-Registration: Liberal Studies Office
251 Hills South, 9 - 5 p.m.
(Nov. 18 - 23)

LORD'S & LADY'S HAIR SALONS SM

The Hampshire Mall
586-7913
20% off Student Discount*

not valid w/specials exp. Dec. 31

TUESDAY "PERFECT PERMS":
Reg. $53.00 & up ..... Now $39.95 & up

WEDNESDAY CUTS:
Women ....Reg. $18.00 ..... Now $14.00
Men .....Reg. $16.00 ..... Now $12.00

Walk-in Service Welcome • No Appointments Necessary.
Not to be confused with Frank Stiriacci's Lords & Ladies

Peloton Sports
Cross-Country Ski Jamboree Sale!

Sample Savings on 2 of 12 Complete Outfits:

Nordic Waxless Outfit
Leather 75mm Boots
Tonkin Poles
75mm Bindings
Special Sale $69.95

Kneissl HC Waxless Skis
Salomon SR 301 Boots
SNS System Bindings
Swix Fibreglass Poles
Reg. $178.00
$119.95
This is the lowest price ever on this outfit!

- 20% to 40% off all cold weather clothing
- Last years ski leftovers ½ price
- All used boots $10.00
- Specials on Childrens' Outfits
- Childrens Free Boot Exchange

FREE — Rafrashmants
FREE — Get a pair of Peloton Ski Straps just for stopping by
FREE — Mounting and Base Prep on all XC Outfits
FREE — Wax Kit with every Waxable Ski Outfit
FREE — 5 days worth of trail passes for Touring Centers
Savings of over $20.00

Peloton Sports
the cross-country ski experts

Sale from Wed., Nov. 20 - Sun. Nov. 24
►Thurs. & Fri. open until Midnight◄
1 E. PLEASANT ST. — AMHERST — 549-6904

trak LIFA SWIX SPORT
kneissl SALOMON

Look into the one market research graduate program that all these companies are involved in:

A.C. Nielsen Company	Market Facts, Inc.
Advertising Research Foundation	Marketing & Research Counselors, Inc.
Audits & Surveys, Inc.	MRCA Information Services
Burke Marketing Services	Needham, Harper & Steers Advertising
Campbell Soup Co.	NFO Research, Inc.
Coca-Cola USA	Procter & Gamble
Custom Research Inc.	Ralston Purina Co.
Frito-Lay	Sears, Roebuck
General Foods	SSC&B:Lintas Worldwide
General Mills, Inc.	The Pillsbury Company
Grey Advertising	Yankelovich, Skelly & White
Kenneth Hollander Associates	Young & Rubicam
McDonald & Little Advertising

The University of Georgia's Master of Marketing Research Program is truly unique. It is governed by a Board of Advisors drawn from the leaders of industry. Their personal involvement results in an outstanding program that prepares you for the real world.

It's a fifteen month program that combines classroom and on-the-job research experience. It was the first and is still the finest integrated program of graduate study leading to a Master of Marketing Research degree.

As you would expect, admission is selective and competition is stiff. $6,000 scholarships are available for qualifying applicants.

Professor Fred D. Reynolds
122 Brooks Hall
University of Georgia
Athens, Georgia 30602

Dear Sir:
Please send me complete information on your MMR program.

Name_____
Street_____ Apt. _____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
Day Phone_____

Doonesbury

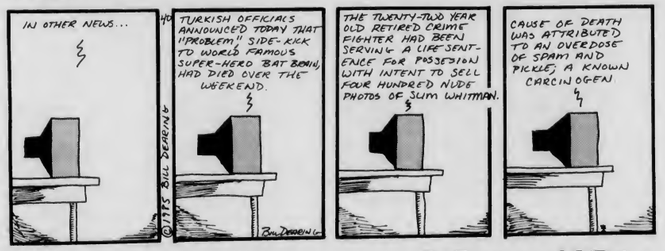
BY GARRY TRUDEAU

WEATHER

Today: Sunny and mild, high around 60.
Tonight: Increasing cloudiness, a chance of showers late.
Tomorrow: Partly sunny, high in the 60s.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed



GORDY

By Gorde

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

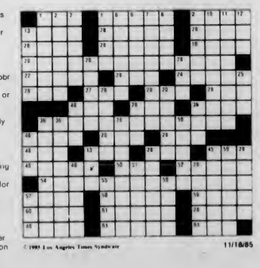
Attention All Staff:

There will be a Sexism Workshop next Wednesday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m. Everyone could benefit from this, so make an effort to attend.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 "Tea for ——"
4 Royal racing site
9 Horned vipers
13 Marmalade ingredient
14 Climbing plant
15 Mountain pass, in India
16 Anecdotes
17 Woody's Hall
18 Stockings
19 Be a sport
22 Clue
23 Writer Deighton
24 Michaelmas daisy
26 Kobe coin
27 White House nickname
29 Rather
31 Sooner, poetically
32 First century date: Rom.
33 Comfort's companion
34 Toilet of yore
35 Happy
39 "—— corny as ..."
40 Thy, in Tours
41 A long time
42 Cote dweller
43 Ethiopian prince
44 Oriental
45 Fireproof material: Abbr
48 Rocket
50 Before teen or test
52 Common
54 Seems ready for action
57 Pre-med. course
58 Severity
59 Streets, along the Seine
60 Small dog, for short
61 Verdugo of films
62 Whipper snappers
63 Fulda feeder
64 Singer Simon
65 Reply, for short

DOWN
1 Bridge holding
2 Enervate
3 Comedian Ole
4 Actor Arkin
5 Unwed
6 Craft for Uncas
7 Party fare
8 Word with off or up
9 Moslem commanders
10 Least
11 Parts of horses' legs
12 —— Anne de Beaupre
13 Sucker
20 Aviator Balbo
21 God of shepherds
25 Female ruff
26 Flora and fauna
30 Farewell
32 Army men.: Abbr
33 Jenny
34 One, in Bonn
35 Fantasized
36 Junior to senior
37 Pillages
38 Wicked one
39 Savers' letters
43 Navigated
44 Decorated again
45 Fall
46 Orchid tubers
47 Praise
49 Gunpowder ingredient
51 Thesaurus man
53 Groove
55 Mastery, in Dundee
56 Brothers
57 Imitate

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

H	A	G	A	R		W	E	F	T		A	C	T	A
E	B	O	L	I		I	L	L	E		C	L	A	N
R	E	B	E	C		D	I	A	N	A	S	S
S	L	I	G	H	T	E	S	T		R	O	U	T	E
			A	R	I	N	E		D	U	L	S	T	E	R
	M	A	D	R	A	S		O	R	E
M	I	L	A	D	Y		W	I	N	N	I	N	G	S
A	C	E	R	B	A	L		E	N	E	R	O
G	E	I	S	T	U	R	E	D		A	F	R	A	I	D
			R	U	D		H	A	R	L	O
B	E	R	A	T	E		S	O	R	A
A	V	I	S	O		S	E	V	E	N	T	E	E	N
N	I	C	K	N	O	L	I	T	E		C	A	R	V	E
A	T	E	E		C	O	I	L		I	N	L	A	W
L	A	R	D		A	W	N	S		S	A	E	N	S

11/18/85

© 1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Soccer notebook

Snow doesn't hamper UMass

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The first snowfall of the year was the best defense that the eighth-ranked Boston College could muster against No. 1 University of Massachusetts in yesterday's NCAA quarterfinal at Boyden.

"The snow gave us more of a chance," BC head coach Susanna Kaplan said. "It slowed things down. After halftime, it (the field) was pretty clean. Underdogs always like poor weather."

But once the 16-0 Minutewomen got used to the snow and mud, they rolled. "I think it worked to our advantage," UM goalie Jan Holland said. "We worked out all week in the grass and mud."

"After practice (this last week)," fullback Debbie Belkin said," we came in caked with mud. It's kind of natural now. We're used to it."

★ ★ ★

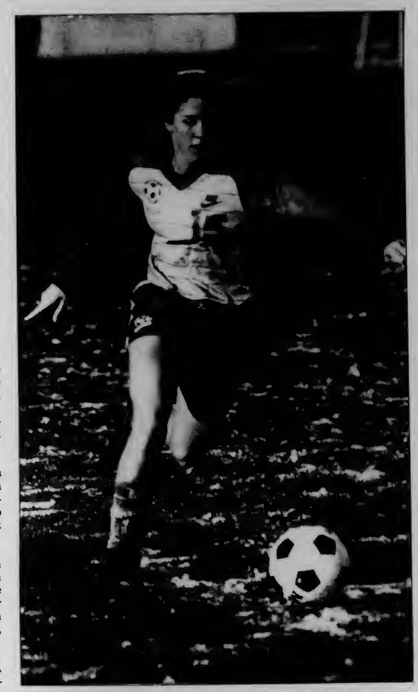
The starting time was delayed an hour to 1 p.m. as the ground crew shoveled the lines and dumped about five bags of speedi-dry to absorb the mositure at midfield and in the goal mouths.

"If it hadn't snowed, the field would have been in excellent, excellent condition," field supervisor Jim Patulak said. "All in all, it's in as good shape as it can be."

★

Cathy Spence, who set NCAA records for most points with 11 (five goals, one assist), most goals (five) and a single game goal record of three against California-Berkeley in last year's tournament, got an assist to keep her four-game NCAA tourney streak of scoring at least a point alive.

★ ★ ★



Defending and four-time national champion North Carolina qualified for its fifth straight Final Four with a 4-2 win over N.C. State, Saturday...Colorado College made it to its first-ever Final Four with a 3-0 win over California-Santa Barbara, yesterday. . .George Mason knocked off previously undefeated Cortland State (18-1-1), 1-0, for the right to face UMass.

★ ★ ★

With the BC win, UMass remained undefeated in NCAA play at Boyden. They are 4-0 since 1982. . .It was the second straight year that UMass sent BC home. UM won in the first round last year, 3-2 in overtime...UMass' winning margin over BC (three goals) was the largest of the tournament.

★ ★ ★

Banda and the team spent Saturday night going over the films of previous games this season. . ."This is a team of youth," Banda said. Only two seniors Sue Bird and Jaime Watson are graduating. . ."That's depressing," said Kaplan. . .This is the first year since 1983 that UMass and UConn haven't both made it to the Final Four. . .George Mason made it to the Final Four once in 1983 and lost to North Carolina in the title game, 4-0.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

UMass freshman forward Cathy Cassady and the Minutewomen beat BC, 3-0.

Penn State will accept Orange bid

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP)—No. 1-ranked Penn State said Sunday it would accept an invitation to take on the Big 8 champion in the Orange Bowl in a contest that could decide the best college football team in the nation.

Coach Joe Paterno met with players Sunday evening to discuss the various bowl options. Invitations to the bowl games go out next Saturday.

"And the team's sentiment was that their leading choice, if they received a bid, would be to go to the Orange Bowl," Dave Baker, Penn State sports information director, said Sunday night.

"It was not a formal vote," Baker continued. "It was a sentiment that that would be their leading choice right now and the reason being that it would appear right now that bowl would offer the highest ranked team that we could play."

The Orange Bowl, in Miami, plays host to the winner of the Big 8. Nebraska is currently ranked No. 2 in the country.

The 10-0 Nittany Lions, doing an about-face of last year's 6-5 season, one of the worst in Paterno's head coaching history, have steadily climbed the polls, beating—though not always convincingly—the likes of Maryland, Alabama and Boston College.

Last week they made it to the top spot in the Associated Press poll and secured the position with a 36-6 shellacking of Notre Dame in State College on Saturday.

The Lions travel to Pittsburgh next Saturday for a matchup with state rival Pitt. The game will be televised beginning at 7:45 p.m. on ESPN, almost two hours after bowl bias are officially extended.

Nebraska, which trounced Kansas 56-6 over the weekend, meets No. 7. Oklahoma, which defeated Colorado 31-0, at 3:30 p.m. next Saturday.

SAVE
midas

MUFFLERS
THE ECONOMIZER MUFFLER
$24.95 Regular $29.95

INSTALLATION INCLUDED
The Economizer muffler from Midas fits most American-made cars and trucks. Your satisfaction with this product is assured.

Guarantee: The Economizer Muffler is warranted by Midas for one year from the date of installation and will be replaced free of charge if it fails during this period.

expires Nov. 30th

BRAKES
$59.95
Per axle (most cars) Regular $74.90
BRAKE SPECIAL

DISC BRAKES
- Free 4-Wheel brake inspection
- Replace pads with new guaranteed disc pads
- Resurface rotors
- Replace grease seals
- Inspect and repack wheel bearings
- Inspect calipers
- Inspect hydraulic system
- Lubricate caliper anchors
- Inspect fluid levels
- Add fluid if required
- Road test

DRUM BRAKES
- Free 4-Wheel brake inspection
- Replace shoes with new guaranteed linings
- Resurface drums
- Inspect wheel cylinders
- Inspect hold down springs
- Lubricate backing plates
- Inspect hydraulic system
- Readjust brakes
- Road test

Guarantee. Midas brake shoes and disc brake pads are warranted for as long as you own your American or foreign car, van or light truck (under 7,000 lbs.), if they ever wear, new Midas brake shoes or pads will be installed without charge for the shoes or pads or the labor to install the shoes or pads. Additional parts and/or labor required to restore the system to operational condition are extra.

FREE WRITTEN ESTIMATES

143 KING ST. NORTHAMPTON 586-4840
JCT. RTES. 9 & 116 HADLEY 586-9991

Midas

Are you denying yourself a better shot at grad school?

Okay, it may be too late to get a 4.0. But it's not too late to try to do better on your LSAT, GMAT, GRE, or MCAT. For that, there's Stanley H. Kaplan.

No one has prepped more students than Stanley H. Kaplan. Our test-taking techniques and educational programs have prepared over 1 million students.

So whatever grad school exam you're taking, call us. Remember, the person next to you during your exam might have taken a Kaplan course.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD
The world's leading test prep organization.
358 N. Pleasant
549-5780
Intersession Classes Enrolling Now
MCAT GMAT GRE LSAT
FREE SPEED READING LESSON
at your convenience

UMass 21, UNH 17

UMass	7	0	7	7	- 21
UNH	0	17	0	9	- 17

Scoring: UMass—Al Neri 9 run, Silvio Bonvini kick. UNH—Andre Garron 7 run, Eric Facey kick. UNH—Garron 3 run, Facey kick. UNH—Facey 40 field goal. UMass—Dave Palazzi 2 run, Bonvini kick. UMass—Neri 1 run, Bonvini kick.

Individual Statistics:

Passing: UM—Dave Palazzi 12-25-196 yards. UNH—Rich Byrne 22-35-1-247 yards.

Rushing: UM—Palazzi 21-82, George Barnwell 15-79, Ted Barrett 7-26, Al Neri 6-22. UNH—Andre Garron 26-81.

Receiving: UM—John Crowley 4-58, Dan Rubinetti 3-62, Mike Kelley 2-12. UNH—Garron 6-71, Glenn Mathews 5-61.

Punting: UM—Dimitri Yavis 4 - 39.0. UNH—Tom Flanagan 8 - 33.5.

Team Statistics:

Total Offense: UM—403. UNH—352.

First Downs: UM—19. UNH—22.

Fumbles-Lost: UM—6-4, UNH—7-2.

Time of Possession: UM—27:16. UNH—32:44.

Penalties-Yards: UM—2-20. UNH—6-69.

UMass swimmers fall to Huskies

By FRED NADEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's swim team dropped its second straight meet of the young season, losing Friday night to the University of Conneticut, 74-66 in Boyden Pool.

UMass was hurt by the loss of diver Debbie Mullin to injury. The diving was a crucial part of the meet according to UMass head coach Bob Newcomb. Georgia Wood and Jean Cowen performed well, but were unable to beet UConn's top two divers. The Huskies swept both diving events, which was a deciding factor in the meet.

The team swam better than Newcomb hoped for this early in the season. Excellent performances were turned in by Allison Uzzo, Kris Henson, Michelle Leary, and Margaret Cameron. Uzzo won the 1000, 100, and the 500 freestyle events with a 10:59.32, a 56.9 and a 5:21.28 respectively. Henson placed second behind Uzzo in the 1000 and 500 freestyle. Leary won the 100 backstroke in a time of 1:05.93, and captured the 200 individual medley with a 2:22.66 in a spectacular come-from-behind-victory.

Cameron had a season best in the 200 free with a time of 2:02.89. Cameron, Henson, and Uzzo all swam a leg in the winning 400 free relay team.

"It was the best team effort in recent years," said Newcomb. Last season the team lost to UConn by 47 points, prompting the coach to proclaim the effort a moral victory for UMass against a powerful Huskie team.

★ football

continued from page 16

couldn't let ourselves lose that."

The third qurater started little better. Senior co-captain George Barnwell, who earlier in the game had moved into second place on the UMass career rushing list, fumbled at the UNH 45 in the first possession before Ted Barrett was denied on a fourth-and-one at the UNH one.

But the UMass defense held stopped UNH and the Wildcats were forced to punt from their endzone. Tom Flanagan's boot was a lousy one, sailing to the UNH 18 and UMass took over with 6:43 left in the period.

Freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi (12-for-25 for 196 yards) ran for a first down at the five before Neri plunged ahead for two more to the UNH three.

Barnwell was stopped at the two, but Palazzi snuck in from there for his team-leading seventh touchdown of the season at the 4:27 mark.

The UMass defense, adjusting to the UNH attack after the first half, shut down the Wildcat's offense throughout the half, especially in the final period.

In UNH's first possession of the last quarter, the Wildcats were stopped in three plays, but Platek fumbled the punt at the UMass 41 with 10:43 left in the game.

"We had to stop them there," said Sullivan. "A touchdown and we're in some trouble."

So the 6-4, 245-pound Iowa transfer from Cambridge took over. In first down, Byrne tried a screen pass to fullback Mike Shriner. Sullivan stood his ground and buried Shriner with a great hit for no gain. A short pass netted four yards before Sullivan burst through the UNH line and sacked Byrne for a loss of seven.

"We didn't lose our poise all game," said UMass coach Bob Stull. "The defense got tough in the second half when they needed to stop them. It was a good game for us."

The teams exchanged possessions before UMass took over at their 17 with 5:50 left in the game.

Flanker John Crowley, who came back after a punishing third quarter hit, was interfered with and UMass advanced to the 32. Palazzi gained six before Barnwell picked up a first down with a gain of 18 to the UNH 44.

Palazzi hooked up with Crowley for 18 yards to the 26 then Barnwell broke off a gain of 11 to the 15. Palazzi got four to the 11, Barnwell four more to the seven then Palazzi again, for seven to the one.

Neri took it from there, busting in from the one with 2:24 to go. Silvio Bonvini added his third point after of the day and UMass took the lead, 21-17.

UNH, remembering the 14-10 loss to UMass that knocked them out of the playoff last season, made things very interesting, taking six plays to get to the UM 13 before Platek came through with his game-saving interception.

"We deserved this game," said Barnwell. "It feels great to go out a winner."

★ field hockey eliminated

continued from page 16

Rowe made 12 saves in the game while Linnehan made three stops. BU enjoyed a 12-3 edge in corners (7-1 in the second half).

For UMass seniors Donelly, Rowe, and forward Judy Morgan; the loss concluded their collegiate careers, which included two trips to the Final Four. Senior forward Chris Kocot will be back for another year however, as she has a season of eligibility left.

There are no regrets however. "I'm proud of the whole whole season," said Donelly. "there was never a game I wasn't proud to play."

"The big disappointment for me was that we had a good team and now it's over," said Rowe.

A special win for the UMass senior class

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H.—When they were recruited, one of the selling points was the winning tradition of University of Massachusetts football.

But, three years of frustration gave them a record of 11-22 and few memories to take with them from UMass. For 15 seniors, 1985 was a very important season.

Saturday's 21-17 victory over New Hampshire gave the Minutemen a 7-4 record, the most victories for a UMass team since 1980. In the future, 1985 will be looked upon as the year the UMass program got back on track.

"We wanted this game so badly," said defensive tackle Eddie Sullivan. "I still remember my last high school game, we lost it. I wanted to go out a winner."

Sullivan will, as will co-captains Paul Platek and George Barnwell. Along with Rod Turner, Chris Wood, Peter Borsari, Mike Briggs, Mike Dwyer, Frank Fay, Manny Fernandez, Duckworth Grange, Carlos Silva, Martin Pond, Jim Simeone and Bart Fuller.

"I'm glad for the seniors, they played one of the biggest roles on this team," said UM head coach Bob Stull. "They played with more dedication and enthusiasm then anyone expected. They showed great leadership under tough conditions in past years. It finally paid off."

Barnwell, who didn't have as good a season as he wanted due to a series of injuries, turned in 75 yards and several big plays in his final college game.

"This means we go out winner," he said. "7-4 sounds kind of nice, doesn't it? Nobody can say anything about UMass being down now. Because of what we accomplished." Barnwell finished his career with 1,844 yards, good enough for second place on the UM career rushing list.

"We're winners, what else can I say?" said Grange. "Pure and simple, just a winning football team."

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: Mike Kelley, the preseason starter at tight end, returned to action after a separated shoulder and caught two passes. . .Steve Silva may also graduate, but has a year of eligiblity left to play. . .The UMass defense allowed only 11.8 points-per-game, down over eight points from last year. . .UMass was 6-2 with Palazzi in the liuneup and has won three straight on the road.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Counseling Collective is open Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursday 3-7, Tuesdays 1-3. Drop by room 433SUB or call 5-2545!

UMass Outing Club general meeting 7:00 pm 804-08 Campus Center. All welcome! Movies - trips - Jan Nreak Trips - get away this January!

Union Video Center is offering a 3 part video workshop series. Interested? Sign up Monday or Tuesday 545-1336

AUTO FOR SALE

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1975 Nova runs good dependable 300.00 Allison 6-5406 evenings

1971 Dodge Wagon 85,000 miles, standard transmission, V-8, runs well. $500 or best offer. Jon 253-9456

VW Rabit 78, good condition, new tires, $800 or BO 549-6690 night

74 Peugot diesel. Standard, excellent condition sun roof! 256-1807 Tracey

1977 Chevy Malibu Classic air, fog lights, nice condition, dependable $1400 or BO call 665-3921

Chevy Monza 1975 blue, new brakes, good body, runs well, $750 call 546-8534

Pontiac GTO 1968 strong. New parts. $1100 BO 546-6417

1976 Ford Pinto good condition $900 584-5742

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

THE BREAKFAST CLUB
Fri Nov 22 at 5, 7, 9, 11
Engineering East Aud
$1.50 at 5c/7. $2.00 at 9, 11

Happy B-day Catherine You've come a long way Schrot, Frincha, Baby Je t'aime

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included Avail immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline, 365/month, avail 1/1/86 253-3634

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on bus line, avail immediately 253-9043

1 or 2 females to share apt call eves 549-4483

1 bedroom Cliffside apt. 375/month, includes everything avail Jan 1 call 665-8455

FOR SALE

4 foot Bon Constrictor and beautiful 27 gallon hexterrarium 160 Tom 253-7797

OHM C2 3 way speakers 175 pair Tom 253-7797

13' all wood Penyan boat with 25 horse engine, trailer & more call 549-1032 (Mark)

Water Bed $250.00 call 549-0194

Fender Super-Six Amp. Twin heads. Six tens. Also G & L Cavlier. Excellent guitar black. Just got set up and intonised. Designed by Leo Fender himself. 700 new last year. Kurht now $490 549-0385

HELP WANTED

Entry Level Marketing position flexible hours. Solid pay and commission production oriented job in multi-million dollar area company. Interview by appointment contact David Stansel 584-3596

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2060

Full time Steward position, 5 evenings weekly, light inventory, pricing, stocking and bar back duties, excellent entry level food position apply in person Northampton Hilton Inn Rt 9

Position available - Southwest Area Government is looking for a Publicity Coordinator to organize a SW Newsletter and publicity for SWAG events. Applications available at the SWAG office in Hampden and are due Wed November 20th, 545-0960

Delivery Drivers. Own car required. 3-4 nights $7-8/hr. Apply in person. Pinocchio's Pizza 1177 No. Pleasant, No Amherst

Summer Jobs in Amherst. Go to Webster Main Lounge 11/18 at 6:30 pm for details

Want to meet 5,000 people in 8 weeks? Go to Webster Lounge 11/18 at 6:30 pm for details

Part-time temporary positions available for the Annual Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Program Starting date -November 22 until December 24. For more information call 586 5243

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

JOHN P.

John, Remember: "Ain't Nobody's Business" you are deeply immortal and not "Far from Me" but "Close to Me" special love, Ilana PS Meow

LOST

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Lost wallet Tuesday Oct 22 3rd floor SUB at Collegian stack. Call me back Alex 5-0194

MOTORCYCLES

1983 Honda V45 Saber low miles ex. condition Shoei helmet also $2000 545-4612 after 8 pm ask for Sean

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Tammy T - You sleep with him, you sleep with me! Funny ha ha!

Lori Fab - Hi Honey!

My Queen where is the top to your lamp, I miss it.

Ski and Party at Sugarbush. See Ski Club Sale. S.U.B. Wed-Sat Hotel $149

QT love you! Sue WFA

Violent Femmes - I want a ticket badly Will pay at least 2x ticket price. Helga 253-2004

Brothers of 8 are the coolest The Glebe

Bruno I love the bracelet. Now you can buy me a necklace to go with it. They have a great selection between 77-$150 40-70% savings at Golden Opportunity 13 N Pleasant, Amherst at Lodestone Love, Mary Jane

Attention Musicians: Experienced drummer seeking to form a funk/jazz fusion group. Are you interested? If so, call Scott at 546-5149

Gramsie, About them Mets GWTM LTY Shoo bee do wap say what yeah you all got-ta duck, when the. . .

 Attention Skiers  Sell your used equipment at the 15th Annual Ski Snatch. Bring equipment to SUB Wed Nov 20 12-5 pm.

LAGNAF
nudge, nudge
wink, wink
Know what I mean?!

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE
Cover, papers, dissertations, theses, campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To North Carolina for Thanksgiving or anywhere south of Washington for Thanksgiving can leave anytime will help with gas Eric 546-4630

To (from) Seattle Washington for Christmas break - share driving and expenses call PeterGeo at 586-4401

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774 2740

One bedroom with private bathroom in 2 bdrm Puffton apt 170/mo heat incl available Dec 1 for next semester call for more info 549-7827 great place!!

1 bedroom in house, 1 mile from campus one sixth of utilities, $145 per month, male only, call 256-6228 anytime

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6695 evenings

Wanted: Easy-going, studious female to share clean, quiet, furnished, one bedroom Puffton apt, Spring semester 549-1313

Looking for female to share 1 bedroom apt. in Cliffside Apts beginning Jan 1 $87/mo inclusive! Call Christine 665-7729

Roommate wanted to look for an apartment with non-/nonsmoking females interested in North Amherst or Sunderland. Call 6-5068 or 6-4079 must be female!!!

1 bdrm in 3 bdrm apt $200/mo on Rt 9 next to bus stop 586-4969

Female to share room in Brittany Manor apt. Nonsmoker. Feb to June call 253-3766 after 5:00

SERVICES

COINS 122/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 122/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7683

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Sex nice available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

TO SUBLET

2 rooms available in 4 bedroom apt in Swiss Village. On busline. $215 inc for info call 256-1061

Furnished room in house on Main St on bus route for intersession only 170 definitely negotiable call Allison 253-5893

TYPING SERVICE

You make it sound good, we make it look good for all your typing needs, word processing, graphs, spreadsheets. Superior quality and competitive rates call (evenings) 549-0050 or 527-7189

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter 549-0361

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

Two outgoing females looking for a room to rent (male/female), starting Jan/Feb preferably Amherst call Melanie 546-8518 after 10:00 pm

WANTED TO RENT

$25 reward if you can find us a room in Brandywine for 2 girls Spring semester call 549-5042 ask for Karen

Two girls looking for an apartment in North Amherst for spring call 549-6149

To take over 2 bdrm apartment lease in January. Call 546-5537 or 546-5257

WORD PROCESSING EDITOR

Must have Apple IIE, matrix printer Wordstar facility 256-0525 7-9 am/9-11 pm

SPORTS

Minutemen not denied, 21-17

Platek's interception saves UM's season-ending victory at UNH

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H.—13 yards stood between a respectable season and a memorable one for the University of Massachusetts football team.

Trailing 27-24 with 31 seconds left in the game, the University of New Hampshire had a first down at the UMass 13, and was looking for the winning touchdown.

"All I could remember was how Delaware beat us last week in the final minute," UMass senior defensive tackle Eddie Sullivan said. "This was our last game and I didn't want to end like that again."

So it was fitting that UM co-captain Paul Platek, a senior, intercepted Rich Byrne's pass with 26 seconds left to lift the Minutemen to the victory and the 7-4 record they thought about all week.

"I think that 7-4 is a better indication of what kind of team we are and what kind of season we had," said senior nose guard Mike Dwyer. "We did not want to go out a 6-5 team, that's sounds pretty lousy, 7-4 sounds like we were winners."

Which they are. The Minutemen entered 1985 with two straight 3-8 seasons behind them. UMass had not known a winning season since 1981. For three years, the UMass seniors were in a program that was taking a downward turn.

1985 however, will go down as the season UMass turned it around. The Minutemen rolled up the most victories since 1980, took second in the Yankee Conference with a 4-1 record and built a nationally-ranked defense that allowed only 11.8 points-per-game.

"This is the best feeling I've had since I started playing football here," Platek said. "I was hoping that he (Byrne) would throw the ball. We were blitzing and I knew they would try and throw to the back. We were in one-on-one coverage and I just dove for the ball. I'm going to remember that play for a while."

Rhode Island came from 21 points down to punish Connecticut 56-42 and wrap up the conference title, but the Minutemen more than met their goals this season.

"We had a great season, but could've been a hell of a lot better," said Dwyer. "I think we have the kind of team that could've been undefeated or gone 10-1. We should've made the playoffs, but I'll take 7-4, people will look back and say that we had a good team."

UMass, after taking a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on a nine yard run by junior fullback Al Neri, saw the Wildcats (6-4) run up 21 second-quarter points.

All-American tailback Andre Garron scored touchdowns on runs of seven and two yards while Eric facey added a 40 yard field goal. The UNH offense picked apart the UMass defense in the first half, amassing 232 yards (the most UMass has allowed in a half all season) with a short passing game that caught UMass off guard.

On offense, the Minutemen hurt themselves with a dropped pass in the end-zone and a fumble at the New Hampshire six. Trailing 21-7 at the half, 7-4 seemed a long way away.

"We got together at halftime and made adjustments, but also told each other that we had to play harder," said Platek. "We

continued on page 15

Terriers end season for UMass, 1-0

Field hockey eliminated

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

BOSTON—The 10th-ranked University of Massachusetts field hockey team had its national championship hopes doused as it dropped a 1-0 decision to ninth-ranked Boston University Saturday at Nickerson Field in the first round of the NCAA championships..

Playing in freezing temprtaures on a slick artificial surface, the Minutewomen (who finish 13-5-2) were never able to get their offense on track as an aggressive Terrier defense continually plugged up the middle and denied UMass scoring opportunities.

"BU plays so deep that's it difficult to get shots outside the circle on goal," said UMass head coach Pam Hixon. "We're not a team that takes a lot of shots, and BU doesn't allow many shots. We just tried to draw fouls, create corners and keep putting the ball on net."

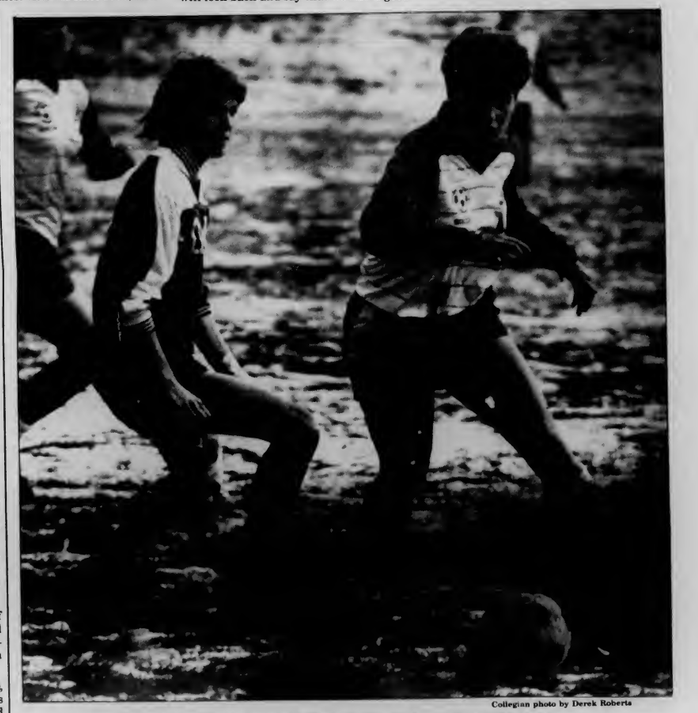
Using the long-ball offense that had proven to be so sucessful all season, the Minutewomen found themselves unable to generate shots as the Terriers continually cutting across the middle.

BU head coach Sally Starr said that because UMass wasn't passing to its wings, the Teriers were able to mark up in the middle and key on UMass junior forweard Liss Griswold, UM's main's scoring threat.

"We tried to do too much at high-speed," UM's senior All-American defenseman Megan Donnelly said. "We probably could have done more passing, but we gave out best effort. Both teams had equal opportunities."

BU's score came with 6:23 remaining in the first half as senior midfielder Terry Geldart, BU's co-captain and leading scorer notched her 11th goal and fifth game-winner of the season off a corner hit by junior Kim Swatek.

Geldart's goal sailed past a sprawling Katherine Rowe, the UMass goalie and sent BU into the regional finals against New Hampshire on Sunday where they earned a first-ever trip to the Final Four with s 1-0 overtime victory. BU is 17-2-2 on the season and had previously beaten UMass, 3-0 this season. BU goalie Mary Linnehan, with the two shutouts, has not allowed a goal in a strech of 750 minutes spanning a 12-game period.



UMass' best scoring chances came in the final four minutes of the first half as Donnelly launched three shots off of two corners which resulted in rebounds that the front line was unable to convert into goals.

Both coaches agreed that despite Umass being outshot 20-7 it had its chances and without Rowe's spectactular goaltending, the score could've been much higher for BU.

"Kathy did an excellent job today," said Hixon. Starr agreed saying, "She was scrambliong for sure, but she came up with some good saves."

The second half saw BU continue playing strong defense and limit the UMass offense to only two shots. UM's only real chance of the second came with 6:55 left when Donelly rifled a shot from outside the circle that was deflected off a UM stick inched wide of the goal.

continued on page 15

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

University of Massachusetts fullback Debbie Belkin (right) works past a Boston College defender Sunday on Boyden Field. UMass won to advance to the Final Four. 3-0.

★ women's soccer heads to Final Four

continued from page 1

BC coach Susanna Kaplan said. Powers had also headed in a corner kick from Carolyn Micheel two minutes earlier but that was nullified by a UMass holding penalty.

UMass goalie Jan Holland made only three saves but one was a big one on Eagle ace Betsy Ready with 20:25 gone in the first half. Ready fired at almost point-blank range and Holland made a superb diving save that kept the game scoreless.

In the second half, UMass really began to move as the snow melted under the afternoon sun.

With 2:23 gone in the half, freshman Beth Roundtree crossed the ball to senior Jamie Watson in front of the BC goal. Watson's shot hit a BC defender and flew in, off the Eagle player, for the 2-0 lead.

A Bowsher penalty kick with 21:07 to go made it 3-0. "That really killed us," Kaplan said. BC was called for a handball after intense UMass pressure. Bowsher converted her third penalty shot in three attempts this season. Micheel, Roundtree and Spence were also in on the action, as they were most of the afternoon.

Spence and Roundtree brought the 605 paid attendees and the 300 or so fans surrounding the field to their feet several times in the second period as the speedy fowards took passes dumped over the BC backs, who were trying to pressure the UMass forwards.

"We figured if we had an awesome day and they were off, we would have a shot," Kaplan said.

"I think as a team, we played excellent," fullback Debbie Belkin said. The Minutewomen held the Eagles to just three shots while UM had 16.

"I guess it was good conditions," Belkin said. "At least it wasn't raining.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 52 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Tuesday, November 19, 1985

Eyes of the world on U.S.-Soviet summit

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

Amherst residents participate in a candlelight vigil on the Amherrst Common last night, calling for a stop to the arms race.

AP Laserphoto

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and his wife Raisa leave their plane as they arrive in Geneva for the summit talks, yesterday.

Town urged to support summit

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Ann Donlan will burn a candle in her window tonight and tomorrow night to show her belief in the importance of the Geneva summit beginning today.

The University of Massachusetts journalism major is taking part in a nationwide campaign designed to demonstrate the hope for a successful meeting between Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Ronald Reagan.

"I think it's important for people to take something as important as the summit and put a personal meaning on it," Donlan said.

Amherst selectmen urged town residents to show their support for the Reagan-Gorbachev summit by burning a candle or leaving a porch light on from dusk until dawn during the two days of the summit. The selectmen encouraged the measure Tuesday night in response to a letter from U.S. Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., calling for town leaders to endorse the "Lights on for Peace" drive.

Selectman Allen Torrey said the action "will increase awareness," but approved it reluctantly because of the electricity that will be used by participants. Torrey said he plans to keep his porch light on tonight.

The letter, sent with the endorsement of the World Council of Churches and U.S. Congressmen including Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Pittsfield, read in part:

"As the summit approaches we have a chance to take a simple, eloquent step...This nationwide effort will demonstrate our yearning for world peace

continued on page 4

Arms race focus of summit

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP-White House Correspondent

GENEVA — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev joined President Reagan in this chilly seat of neutrality yesterday, and on the eve of their summit the superpower chiefs squared off on "Star Wars," the anti-missile program that lies at the heart of lagging efforts to forge a new arms agreement.

American and Soviet officials were sharpening their proposals for today's first session between the 74-year-old Reagan and Gorbachev — a man 20 years his junior and still relatively untested in international affairs.

Both leaders pledged fidelity to efforts to end the superpower arms race, but discussed sharply divergent views on how to achieve the goal.

Gorbachev said he came to discuss "primarily the question of what can be done to stop the unprecedented arms race which has unfolded in the world and to prevent it from spreading into new spheres."

It was an unmistakable reference to Reagan's program to develop a defensive space shield that could bring down nuclear missiles before they reach their targets.

Reagan, questioned about the Soviet leaders's statement, told reporters, "We both must have the same intentions. If he feels as strongly that way as I do, then we'll end the arms race."

But he remained determined to search for a space-based defense, best known as Star Wars despite his dislike for the term, saying, "Just wait'll he hears my proposal."

Reagan's national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, also defended the

continued on page 5

'Divest 9' case dropped

By JOHN YONCE
Collegian Staff

The assistant district attorney for Hampshire County said he would drop charges yesterday against the "Divest 9," a group of anti-apartheid protesters arrested at a sit-in at the University of Massachusetts last spring.

The group was scheduled to go to trial on trespassing charges today at Hampshire County Court in Northampton. Dean Whalen, the prosecuter in the case, said he would file a "null process," which indicates his refusal to prosecute the case.

Whalen said the case was dropped "in the interests of justice and judicial economy.

"They (the University) have divested and made their political point," Whalen said. "The trial would involve a lot of expense over an issue that has essentially been mooted."

The trial would have lasted three to five days, according to Whalen.

The group was among 33 people arrested after they refused to leave University Treasurer Robert Brand's office while protesting the University's investments in companies operating in South Africa. Twenty-four of the protestors paid court fees and naa charges dropped against them. The Divest 9 refused to pay the fees.

The University's Board of Trustees has since voted to divest from those companies.

Marc Kenan, head of the committee responsible for putting together the defense for the group, said the group had been looking forward to the trial because it would help their case against University disciplinary action if they were found innocent of the criminal charges.

"It's especially aggravating, now that the criminal charges have been dropped, for the University to be pursuing disciplinary action," Kenan said. "We had expert witnesses who would have made (UMass chancellor) Joe Duffey and the University look very bad."

Eight of the students arrested received one-year disciplinary probation over the summer, and Duffey has recently given written warnings to the Divest 9, Kenan said.

Associate Dean of Students Robert Brooks refused to comment on whether the administration would consider dropping its actions against the students since the criminal charges have been dropped.

"Until we see exactly what's been decided, we are in no position to respond to it," he said.

Scientific thought rapped

By CARYN BOWERS
Collegian Correspondent

A discussion on European scientific thinking as a natural science was the focus of a lecture in the Campus Center yesterday.

Oxford University's Alistar Crombie, a visiting professor at Smith College, spoke on "Styles of Scientific Thinking in the European Tradition."

Crombie discussed scientific thinking as a natural science, in reference to the formulation of two conceptions, causality and formal proof.

Natural science also involves perception through the senses, he said.

"This brought about a style of thinking in the whole range of practical enterprises and is designed in the mind like a work of art," Crombie said.

He said this vision of knowledge (through perception) and the world is a specific cultural aspect and that one must be aware of change in context when pointing out these aspects.

"We are ourselves a product of a particular part of culture," Crombie said.

He went to say that context makes a great deal of difference when studying the value of existence and human activities. Nature and culture are very much intertwined and the past and the present illuminate one another, he added.

Crombie said common styles and patterns are prevalant when considering scientific thinking.

Another tradition of scientific thinking is the notion of persuasion. He said that when scientists are developing their original thinking, they have to persuade colleagues as well as the general public.

"Persuasion is just as important as proof," he said. " We are trying to identify

continued on page 3

Inside:

UM prof knows sign language, sci-fi.....3
Geneva summit detailed.....4,5
Men's hoop previewed.....16

"But the more frustrated I became, the more stifling the air felt, the more I realized I had stopped thinking those very thoughts I was unable to express."

—UMass student on the USSR, p. 4

Liquor insurance for colleges is scarce

BOSTON (AP) — Colleges and universities faced with a surge in lawsuits against them are finding they must pay up to 10 times more than last year for liability insurance — if they can get it at all.

"There are just horror stories all over the place," said William Jacka, president of Moulton, Allen and Williams Corp. insurance brokerage in Birmingham, Ala. "Most underwriters are just scared of colleges and universities because they don't understand the risks."

At Southeastern Massachusetts University, for example, the administration converted the campus pub into an ice cream parlor in March after an insurer refused to renew the school's liquor liability coverage.

"We've never had a claim, but it wasn't worth the risk," said Francis Gordon, director of auxiliary services for the 5,500-student campus.

The University of Southern California canceled its earthquake insurance in January after the premium more than tripled to $400,000 a year.

"We're rolling the dice," said Alex Ratka, director of risk management and insurance for the school, located 30 miles from the San Andreas fault.

Michigan State University, which now has general liability insurance to cover claims of up to $50 million, will be lucky to get a limit a fifth that high next year, said Jerre Ward, risk manager for the 44,000-student school.

"When companies are renewing, they are doing three things: reducing the coverage, reducing the limits and raising the price," she said.

The crisis comes after a record-bad year for the insurance industry, which lost $3.8 billion in 1984, said Barry Walker, associate vice president of the Chicago-based Alliance of American Insurers. Insurers trying to recoup are shying away from areas where their risk is most speculative.

Last month, however, consumer advocate Ralph Nader charged that the insurance industry had manufactured the crisis to get state insurance commissioners to approve higher rates overall and to induce legislatures to limit liability.

Accused hijackers convicted on illegal explosives charges

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Four Palestinians accused of hijacking the Achille Lauro cruise ship were convicted with a fifth man yesterday on charges of illegal possession of arms and explosives.

Three of the defendents said in written statements read in court that aides to PLO official Mohammed Abbas delivered the weapons used in the hijacking. Abbas has denied this.

The court ordered prison terms ranging from four to nine years for the five men convicted Monday. They face trial at a later date on charges of kidnapping and of murdering an American passenger aboard the Italian cruise liner during the Oct. 7-9 ordeal.

A panel of three judges convicted the five men after hearing testimony in the morning. There was no jury. The judges deliberated for two hours and 20 minutes before announcing the verdicts.

Dozens of heavily armed police in bullet-proof vests patrolled the Palace of Justice and nearby streets during the trial, and everyone entering the courtroom was subjected to searches by metal detectors and bomb-sniffing dogs.

The five defendants, in handcuffs and blue jeans, were brought into the gymnasium-sized courtroom and divided among three metal-barred cages.

They greeted their sentences with an outburst of pro-Palestinian chants.

"We will defend with our blood and soul our country," they chanted in Arabic while waving victory signs through the bars of their cages.

The stiffest sentence of nine years plus a fine of a million lire about $1,700 was given to Mohammed Issa Abbas, identified previously as Mohammed Kalef, who was arrested in Genoa carrying false passports before the Italian ship began its Mediterranean cruise.

U.S. and Vietnamese look for MIA's

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Village children lined the road yesterday and watched a gum-chewing U.S. soldier drive a tractor to the excavation site at Yen Thuong village on the outskirts of Hanoi, where remains of U.S. airmen may be buried.

In an unprecedented joint search, American and Vietnamese military men are to begin digging today for remains of the airmen, who the Vietnamese say bombed their cities 13 years ago.

Workers tore down a brick kitchen building so Sgt. Michael Dixon and his 7 ½-ton tractor could enter the village.

Hundreds of children gathered as Dixon, wearing a baseball cap and Hawaiian print shirt, jockeyed the tractor to the village from Hanoi's Noi Bai International Airport.

Dixon, from Oak Hill, W. Va., is attached to the 84th Engineering Battilion at Schofield, Honolulu.

Air Force Capt. Virginia Pribyla, spokeswoman for the U.S. team, said U.S. experts would use metal detectors to determine where and how far to dig. After the tractor clears the upper layer of earth, workers with hand shovels will probe for what the Vietnamese say may be the wreckage of a B-52 and the remains of four crew members, she said.

The 13-member U.S. military team includes explosives experts and specialists in locating and recovering human remains. Helping them will be 10 Vietnamese soldiers and civilians experienced in excavation work. The operation is expected to take 10 to 12 days.

Today's Staff

Night Editor Gerry deSimas
Copy Editor Kathy Hart
Layout Technician Peter Soderberg and Anne McCrory
Photo Technician Scott Maguire
Production Supervisor Matkins
Production: Leslie Nakajima, Conor Plunkett, Danielle Charbonneau, Kelly Sieger, and Ken Levenson.

IBM
IBM Portable PC
$1075.00*
DEMONSTRATION and SALE
Nov. 18 through Nov. 21
Display located in Campus Center Concourse
Certified check or money order required at time of order
This special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.
* Certain restrictions apply see store for details
Sale Hours 10-4
Located in The Campus Center
545-2619
UNIVERSITY STORE

Le Boudoir
Intimate Fashions

warm snuggly nightgowns and robes, silk long johns for women and men, undershirts, camisoles, tap pants, teddies, body stockings, pantyhose, and much more.
It's not too early to think about holiday gift buying.
We have lots of ideas.
Carriage Shops, 233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 549-6915
M-S 10-5:30, Sun. 12-5:00

nassau $99 florida
WILL HOLD YOUR BED
SPRINGBREAK
CALL NOW! 256-1261
COUNCIL TRAVEL SERVICES
79 SO PLEASANT ST AMHERST

ONLY ONE WEEK LEFT
to apply for a Spring Intersession Internship.
Call today for a Planning Session at the University Internship Program
16 Curry Hicks 545-0727.
Last day of Planning Sessions is Nov. 26.

NOW OPEN
Riverboat Village
APARTMENTS, SOUTH HADLEY.
1, 2 or 3 BEDROOM UNITS
BEAUTIFUL MODELS FURNISHED BY CHAP DELAINES & EPSTEIN FURNITURE CO.
•Swimming Pool •Tennis Court •Club House •Shuffle Board Court
FINANCED BY MHFA
LEASED ON OPEN OCCUPANCY BASIS
FAMILY/SINGLES SENIOR/HANDICAPPED
OPEN SEVEN DAYS A WEEK
10 AM - 4 PM
PHONE 532-9461
532-9462
CALL FOR DIRECTIONS
Riverboat Village
River Lodge Rd
So Hadley, MA 01075

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

STOP! IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN — Pre-registeration counseling runs until Friday and registeration forms are due Nov. 27. Senior Peter Cassels, a student counselor (above), prepares for the onslaught of questions in CASAIC.

$1 million could be saved if sludge plant is built

By BRIAN D. BLOCK
Collegian Correspondent

The town of Amherst could save $1 million over the next 20 years by building a new sludge treatment facility plant, according to John Donovan, an engineer for a Boston engineering firm.

Hauling and burying the sludge is expected to cost about $3.9 million over the next 20 years, Donovan of the Camp Dresser Mckee Inc., said. He said that composting would only cost an estimated $2.9 million.

The current system of transporting the sludge from the treatment plant in Amherst to a landfill area in Belchertown is becoming too costly and obsolete, said Stanley Ziomek, Amherst superintendent of public works.

The proposed sludge composting facility plant includes building a new 20,000 square-foot plant on town-owned land, Ziomek said. It would be built next to the waste water treatment plant just west of the UMass intramural playing fields.

The plant would cost an estimated $1.4 million to build and an additional $350,000 for a new watering device to ensure proper treatment of the sludge, Donovan said. He added that these figures do not take into account any replacing or servicing of parts over the 20-year period.

As much as 90 percent of the construction costs may be reimbursed in the form of a state grant from the Water Pollution Control Department (WPC), Ziomek said. He added that he is confident of obtaining the grant and he said he has received indications of this should the project be finalized.

Amherst Town Manager Barry Del Castilho said several groups including the Board of Selectmen, the finance committee and the board of health, will be examining and speaking on the plant.

"It (plant) will probably be included in the budget next year and a final vote taken at town meeting next May," Del Castilho said.

Should the town meeting vote in favor of the plant, Ziomek said, then the application for the WPC grant can be completed.

Day coordinator, nightly novelist

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire
Geary Gravel

By LISA BABCOCK
Collegian Correspondent

Communicating is a way of life for Geary Gravel. By day he is one of the co-ordinators of deaf students at the University of Massachusetts and in his spare time he is a science fiction novelist.

"I spend a lot of time communicating. Both of the things that I do are communications," he said. Gravel spends about 30 hours a week as an interpreter. He has been working with deaf students since he saw an interpreter in class eight years ago.

"I was totally fascinated (with sign language). I began to sit in front of the class and just watch the interpreter. People began to think that I was the deaf student," he said.

"The next semester I had a deaf roommate, and it was sink or swim. We had to communicate . . . it really accelerated my learning." Gravel said, adding that sign language usually takes two years to learn.

A 1972 UMass graduate with a degree in English, Gravel was returning for a second degree in physics when he saw the interpreter.

Gravel has his own different way of looking at the world through what he calls "my universe" — the world that he created in his novels.

His first novel, The Alchemists, was published in 1982 after 10 years of work. It began in 1972 as a senior honors paper and grew to 600 pages before Gravel sent it to Ballantine Books, who agreed to publish it if Gravel could cut it to about 300 pages.

The book sold 31,000 copies. "I really had nothing to compare it to," Gravel said with a mixture of shyness and pride about whether it was successful or not. He said he was flattered that people he didn't know had bought it and that it received favorable reviews, one of which was from a science fiction writer that he admired as a child.

AP Laserphoto

SEEK ATTENTION — Protesters gather in Geneva to demand that the the USSR let Jews emigrate to Israel before the summit. More summit news on page 4 and 5.

★Crombie

continued from page 1

styles of thinking, which involve or come out of certain intellectual and moral committments."

Crombie stressed the importance of the history of science and said it has been an integral part of the scientific movement from the start.

Crombie is a graduate in natural science from Melbourne and Cambridge University. He teaches at Oxford where he has been responsible for introducing the history of scientific and medical thought into normal courses.

The lecture was sponsored by the the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities at the University of Massachusetts.

Snowfall causes busy weekend for police

By JEANETTE DeFORGE
Collegian Staff

Two women were pelted with snowballs and assaulted by three men on the east side of Kennedy Tower, Saturday night, the University of Massachusetts police said.

Snowballs were thrown at the two women and then three men came after them, hit them and stole a bottle of vodka from them. A man came to their aid after he heard their cries for help and the three men ran away. Police said they have a description of the three men.

In other police reports:

A 19-year-old man fell through a plate glass window, worth over $200, Saturday night on the fifth floor North lounge of Grayson House, police said.

The man, who was visiting a friend, was involved in a shoving match with residents during a dorm dance on the floor. He got into a fight and fell through the window. Police said "alcohol was involved," although there was supposed to be none present.

A Domino's Pizza delivery car received over $2000 in damages when it was overturned Saturday night outside of John Quincy Adams Tower, police said

There was a "mob shouting, cheering and throwing snowballs," police said. The delivery person was in the tower delivering a pizza.

A man received minor bruises and a chipped tooth when he was attacked late Saturday night in parking lot 43. The man observed his assailant pouring beer on his car, he ran after him and was punched. The assailant got in his car and drove down Southbridge Road throwing beer at pedestrians, police said.

A student received a bruise on his cheek late Saturday night when he was assulted in his room on the first floor of Greenough House. A man in his 20's came into his room looking for a shirt and when he left he tried to take a drum stand. The man returned shortly afterward and took an apple from the student and hit him, police said.

An unidentified man was taken into protective custody Saturday night in Kennedy Tower. Police answered a call to break up a fight in the tower and found the man who was allegedly drunk. Police said "he was stumbling and had to be supported by the officers." He was taken to the police station where he began to vomit and was consequently taken to Cooley-Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, police said.

Two women were injured Friday night on the corner of University Drive and the access road to lot 21.

The driver of a 1979 Datsun, which received over $2000 in damages, was cited for failure to grant the right of way when he pulled out of the parking lot from the wrong lane and hit a 1979 Ford truck belonging to Amherst Towing. The Ford received over $1000 in damages.

The driver of the Datsun, a 20-year-old man, did not see the truck because it was passing a car which was turning into the parking lot.

The two women, passengers in the Datsun, said they would see their personal physicians, police said.

A 21-year-old student was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol, passing on double solid lines and driving a vehicle without authority of the owner, late Friday night on North Pleasant Street, police said.

Police removed two dogs from a pen in the Stockbridge Sheep Barn late Friday night. The dogs were brought to the pound, police said.

Four window blinds valued at $370 were reported stolen from Machmer Hall Friday morning. They were taken sometime since Wednesday, police said.

Four wire wheel covers valued at $400 were reported stolen Friday morning from a car parked in lot 22, police said.

A 10-speed bicycle was reported stolen Sunday evening from a bike rack between Hamlin and Knowlton Houses. It was locked and chained, police said.

Ten minors were charged with being in possession of alcohol this weekend in seperate incidents, police said.

War film to be shown

The award winning documentary 'Witness to War' will be shown at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Campus Center Room 162.

The 30 minute film tells the story of Dr. Charles Clements and his journey from Air Force pilot in Vietnam to pacifist doctor behind the lines in rebel El Salvador in 1982.

Discussion after the film will be led by Doug Calvin, UMass student and regional coordinator for NECAN (New England Central America Network) and Patrick Sullivan, member of the Faculty and Staff for Peace in Central America.

The Summit

A traveler's perspective on the USSR

By ANNE McCRORY
Collegian Staff

It was mid-evening when my plane landed in Moscow. I smiled to myself as the words 'Nu, vot Moskva' (Well, so this is Moscow) ran through my head; they were from the first lesson in my beginning Russian textbook in 10th grade. The first thing I noticed was the soldiers – or militia, I wasn't sure which – stationed around the airport, ensuring, I thought, that anyone who wasn't supposed to leave the country tried to escape. I went through customs, where a serious, handsome young man scrutinized only my book collection (someone else was body searched) but perused every page of my Vogue magazine of June, 1983. Then we – 60 American students – piled on to a rickety old bus that would take us to the Pushkin Institute of Russian Language, our summer home.

* * * * * * * * * * *

People are often surprised -- and fascinated -- to learn I have spent some time in the Soviet Union. But answering their inevitable inquiry ("How was it?") isn't like describing a week in Fort Lauderdale. Those who are really interested persist for a synopsis of my experience -- which in itself can be quite lengthy -- while I feel I'm cheating those who don't with a "Well, it was quite an experience" reply. The Soviet Union is not a country most Americans aspire to visit one day, but at the same time, curiosity is rampant about what life is really like there.

* * * * * * * * * * *

It was a humid, almost stifling, July afternoon. Classes ended at 2 p.m. daily, and usually we spent our free time wandering around the city, meeting people, shopping, visiting museums and landmarks – trying to make the most of our short, six-week stay. But today I needed a break, I was feeling overwhelmed and a little homesick. It was time for some reflections on my experience so far.

But that wasn't as easy as it might sound. According to our American program advisers, our rooms were bugged, our diaries were subject to confiscation by the "maids" and others who stopped by our rooms when we weren't there, and our letters had to pass through censors before leaving the country. Seeking privacy by taking a stroll was also quite difficult – time and time again, I had settled on a park bench to record some observations only to be approached by some congenial young males wondering why I was alone; today, I was not up to making new friends or trying to answer the inevitable question "Is life really better in America" one more time.

But the more frustrated I became, the more stifling the air felt, the more I realized I had stopped thinkng those very thoughts I was unable to express.

It scared me.

* * * * * * * * * * *

Objective observations of Soviet society are hard to come by. Being an American in Moscow means getting special treatment: Access to hard currency stores, where items not available to the general public are easily found; being stared at because of the way you dress; having to ponder the motives of every Soviet you meet, as contact with foreigners is widely discouraged and those willing to risk possible interrogation by the KGB are either naive, reckless, or want something from you. And thus, real friendship becomes difficult; the simple interaction of people from different societies becomes clouded by suspicion even as it seems bonds are being formed, secrets shared, insights into the mindset of another people developed.

* * * * * * * * * * *

I met him buying records one day in Melodia, a store on the commercial Kalinin Prospect downtown. Sasha was a student; his father, he said, was a diplomat of sorts. He escorted me around town that afternoon, telling me about the various sites we passed.

I wasn't the first American in our study group to meet Sasha, I later found out; he had also befriended one of my roommates. Our last full day in the city, he took both of us out for dinner and after a few pitchers of beer, we went to find Brezhnev's old apartment. (A decent, brownstone-type building in a nice but ordinary neighborhood, set apart from the others by only a plaque on its exterior honoring its former resident.) Then Sasha accompanied us home, and as my roommate and I lingered outside in the warm summer dusk, we noticed our Soviet friend being whisked away in a black (official) car.

This in itself may not have been cause for outright suspicion (the son of a diplomat could conceivably have access to his father's chauffeur service), but there were other things. Like the way one Soviet student was detained and questioned by authorities when caught in our foreigners-only dormitory, while Sasha, who was also observed there that day, was not. And the way he insisted on stopping off at Melodia en route to the restaurant that last evening, where he spent nearly a half hour as we Americans waited outside; during this period, a pair of rather dubious looking tourists insisted on taking our picture. Maybe it was all coincidence. But maybe it was not.

* * * * * * * * * * *

Also to be considered is the inherent bias of an American traveling in a foreign land. Things are evaluated by comparison with what one has at home, and considering the American standard of living, many societies can look dismal. Then there are the stereotypes those reared with constitutional rights and freedoms have about the system and people of an authoritarian regime – stereotypes one seeks to verify or prove inaccurate once on that foreign soil.

I need not elaborate here on Soviet anti-Semitism, political indoctrination, human rights violations -- all of which I was exposed to, all of which I "verified." What is worthy to point out is the fact that these phenomena are a part of Soviet life, of the way the system works, and that no matter how much they may bother people inside, they are accepted -- or denied. For the Soviet people, this is their system, and they have to live with it; many people, too, lack no sense of native pride. While things could be better in many ways, their closed media provide little basis for comparison.

* * * * * * * * * * *

The plane ride home was long. Not just in time but in dimension; traveling half way across the world, I was approaching a completely different civilization, not just locale. As I reveled in my thoughts of expectations versus impressions of my trip, a group of tourists conversed nearby.

"The food," gasped one woman from Detroit. "I barely ate a thing the whole two weeks. How could they expect us to eat that crap." I frowned, remembering how I was nauseated for two days in Leningrad from eating the rich hotel food – lots of meat, mostly, and available only to tourists – that had been absent from my diet for six weeks. My first meal there had seemed like a feast.

"Everything was so gloomy, really depressing," she went on, as I realized she was seeking confirmation from me. "What a wasted vacation – I'll never go back there."

I held my tongue from suggesting that she visit Beverly Hills next time as I informed her I had been in this uncultured, inhuman nation for seven weeks. I had found the people friendly – though overwhelmingly terrified of Reagan – and good-hearted; the culture quite fascinating, and the system – while oppressive – an experience that made the whole trip worthwhile. "But you'd never return there," she interjected. "Yes," I smiled. "I would."

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

A young boy stands before other community members who gathered at the Amherst town common late yesterday for a vigil against the continuation of the arms race. Similar vigils were held throughout the state.

★vigil

continued from page 1

and for a summit that genuinely produces greater understanding and cooperation between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R."

Donlan said she hopes the light-burning will increase awareness about the potential hazard of nuclear weapons.

"It can raise awareness around the basic issue of survival and the danger of nuclear war," she said. "Candlelight can be a powerful political symbol."

TIPS ON PRE-REGISTRATION

Beginning on Monday, November 18th, the counseling period and pre-registration begins. Complete pre-registration forms are due at the Registrars office in 213 Whitmore on Wednesday, November 17th.

For information to help make the process a smooth one for you, call:

TAPED INFORMATION PHONE SERVICE
545-1540

Ask for tapes by number

1020	Changing Your Major
1009	Credit Load
1409	Finding or Changing Your Academic Advisor
2031	Graduation Requirements
1032	The Pass/Fail Option

For a complete listing of information tapes come by our office in 227 Whitmore.

TIDBITS
IDB 545-1865
TIPS 545-1540

A service of the Dean of Students Office

The Summit

The face-off begins today

continued from page 1

Star Wars research program, telling reporters "the Soviet Union has driven us to this" by building up its own offensive nuclear arsenal and conducting a defensive research program of its own.

The Soviet Union, he said, "could not reasonable expect any country to stand by idly and watch" while Moscow pursued a program of their own.

In a ne development yesterday, a Soviet official traced a possible Kremlin proposal to break the impasse on space weapons by establishing a joint scientific panel for superpower intellectuals to consider "Star Wars" issues together.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he did not know whether Gorbachev might actually raise such a proposal to Reagan. But the sourse said that in Gorbachev's pre-summit preparations on Star Wars, "the role of scientists was very important."

Official Soviet arguments, however, weren't presented yesterday at the international press center in Geneva, where thousands of journalists have gathered to cover the first superpower summit six years.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman walked out of a news briefing there after being interrupted by a recent Soviet emigre who sought to challenge the Kremlin's human rights policies.

Irina Grivnina, who raised a similar protest on Sunday, stood up as the crowded news conference was about to start and accused the Soviet Union of massive human rights violations.

Kremlin spokesman Vladimir Lomeiko asked the woman several times to be quiet, but when she continued to talk for several minutes to journalists surrounding her, Lomeiko picked up his papers and left the room, saying the journalists seemed more interested in talking to Grivnina than to hearing him.

He later resumed his briefing in another room with only a fraction of the reporters present, but it was a setback for the unprecedented Soviet publicity campaign whose sophistication has surprised long-time observers of Kremlin operations.

AP Laserphoto

The superpower leaders meet today for a tete-a-tete for the first time in six years.

"We both must have the same intentions. If he feels as strongly that way as I do, then we'll end the arms race."
—President Reagan

Reagan and Gorbachev, whose formal title is general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, begin their four two-hour formal discussions with a 15-minute tete-a-tete with only their interpreters present this morning in a small room at the Villa Fleur d'Eau, the lakeside mansion selected by the Americans for the first day of talks at which Reagan will play host.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said that after their chat the two men would walk to an admoining room where they will sit down across from each othe at a large oval table, joined by six advisers from each side.

The spokesman disclosed that he and his Soviet counterpart, Leonid Zamyatin, have met and discussed what would be said publicly at the end of each day of private meetings. And although he said there was no formal agreement not to engage in a "briefing war," both sides plan to give only a general overview of what was discussed in each meeting.

COLD WAR CHRONOLOGY

Truman

1945-48: Communism spreads through East Europe
1947: Truman Doctrine, Marshall Plan
1948: Western allies establish West Germany, Western airlift to Soviet-blockaded West Berlin
1949: Soviets test atom bomb, Communist victory in China, NATO established

Stalin

Eisenhower

1950-53: Korean War
1954: US rejects Indochina peace agreement
1955: Warsaw Pact formed
1956: Revolts put down in Poland, Hungary
1958: US troops back pro-West government in Lebanon

Khrushchev

Kennedy

1961: Cuba crushes US-sponsored invasion, Berlin Wall erected
1962: Cuban missile crisis
1963: Superpowers sign test ban treaty
1965: US troops intervene in Dominican Republic, US escalates intervention in Vietnam
1968: Warsaw Pact troops end Czech liberalization
1969: Soviet-Chinese border clashes

Khrushchev

Nixon

1972: Superpower agreement on limiting nuclear arms
1975: Communist victory in Vietnam, Soviet-Cuban intervention in Angola, Helsinki accords on European security
1979: US and China establish diplomatic relations, Soviet troops intervene in Afghan War

Brezhnev

Reagan

1980: US Senate scuttles SALT II arms treaty
1981: Solidarity movement suppressed in Poland
1982-83: US intervenes against Marxist governments in Nicaragua and Grenada
1983-85: Soviets break off, later resume arms control talks

By The Associated Press

Gorbachev

World views summit with anticipation

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

When Mikhail Gorbachev and Ronald Reagan meet by the shores of Lake Geneva today, they will already have achieved a goal that has eluded their nations for more than six years. But coming out of their rhetorical corners for face-to-face dialogue is not a sure preface to arms agreement between the world superpowers, as the world seems acutely aware.

News Analysis

Though both leaders have powerful reasons to come to an agreement on arms, each enters the talks amid skepticism of stumbling blocks such as the lack of clear pre-summit guidelines and Reagan's unwavering stance on development of space weapons. If both fail to take the summit beyond a get-acquainted session, they will have missed an opportunity to achieve personal goals and may spawn bitter demonstrations from a doubtful world.

For Reagan, perceived success in Geneva means a step toward his desired position in history as a peacemaker, and the quieting of political opponents at home.

"If he doesn't come up with anything, Reagan will have a huge peace movement like you've never seen before," says UMass professor and Soviet specialist Karl Ryavec.

More seriously, according to one arms control specialist at UMass, failure at the summit will lead to a push for European de-alignment from the superpowers.

"If this is a sure failure, you're going to see a revitalization of the European peace movement, a third force," says James Derderian, assistant professor of political science.

For Gorbachev, reduction of the bilateral arms build-up will help achieve his goal of strengthening the Soviet economy, and the media image that will result could help the new leader to consolidate his power.

If Gorbachev fails to decelerate the arms race, he "will have to make the military much more important than before," tying up national resources that could be used to reinvigorate the economy, Ryavec said.

But moving toward agreement in Geneva requires surmounting Reagan administration discord over summit strategy and overcoming a summit agenda less patterned than those followed by U.S. and Soviet leaders in the previous five summits.

Disagreement over the best Reagan stance at the summit has surfaced in the release to the press of a letter from Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinburger advising Reagan against agreeing to several arms positions. The Soviet Union has described the incident as an attempt to sabotage the process of arms control.

Seen as perhaps the largest obstacle to reaching arms accord is Reagan's stiff position on development of the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars", which the Soviets perceive to be in violation of the Antiballistic Missile Treaty of 1972.

"The Soviets have entrenched themselves in Star Wars. If the Americans do not bend on this, I don't see anything but a series of small agreements (at Geneva)," Ryavec said.

Eliminating the Star Wars barrier to accord depends upon the ability and desire of Reagan and Gorbachev to affirm that the ABM treaty permits research, and to agree on a point at which to separate research from development banned under the treaty.

"What will determine success or failure is the perceived U.S. technological advantage in Star Wars," Derderian said.

But successful dialogue between the two world leaders perhaps most able to negotiate peace hinges largely on the compatablity of personalities and their ability to put aside fundamental political differences. At its worst, the summit will provide a hint of the direction in which the world is moving.

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE Collegian

Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegian Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone

Petite - Regular and Half Sizes

WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes -
Nickels, Jazz and Paloma

Merchandise sold only
in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts (20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst
Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

The Old Mill
YOUR ONE STOP CHRISTMAS SHOP
ROUTE 63
NORTH AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 01059
1 mile north of UMass 549-2667

Change your tires NOW . . .
$4.99 per pair
Alignment and balancing available
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd No. Amherst, MA
549-4704

VOTED BEST DINNER UNDER $4
and BEST NACHOS
in the best of the valley poll 1985

...Offering Quality Mexican Foods

TACO VILLA

NORTHAMPTON	AMHERST	SPRINGFIELD
21 CENTER ST	41 BOLTWOOD WALK	749 SUMNER AVE
584-0673	256-8217	788-0919
Bring Your Own Beer or Wine	Beer & Wine Served	Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

DELANO'S

FINE FOOD & SPIRITS
FREE TACO BAR
MON & TUES NIGHT
9 — till it lasts
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Heineken
57 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

What if you don't get into the grad school of your choice?

Of course, you may get into another school, but why settle? Prepare for the LSAT, GMAT, GRE, MCAT or any grad school entrance exam with the best test prep organization— Stanley H. Kaplan.

For nearly 50 years, Kaplan's test-taking techniques have prepared over 1 million students for admission and licensing tests of all kinds. So call. Why go to just any grad school, when you can go to the right one?

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD
The world's leading test prep organization.

Intersession Classes Enrolling Now
MCAT, GMAT
GRE, LSAT
Take advantage of our
FREE SPEEDREADING LESSON
at your convenience

workshop on
Sexual Violence on College Campuses
• date rape • sexual harassment
Tues. Nov. 19 7:30-10 pm
in Southwest Women's Center
MacKimmie

University Travel & Tours, Inc.

Winter & Thanksgiving Break

2 weeks around sunny Greece
$699

14 different programs around Europe
$999

5 days to Montreal
$199

3 days to Boston
$99

Prices include air flights, hotel accommodations, breakfast, transportation to and from airports and hotels, and much more.

Includes: transportation, hotel accommodations, breakfast, sightseeing tour, tips and all taxes.

For Information Call:
UNIVERSITY TRAVEL and TOURS INC.
225 Main St. Northampton
(413) 584-9913

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

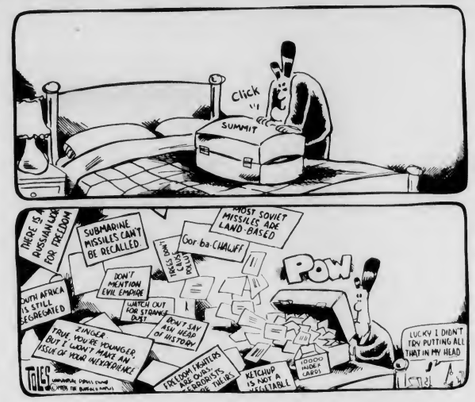
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Rhetoric not impressive

Rusty Denton

If I were asked to describe Pioneer Valley activists in one word, I would probably choose the word "rhetoric." While I agree with some of the local causes, hearing about "awareness and educating the public" has begun to wear a little thin. Before we start endorsing national solutions to problems, I'd like to see a few local models that work. In fact, I'd like to see an example of political education that was worthy of the name for once.

There is no lack of political education on this campus. Between the rallies at the Student Union, the bull sessions in the dorms and the articles/columns in the Collegian, we all ought to be enlightened sometime during our degree years. Initially, it was all new to me, but the statistics are warmed over now, and I have difficulty finding an original thought on issues among most students I talk to. I'm amazed at the number of people who presume to be authorities on the basis of a half-dozen slogans about nuclear war or chemical waste or women's rights.



The depth missing among those doing the "educating" has been substituted by manipulation and propaganda. While the faculty have for the most part maintained an atmosphere of tolerance and dialogue within the classroom, outside the classroom I've been subjected to crowd peer pressure, shouted down, and accused of evil motives by fellow students. I believe abortion is wrong, so I'm told I hate women. I believe homosexuality is an abomination, so I'm called homophobic. I was born (through no fault of my own) with a gender and a race, so I'm labelled a white, male capitalist exploiter. Is this an exchange of ideas or is this manipulation? I wonder what kind of an education it is that can't stand up to probing questions.

My guess is that it is a political agenda without humility, impatient for power. Only rarely have I met activists without adversarial attitudes. One in particular qualified himself in environmental analytical chemistry after being moved by the high incidence of cancer among asbestos workers. I was really impressed by his humility in seeking to learn from those he disagreed with.

More than that, I was impressed by his dedication to a career with no limelight, no dramatic news briefs for the rest of his life. I think he understood that good civil solutions often require enduring personal sacrifices. He had the kind of humility and dedication most activists only pretend to, as they become more self-righteous with every new fact and good deed.

I hope that my own dedication and humility are no less than that chemist's although my goal are not the same. I am committed to expressing the love and righteousness of Jesus Christ in my community; and committed to whatever civil causes which that leads me into. On occasion, that has meant having street people in my home as honored guests. Some have been insane, some have smelled, some have been thoughtful, some have been gay. I don't hand out questionnaires at the door or preach before meals. I've given the coat off my back in December, and I've given my clothes, my money, and my furniture at other times. Since I don't believe in abortion, my home is open to any pregnant woman who needs help. I care about poverty, having survived on free beans or cheap oatmeal myself. Nevertheless, many in the Valley seek to "educate' me and those like me in how to care about the oppressed. When I consider all the needy and down-trodden in these parts who never receive a personal touch from those "advocating" on their behalf, I say that it's rhetoric, just rhetoric. Those of us who care are not impressed.

Rusty Denton is a Collegian columnist.

Summit and compromise

Hamel/Lockwood

Every six minutes we could be blown up. Six minutes is all the time it will take to start and finish a nuclear war. This is what the escalation of the arms race has led to. Nervous? Think about it . . . every six minutes.

Today, Reagan and Gorbachev will begin discussion of this escalation. These leaders, our leaders, need to recognize the urgent necessity of arms control. There must be an honest desire to compromise and a willingness to uphold a just arms agreement. We, as citizens, are responsible for our leaders' commitment to arms reduction and we must therefore support the Geneva Summit and demand that an agreement be reached.

The only way that Reagan will seriously negotiate for an arms reduction is through pressure from the people. The fact that our government is able to increase defense spending at the expense of programs for affirmative action, job training, and services to the elderly is a manifestation of how little the people of this country care about the militarization of the economy and the escalation of the arms race. Thus, Reagan's involvement in the Geneva Summit seems superfluous, considering that in December, the month immediately following the conference, three submarines, one of which is a Trident costing over $2 billion, are being launched in Groton, Conn.

Trident submarines are the most lethal weapon the United States now produces and we have at least ten of them. Each Trident contains 24 D-5 missiles and every D-5 carries eight to ten warheads, a single warhead having 35 times the destructive capacity of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima bomb. Thus, each Trident submarine 70,000 times more powerful than the Hiroshima bomb. Additionally, the Navy already posses 31 Poseidon submarines, 15 of which are always in the water, ready. Each Poseidon has 160 to 224 independently targeted warheads. Although there are only 218 cities with a population of over 100,000 in the Soviet Union, we essentially have over 6,200 Poseidon warheads with which to annihilate Russia-- overkill --and it only takes six minutes. Twelve Poseidon submarines have also been refitted to "accommodate" D-5 missiles. The oceans of this world are infested with killing machines, machines that are proliferating at a frightening rate and are further escalating the arms race.

Is this an acceptable expenditure of money? Since the Navy already has 31 Poseidon submarines containing over 6,000 warheads with which to keep us "safe," why do we need Trident submarines? At a cost of over $2 billion apiece, they reduce the monies available to necessary social services and instead of "securing" the United States, assure mutual destruction through the escalation of the arms race. Therefore, we must demand that an arms agreement be reached in Geneva, in order to avert this destruction, and we must also protest the continued launchings of Trident submarines. UMass Peacemakers, in conjunction with the Trident Nine Coalition, is organizing rallies around the December launchings. We need your support and commitment. Do you have the time? Remember, it only takes six minutes.

Dawn Hamel and Becky Lockwood are members of the UMass Peacemakers.

Letters

Illustration absurd, inaccurate

This letter is a response to the absurd and inaccurate political illustration printed in Monday's issue of the Collegian. This cartoon, by commuter senator Joel Stanley, is a typical example of the ignorant stereotyping of Southwest by certain factions of the senate.

The new undergraduate senators are individuals who vote responsibly to serve their constituents. It is not surprising that, like Bill Collins, we vote for student activities and against administrative nonsense. We feel that students pay the activities fee for themselves, not to further the administration's goals. We are not voting for or against Bill Collins, we are voting in the interest of students. Not only does this cartoon insult the new undergraduate senators, it reflects the "personal arguements" that are hampering the senate this semester. By using Bill Collins as a scapegoat to explain why the senate is voting the way it is, is going too far. If senator Stanley spent more time dealing with real student issues and less time doodling personal digs, we would all benefit.

Mary Rita Kropp
Scott Allan
Lynne M. Murphy
Southwest

Letters

Proposed location inappropriate

I am writing in response to an article appearing on the front page of the Nov. 14 issue of the Collegian pertaining to the building of a new sports arena for the University. I was insulted and angered when I read that one of the proposed sites for the arena was the location of some "barns" near the Boyden playing fields.

Those group of barns do have a name, known by every UMass and Stockbridge Animal Science student. They are called the Youngstock barns. Those barns serve both as a teaching facility and a research facility for a great number of people, including me. Tearing them down would be a great loss. Moving the animal facilities would disrupt many on-going projects and all the hard work that was put into them. This University was founded as an agricultural college in 1863, and it is still very much an agricultural school.

There is plenty of room to build the arena down by the football stadium -- with much more space for parking. I am an avid sports fan, but I think we should start getting our priorities straight.

John Carroll
Sylvan

CHANCELLOR'S LECTURE SERIES
1985 • 1986

VIRGINIA A. BEAL
Department of Food Science and Nutrition

THE CHALLENGE OF NUTRITION

Why is the public bombarded by conflicting nutrition information? Why cannot nutritional scientists agree about dietary recommendations? Does food intake in childhood affect adult health and longevity? Does a fat child become a fat adult? How much do we really know about human nutrition?

NOVEMBER 21, 1985 • 8 PM • MEMORIAL HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Free and open to all • Refreshments to follow lecture

Pearl Street

MILLER ROCK SERIES presents

THIS THURSDAY NOV 21st!
is your chance to see
"The Incomparable Musician"
'The Genius'
The Legend
RAY CHARLES

also The Raelettes
and THE RAY CHARLES ORCHESTRA
Two Big Shows at 6:30 and 9:30
Tix in advance $12.50 and $15.50
Tickets available at Datatix Outlets
on campus at the Fine Arts Center Box Office
off campus at Stop and Shop and Main St Rec's Northampton

10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA
FELLOWSHIPS FOR GRADUATE STUDY DURING
1986 - 87

The National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta announces that fourteen fellowships for graduate study will be awarded for use during the 1986-87 academic year. The amount of each fellowship is $3,000. Applicants will be judged on academic record, recommendations submitted, the soundness of the proposed project and its purpose, and financial need.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta graduating with a cumulative average of 3.50 is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have achieved this average at the end of the first semester of this year.

Application blanks can be obtained at the Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore from Ms. Gladys Rodriquez, Assistant Dean of Students, Chapter Advisor.

Deadline is January 15, 1986

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

UNITED TECHNOLOGIES IS LOOKING FOR ANOTHER VOLTA.

We wouldn't ask you to create a battery out of layers of copper and zinc and cardboard soaked in saltwater. Our laboratories are more advanced than that. In fact, they're among the best-equipped in the world.

All we ask is that first-rate training you've had, and your restless, unsatisfied, curious mind that would wonder how to store an electric charge. Long before anyone knows what to do with one.

That's what we need from you. What you need from us is opportunity. The chance to take chances. The worldwide scope of United Technologies, its elevators and aircraft engines, spacesuits and silicon wafers, helicopters and heat pumps.

A place to grow in, with all the rewards that go with growth, and the company of 12,000 other engineers in all positions. We speak your language.

Shouldn't you take your inquiring mind to the campus placement office and inquire? Or write for more information and a reprint of this ad to United Technologies, P.O. Box 1379, Hartford, CT 06143.

United Technologies means Pratt & Whitney, Hamilton Standard, Otis, Carrier, Automotive Group, United Technologies Microelectronics Center, Norden, Chemical Systems, Essex, Sikorsky and United Technologies Research Center.

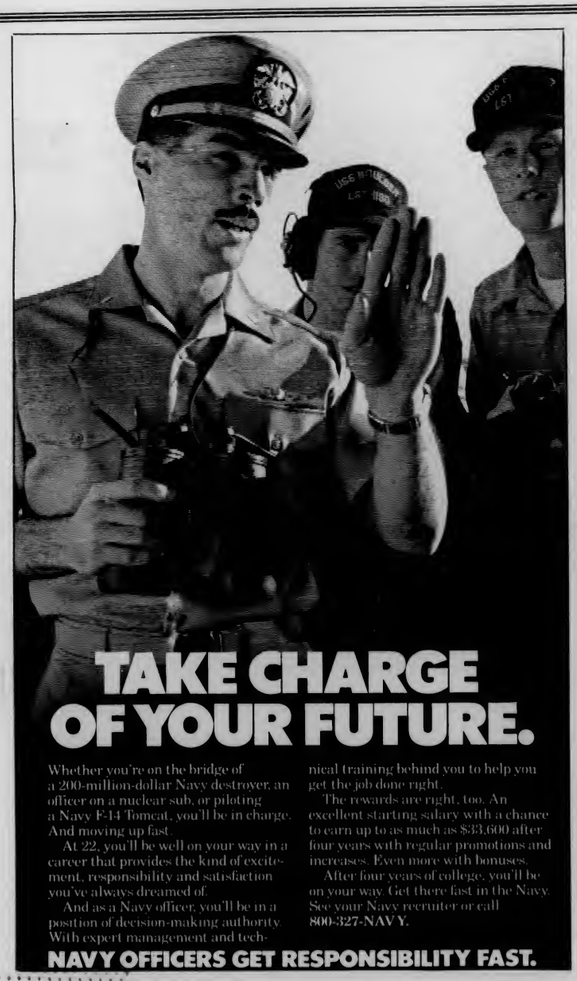
An equal opportunity employer.

UNITED TECHNOLOGIES

PERSONAL COMPUTING
FOR THE LIBERAL ARTS
Math 197Q MWF 2:30
- For Freshmen & Sophomore nonscience majors
- No prerequisites
- Learn elementary programming
- Learn basic quantitative analysis
- Applications to real public policy problems: economics, the environment, public health, consumer issues, taxes
- Information: Prof. Frank Wattenberg, 5-0984

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco - imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes - imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package
Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986



Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

Board of Governors

ATTENTION
All RSO and Student Coops

the 85/86 Recommendations for Student Space in the CC/SU are posted outside of Room 817 (Campus Center)

All questions should be directed to Space Allocation/EDO Coordinator

TAKE CHARGE OF YOUR FUTURE.

Whether you're on the bridge of a 200-million-dollar Navy destroyer, an officer on a nuclear sub, or piloting a Navy F-14 Tomcat, you'll be in charge. And moving up fast.
At 22, you'll be well on your way in a career that provides the kind of excitement, responsibility and satisfaction you've always dreamed of.
And as a Navy officer, you'll be in a position of decision-making authority. With expert management and technical training behind you to help you get the job done right.
The rewards are right, too. An excellent starting salary with a chance to earn up to as much as $33,600 after four years with regular promotions and increases. Even more with bonuses.
After four years of college, you'll be on your way. Get there fast in the Navy. See your Navy recruiter or call 800-327-NAVY.
NAVY OFFICERS GET RESPONSIBILITY FAST.

America Needs A Hero For Every Age.
From the Revolutionary War to the War in Viet Nam, in national crises and natural disasters, the National Guard has always been ready when America called.
Today is no different. The Guard still needs the kind of people who know peace and freedom don't come cheap. Who are willing to stand up and be counted when the chips are down.
If you're one of them—and you've got two days a month and two weeks a year to invest in something important—we've got a job, a pay check, and some pretty attractive benefits waiting for you.
Talk to your local Army Guard recruiter today.
Because here, doesn't have to be just a word. It can be the love you see when you look in the mirror.
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 586-4110
100%
FREE TUITION
To any Massachusetts Funded College or University
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY National Guard

ARTS

Immediate Family portrays a sensitive account of death

By SUSAN GOODSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

When the lights went down on Immediate Family playing at the East Street Dance Studio in Hadley, Saturday night, there was no applause, just the silence of an audience holding back tears.

Immediate Family stars Iris Bloom who sensitively portrays an aging postal clerk whose lover of many years is in a coma. We move with her through denial, bargaining, anger, and finally acceptance in a process which rings true for everyone faced with the death of a loved one. Bloom plays the character of Virginia with such humor and optimism that her moments of grief come almost as a surprise.

Yet there are many surprises in Immediate Family. One is that a play about dying can be so funny. Playwright Terry Baum has written a death-watch monologue which keeps us smiling without any sacrifice of depth. At one point Virginia hides behind the hospital bed to escape discovery by the head nurse who turns her out each evening. She crouches as she whispers to her lover, "It would be just like you to come out of this coma right now just so you could give me away and embarrass me." The warmth which infuses their relationship is welcome in contemporary theatre which for too long has preoccupied itself with alienated people unable to connect.

The play is no less universal in its appeal given that Virginia's lover is a woman. Gay and straight people alike are victimized by hospital regulations and state laws which claim to define who may be called immediate family. "They don't know what they're talking about," Virginia says. "If some man had married you just two months ago he could come in here and say you were his wife and since you couldn't make decisions anymore he would make them for you. But after twenty-seven years together they say I'm not your immediate family. They couldn't find anyone more immediate than me."

The weight of the message never drags, and director Patricia Rodriguez does an excellent job of bringing out the joy which glitters through the script. Rodriguez also designed the set, surgical gauze knotted and stretched floor to ceiling in an echo of the hospital which twists and binds human choices.

Immediate Family makes us laugh and cry, but it also makes us think. By helping us to face the presence of death among us, it enables us to take responsibility for our lives. Performances will run Thursday through Saturday, for more information call 584-5888.

Iris Bloom rehearses for Immediate Family playing at the East Street Dance Studio in Hadley Thursday through Saturday.

Notice

The Jason and the Scorchers concert, scheduled to take place Thursday in the Campus Center Auditorium has been cancelled.
Ticket refunds are available at place of purchase.

Let's Party

COMEDY CABARET night
HAMPDEN SNACK BAR
featuring renowned comedian
Leo T. Baldwin
TUESDAY NOV. 19th 7 PM
FREE! FREE! FREE!
First in a series - look for us every Thursday

DRACULA THE MUSICAL!
Dec. 6 and 7; 12, 13, 14
8 p.m. Bartlett Auditorium
TICKETS ON SALE TOMORROW
at all Datatix Outlets
$3.00 General Public $2.00 Students
A UMass Music Theater Guild Production

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*
While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.
* Upon faculty approval

Ticket Connection
tickets on sale now
RUSH dec 13
ROGER DALTRY dec 8
SADE dec 5
BILLY CRYSTAL jan 16
mon-fri 10-6 pm 1-788-6938

Thursday Nov. 21
Campus Center Auditorium
An evening of pure 'frolicking' fun!!!!!

& THE JASON SCORCHERS
and special guest
PAJAMA SLAVE DANCERS
Tickets $8.50
$10.00 at the door
VIOLENT FEMMES SOLD OUT!
at Tix Unlimited, Main Street Records, Faces and "For the Record".

HAYRIDE
PARTY ON OUR HAYWAGON DAY OR NIGHT, BONFIRE AND PICNIC AREA PROVIDED
For Information and Reservations CALL 247-9098
WEST HATFIELD STABLES
RTE. 5, West Hatfield, Ma
4 miles north of Northampton

Gregg Smith Singers
"THE BEST OF AMERICA"
Informal Choral Reading
8:00 TONIGHT
Come hear new works by 5 local composers
Bonde, Reck, Stern, Tarlow, & Tillis
Room 44
Fine Arts Center
Free and Open to Public

ARTS

Cold Harbor flows

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

Imagine your favorite drinking buddy comes over to spend the afternoon. You know the one, a nice person with radically weird yet interesting ideas.

Now imagine that this person has been made the commander of the Union forces and then President of the United States. There, in a nut shell is Ulysses S. Grant as portrayed by Bill Raymond in Mabou Mines' production of Cold Harbor Sunday at the Fine Arts Center.

Raymond's portrayal of Grant is framed in the set of a speaking model of Grant which is used in an exhibit about the general. The only two actors on stage are the two curators of the museum. Between monologues by General Grant, slides were shown and discussed as possible pieces of the exhibit.

The script was adapted from letters Grant wrote. They must have been fun to read because they made for fun listening. Grant had some really novel ideas, like annexing Santo Domingo and sending all the freed slaves there, thereby avoiding the problems of the Reconstruction and the Klu Klux Klan. "Damn that Charles Sumner, if it wasn't for him we wouldn't have had the KKK," Raymond yells.

Raymond created a very real character, Sunday night, and had the crowd eating out of his hand. The script was lively. With lines like "I have the most famous tomb in America" how could he lose? As an actor he truly did justice to the part.

The other two actors did not fare so well. The parts were not well scripted and the male character played by Greg Mehrten was a badly stereotyped homosexual. Both Mehrten and his curator counterpart, Rosemary Quinn, were stuck with really tacky parts fraught with unusually obvious irony.

It is always nice to see multi-media theatre in the valley and having Cold Harbor here last night was no exception. Despite flaws in the minor character's parts, Bill Raymond's performance as Grant shone through and made the evening an enjoyable one.

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!
Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS.
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA 782-7191
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-7601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0471
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 18 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-3821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

Governors Program Council presents:
The Razz-Bang Dance Bonanza
Sick of the Bars or Don't have an ID?
It'll be a wild time!!
Last Chance for Fun before Thanksgiving at the Bluewall, Nov. 23
9 pm to 1 am
$2.00 Admission
with D.J. Peter Gold

Grand Opening
SPORTSWEAR FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA
WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99
All
N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
20% OFF

the Hungry U Restaurant
UMASS IS GOING TO PIZZAS
The Best Pizza in town is FREE from 9-11 PM, Tues-Thurs
EVERY TUESDAY
Large Pizza and Pitcher (soda or beer)
$7.99
55 University Drive, Amherst 549-5713

UNIVERSITY of MASSACHUSETTS
OPEN HOUSE
Students, Faculty & Staff
ZENITH data systems
THE QUALITY GOES IN BEFORE THE NAME GOES ON OFFERS YOU:
IBM P.C. COMPATIBLE MICRO-COMPUTERS AND MUCH, MUCH MORE
• ZF-241 • AT Compatible • 80286 Processor • 6 Mhz Clock • Single 1.2MB Floppy • 512K RAM from $2199
• ZF-158 • Desktop PC • 256K RAM • Expandable to 640K • Switchable 4.77/8 Mhz Clock • Single, Dual or Winchester from $1099
• ZF-148 • 22 lb. Desktop • 256K RAM • Expandable to 768K • Switchable 4.77/8 Mhz Clock • Single and Dual 5¼ Drives from $850
• ZF-138-42 • 24 lb. Transportable • 7" CRT Display • 256K RAM • Expandable to 768K • Switchable 4.77/8 Mhz Clock • Single and Dual 5¼ Drives $1149
• ZF-171-42 • 15 lb. Portable • LCD Backlit Display • 256K RAM • Expandable to 1 Megabyte • Dual 5¼ Disk Drives $1349
THESE PRICES NOT COMMERCIALLY AVAILABLE
DON'T MISS IT!!
WHEN: November 20, 1985 12:00 to 5:00 PM
November 21, 1985 10:00 to 4:00
WHERE: Campus Center Room 162
For More Information on Zenith Data Systems see . . .
The Computer Farm (413) 584-2038 or ZENITH DATA SYSTEMS (617) 256-2980
Zenith Data Systems offers a family of products that are compatible not only with the industry standard but within the ZDS family itself. From a 15 lb. Portable to an entry level desktop, to a multiuser AT compatible, Zenith Data Systems offers you PC Compatibility and much more.

WED., THURS. and FRI. SPECIAL
HAIRCUT
$6.95
with Laurie
with this ad/coupon
Expires 11/29/85
at SHEAR DELIGHT
complete hairstyling for men & women
549-1502
Bay Banks Food Basket
Triangle St.
E. Pleasant St.
Sub
SHEAR DELIGHT 228 Triangle
Pray St.

Doonesbury

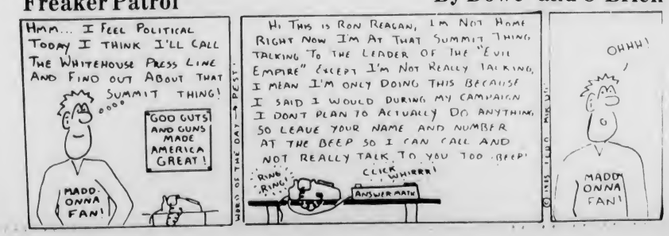
BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

GORDY

By Gorde



Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

Weather

Today
Partly sunny skies, breezy and warm. Highs in the 65-70 range.

Tonight
Breezy and mild, temperatures in the low 50s.

Tomorrow
Partly cloudy, windy and warm. Highs in the 60s with chance to reach the low 70s.

Attention

Mandatory

Staff Meeting for all typesetters Thursday night, 7 p.m.

Today's Menu

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
American Chop Suey

BASICS LUNCH
Grilled Cheese on Wheatberry
Fettuccine with Sprouts

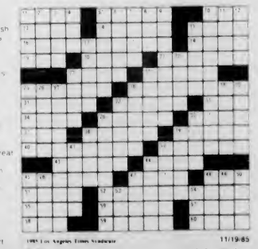
DINNER
Roast Pork/Gravy
Spices Apples
Chopped Beefsteak Special
Greek Style Skillet

BASICS DINNER
Tofu Nut Loaf/Light Mushroom Sauce
Greek Style Skillet

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Speck
5 Little porker
10 Fall guy
13 Love god
14 ——— porridge hot
15 Small fish
16 1937 Bogart classic
18 Green land
19 ——— old port on a storm
20 Household needs
21 California lake or pass
23 Grand Ol' ———
24 Badge for a good scout
25 Social divisions
28 Gently stroked
31 Walking ——
32 Beatlike pelet
33 The Greatest
34 Lairs
35 ——— Like a Fox
36 Type of soup or salad
37 Picnic pest
38 Manitoba's Great ——— Lake
39 Ray
40 Headlong rush
42 ——— Antilles
43 Portuguese overseas province
44 Do an usher's job
45 Island off W. Irian
47 Bridge
48 Little devil
51 Mountain in Maine
52 Aramco site
55 Gourmet's treat
56 Eve's
57 Woody's son
58 Greek letter
59 Prof.'s nadir: Ok
60 Sense

DOWN
1 Tableland
2 Algerian port
3 Theater award
4 Title of respect: Abbr.
5 Javelins
6 Comic Youngman
7 Dobbin's lunch
8 ——— was going to Stirlets
9 With affection
10 Carnival of the Animals composer
11 Israeli port
12 ——— Gynt
15 Dancer Ruth St.
17 Part of a shoe
22 City south of Moscow
23 Elevator man
24 Indian corn
25 Musical endings
26 In regard to
27 Famous flagship
28 Long for 29 Gradden
30 Iranian coin
32 Madrid museum
35 Household need
36 Fiber
38 Humane gp.
39 Intended to 41 Nickname for Margaret
42 Horseshoe thrower's term
44 Michener novel
45 Novelist Prevost's title
46 Emcee Parks
47 Cozy
48 In the matter of
49 Track event
50 Pocket billiards
53 Stir
54 Dunce

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

T	W	O		A	S	C	O	T		A	S	P. S.
P	E	E	L		L	I	A	N	E		G	H A T
A	N	A	S		A	N	N	I	E		H	O S E
T	A	K	E	I	N	G	O	O	D	P	A	R T
S	C	E	N	I	C		L	I	N	E	A	S T E R
Y	E	N		A	R	E		D	A	N	E
		C	L	I	A	I	D		E	S	N	F
	I	N	G	O	O	D	S	P	I	R	I	T S
I	M	A	S	S		E	S		E	O	N
H	A	M		P	A	S		R	U	G		A S B
A	G	E	N	A		P	R	E		U	S	U A L
	I	S	I	N	G	O	O	D	F	E	I	L E
A	N	A	I		R	I	G	O	R		R	U E S
P	E	K	E		E	L	E	N	A		I	M P S
E	D	E	R		E	S	T	E	S		A	N S

11/19/85

Resume Typesetting

*High quality
*Letter perfect
*Customized layouts
*Superior to all other methods

Contact SGA Communications Office
304 Student Union
Ed Cunningham or Jim Emmett
5-1977

★football

continued from page 16

picked first in the pre-season and had by far the best talent (as evidenced by seven first-teamers). UMass coach Bob Stull took a team picked for next-to-last in the league and finished second, losing to URI by four points. He also had 47 freshmen, suffered a host of injuries to starters and broke in a freshman quarterback. He was the logical choice as coach-of-the-year.

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: The UMass defense allowed more then eights points less than last season, 151 less yards and 93 less yards on the ground. The offense scored four more points on the average. . .the UMass coaching staff is now on the road recruiting. Linemen are the main UMass need for 1986.

NATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM INFORMATION MEETINGS

There will be four information meetings for students interested in applying for the National Student Exchange Program for Fall, 1986.

Tuesday, November 12*	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 13	4-5 pm	CC 805
Tuesday, November 19	4-5 pm	CC 805
Wednesday, November 20	4-5 pm	CC 803

* financial aid information session

Students applying to restricted schools: Univ. of Hawaii/Manoa & Hilo; Univ. of So. Florida; Cal State Chico, Northridge & Sonoma; and College of the Virgin Islands must attend one of these information sessions.

Peloton Sports
Cross-Country Ski Jamboree Sale!
Sample Savings on 2 of 12 Complete Outfits:

Nordic Waxless Outfit — $69.95
Leather 75mm Boots
Tonkin Poles
75mm Bindings
Special Sale

Kneissl HC Waxless Skis — $119.95
Salomon SR 301 Boots
SNS System Bindings
Swix Fibreglass Poles
Reg. $178.00
This is the lowest price ever on this outfit!

- 20% to 40% off all cold weather clothing
- Last years ski leftovers ½ price
- All used boots $10.00
- Specials on Childrens' Outfits
- Childrens Free Boot Exchange

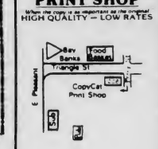
FREE — Refreshments
FREE — Get a pair of Peloton Ski Straps just for stopping by
FREE — Mounting and Base Prep on all XC Outfits
FREE — Wax Kit with every Waxable Ski Outfit
FREE — 5 days worth of trail passes for Touring Centers
Savings of over $20.00

Peloton Sports
the cross-country ski experts

Sale from Wed., Nov. 20 - Sun. Nov. 24
►Thurs. & Fri. open until Midnight◄
1 E. PLEASANT ST. — AMHERST — 549-6904

trak LIFA SWIX SPORT
kneissl SALOMON

TUESDAY NOV. 19
R-RATED HYPNOTIST



World Famous
Frank Santos
®Rated
Hypnotist Comedian
Radically Different Ridiculously Funny
Richly Entertaining Recklessly Risque

JUSTIN RYAN'S
Rte. 9, Amherst
corner of University Dr.
256-1059

The OLD MILL
YOUR ONE STOP CHRISTMAS SHOP
ROUTE 63
549-2867
NORTH AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS 01059
1 Mile North of UMass

ARE YOU PREGNANT & IN NEED OF HELP?
Birthright Can Help
• FREE PREGNANCY TESTING
- Same Day Results -
Services that are Free, Confidential, Caring & Helpful
549-1906
Amherst Carriage Shops Upper Level

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
Where the copy is as important as the original
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES

549-3840
228 Triangle St.
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun

3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION

Gas Saving Tune-up
4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95
Inst. valves, new breaker points, plugs, points & condenser, adjust idle speed, set timing, test battery and charging system, inspect rotor, distributor cap, PVC valve, ignition cables, air filter, and vapor valve. Includes Emission Test and Printout.

Lube, Oil & Filter
$17.99
Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil, and safety check.

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wasnuka's Store
549-4704

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS
THE GREAT SKI SNATCH

$500,000
WORTH OF TOP NAME
WINTER CLOTHING
&
SKI EQUIPMENT
PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437
NOV 21 - 23
T F HIGH NOON TIL 10 P.M.
S 10AM TIL 4PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
UMASS, AMHERST

Previewing the 1985-86 Minutemen

Coach: Ron Gerlufsen.
Career Record: 25-32 (2 years).
Home Court: Curry Hicks Cage (4,100).
1984-85 Record: 13-15.
Atlantic 10 Record: 9-9 (tied for 4th).
Lettermen Lost: 6.
Returning Lettermen: 6.

Players:

Name	Pos.	Cl.	Ht.	PPG 1984-85	RPG 1984-85
Carl Smith	G	Jr.	5-11	9.2	2.8
Lorenzo Sutton	G/F	So.	6-2	8.4	3.1
Matt Ryan	G/F	So.	6-4	2.1	1.7
Tom Emerson	C	Sr.	6-9	1.3	2.3
Wilbert Hicks	F	So.	6-8	1.3	1.6
Jack Sheehan	G	Sr.	6-3	1.0	0.4
Bill Hampton	G	Jr.	6-4	0.0	0.2
David Brown	G/F	Fr.	6-4	15.9	7.8
Duane Chase	F	Fr.	6-6	16.4	12.5
Joe Fennell	F	Fr.	6-6	17.0	15.0
Ben Jones ‡	F	So.	6-7	18.0	9.0
John Milum •	F	So.	6-9	23.0	13.0
Sean Mosby	F/C	Fr.	6-8	9.0	8.0
Mike Mundy	G	Fr.	5-10	23.0	2.3
Fitzhugh Tarry †	F	Fr.	6-8	24.5	11.0

* Transfer from Iona, 83-84 stats.
† Red-shirted last season, 83-84 stats.
‡ Transfer from Gainesville (Ga) Junior College.

★soccer preview

continued from page 16

George Mason is a squad that relies basically on its front line and senior All-American foward Lisa Gmitter (13 goals, four assists, 30 points). Gmitter, who has taken 89 shots this year, scored the winning goal in Saturday's 1-0 win over Cortland State.

Another senior, All-American foward Pam Baughman (7-5-19) and freshman foward Michele Bell (10-1-21) are also big scorers for the Patriots.

"We're more of a patient team opposed to a running team (like UMass)," Leung said.

The Patriots will be looking to contain the Minutewomen's speed. "They're an exceptionally fast team," Leung said. "They're very skillful."

North Carolina coach Anson Dorrance said, "UMass' team speed is better. George Mason has better finishing fowards (in Gmitter and Baughman). UMass will create a lot of scoring chances and miss in the box (penalty area). GM won't create as many chances, but they'll finish them off.

"UMass has speed and techinque and George Mason has ablity."

Boston College coach Susanna Kaplan, whose team beat GM, 2-0, said, "They (GM) has one legitimate striker (Gmitter). We just marked her out of the game."

UMass has outscored its opponents 68-2 with starting goalie Jan Holland giving up one goal (0.07 goals against average). GM has outscored its opponents 58-14. Goalie Kim Maslin (0.72) has let in 13 goals.

"We're looking foward to it," Leung said. "We have a lot of respect for the team."

UMass also looks foward to Saturday. "We'd love a chance to get George Mason," fullback Debbie Belkin said. "We hear that they are a bit cocky. We have confidence but don't have a big mouth about it."

★basketball

continued from page 16

the Minutemen. Ben Jones, a 6-7 transfer from Gainesville (Ga) Junior College has also looked good. A solid shooter and rebounder, Jones can play the big forward spot as well. Fitzhugh Tarry is another candidate. A 6-8 freshman shooter that redshirted last season, Tarry has struggled in pre-season, but has great potential. Ryan is another possibility, but must improve upon his 2.1 ppp of last season.

The power forward spot is one that Duane Chase fits nicely. A 6-6, 215 pound hunk of talent from Baltimore, Chase was recuited by Notre Dame, Purdue and others as a football quarterback, but went the hoop route. A strong inside player and rebounder, Chase is the best dunker to grace the Cage since Dr. J and is a great shot blocker. Hicks, who averaged 1.3 ppg in limited action last year, will also contribute here. A 6-8 banger, Hicks provides good defense. Another freshman, 6-6 Joe Fennell will also see action. A good shooter and rebounder, Fennell is an excellent foul shooter and has great instincts.

Center will see Emerson start the season, looking to finally prove himself. A good high post player, Emerson can pass well and can hit the open shot. UM needs defense and rebounding as well from him. Sean Mosby reminds everybody of 84 grad Edwin Green. A 6-8 defensive wizard from hoop-rich Camden, NJ, Mosby will see more time as he develops. John Milum, a 6-9 transfer from Iona College must wait until the Lobo Classic (Dec. 27) to become eligible. A all-stater and Street and Smith All-American from Connecticut, Milum is a strong inside player and good shooter.

BACKCOURT - Smith is an institution at point guard, but will be pushed by lightning-fast freshman Mike Mundy. A 5-10 product of Springbrook High in Maryland, Mundy is a good ball handler and shooter. Sheehan, who has been hampered by injuries in past seasons, is a heady player with experience that adds great depth. Sutton or Brown could also sub for Smith. The off-guard will see Sutton start, but Brown and Ryan are pushing hard. Gerlufsen likes the flexibility the guards give him. Billy Hampton, a 6-4 walk-on last season, also returns and is much-improved.

Gerlufsen said with the speed and quickness on this season's team, UMass will be looking to employ a pressure defense that will increase the tempo of the offense.

"We want to force mistakes and turn them into easy points," said the coach. "We have the players to do this. We can sub freely and press with fresh players. I think it's an exciting brand of basketball."

Gerlufsen also mentioned perhaps the most important return to the UMass program, the Cage.

The musty old building that UMass fans remember is now a whitwashed arena without a dirt floor and the friendly squirrels that made practicing so interesting.

"I think it adds five points a game, if the crowds are as enthused as they were in the past," Gerlufsen said. "It should be tough to come in there and face us."

UMass will play its regular A-10 schedule plus a non-conference schedule that includes New Hampshire, Connecticut, Northeastern, Holy Cross and Boston University.

"I'm looking forward to it," said Emerson. "It should be a great year for us, if we can mold togther into a team that is balanced."

Cross country 12th in IC4A

By PHIL SAYLES
Collegian Correspondent

Disregarding the snow, mud, and miserable weather conditions, the University of Massachusetts men's cross country team placed a satisfying 12th place at the IC4A championships at Lehigh University on Saturday.

West Virginia, led by a first place finish by Jean-Pierre Ndayienga, conquered the 61 team field with a score of 130 points. Iona took second place with a score of 147 points and Boston University managed third place by tallying 153 points.

In the individual results, runnerup to Atlantic 10 champion Ndayienga was Greg Hale of the University of Rhode Island. Third place was nabbed by Providence's Andy Ronan.

For UMass, sophomore Rick Dow turned in his finest performance of the year placing 40th overall and first for the team. Paul Stanislawzyk was second for the Minutemen with a 50th place finish, and Steve Page's 65th place finish was good enough for third on the squad.

Minuteman head coach Ken O'Brien was pleased with his team's season finale. "I thought that we ran very well in the meet considering the poor conditions and tough competition," said O'Brien, adding that "the team really put its heart into this meet. They knew that our top runner (John Panacionne) was not near full strength and they really took up the slack."

"I think that the team really progressed and improved as the season wore on. John Panacionne has had a great career here and he has provided a good example and leadership to some of our younger runners this year. We should have a strong team next year as we have almost all of our runners returning," said O'Brien.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

UMass Bike Club General Meeting: Tues 7:00-9:00 pm room 811.15 bike demo. Plans for Spring plans for possible Intersession Florida trip everyone welcome!

Student Fellowship supper Wednesday 5:30-7:30 at Immanuel Lutheran before fasting for Oxfam. Break-the-fast eucharist Thursday 6:00 at the Ark

AUTO FOR SALE

BMW 2002 1969 new engine OK body good buy 665-4142 evenings

1971 Dodge Wagon 85,000 miles, standard transmission, V-8, runs well. $500 or best offer. Jon 253-9456

VW Rabit 76, good condition, new tires, $800 or BO 549-6690 night

74 Peugot diesel. Standard, excellent condition sun roof! 256-1807 Tracey

1977 Chevy Malibu Classic air, fog lights, nice condition, dependable $1400 or BO call 665-3721

Chevy Monza 1976 blue, new brakes, good body, runs well, $750 call 546-8534

Pontiac GTO 1969 strong. New parts. $1100 BO 546-6417

1976 Ford Pinto good condition $900 584-5742

77 Honda Accord 5 speed must sell to pay bills call Scott 253-9015

74 VW Bug strong eng. exc. frame and int. good body $850 549-7778

1976 "Suabug" stereo by Sony, solid body, runs great $1400 584-5205

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

THE BREAKFAST CLUB
Fri Nov 22 at 5, 7, 9, 11
Engineering East Aud
$1.50 at 5, 7, . . $2.00 at 9, 11

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt, on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Amherst, 1 bdrm apt on busline, 365/month, avail 1/1/86 253-3634

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on bus line, avail immediately 253-9043

1 or 2 females to share apt call eves 549-4483

1 bedroom Cliffside apt. 375/month, includes everything avail Jan 1 call 665-8455

FOR SALE

13' all wood Penyan boat with 25 horse engine, trailer & more call 549-1032 (Mark)

Water Bed $250.00 call 549-0194

Fender Super-Six Amp. Twin heads. Six tens. Also G & L Cavalier. Excellent guitar black. Just got set up and intonised beautifully by Leo Fender himself. 700 new last year. Right now $400 549-0385

Technics SL5 Linear Tracking Turntable w/cartridge, direct drive, fully automatic $100 or BO call between 4 pm - 12 pm 546-5086

Brand new 12" B & W TV only $70!! Brand new port. Sharp typewriter, 2 pg. memory only $170!! Don't forget, that Christmas is coming!! Call 6-4475 for more details

Celebrate the Holidays
by sending a Turkey Gram
on sale in the Concourse
11/19-22

FOUND

Ring found Orchard Hill Courts 2 wks ago 546-4739

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Full time Steward position. 5 evenings weekly, light inventory, pricing, stocking and bar back duties, excellent entry level food position apply in person Northampton Hilton Inn Rt 5

Delivery Drivers. Own car required. 3-4 nights. $7-8/hr. Apply in person. Pinocchio's Pizza 1177 No. Pleasant, No Amherst.

Part-time temporary positions available for the Annual Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Program. Starting date -November 22 until December 24. For more information call 586-5243

Accountant: The Economic Development Office is hiring for Spring semester. Sophomores and Juniors needed to work with student controlled businesses, approx 10 hrs/wk. Applications available at 409 SUB. Deadline is noon 11/27

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

LOST

Monday afternoon on campus, near Herter a PANASONIC WALKMAN w/a in my final statement, I am never doing it again so I'm keeping man and bear forever. I will never surrender!! P.S. I totally miss the days of 16 Iroquois

Lost wallet Tuesday Oct 22 2nd floor SUB at Collegian stack. Call me back Alex 5-0194

Gold bangle bracelet somewhere around CC on Thurs 17 reward if returned please! Has much sentimental value please contact Beth at 256-1758

Lost two small notebooks on campus Fri. evening, Nov 8 (possibly in Union) please contact me in Grad Writing Office 5-0979

MOTORCYCLES

1983 Honda V45 Saber low miles ex. condition Shoei helmet also $2000 545-4612 after 8 pm ask for Sean

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM

Counselor applications available for summer '86, 101 Berkshire House

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Ski and Party at Sugarbush. See Ski Club Sale. S.U.B. Wed-Sat Hotel $149

Violent Femmes - I want a ticket badly. Will pay at least 2x ticket price. Helga 253-2004

Attention Musicians: Experienced drummer seeking to form a funk/jazz fusion group. Are you interested? If so, call Scott at 546-5149

* Attention Skiers * Sell your used equipment at the 15th Annual Ski Snatch. Bring equipment to SUB Wed Nov 20 12-5 pm

LAGNAF
nudge, nudge
wink, wink
Know what I mean?!

My Queen we know where the top is. HINT - it's near a potential mouse house

Annette Geneau and Wendy Ulrich This TDK 90 min tape, entitled "assorted crap" PLEASE call Val 6-9270

Lost wallet Tuesday Oct 22 2nd floor SUB at Collegian stack. Call me back Alex 5-0194

Gold bangle bracelet somewhere around CC on Thurs 17 reward if returned please! Has much sentimental value please contact Beth at 256-1758

Lost two small notebooks on campus Fri. evening, Nov 8 (possibly in Union) please contact me in Grad Writing Office 5-0979

16 Iroquois!! THE SAGA CONTINUES. . . Will Wendy and Tim ever find the keys on Seagull Beach? Will Pat make it to 15 weeks? Will Melissa join a convent? Will Annette get over her GO NYC model? And did Debbie live at 16 Iroquois? And finally . . . what is the destiny of Man and Bear?

Hey Cathy Is this the wild, sexy, personal you wanted? Dave

Erik Nettlesen - Best wishes today of all days Happy Birthday! You're a great brother - love Eliot and Kirsten

Ydaldabdon UMass "Red Rock" cafe T-shirts with Fred Flinstone 6-6314

Irene, its your birthday so be happy and get psyched to party this weekend John

Susanne Green, Celebrate tonite with 3 diamonds. Hope you have the best birthday. Love always Ellen (fotch) Hillary (jap) Dana (rabbis)

Hey Becky - It's your birthday you crazy nut! You're the best roommate ever (even if you are a cabbage patch doll) Love, Judy

Music Theatre Guild organizational meeting for anyone interested in working on Spring Production - Bartlett Auditorium 6:30-7:30 Nov 21

Happy Birthday Anni! Remember Dr. Ruth says: Do you use contraceptive? Good! We love you Anni! 3rpm second floor Brooks

Sue Thanks for two happy months. Love Ed

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To North Carolina for Thanksgiving or anywhere south of Washington for Thanksgiving can leave anytime will help with gas Eric 546-4630

To (from) Seattle Washington for Christmas break - share driving and expenses call PeterGeo at 586-4401

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

1 bedroom in house, 1 mile from campus. one sixth of utilities, $145 per month, male only, call 256-6228 anytime

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-5895 evenings

Wanted: Easy-going, studious female to share clean, quiet, furnished, one bedroom Puffton apt. Spring semester 549-1313

Looking for female to share 1 bedroom apt in Cliffside Apts beginning Jan 1 187/mo inclusive! Call Christine 665-7729

Roommate wanted to look for an apartment with two nonsmoking females interested in North Amherst or Sunderland. Call 6-5568 or 6-4009 must be female!!!

1 bdrm in 3 bdrm apt $200/mo on Rt 9 next to bus stop 586-4969

Female to share room in Brittany Manor apt. Nonsmoker. Feb to June call 253-3766 after 5:00

Wanted - person to share furnished house in N. Amherst musician/student, near bus, heat provided, $200.00/month only til May 256-8432 Randy

One bdrm w/private bathrm in 2 bdrm Puffton apt 170/mo heat incl available Dec 1 for next semester 549-7827

SERVICES

COINS 122/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing, Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7652

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

TERI SUPIRO

Take off the boots, put on the heels and kiss goodbye those teenage years Happy 20th love the Residents f. Pseudo Residents of 64!!

TO SUBLET

2 rooms available in 4 bedroom apt in Swiss Village. On busline. $215 inc for info - call 256-1561

Furnished room in house on Main St on bus route for Intersession only 170! definitely negotiable call Alissa 253-5898

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

Two outgoing females looking for a room to rent (male/female), starting Jan/Feb preferably Amherst call Melanie 546-8518 after 10:00 pm

WANTED TO RENT

Two girls looking for an apartment in North Amherst for spring call 549-6149

To take over 2 bdrm apartment lease in January. Call 546-5337 or 546-5257

Two females looking for one bedroom apartment in Puffton or Brandywine call 549-5188 ask for Amy or Brenda

WORD PROCESSING EDITOR

Must have Apple 2E, matrix printer Wordstar facility 256-0626 7-9 am/6-11 pm

Palazzi is rookie-of-the-year

YC picks Dwyer, Yavis for all-conference

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi was named the Yankee Conference Rookie-of-the-Year in a vote by the league's coaches.

Senior nose guard Mike Dwyer was named a first-team all-conference player along with freshman punter Dimitri Yavis.

Palazzi was one of eight Minutemen named as a second-team all-conference selction. He is the first UMass player to be named rookie-of-the-year and is one of the front-runners for the ECAC 1-AA Rookie-of-the-Year award.

"It's a great honor for those players, but frankly I'm surprised that more players didn't get named to the first-team," said UMass coach Bob Stull. "It's kind of a joke."

UMass, despite having the best scoring and overall defense in the conference, placed only Dwyer on the first team defensive unit. Six Minutemen were named as second team defensive stars.

Second-teamers included senior co-captain Paul Platek (93 tackles, four interceptions) at defensive back; senior Eddie Sullivan (49 tackles and six sacks) on the line; freshman John McKeown (132 tackles) at a linebacker; junior Paul Manganaro at linebacker; sophomore Todd Rundle (85 tackles, six fumbles caused and ten sacks) at linebacker and junior Bob Shelmire (70 tackles and two interceptions) in the defensive backfield.

Offensive second-team selections were Palazzi (84-for-157, 1,152 yards and five touchdowns passing and seven touchdowns rushing) at quarterback; junior Al Neri (522 yards and seven touchdowns) at a running back and offensive guard Stan Kaczorowski.

Dwyer had 87 tackles on the season and 13 sacks. Yavis replaced starting punter Jim Tandler (due to an injured knee) after the first game and averaged 39.5 yards per kick with a boot of 58 yards his longest.

Rhode Island quarterback Tom Ehrhardt was named offensive player-of-the-year, Connecticut linebacker Mark Michaels and New Hampshire linebacker Neal Zonfrelli were named co defensive players-of-the-year while URI coach Bob Griffin was coach-of-the-year.

Other first teams included: RB Andre Garron and Mike Shriner (UNH); WR Billy Brooks (BU) and Dameon Reilly (URI); OT Brian Saronovitz (UNH) and Bob White (URI); OG Tony Ciccone (UNH) and Jim Bumpus (UNH) and TE Brian Forster (URI).

On defense, linemen were Dwyer, Brian O'Neill (UNH), Ray Paquette (Maine) and Brad Carson (URI). Linebackers were Zonfrelli, Michaels, Mark Coutts (Maine), Bob Eagan (BU) and Ilia Jarostchuk (UNH). Defensive backs were Ray Williams (URI), Calvin Hall (BU) and Mike Cassady (URI). The placekicker was UNH's Eric Facey.

It is the opinion of many, including this writer, that Rundle, McKeown and Platek belonged on the first team as well as Neri. For the best defense in the league (as well as being one of the top three nationally) to have only one player on the all-conference team seems ridiculous.

Griffin as coach-of-the-year is also a farce, His team was

continued on page 14

SPORTS

Sports Information photo

Senior captain Carl Smith and the University of Massachusetts basketball team open Saturday against Merrimack College in The Cage.

Basketball preview

New-look UMass should be exciting

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

Senior guard Jackie Sheehan, taking time out to talk to a reporter during a recent practice, looked around the Curry Hicks Cage at his teammates running drills.

"This squad has talent," Sheehan noted. "Serious talent. We are going to be one exciting team."

The 1985-86 University of Massachusetts basketball team returns to the comfortable confines of the newly-renovated Cage this Saturday night against Merrimack with a lot of questions.

Unlike past seasons, the questions however, are positive ones. The question isn't if the Minutemen can develop into a good team, it's when they will. The question isn't if the Minutemen can compete in the Atlantic 10, it's how high they can climb. The question isn't if the Minutemen have talent, it's a question of trying to get playing time for all the good players on the team.

Saturday's game (7:30 p.m.) will see an almost totally new team than the one that left the Cage after the 1983-84 season to play at the Springfield Civic Center. Last season, head coach Ron Gerlufsen took UMass to a 13-15 record, the most wins for UMass since the 1977-78 season. UMass also won the most games ever in the Atlantic 10, going 9-9 and earning a fourth-place tie.

Gone from that team are six lettermen, including leading scorer Donald Russell and leading rebounders Horace Neysmith and Bobby Braun. UMass loses 38.7 points-per-game from those three players alone, plus 20.6 rebounds.

That trio also started for all of the 84-85 season, leaving a big gap in the UMass lineup this year that must be filled.

Gerlufsen does return two starters. Junior captain Carl Smith set the UMass season assist record with 212 as a freshman and was won of tied seven games in is career with last-second shots. He averaged 9.2 points last season. The 5-10 floor leader must have a good season is if UMass is to go anywhere.

His backcourt partner will be silky-smooth sophomore Lorenzo Sutton. A 6-2 shooter that was out-of-position at small forward last season, Sutton will move to off-guard this year. His great leaping skills, solid defense and scoring (8.4 ppg last year) give UMass one of New England's finest backcourts.

"Smitty and Lorenzo are a great team," said Gerlufsen. "Lorenzo won't have matchup problems on defense anymore and his ball-handling skills are much better this season. As for Carl, he's one of the finest players I've coached anywhere."

Other veterans include Tom Emerson, a 6-10 senior center; Jackie Sheehan, a 6-3 point guard; Matt Ryan, a 6-4 swingman and Wilbert Hicks, a 6-8 sophomore forward.

UMass also has eight newcomers on the team, six freshman and two transfers. All are competing for starting positions and playing time and are considered one of the best recruiting classes ever to enter UMass.

"The big challenge with the new kids is to get them used to playing college ball, it's a real shock when they see what they're up against as far as talent goes," Gerlufsen said. "They're all good solid players, but I'd still like to see them under game conditions.

A look at the Minutemen:

FRONTCOURT - At small forward, Gerlufsen's leading candidate is 6-4 freshman David 'Beatle' Brown. A good all-around player with good skills, Brown is a leaper and can also play both guard positions, he's potentially high-scorer for

continued on page 15

UMass to host ECAC volleyball

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team will host the ECAC Championships this Friday and Saturday in Boyden Gym.

UMass, 34-7 on the season, will play James Madison University on Friday night at 8 p.m. Northeastern will face Navy at 6 p.m in the other match.

The championship finals will be held on Saturday at 2 p.m.

UMass, with a victory in the meet, could earn a berth into the Division II national playoffs for the first time in its history.

UMass has lost only one match at home this season, to New Haven University. Those victories include a first-ever championship in the UMass Invitationals earlier this season.

Scouting George Mason

Soccer faces tough foe in Patriots

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

George Mason University women's soccer coach Hank Leung sees one advantage for his third-ranked Patriots when they take on the No. 1 University of Massachusetts in the NCAA semi-finals on Saturday at George Mason in Fairfax, Virginia.

"Probably the only thing we have going for us is a little bit of history," Leung said. "UMass has been to the Final Four twice and they never won a semi-final game. We've been there (in 1983) and we won one."

George Mason lost in the 1983 finals to North Carolina, 5-0.

UMass (16-0) and George Mason (16-2-1) square off at noon on Saturday at the George Mason Soccer Stadium (capacity 5,000). Colorado College (15-5) takes on North Carolina (17-1-1) at 2 p.m. The finals are Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

"Logically speaking, we probably are a two-goal underdog. They've beaten Boston College twice, a team we lost to (2-0) and they beat North Carolina, a team we tied (3-3)," Leung said.

Massachusetts coach Kalekeni Banda said, "We respect everybody. You have to give them the edge. They are seasoned and very experienced. They've been to the Final Two."

UMass lost in the semifinals to North Carolina in 1983 and 2-1 in overtime to Connecticut last year, also in the semifinals.

"We'll have to put forth our best effort to just be in the game,"Leung said.

continued on page 15

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 53 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Wednesday, November 20, 1985

AP Laserphoto

President Ronald Reagan, left, and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev prepare to shake hands outside the Villa Fleur D'eau at Versoix near Geneva yesterday, prior to the beginning of their historic summit meeting.

Summit's atmosphere termed 'businesslike'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

GENEVA—President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, agreeing they "must achieve decisions together," met face-to-face for the first time yesterday and polunged into a series of "businesslike" discussions behind the curtain of a news blackout.

Arms control issues were on te agenda for the first day of the summit, but there was no public word on developments. The day ended with Reagan and Gorbachev sitting down for an unscheduled 50-minute fireside chat.

"I think we will have a good relationship," Swiss television quoted Gorbachev as saying of Reagan. It was one of the few breaks of the black out, which the White House said underscored the "seriousness" of negotiations between the superpower leaders.

While posing for pictures at the beginning of a private dinner given by the Gorbachevs at the Soviet mission, the Soviet leader was asked why he had spent so much time alone with Reagan.

"We think it's useful to have face-to-face contact," he replied.

When Reagan was asked if the pair had made progress during the day, he said with a grin, "We're smiling."

Because both sides agreed at the outset not to talk publicly about the deliberations until after they end, the content of the two leaders' discussions was not revealed. But spokesmen for both sides agreed the talks took place in a "good atmosphere" and were "businesslike."

The summit is scheduled to end Wednesday, with the possibility of a "public reporting session" tomorrow morning, according to White House spokesman Larry Speakes. The time could be taken up by the signing of any joint agreements, or the leaders could simply use the opportunity to end the blackout with their views of the first superpower summit in six years.

Yesterday the leaders waere scheduled to hold a 15-minute get-aquainted chat in the morning before joining six advisers from each side to begin the formal talks devoted to a two-hour review of U.S-Soviet relations. Then they were to break for lunch and return for two more hours of discussions with advisers on nuclear arms control.

The first tete-a-tete, however, stretched in to an hour-long meeting in a small room of the lakeside villa adjacent to the formal meeting room. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the U.S. and Soviet advisers were left "cooling their heels" and chatting with their counterparts while they waited for the one-on-one talk to end.

continued on page 4

Memo transfers power in student budget process

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

In a memorandum issued yesterday by two top University of Massachusetts administrators, a series of administrative actions will be implemented that student leaders say will significantly decrease student input of existing student-controlled funds.

The memorandum was written by Randy Donant, the director of student activities, and Dennis Madson, the vice-chancellor for student affairs. The memo lists seven actions that will be taken in relation to the fiscal year 1987 SGA budget process and years following. Included in the memo is the right of Donant to control funding of certain operations currently run by students. These operations include organizations having full-time staff personnel and line-item categories, such as the Legal Services Office, WMUA radio station, the Off-Campus Housing Office and the Economic Development Office.

The actions are seen by Donant as a "short and long term response to get us to the future. The memorandum is saying that we are level budgeting and in essence slowing the momentum of politicking, and moving forward."

One student leader, Jordan Rosner, chairman of the budget committee, said the memorandum is the "worst thing I've ever seen from the administration," in terms of student's rights being violated.

The actions, which Donant said are "non-negotiable," will not allow a student activity fee increase next year, will place a cap on certain SGA spending of operations not being taken over by the administration, and disallow "special" or dedicated reserves to be set-up from FY 87 Fee revenues before all other budget areas are fully funded. A "special" reserve would include any campus concert funding.

Most student government officials responded negatively to the memo, but SGA Co-President Dani Burgess and Senate Speaker John Ruddock said they wanted to study the actions before making any comment.

However, Rosner said he thinks it's ridiculous that they even put the memorandum out in the first place.

"The memo will directly threaten the basic student right to dispense student funds that are levied for student activities," Rosner said. Reacting to Donant's comments that the actions are non-negotiable, Rosner said "if they expect us to go down without a fight, they're sadly mistaken."

University refuses to rescind warnings against protesters

By ANDREW WOLFF
Collegian Staff

Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey said yesterday he does not intend to drop University disciplinary charges against students arrested after an anti-apartheid protest in the treasurer's office last semester.

"What has been issued is a warning," Duffey said. 'And it will stand."

Duffey's comments came after six people, part of a group who call themselves "Divest 9," held a press conference yesterday at the Hampshire County Courthouse in Northampton and called for the chancellor to follow Northwestern District Attorney W. Michael Ryan's decision not to prosecute the group for actions stemming from the protest.

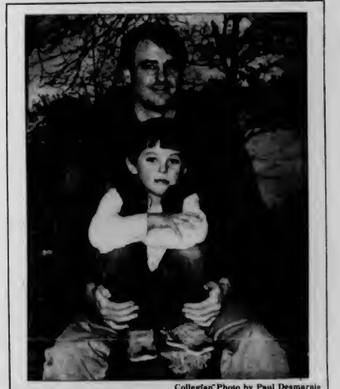
On May 1, a four-hour sit-in in UMass Treasurer Robert Brand's office ended when 32 people were arrested and charged with trespassing.

All but nine of the protestors paid a fine absolving them of official charges of trespassing, but all 32 were still subject to the University Code of Conduct. The remaining were scheduled to go on trial for trespassing yesterday. Ryan announced Monday that the charges would be dropped.

Of the members of 'Divest 9,' the University has issued warnings to Kathleen Lacey and John Everest. Raymond Allain, Pamela Arnoff and Stephen Shuster are no longer students and are not under University jurisdiction. Jonathan Frank is a graduate student and therefore is not bound by the University code of conduct.

Matthew Shakespeare, Graham Poor and Alexander Walsh are awaiting their pre-hearing.

Lacey, a senior comparative literature major from Arlington Heights, Illinois, said she was not surprised by Duffey's comments.



"It's clearly an intimidation tactic," Lacey said. "He's been basically saying the same things to us for months."

Duffey said, "We're dealing with disrupting an office for an afternoon. I think that is something that is worthy of a warning. Nobody is being punished in a severe way."

Inside:

The first ladies also meet in Geneva.....2
Professor recognized for political theories..3
Woman's basketball previewed.....12

"If they expect us to go down without a fight, they're sadly mistaken."
—Jordan Rosner, SGA budget chairman.
See above story.

Collegian Photo by Paul Desmarais

UMASS PROFESSOR ON THE RISE—Journalism professor Ralph Whitehead with six-year-old son John. Story, page 3

Leader's wives discuss summit with tea for two

GENEVA (AP)—Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev lingered over a pot of California herbal tea yesterday swapped invitations to visit each other's homelands and voiced hopes their husbands will discover "a better understanding" in their summit talks.

Mrs. Gorbachev was 15 minutes late arriving for her first meeting with Mrs. Reagan. But like their husbands, the two first ladies apparently had a lot to talk about, extending the scheduled 45-minute session by half an hour.

In fact, Mrs. Gorbachev stayed so late that President Reagan returned from his own summit with Mikhail Gorbachev before she left, forcing the president's motor cade to be diverted to the mansion's rear entrance.

The meeting was the first between superpower wives since June 1974 when Pat Nixon went to tea with Viktoria Petrovna Brezhnev at the Kremlin.

"We talked about our husbands and the summit meeting and what we both hope would come out of the meeting...which is a better understanding," Mrs. Reagan told reporters after the get-together at Maison de Saussure.

Asked later whether her guest seemed somewhat nervous, Mrs. Reagan replied: "I think everything relaxed after a while."

She said Mrs. Gorbachev "talked a lot about Russia and the expanse of Russia, the different sections and climates of Russia...I discussed my children—we didn't get around to her children, maybe tomorrow."

The Soviet first lady has invited Mrs. Reagan to have tea today at the Soviet Mission.

Mrs. Reagan said they discussed "What her husband wanted, what my husband wanted—better understanding."

"Then she asked me to come to Moscow. I asked her to come to America," Mrs. Reagan said. "We both said that we hoped we would be able to go to each other's countries."

Asked whether she and Mrs. Gorbachev could make a contribution to Soviet-American understanding, Mrs. Reagan replied, "I don't know. I hope so. I think personal contact—and this is one of the things we talked about—is always helpful."

Syrian planes downed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Israeli warplanes flying over Lebanon pursued Syrian MiG23s into Syrian air space yesterday and shot down two of them, Israel's air force commander said.

It was the first downing of Syrian planes reported since the summer of 1982, when Israel said its fighters shot down at least 85 Syrian jets in air battles that followed the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

A military spokesman in Damascus said Israel's U.S.-made F-15s violated Syrian air space near Nabek, 40 miles north of the capital. The statement made no mention of Syrian losses and said the Israeli planes were driven away.

Mar. Gen. Amos Lapidot, the Israeli air force commander, said on Israel radio that the battle began when Soviet-built Syrian jets came "nearer than usual" to an Israeli reconnaisance patrol flying over Lebanon.

"In order to continue the battle and not endanger our planes, we were forced to stage a short battle waith them across the border," Lapidot said.

He said the Israeli F-15s were six miles from Syria's border when the battle began, but the Syrian fighters had air-to-air missiles with twice that range and could threaten Israeli planes without leaving their own air space.

Today's Staff

Night Editor David Summersby
Copy Editor Kelly Sieger
Layout Tech Pete Soderberg
Photo Tech Paul Desmarais
Production Supervisor Ansel Zinter
Production: Karlin Isele, Pamela Marchand, Pete Forget, Tony Beugless, Mark Parker

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit #58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exams and vacations periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
When the copies of an operation go to the original
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES
549-3840
228 Triangle St
2nd floor above
Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

Gobble Up the Savings!
4 Day Shoe Sale
10% to 50% Savings Storewide on Shoes & Boots
Thurs.-Sun., Nov. 21-24
SHOE BIN
OPEN SUNDAYS
187 n. pleasant st amherst

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS
THE GREAT SKI SNATCH
$500,000
WORTH OF TOP NAME
WINTER CLOTHING
&
SKI EQUIPMENT
PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437
STARTS TOMORROW
NOV 21 - 23
T F HIGH NOON TIL 10 P.M.
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
S 10AM TIL 4PM
UMASS, AMHERST

UTOPIA SPAS
Get A SUN TAN
ADVANCED MEMBERSHIP SPECIAL
• 8 Visits
• Free ½ Hour Hot Tub for $29.95
Offer Expires Dec. 5, 1985
175 University Dr. 253-SPAS

YVONNE'S
CARRIBBEANA RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials
with Super Island Vegetarian and Regular dishes
Prices from $2.50 and up
50¢ DRAFT BEER
with all lunches
Route 9, Hadley, same block as Soda City
586-4389
Lunch Hours 11:30-3:00 pm Monday - Friday
Dinner Hours 5:00-10:00 pm Every Night

Collegian Photo by Paul Desmarais

A PLACE OF INDECISION—Freshman Joanne Moscawitz works on a letter on some steps by the Campus Center yesterday. Moscawitz is, like the sign next to her says, undecided about her major.

Internships begun for Third World & homosexual groups

By NANCY KLINGENER
Collegian Staff

For the first time at the University, the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns will be offering internships to interested and qualified students next semester.

One position will be as an intern for Third World issues, two as office interns at the program itself, and an unlimited number at the Lesbian Gay Bisexual Counseling Collective will be available.

The position as Third World intern developed from "a recognition of the need to develop resources and programming to encompass that group of people," said Reed Ide, co-director of the Program for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Concerns. Ide said that a goal for the program is to collect books and other printed material, as well as developing programming for the Third World gay community. "The primary responsibility for all of that development would fall to that intern," Ide said.

Two students will be able to work with Ide and co-director Felice Yeskel at the program, now operating in its first semester at the University. Ide described the position as "an internship of possibility. We really look for interns there who have a solid interest and commitment to work on programming and education around heterosexism and homophobia." The student would also get "to target an area they feel interested in and enthusiastic about."

Interns at the program will be acting as educator/advocates for the gay community. "No one should make the mistake in applying for this in thinking it's going to be a typing position," Ide said.

The Program is also looking for student volunteers with skills in graphics and fine arts.

Students working for the counseling center will be able to become interns as "a recognition of the value of the work and learning that the students undergo by participating in the counseling collective," Ide said. The collective has been operating for 10 years, with students acting as peer counselors and facilitating weekly rap groups at the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance. As interns, students will have to complete extra work aside from their work as counselors, "to ensure that the quality of the experience meets good academic standards. It's not enough to work for the counseling collective and get three credits," Ide said. Possibilities for the extra work include reading and writing papers.

"All these are pro-active internships. They require a high degree of motivation for that student," Ide said. He said that the internships were "one more avenue in that very necessary self-actualization for gay people."

Students interested in these internships must apply at the Office of Internships by November 26. Even those students interested in working at the counseling collective next semester, who aren't working there now, must apply at the office this semester.

Workshop focuses on lobbying

An educational program entitled, "How to Get What You Want and Need From the Legislature," will be offered from 7-9:30 p.m. tonight at the Center for Reflective Action, Mount Marie, Holyoke.

Speakers from Arise, the Women's Statewide Legislative Network, and the Medicaid Access Coalition, will talk about lobbying techniques while focusing on efforts by two local groups to influence the Massachusetts State Legislature.

Individuals and organizations are welcome. The program is free and is sponsored by the Women's Statewide Legislative Network, the Western Massachusetts Women's Network, and the Working Women's Program of the Everywoman's Center at UMass.

"PMS: Gaining Control," a workshop on Premenstrual Syndrome for woman who wish to learn more about the condition and how to control it, will be held at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Guest speakers will discuss symptom analysis, nutrition, exercise, medical options and non-traditional methods for managing PMS symptoms.

The workshop is free.

—SUSAN EATON

Students file assault complaints

Two UMass students are filing private complaints against each other as a result of an assault in Chadbourne Dormitory Friday. One student received minor bruises when he was assaulted by the other, the University of Massachusetts police said.

The student was in his room when the assailant, who was allegedly drunk, came up to him and said he "wanted some dope." After the student said he couldn't help him, they went into the hallway where the man pushed and punched him and a fight began.

In other police reports:

Three rings, including a 14 carat gold diamond ring, and a 10 carat gold birthstone ring were reported stolen Monday evening from a room in Leach Dormitory, police said.

The rings were taken sometime after Saturday night. The woman's room was locked but she had let someone into her room late that night. Police said they have a suspect.

A package containing items valued at $250, that included a check for $218, a golf shirt, a mug, a bottle of imported beer, and homemade cookies was reported stolen Monday afternoon from Pierpont Dormitory cluster office. The owner had received a notice saying he had a package in the office. He went to pick it up and it was gone, police said.

A 1983 Volvo received over $500 in damages when it was hit in lot 64 Monday, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Collegian Photo by Derek Roberts

FAIRY TALES—Jane Lidsky, wearing the fairy costume, and Beth Christenson, both members of the Animal Rights Coalition, perform a street theatre skit yesterday next to the Student Union Building.

Author to discuss activism

Writer Anne Moody will present a lecture on her life as a civil rights activist, tonight at Amherst College.

Moody reflects the "pure hell" of the civil rights movement through her best known work, Coming of Age in Mississippi. Since first becoming involved in the movement as a student at Tougaloo College in the early sixties, Moody has continued to fight for black rights despite death threats and because it didn't create innovative approaches to problems."

Moody has recently returned to New York after having spent nine of the last 10 years in Europe. While abroad, she completed nine fiction and non-fiction works.

The lecture, arranged by Amherst College senior Don Brown, will be presented at 8 p.m. in Morrill Science Center.

—KRISTIN AIELLO

Prof gains fame for theory

By BRION MCALARNEY
Collegian Staff

The recent emergence of a new American voting bloc, "the new collar worker," has brought wide recognition to a University of Massachusetts professor who was one of the first to recognize and define the group.

Ralph Whitehead, a University journalism professor for 12 years, first wrote about the new collar class for the Boston Globe magazine last April, and in July addressed the Democratic Party Policy Commission in Washington D.C.

This week, the Boston Phoenix featured a lengthy cover story about Whitehead and the evolution of this theory. In that story, Whitehead stressed that politicians and political parties must not neglect this bloc, as they outnumber "yuppies" by almost ten to one.

"They are the working class of the younger generation, so different from the older generation that they are a new breed," Whitehead said in an interview yesterday.

Whitehead gave two reasons for the emergence of the new collar workers. The nature of work done by the working class has changed from traditional manual labor to mostly work in the service sector, he said.

"They have jobs with more freedom, diversity . . .they have an opportunity, at best, to express themselves on the job, and, at worst, to avoid physical fatigue and the tedium of manual labor," he said.

The second reason is the difference in social and cultural values between the younger generation and their predecessors. Members of the baby-boom generation expect to find self-fulfillment in their lives while the older blue-collar workers are tough-minded and do not philosophize about life, Whitehead said.

Collegian Photo by Paul Desmarais

Ralph Whitehead—Discovers new voting sector.

"New collar workers express their cultural values on the job, or put their jobs second," Whitehead said.

Whitehead traces the roots of the new collar workers to the post-war consumer culture, an affluent economy, higher levels of education, and greater personal freedom.

Politically, the new collar workers are liberal and tolerant of the behavior of others, but are unsure of their long-term interests, Whitehead said

"If you're going to move new collar voters, you have to give them a vision, you have to transcend interest group politics . . you have to help new collars discover what their interests are, tell them where they stand," he said. Most new collar voters are sons and daughters of blue collar democrats, and have since moved away from the party.

★ summit — continued from page 1

And in what Speakers called a "clearly unexpected developement," Reagan, who played host for the first day, ended the afternoon session by inviting Gorbachev to join him for a walk through the garden down to the shore of Lake Geneva.

He said the two men put on their coats to ward off the near-freezing temepratures and took a five-minute stroll leading to a pool house, which they entered and sat down by a fire burning in the fireplace.

Speakes said the session had not been planned in advance, but when asked how it happened there was a fire burning in the pool house, he quipped, "I would judge it was probably one of those pool houses that has a 24-hour-a-day fire."

"The president, I think, felt at a certain point in the meeting that it was a desireable time for the two to continue their talks alone," the spokesman said.

In describing the meetings, Speakes said, "The tone was good, the exchanges were good, the opportunity for both to talk with each other concerning these major issues was carried on in an atmosphere which the general secretary has described as 'businesslike,' which we agree is an appropriate description."

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open: Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*
While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.
* Upon faculty approval

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

TCYP has openings for the following positions:
FOSTER CARE -mature individuals and families to provide a stable environment for needy adolescents.
RELIEF STAFF - to provide respite hours to youths in foster care. Situations vary according to need.
ADVOCATES - willing to share living accommodations with young adults needing orientation into independent living situations.
Stipends, training and support are available for all openings. For further information, call B.J. Vanasse at Tri-County Youth Program, 16 Armory St., Northampton, 586-6210.

CAROL'S HEAD QUARTERS
Former Employees of LORDS & LADIES
Carol, Sandy and Ingrid
A Full Service Salon
- Manicures - Cellophane Colors - Perms
Reasonable Rates Walk-Ins
115 Russell St, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA
1-413-584-9948
Student Discount w/valid ID

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!
Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95 Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 466 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2981
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-3821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

UMASS FOOTBALL TEAM
End of Season Bash
Tonight - Wed. Nov. 20th
at
CHANGES Dance Club
All Schnapps 99¢
DON'T MISS IT!
Bar Drinks $1.25
Rt. 9 Amherst 256-8284

Bermuda. Where to find the class when class is out.

Bermuda College Weeks. March 2 to April 5, 1986.

This spring, come relax on long pink beaches next to a soothing ocean.
Or explore the inroads and inlets of our quaint island by moped.
Appreciate a quiet... miles and miles from clutter and crowds.
Or dance madly to the vibrant music of local steel and calypso bands.
Leave school far, far behind you.
Or come party with your friends on our complimentary cruises and enjoy lunches at our most luxurious hotels.
Come bask in the leisurely pace of our beautiful island.
Or swim, sail, snorkel, play golf and tennis to exhaustion.
Come celebrate in style. Or drink in our sophisticated atmosphere.
It's all here, in Bermuda this spring. Call your travel agent for details.
Bermuda. Now

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ED/OP
The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.
Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

A clearer picture of AIDS

Leonard Norkin

Because of the widespread interest in AIDS (for acquired immune deficiency syndrome) and of the amount of misinformation which has appeared in these pages and elsewhere, I have attempted to review the current understanding of some of the most discussed aspects of this disease.

AIDS is caused by a virus known as HTLV-III (for human T-lymphotropic virus type III). The major characteristic of the disease is a severe immune deficiency. This is because the virus infects and destroys a type of white blood cell called a helper T lymphocyte. This cell type is concerned with the regulation of the immune response in ways that are not yet completely understood. As a result of their weakened immunity, AIDS victims die from a variety of infections and malignancies which generally do not pose a threat to people with healthy immune responses.

The most frightening aspect of AIDS is its high mortality rate. Despite reports of new drugs, there is still no reason to believe that any symptomatic individual will survive. In addition to AIDS, a milder illness called AIDS related complex (ARC) has emerged. ARC may precede the fully-developed AIDS.

Although HTLV-III has been isolated and well-characterized and much has been done to understand the mechanism of the infection, neither a vaccine nor an effective treatment are presently at hand.

The predominant risk groups for AIDS and ARC include sexually active gay males, intravenous drug abusers, recipients of blood transfusions and blood products (hemophiliacs in particular), and the heterosexual partners and children of high-risk individuals. The distribution of the disease in the population and the isolation of the AIDS virus from semen and blood of infected individuals leave no doubt that AIDS is transmitted sexually, by blood contamination, and congenitally. HTLV-III has also been detected in saliva. Nevertheless, there is no evidence to suggest that saliva is a route of transmission, either by contact or inhalation. For example, non-sexual household contacts have thus far remained free of infection. There is also no evidence for transmission of AIDS via food, water, insects, or casual transmission by those mechanisms is highly unlikely, but not necessarily impossible.

AIDS was first recognized, as a new disease in 1981. Since then, the number of cases in the United States alone has reached 14,000. In addition, an estimated 400,000 to 1,000,000 people have been infected with HTLV-III while not expressing symptoms. Even these large numbers may represent an underestimate of the number of infected individuals since the blood test for AIDS (which recognizes antibodies against the virus made only after infection) may yield a significant number of false negatives. The reasons why the blood tests give false results are not known. One possibility is that some infected individuals had not yet begun to make antibodies against the virus at the time of testing. The public health implications of this are enormous since blood from such individuals would be acceptable to blood banks.

How many of those individuals who are infected, but free of disease, will eventually develop AIDS is a major unanswered question. It is difficult to answer at present because the lapse of time between infection and development of overt disease may be several years or longer. Nevertheless, some prospective studies suggest that eight to ten percent of asymptomatic infected individuals will develop AIDS each year. Of further concern, these individuals constitute a vast reservoir of carriers capable of spreading the infection and the disease.

Why gay men are at high risk is not known, but several possibilities have been suggested. Among these is the high frequency of sexual contacts of some gay men. Another is the possibility of tissue damage occuring during homosexual intercourse, thereby providing the virus a greater opportunity to enter the blood. Another factor might be the relatively poor protection (e.g. immunological) of the rectum compared to the vagina. Nevertheless, note that heterosexuals are the major infected group in Africa and heterosexual transmission is now recognized in the United States. The risk of heterosexual transmission is not yet known nor can one predict the future rate of infection of the heterosexual population. Fear of a widespread lethal epidemic is probably not called for as suggested by the fact that African AIDS, although appearing in the 1970s, has not run such a course.

The above represents to the best of my knowledge, the current state of understanding of AIDS. However, AIDS is being intensively investigated and new information may lead to new or different interpretations. For anyone wishing to delve into some of the technical aspects of the AIDS problem, I recommend starting with a review article in the British journal, Nature (Vol. 317, page 395, Oct. 3, 1985), co-authored by Robert Gallo (who first isolated HTLV-III in the United States). That same journal frequently contains reasoned, non-technical, discussion of social and political matters relating to AIDS in its News and Commentary sections.

My purpose in the above has been to provide the kind of information that might promote informed discussion. I have avoided making any suggestions about how one might protect oneself from AIDS since it is more appropriate for that advice to come from a physician or other competent health care provider. I do, however, suggest that one be critical of what one reads in the popular press or hears by word of mouth in order to avoid the kind of hysteria that results from misinformation. Furthermore, I strongly urge those in an at-risk group to get their information directly from a competent physician.

Leonard Norkin is a UMass microbiology professor.

Geneva and the arms race

Stephen Erickson

Once again the grand media spectacle is upon us, as the American and Russian leaders sit down to talk peace in Geneva. The reality that disarmament conferences in the past have consisted more of pretty pictures than the reduction of armaments ought to keep our hopes for the Reagan-Gorbachev meetings in perspective.

Although agreements have been reached regarding the testing of nuclear weapons, nuclear arms proliferation, and communications, the actual build-up of nuclear arsenals, especially that of the Soviet Union, has gone un-restrained. With the history of "arms control" in mind we can examine the factors that might make the present Geneva negotiations more successful than those that have preceded them.

The feeling within the Kremlin seems to favor the modernization of the industrial base of the Soviet Union. An arms control agreement would facilitate such a program by reallocating resources away from military expenditures. In addition, it is possible that the Soviet Union is coming to the realization that it cannot win an arms race. If so, than credit goes to the initiatives of the Reagan administration in attemp ting to match the Soviet arms build-up. The ironic truth that U.S. nuclear arms production can actually lead to reductions in nuclear arms on both sides is a lesson peace activists should take note of.

Although a nuclear arms agreement coming out of Geneva is by no means guaranteed, the Soviets have already made a proposal that, in light of past summits, is remarkable because it offers to reduce, as opposed to control, nuclear weapons. The proposal is for a mutual 50 percent reduction, although which armaments would be dismantled is a point of contention. If this is an actual bargaining position and not merely a media play, then we have reason to be encouraged.

Central to the Soviet proposal is their demand that Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative be restrained. The fact that the "Star Wars" program seems the number one concern of the Soviets in Geneva ought to make us question those American scientists who, motivated perhaps more by politics than science, claim the system has no chance of working. In a very real sense Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative is already working in Geneva. Public support for the President, plus the fact that 39 senators, enough to reject a treaty, have come out in support of SDI, strengthens Reagan's publically stated hard-line position. The administration's pessimistic tone serves both to prepare public opinion should nothing come out of the Geneva talks, as well as to bolster the American negotiators position by sending the Soviets the message that the United States is not desperate for an agreement.

It appears that success at the talks may be contingent upon the Reagan administration's willingness to compromise the development of SDI. Given Reagan's desire to find an important place for his administration in history, and his tendency to follow the advice of the more moderate voices around him, the possibility that U.S. positions will be more flexible than recent public statements indicate seems entirely conceivable.

No matter what the outcome of the summit, we can be assured that human rights within the Soviet Union will remain a travesty. The quest for Soviet world domination will continue to wreak havoc and destruction on the Third World. Both the United States and the Soviet Union will still maintain substantial nuclear arsenals. Agreements at past summits could not address the fundamental differences between Soviet and American policies, goals, and beliefs. There is no reason that this Reagan-Gorbachev summit should be any different. At less basic levels, however, thanks to President Reagan's demonstrated efforts to check Soviet military power, Moscow may finally believe that there is something worth negotiating.

Stephen Erickson is a Collegian columnist.

Insight to union dispute

William S. BuSteed

There is a very good reason why the ongoing dispute between the workers and management at the Lord Jeffery Inn has become the most controversial issue in the Amherst area. The essential fact is that Amherst College, 75 percent owner of the estabishment, has blatantly adopted a policy of harsh economic coercion. They claim that "you can't be a good employer and make money."

We, the employees in local 217, AFL-CIO, Hotel and Restaurant workers, have tried to negotiate a fair settlement, but Amherst College is attempting to ignore the fact that we both had a union for ten years. We insist that it is possible for them to be both fair to us and reverse their unsound running of the Inn. Clearly, the college and the newly hired manager would like to reduce losses. But the Inn has lost money since it opened in 1926.

Briefly, the sequence of events leading up to the present deadlock is as follows. A new general manager, Eric Nusbaum, was hired in April and indicated to local 217 diector Rob Traber that no major changes were expected in the contract, due to expire on Oct. 24. Late in September, however, management laid before our negotiating committee massive takeaway proposals based on losses they claim only belatedly to have discovered. This, in spite of the operation being computerized by David Nichols, the previous manager: operating costs, daily and monthly, were fully known. Though management relented somewhat in the face of the reaction of the present employees, they still propose to freeze our wages (in effect asking us to take a pay cut, given inflation) and, most important, they are adamant about imposoing a two-tier wage and benefit system, a common union-busting technique. New employees, doing the same work we do, would receive far less and never get the fairly decent living that should be their due, also.

As we could not consent to the destruction of our union, we engaged in a job action called "Walk and Work," an action falling short of a full strike, when the expiration date had passed. Picketing outside to discourage customers and call attention to management's unfairness, we continued to work our jobs at the Inn, in hopes of convincing management to negotiate in good faith. But if plain economics was in fact the issue–and we maintain that it is not–surely our proposal that new employees work for an extended period at considerably lower hourly rates before stepping up to the wage levels of current employees would have swayed management. On Nov. 8, 50 or so out of 70 workers were laid off. Amherst College is now playing hard–they are trying to prevent us from receiving unemployment compensation. They take the view that it is our fault, business being disrupted by a labor dispute; but it is their inflexibility, failure to negotiate a fair settlement, and union-busting that is the real source of trouble.

What can you do to support our effort? A general community meeting has been scheduled for 7 p.m. on Wednesday (same place). Community fund-raising for the hardship fund is our only defense against the tatics of "big money" Amherst College.

William S. BuSteed is a member of the Lord Jeffrey Inn worker's Press Committee.

SALE!

HENRY GRETHEL
mathicone
Kenneth Cole
WillWear WillSmith
JEFFREY BANKS

The names you want at prices you can't resist. The pre-holiday sale at Chona Men. 20% off almost everything. Four days only. Thurs., Nov. 21-Sun., Nov. 24.

CHONAMEN

CONTEMPORARY FASHION FOR MEN • 2nd Floor, Thornes Marketplace Northampton 584 7001

PERSONAL COMPUTING FOR THE LIBERAL ARTS
Math 197Q MWF 2:30
- For Freshmen & Sophomore nonscience majors
- No prerequisites
- Learn elementary programming
- Learn basic quantitative analysis
- Applications to real public policy problems: economics, the environment, public health, consumer issues, taxes
- Information: Prof. Frank Wattenberg, 5-0984

Hampshire Business Machines Inc.
TYPEWRITERS
Sales, Service
Rentals
Brothers, IBM.
Smith Corona, etc
321 Main St.
Amherst
549-6177

James H. McManus
eating place
• OPEN
6 A.M.-3 A.M.
SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS
FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6869

Global Gifts of Creswell Gallery
arts, crafts and gifts of color
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
10-5 Mon-Sat
549-6600
African Artifacts • Cards • Cloths • Dolls • Jewelry • Posters • Pottery • Prints

NOW OPEN
Riverboat Village
APARTMENTS, SOUTH HADLEY.
1, 2 or 3 BEDROOM UNITS
BEAUTIFUL MODELS FURNISHED BY CHAP DELAINES & EPSTEIN FURNITURE CO
•Swimming Pool •Tennis Court •Club House •Shuffle Board Court
FINANCED BY MHFA
LEASED ON OPEN OCCUPANCY BASIS
FAMILIES • SINGLES SENIORS • HANDICAPPED
OPEN SEVEN DAYS A WEEK
10 AM - 4 PM
PHONE 532-9461
532-9462
CALL FOR DIRECTIONS
Riverboat Village
River Lodge Rd
SO. Hadley, MA 01075

SNACKSENSE
SOME FACTS ABOUT FAT

Functional Fat
Fat in your diet carries fat soluable vitamins such as A, E, D & K. It also provides essential fatty acids. Body fat protects body organs and provides insulation.

BUT, a diet high in fat is associated with an increased risk of heart attack, stroke and breast cancer. Fats are also high in calories.

How to cut down
- drink skim or low fat milk and use it in cooking too.
- substitute low fat yogurt for sour cream or use a mixture of the two.
- eat fewer fried foods and try more fruits and vegetables instead.

University Vending Services & University Health Services
Division of Health Education/University of Massachusetts/Amherst

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
"The BEST Chinese Food"
Boneless Bar-B-Q Spare Ribs
Small $2.80 or Large $4.60
Luncheon Specials
From $2.25 served 11 a.m. -3 p.m.
New Buffet & Sunday Brunch
Buffet Served 5-8 Mon.-Thurs.
Brunch Served Sunday 11:30-3
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.25
1) Beef with Fresh Mushrooms
2) Chicken Fingers
3) Chicken Wings
4) Cheese BBQ Pork
5) Broccoli in Oyster Sauce
6) Sweet & Sour Chicken
7) Pan Fried Rice
8) Pan Fried Noodles with Chicken
9) Pan Fried Ravioli
10) Hot & Sour Soup
Luncheon Specials & Take-out Service
Full Cocktail Menu
Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
10 Belchertown Road at Rte. 9, Amherst
256-0252

Peloton Sports
Cross-Country Ski Jamboree Sale!
Sample Savings on 2 of 12 Complete Outfits:
Nordic Waxless Outfit
Leather 75mm Boots
Tonkin Poles
75mm Bindings
Special Sale $69.95
Kneissl HC Waxless Skis
Salomon SR 301 Boots
SNS System Bindings
Swix Fibreglass Poles
Reg. $178.00
This is the lowest price ever on this outfit! $119.95
• 20% to 40% off all cold weather clothing
• Last years ski leftovers ½ price
• All used boots $10.00
• Specials on Childrens' Outfits
• Childrens Free Boot Exchange
FREE — Refreshments
FREE — Get a pair of Paloton Ski Straps just for stopping by
FREE — Mounting and Base Prep on all XC Outfits
FREE — Wax Kit with every Waxable Ski Outfit
FREE — 5 days worth of trail passes for Touring Centers Savings of over $20.00
Peloton Sports
the cross-country ski experts
Sale from Wed., Nov. 20 - Sun. Nov. 24
►Thurs. & Fri. open until Midnight◄
1 E. PLEASANT ST. — AMHERST — 549-6904
trak LIFA SWIX SPORT
kneissl SALOMON

John Dellaria
presents a
"CUT-A-THON" with ALL proceeds going to the EveryWoman's Center
Haircuts will be $8.00
at Wilder Hall (behind Morrill Science Center)
Sun. November 24th
Time: 11 am - 3 pm
FREE Dellaria products will be given out!!

ARTS

Pearl Street
If you thought we're only playing big arenas you were almost right. . .
RUN DMC
But they're playing THE big night club
Weds. Dec. 4th
this is not a mirage
10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

Estevez film falls short

That Was Then, This Is Now
Starring Emelio Estevez and Craig Sheffer
Directed by Christoper Cain
Hampshire Mall

By THOMAS HARRINGTON
Collegian Staff

Sometimes, especially in the fall when lots of Oscar hopefuls come out, you can run into a film that yearns to be a drama, but fails and becomes nothing much at all.

Sadly enough. That Was Then, This Is Now is just such a film because it fails to explore the conflict that is the subject of its story.

The screenplay, written by star Emelio Estevez, is based upon the S. E. Hinton novel of the same name. It tells the story of two suburban toughs whose lifelong friendship starts to fall apart when a new romance starts making one (Craig Sheffer) grow up, while the other (Estevez) resists change.

One of the chief problems is that Estevez's script outlines the breakdown of the boy's friendship without every really establishing it. Most of the time, they seem more like casual acquaintances than blood brothers. Another important element is their relationship with Sheffer's mother, which is woefully underdeveloped. Estevez is an orphan and grows up in the Sheffer household. The household scenes are nothing more than comic relief.

Dirctor Christopher Cain does manage to avoid moralizing the character's plights, but that doesn't stop him from throwing plenty of cliches' at them. His punks all look like they just walked out of a zombie movie set, and the romantic interest follows one of the approximately five patterns used in teen movies. Sheffer's old girlfriend has black hair, wears red shirts and tight jeans, and drinks while his new girlfriend (Kim Delaney) has light brown hair, wears white dresses, and has a perfect complexion.

Estevez does a good job essaying the part of the nonreforming delinquent, but he never really gets to the core of his character, perhaps because the script's explanations for his motivation are never really satisfactory. It's possible he doesn't want his character's problems to be understood, but that doesn't make his situation any more involving for the audience. Still, when he's given something to do, his peformance is quite good.

Craig Sheffer's performance takes up a lot more screen time than Estevez's, but it's far less interesting. He's supposed to be the punk who's growing up, but he never comes off as anything but a nice kid.

The film is by no means unwatchable though. Many of the episodes are engaging, especially the more lighthearted ones. There are no really bad performances, and some very good ones, most notably Morgan Freeman as a barternder who befriends the boys against his better judgement.

In the end, what turned me against this movie was its tendency to dilute its message everytime it got serious. The big change it's supposedly about never really seems to come.

Luncheons at the TIME OUT
Spaghetti Specials Daily
Best Pasta in town
37 N. Pleasant St.

JUSTIN RYAN'S
50 cent drinks WED....
the Blitz Continues
with PARTY NITE
FIFTY CENT DRINKS!
BACK to BASICS with the best party music!! More Romantics, Madonna, Springsteen, Prince, Billy Idol, Chaka Khan - Guaranteed!!!!!
Watch for our "Theme Parties" coming soon!!!!
NO COVER

Dayton Tires
SNOW TIRES
POLYESTER SNOW TIRES White Walls
Size | Price
A78-13 | 36.00
E78-14 | 46.00
G78-15 | 49.00
RADIAL SNOW TIRES White Walls
Size | Price
P155/80 R13 | 47.00
P185/80 R13 | 55.00
P195/75 R14 | 58.00
ALL SEASON RADIALS White Walls
Size | Price
P155/80 R13 | 47.00
P185/80 R13 | 55.00
P195/75 R14 | 58.00
CREDIT 90 DAYS TO PAY No Interest credit established in minutes
SAVE 10% Additional Off with purchase of a set of 4 tires
MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
Michelin Tires Also Specially Priced
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704

AMHERST CINEMA
Wednesday - Saturday
The Big Sleep 7:00
To Have & Have 9:00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

amc THEATRES ANNOUNCE THE EXPANSION OF
amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 4 TO amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 6
TO SERVE THE PUBLIC BETTER WITH
• STATE OF THE ART PROJECTION • DISCOUNT TWILITE & MATINEES
• DOLBY STEREO SOUND • ERGONOMIC SEATS
Grand Opening FRIDAY NOVEMBER 22nd
Back to the Future | Jagged Edge | That was Then This is Now
After Hours | Santa Claus the movie 11/27 | Rocky IV 11/27
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL 584-7550

CLASSICAL JAZZ REGGAE BLUES ROCK SOUL FOLK JAZZ ROCK SOUL CLASSICAL
#1 IN THE VALLEY!
DYNAMITE RECORDS
Maxell XLII90 $2.00
TDK SA90 — $2.00
New, Used, Buy, Sell and Trade
584-1580
THORNES
150 MAIN ST. NORTHAMPTON

THE FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
TONIGHT!
"The Best of America" —TIME Magazine
Gregg Smith Singers
Wednesday November 20 8 pm
Tickets $15 $12

Governors Program Council presents:

The Razz-Bang Dance Bonanza

Sick of the Bars or Don't have an ID?

Last Chance for Fun before Thanksgiving at the Bluewall, Nov. 23

9 pm to 1 am

$2.00 Admission with D.J. Peter Gold

THE UMASS MUSIC THEATRE GUILD

DRACULA THE MUSICAL!

Dec. 6 and 7; 12, 13, 14

8 p.m. Bartlett Auditorium

TICKETS ON SALE TODAY at all Datatix Outlets

$3.00 General Public $2.00 Students

A UMass Music Theater Guild Production

Bruno's

PIZZA SUBS

SPECIAL

1 FREE SODA with any Small Pizza
2 FREE SODAS with any Medium Pizza
3 FREE SODAS with any Large Pizza

Choose From Polar Cola, Diet Polar Cola And Other Polar Sodas Including Orange, Grape, Root Beer, Strawberry, Ginger Ale and Cream Soda.

Five Cents Deposit Required On All Cans

ALSO AVAILABLE WORLD CLASS SUBS FREE DELIVERY!

EXPIRES DECEMBER 21, 1985

4:00pm to 2:00am
363 MAIN STREET, AMHERST
256-0222

Pearl Street

MILLER ROCK SERIES presents

THIS THURSDAY NOV 21st!

is your chance to see

"The Incomparable Musician"
'The Genius'
The Legend
RAY CHARLES

also The Raelettes
and THE RAY CHARLES ORCHESTRA
Two Big Shows at 6:30 and 9:30
Tix in advance $12.50 and $15.50
Tickets available at Datatix Outlets
on campus at the Fine Arts Center Box Office
off campus at Stop and Shop and Main St Rec's Northampton

10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

IBM

IBM Portable PC

$1075.00*

DEMONSTRATION and SALE

Nov. 18 through Nov. 21

Display located in Campus Center Concourse

Certified check or money order required at time of order
This special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.

* Certain restrictions apply see store for details

Sale Hours 10-4
Located in The Campus Center
545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

GORDY

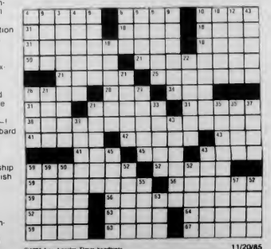
By Gorde

WEATHER

Today: A mix of clouds and sun, breezy and mild with a chance of afternoon showers, highs in the 60s.
Tomorrow: Sunny and cloudy with highs in the 40s to mid 50s.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Tale
6 Show surprise
10 Dreary
14 Steve or Woody
15 Reverberate
16 Carry on
17 Triple Crown winner 1943
19 Location
20 Be unsteady
21 Agers
23 Kentucky college town
25 Most sympathetic
26 Duplicate
28 Deer family member
30 Ms. people
31 Punt propellant
32 In accord
34 Blushed
38 Surreptitiously
41 Inventor Nikola
42 Fatigued
43 "Exodus" hero
44 Sash, for Yum Yum
46 Chess champion Mikhail
47 LQ connection
48 Afternoon's chaser
52 Lukewarm
54 Musically expressible
56 Branching
59 Wading bird
60 Cut the price again
62 Thanks —!
63 Black, to a bard
64 Lauder
65 Ivy League school
66 Attic township
67 Levels, British style

DOWN
1 Truth
2 Cosmetic ingredient
3 Symbols of happiness
4 Spare
5 Stage direction
6 Solidify
7 Maple genus
8 Arab chieftain
9 Deep-dish main course
10 Enos to Adam
11 Street show
12 Affirms
13 Dough raiser
18 Least restrained
22 Football play
24 Hilo greeting
26 Track habitue
27 Ebb
29 Showed reverence
32 Saudi —
33 Brilliancy
35 Rare birds
36 Architect Saarinen
37 Flat tire
39 Stretch
40 Persian Gulf sights
45 Genetic
47 Light yellow
48 Try
49 Stringed instrument
50 Sign up
51 Cultivated land, old style
53 Gaited horse
55 Biblical kingdom
57 Dagger
58 Dijon seasons
61 Chemical ending

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

M	O	T	E		S	H	O	A	T		S	A	P
E	R	O	S		P	E	A	S	E		D	A	C	E
S	A	N	D	U	E	N	T	I	N		E	I	R	E
A	N	Y		P	A	N	S		D	O	N	N	E	R
			O	P	R	Y		M	E	R	I	T
C	A	S	T	E	S		C	A	R	E	S	S	E	D
O	N	A	I	R		P	R	I	L	L		A	L	I
D	E	N	S		C	R	A	Z	Y		B	E	A	N
A	N	T		S	L	A	V	E		M	A	N	T	A
S	T	A	M	P	E	D	E		L	E	S	S	E	R
		M	A	C	A	O		S	E	A	T
A	B	A	D	A	N		S	P	A	N		I	M	P
B	E	R	G		S	A	N	A	N	T	O	N	I	O
B	R	I	E		E	D	U	C	E		A	R	L	O
E	T	A			R	O	G	E	R		F	E	E	L

11/20/85

Attention Staff

Today there is a sexism workshop for all staff and correspondents at 7 p.m. in Room 801 CC. Please make the effort to attend. This should be a good workshop!

Today's Menu

LUNCH
Roast Beef Grinder
Chicken Burrito

BASICS LUNCH
Garden Sandwich
Chicken Burrito

BASICS DINNER
BREAD BUFFET
Eggplant Parmigiana
Baked Cod/Newburg Sauce

DINNER
BREAD BUFFET
Veal Parmesan
Baked Cod/Newburg Sauce
Ham and Turkey Plate

Stretch Your Skiing Dollar With Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express Package

Transportation and Lift Ticket from $25.00
December 3, 1985 through March 16, 1986

Stratton

Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season... a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.

Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.

Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.

Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...

Contact: The People Professionals

Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

America Needs A Hero For Every Age.

From the Revolutionary War, to the War in Viet Nam, in natural crises and natural disasters, the National Guard has always been ready when America called.

Today is no different. The Guard still needs the kind of people who know peace and freedom don't come cheap. Who are willing to stand up and be counted when the chips are down.

If you're one of them—and you've got two days a month and two weeks a year to invest in something important—we've got a job, a paycheck, and some pretty attractive benefits waiting for you.

Talk to your local Army Guard recruiter today.

Because "here" doesn't have to be just a word. It can be the face you see when you look in the mirror.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 586-4110

100%

FREE TUITION

Funded College or University

To any Massachusetts

MASSACHUSETTS ARMY National Guard

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY

SKI & PARTY WEEK

JAN. 19-24

TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING
SUN - FRI
HOTEL OR CONDO

ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES. FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK. ECT. ECT.

HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199

FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP.
Sign-up before Nov. 19th and get a free T-shirt.

LAGNAF 86

Vermont Drinking Age is 18 yrs.
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

I'M CRAZY, about J.B.'s.

HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

JBs

253-7018

Do you pretend to be this individual on a regular basis?

If you do, come in TONIGHT (Weds 11/20) and receive a complimentary Reg. Beef Reg. Fries and Small Coke!!

11 am - 2 am 7 days
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

ENERGY CONSERVATION OPPORTUNITIES

Don't miss this chance to become a part of one of the nation's fastest-growing leaders in the energy conservation field! DMC Energy currently has immediate part-time temporary openings for energetic individuals to install conservation measures in homes in Hampden, Franklin, and Hampshire Counties. We will provide training, but background in conservation or construction preferred. Professional attitude, excellent public relations skills, and a commitment to energy conservation a must. Car and valid driver's license required. No sales involved.

For more information, or to arrange for an interview, contact Ms. Temple at 1-800-332-2754 as soon as possible.

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

Grand Opening
SPORTSWEAR
FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA

WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99

All
N.F.L. Football
MLRB Baseball
50-75% OFF

Sign up for Collegian
Subscriptions
TODAY
in the Campus Center
send your parents
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

CHANCELLOR'S LECTURE SERIES
1985 • 1986

VIRGINIA A. BEAL
Department of Food Science and Nutrition
THE CHALLENGE OF NUTRITION

Why is the public bombarded by conflicting nutrition information? Why cannot nutritional scientists agree about dietary recommendations? Does food intake in childhood affect adult health and longevity? Does a fat child become a fat adult? How much do we really know about human nutrition?

NOVEMBER 21, 1985 • 8 PM • MEMORIAL HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Free and open to all • Refreshments to follow lecture

TIPS ON PRE-REGISTRATION

Beginning on Monday, November 18th, the counseling period and pre-registration begins. Complete pre-registration forms are due at the Registrars office in 213 Whitmore on Wednesday, November 27th.

For information to help make the process a smooth one for you, call:

TAPED INFORMATION PHONE SERVICE
545-1540

Ask for tapes by number

1020 Changing Your Major
1009 Credit Load
1409 Finding or Changing Your Academic Advisor
2031 Graduation Requirements
1032 The Pass/Fail Option

For a complete listing of information tapes come by our office in 227 Whitmore.

TIDBITS
IDB 545-1865
TIPS 545-1540

A service of the Dean of Students Office

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco
imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes
imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst
Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

SAVINGS OF 50%
in our Historic Stone Mill
WARE SPORTSWEAR FACTORY STORE
Women's Cashmere and All Wool Coats
Introducing: Coats, Pea Coats and Rainwear by Evan Picone

Petite - Regular and Half Sizes

WARE SHOE OUTLET
All Leather Shoes -
Nickels, Jazz and Paloma

Merchandise sold only
in fine stores and better catalogs

INDUSTRIES YARD
Ware, Massachusetts (20 minutes from UMass on Route 9)
Hours: Weekday - 9-4:30; Saturdays - 9-1

Football notebook

Platek and Palazzi are YC players-of-the-week

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

Senior co-captain Paul Platek and freshman quarterback Dave Palazzi each received another honor this week, being named players of the week by the Yankee Conference.

Platek, a strong safety, was named defensive player-of-the-week for his efforts in Saturday's 21-17 victory at New Hampshire. Platek intercepted a pass on his own eight to snuff a last-minute Wildcat drive. He also had 10 tackles, eight unassisted. He led UMass with four interceptions this season.

Palazzi was named rookie-of-the-week for the fourth time this season for his 196 yards of passing (12-od-25), 75 yards of rushing and one touchdown against UNH.

Palazzi was also named the conference's rookie-of-the-year on Sunday. Both he and Platek also made second team all-conference.

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: UMass has won three straight on the road, following an 11-game losing streak. . .freshman kicker Silvio Bonvini was 19-of-19 in point after attempts. . .Over their last eight games, the Minutemen did not allow a point in the first quarter. . .the Minutemen averaged 176 yards a game on the ground. . .Palazzi might've had better numbers against UNH, but was hurt by three dropped passes. . .next game-September 6, 1986 at James Madison.

★ Belkin

continued from page 12

years and was a two-time Globe All-Scholastic all-star, the game od soccer consists of playing two ways.

SOCCER NOTES: UMass second goal Sunday against Boston College in the quarterfinals, was originally credited to the team, but replays showed that a BC player kicked the ball off of UM forward Cathy Cassady into the net. Cassady gets the goal, and Jamie Watson the assist. . .the Minutewomen leave Thursday night for Fairfax Va. and the Final Four. . .there is no third place consolation game this season at the finals.

HEY SPORTS FAN !!
DID YOU MISS THE BASKETBALL ENTRY DATE?
IT NOT TOO LATE, BRING YOUR TEAM ROSTER TO THE INTRAMURAL OFFICE, AS SOON AS POSSIBLE

INTRAMURAL OFFICE
215 BOYDEN

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Meeting to be held for UMass Parisi Study Program third floor lounge Herter Thursday 21 Nov all interested students invited

Dr Singleton will discuss Environmental Quality in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union Thursday Nov 21 4:40 room 227 Herter Hall

All new Alive with Dance RSO will hold it's second meeting Wed Nov 20th at 6:30 pm in CC811 all majors welcome!!!

Distinguished Visitors Program meeting tonight Wed. Nov. 20 at 6:30 pm in CC 163

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Rabit, 76, good condition, new tires, $800 or BO 549-6690 night

1977 Chevy Malibu Classic air, fog lights, nice condition, dependable $1400 or BO call 665-3921

Pontiac GTO 1968 strong. New parts. $1100 BO 546-6417

1976 Ford Pinto good condition $900 584-5742

77 Honda Accord 5 speed must sell to pay bills call Scott 253-9015

74 VW Bug strong eng. exc. frame and int. good body $850 549-7778

1976 "Sunbug" stereo by Sony, solid body, runs great $1400 584-5205

1976 Ford Maverick, 60,000 miles, auto, power steering, 4 door, runs fine. BO over $700. 549-1902

1974 Audi 100LS black exterior/red interior. Front wheel drive. Very little rust. Engine good condition also. $1200 549-7194 Sarah

76 Chevy Malibu good condition $650.00 call 549-3591

VW Superbeetle 1971 rebuilt engine very reliable great trip. AM/FM $850 (best offer) 586-5475 or 253-4253

1970 Chevy Malibu excellent running condition good body AM FM cassette deck $500 call Linda evenings after 6 549-6313

1975 Audi Fox rebuilt engine lots of new parts must sell $600. 323-7454

BETSY DUGGAN

Exam on your Birthday oh well the weekend will be here soon Happy 21st Peter and Joanne

CUSP RAFFLE WINNERS

Congratulations to the winners of the Undergraduate Psychology Club raffle! First place winner: Dodie Levenson receives the brunch for two at Plumblegs. Second place winner: Maria Lantzakis receives the hot tub for two donated by Utopia Spas (thanks Utopia) and third place winner Scott Stephens gets the bottle of champagne. Thanks to everyone who participated!

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Diac Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals 549-7144

THE BREAKFAST CLUB
Fri Nov 22 at 5, 7, 9, 11
Engineering East Aud
$1.50 at 5, 7 . . $2.00 at 9, 11

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline. 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Sunderland 1 bdrm apt 400/month inclusive, on bus line, avail immediately 253-9043

1 or 2 females to share apt call eves 549-4483

1 bedroom Cliffside apt. 375/month, includes everything avail Jan 1 call 665-8455

Large modern loft-style apartment in Northampton Cneter AC, sundeck, heat included available Jan 1 call 586-4460

Amherst Brandywine 2 bdrm apt busline $80/month available 1-1-86 549-1119

FOR SALE

13' all wood Penyan boat with 25 horse engine, trailer & more call 549-1032 (Mark)

Water Bed $250.00 call 549-0194

Fender Super-Six Amp. Twin heads. Six tens. Also G & L Cavtler. Excellent guitar black. Just got set up and intonated. Designed by Leo Fender himself. 700 new last year. Right now $400 549-0385

Technics SL5 Linear Tracking Turntable w/cartridge, direct drive, fully automatic $100 or BO call between 4 pm 12 pm 546-5086

Brand new 12" B & W TV only $70!! Brand new port. Sharp typewriter. 2 pg. memory only $170!! Don't forget that Christmas is coming!! Call 6-4475 for more details.

Celebrate the Holidays
by sending a Turkey Gram
on sale in the Concourse
11/19-22

Apple Personal Computer monitor, disk drive and computer. Great to link up with the Cyber or just to play around! A 2200 dollar value for yours for the low, low price of $700 call Tim at 546-9592

Skis - K2s - 160s good condition boots Caber size - women's - 8 call 545-0162 ask for Hope

Electric Guitar: Music Man with active electronics and Kahler (remolo ex- cond asking $325 call Bruce 6-9563

Yabadabadoo UMass "Bed Rock" cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

FOUND

Ring found Orchard Hill Courts 2 wks ago 546-4739

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Part-time temporary positions available for the Annual Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Program. Starting date: November 22 until December 24. For more information call 586-5243

Accountant: The Economic Development Office is hiring for Spring semester. Sophomores and Juniors needed to work with student controlled businesses, approx 10 hrs/wk. Applications available at 409 SUB. Deadline is noon 11/27

Marketing Interns needed for Hampshire Mail Management Office must be energetic and reliable with excellent communication skills. Apply Office of Internships 545-0725

The Commuter Area Government has one work study position for an office assistant. Interested people should have good organizational skills, typing skills, and 10-15 hrs a week free. Undergrads only should apply to 404 SUB before November 26th. EOE/AA employer

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

LOST

Gold bangle bracelet somewhere around CC on Thurs 17 reward if returned please! Has much sentimental value please contact Beth at 256-1758

Lost two small notebooks on campus Fri. evening, Nov 8 (possibly in Unum) please contact me in Grad Writing Office 5-0979

In the "Pub" parking lot Saturday night a set of tools in a silver tool box. Please return them they're not mine. Call Eric at 546-7888

Blue LeSportSac wallet with great sentimental value. If returned, no questions asked. Reward Call 546-8380 or 546-8390

MAGGIE

Doug--Happy two! Thanks so much for the greatest weekend! Don't forget - I slept you! All my love--Hopeless

MOTORCYCLES

1983 Honda V45 Saber low miles ex. condition Shoei helmet also $2900 545-4612 after 8 pm ask for Sean

MOVER

Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

MR. DUBOIS

Yes, Todd, you! Hey gorgeous. I love you lots and I want to kidnap you and take you to South Carolina if only my awesome car would work but since it defected to the land of Putney, you will have to settle for a simple . . "HAPPY ANNIVERSARY!" Love, Your N.P. Woman

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM

Counselor applications available for summer '86, 101 Berkshire House

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Where else can you get good tunes, great food, and the best coffee. . .The People's Market of course! Around the corner from the Post Office.

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Ski and Party at Sugarbush. See Ski Club Sale S.U.B. Wed Sat Hotel $149

Violent Femmes - I want a ticket badly. Will pay at least 2x ticket price. Helga 253-2004

Attention Musicians: Experienced drummer seeking to form a funk/jazz fusion group. Are you interested? If so, call Scott at 546-5149

 Attention Skiers  Sell your used equipment at the 15th Annual Ski Snatch. Bring equipment to SUB Wed Nov 20 12-5 pm

LAGNAF
nudge, nudge
wink, wink
Know what I mean?!

Music Theatre Guild organizational meeting for anyone interested in working on Spring Production Bartlett Auditorium 6:30-7:30 Nov 21

It's in a box.

KIRSTEN - Happy Birthday from your loving brothers Erik and Eliot

Dear Santa, The ONLY thing I want in the whole wide world is a doll with a lousy profile I promise to hug it and kiss it and hold it tight

Dear Boo sometimes we um . . then sometimes we um . . but you know I always love you. Have the best birthday. You deserve it. Love Phil

Karen of KKG: Thanks for everything. I couldn't have asked for a better friend. Get psyched for our roadtrip to West Point this weekend. Love, Susan

Jeff - We're warning you. We recognize your face. Walk past our pond at your own risk! The Swans

Susan O. Malcolm - See what happens when you hold onto your umbrella. The Saute Chef

Need 100 overweight people to try our new weight loss product call 546-9632

Happy Birthday Betsy! I love you!! from Jason

Sue, Happy Birthday 72 old geezer! Thanks for the towel supply and thanks for just being my sis. I love you. David

Help I need Femmes tix please call 1-772-6469

Goobers - Happy Birthday Sue's tonight! Love Lupster

Hi Debbie - Norm

Happy 18th to my whimsical roommate - your the best. Love ya Kojak

S.E.M. Remember the good times we had! Happy Birthday Love Ed

Kirsten Nettleson - Happy Birthday! We both really do love you, believe it or not! Love Erik and Eliot

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To North Carolina for Thanksgiving or anywhere south of Washington for Thanksgiving can leave anytime will help with gas Eric 546-4630

To (from) Seattle Washington for Christmas break - share driving and expenses call PeterGeo at 586-4401

Ride needed to Rochester or Syracuse for Thanksgiving weekend. Will pay $. Please call Jay - 546-6056

To Long Island this Friday or Thursday call Rich 549-4726

ROOM WANTED

Female looking for housing or sublet for Jan 1 thru May 86 call Lisa 256-1301

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6895 evenings

Wanted: Easy going, studious female to share clean, quiet, furnished, one bedroom Puffton apt. Spring semester 549-1313

Looking for female to share 1 bedroom apt. in Cliffside Apts beginning Jan 1 187/mo inclusive! Call Christine 665-7729

Roommate wanted to look for an apartment with two nonsmoking females interested in North Amherst or Sunderland Call 6 5568 or 6 4769 must be female!!!

1 bdrm in 3 bdrm apt $200/mo on Rt 9 next to bus stop 586-4969

Female to share room in Brittany Manor apt. Nonsmoker. Feb to June call 253-3766 after 5:00

Wanted - person to share furnished house in N. Amherst musician/student, near bus, heat provided, $260.00/month only til May 256-6432 Sandy

One bedroom in beautiful two bedroom fully furnished Southwood apt 1 or 2 p. call 253-9417 anytime

Brandywine apt. looking for someone to rent my room for Spring semester. Rent is $290 per month. Heat is included in price. Possibility that entire apt will be available. Couples welcome. Call 549-6269

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7852

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort, ANYTIME

Workshop Offered: Rape Myths and Prevention, 7-9 pm Wednesday McNamara's Main Lounge

TO SUBLET

2 rooms available in 4 bedroom apt in Swiss Village. On busline. $215 inc for info call 256-1061

Furnished room in house on Main St on bus route for Intersession only 170* definitely negotiable call Allison 253-5893

TRAVEL

TAKE A BREAK ON THE FRENCH SIDE! Skibreak's January Trip to Tignes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT airfare (Swissair), transfers, accommodations, skipass (116 lifts), slalom races, cocktails for $740/7 nights in resort. Skibreak (203) 354-6069, Ted 546-4733

TYPING SERVICE

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED TO RENT

Two girls looking for an apartment in North Amherst for spring call 549-6149

To take over 2 bdrm apartment lease in January. Call 546-5537 or 546-5257

Two females looking for one bedroom apartment in Puffton or Brandywine call 549-5188 ask for Amy or Brenda

WORD PROCESSING EDITOR

Must have Apple 2E, matrix printer Wordstar facility 256-0528 7-9 am/5-11 pm

SPORTS

Women's basketball preview

Veteran UM team ready for new season

JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

Following two consecutive losing seasons playing under head coach Barbara Stevens, the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team expects to bring their coach her first winning season since taking over the program two years ago.

For the first time, Stevens has the luxury of a UMass team led by a crop of seniors who have the ability to bring leadership to younger players. In her two years at UMass, Stevens' teams have gone 10-19 and 13-15, but in the two seasons, the Minutewomen have been inexperienced and lacked senior leadership for inspiration.

"The biggest effect of the seniors on this team is their leadership, encouragement and direction. It's much more evident this year," Stevens said. "They're using their knowledge to their advantage, they know what they want as a group and that's created more team unity."

"This year we're very ready for it to finally be our year," senior captain Jerrie Bernier said. "I think we started with a nucleus last year and it takes time to come together as a unit. Each year there's improvement, but it's time, its our turn."

Last year, with the Curry Hicks Cage undergoing extensive renovations, the Minutewomen were forced to play their home games at either Amherst College or at the Springfield Civic Center. What resulted was a 28-game road schedule and one during which the Minutewomen rarely had fan support.

"This year teams will have to come in and beat us on our home court, not Amherst College, which belonged to no one," Stevens said.

But the Minutewomen are finally back in the friendly confines of the Cage, something which both coaches and players agree is an instant offensive boost to UMass basketball.

Last year's team also lacked confidence and consistency. This year however, there's a new winning spirit.

"These women are super," Bernier said. "Every person can play. This year we've got so much depth that we can sub in without losing anything."

Stevens said that last year players who sat on the bench were jealous of those who played and that by not playing they got themselves so depressed that they weren't ready to play when they were called upon.

"My players are more respectful of each other this year. When I need to call on them I know they will be ready," Stevens said.

The Minutewomen return ten players from last year's team including four of five starters, but with a few days still remaining before the season opener at the University of Maine, Saturday at Orono, Stevens said that there is still opportunity for any one of her players to gain starting status.

Leading the list of returnees is the senior two-year captain Bernier who averaged 6.3 points-per-game and 3.3 rebouns-per-game. Bernier, who saved her best performance last year in UMass' season finale against Duquesne with 23 points, is the team leader that the Minutewomen look to for encouragement. A four-year starter, Bernier ranks seventh on the UMass all-time rebounding list with 357 rebounds and ninth on the all-time scoring list with 557 points.

Other forwards include seniors Rebecca Kucks, Karen Damminger along with sophomore Tara Lewis and junior Kelly Collins. The 5-9 Kucks has played in every game since her arrival at UMass and sored 2.3 ppg last year.

The 5-11 Damminger is coming off an off season in which she scored but 3.8 ppg, down from her first two years when she averaged a combined 10.2 ppg.

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

Freshman point guard Christel Zullo provides speed and quickness to the UMass offense.

Sports Information photo

Senior guard Barbara Hebel is one of the University of Massachusetts' main scoring threats this season.

Lewis, at 5-9, averaged 7.0 ppg and 5.5 rpg and is known as a great leaper and an explosive scorer. After a productive freshman year, Lewis will be looked towards for scoring and an aggressive inside game.

Collins, 6-1, also had an off season last year bothered by an injury to her achilles tendon which forced her to redshirt her sophomore year.

At center, the Minutewomen are looking primarily at 6-1 sophomore Sue Burtoft who led UMass in rebounds (6.7 rpg) last year despite starting in just ten games. Burtoft is the inside force that is expected to crash the boards and help shut down opponents' inside game. With the addition of 6-0 freshman Beth Wilbor, Burtoft is expected to receive needed help inside to battle taller opposition.

Another freshman, 5-4 Christel Zullo, is expected to have a big impact on the team providing the team with speed and ballhandling more attuned to the running game that UMass favored for much of last season.

"Christel gives us a different look in terms of a running game. She'll probably start," Stevens said.

Zullo will have to battle juniors Mary Marquedant and JoAnn Dupuis in order to start however. Marquedant, 5-8, was the team's point guard last year, dishing out 52 assists.

At off-guard will be senior Barbara Hebel, another four-year starter. Hebel is third on the UMass all-time scoring list with 1,133 career points and is expected to excel, along with senior guard Juanita Matthews who is possibly the team's best all-around athlete.

Debbie Belkin: a complete player

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The statistics for University of Massachusetts women's soccer sophomore fullback Debbie Belkin don't sound like the stats for a defensive player. Through 16 games this year Belkin has seven goals, five assists for 19 points, the most ever scored by a UMass fullback in a single season.

Belkin has scored the same amount of points as George Mason University All-American foward Pam Baughman, the Patriots third leading scorer. UMass faces third-ranked George Mason Saturday at noon in the NCAA semifinals.

Belkin was also the leading fullback scorer (2-7-11) last year, too.

But on the No. 1 Minutewomen squad, Belkin is known for her defense. "They (opponents) try not to attack us on that side (left). The other side of our defense isn't too shabby, either," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said with a grin.

"I feel confident with her behind me," midfielder Carolyn Micheel said. "She has speed and strength. She's very unstoppable."

Belkin, who was a left wing at Needham High, sees a dual role for herself on the 16-0 Minutewomen.

"My role is to make my runs up," Belkin said. "Banda keeps me and Birdie (senior fullback Sue Bird) to make the runs up the field. My job is to be an offensive fullback."

Banda doesn't like single position players. He recruits players who can play both offense and defense. "You have to attack and defend with 11 players," he said.

"She is always a threat from the back," Micheel said. "She can weave through an entire team." Against Harvard, Belkin passed the ball to attacking midfielder Kristen Bowsher, who then passed the ball to Belkin on the fly. Belkin fired the ball in for the goal.

"Everyone has both roles (offensive and defensive)on the team," Belkin, a sports management major, said. "Not many people are used to it.

Belkin, who was the last cut for last summer's National Sports Festival, is tied for the team lead with three game-winning goals with freshman Beth Roundtree (10-4-24).

"She's very competitive," Banda said. "She has enough strength and speed to make those runs up and still get back and recover on defense."

And for Belkin, who made the National Youth Team in 1983, along with Bowsher and former teammate Jolie DePauw, made the Region I select team the past three

continued on page 11

Follow the Final 4 in the Collegian

The No. 1 University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, 16-0-0 this season, has an excellent chance at the NCAA national championship this coming weekend, in Fairfax, Va.

The Collegian, the only newspaper to have covered all of UMass' games this season, will be represented at the Final Four starting Thursday night. Gerry deSimas, a three-year veteran of soccer coverage, writer for Soccer America magazine and a correspondent for the Boston Globe will file a complete preview for Friday's paper and cover the tournament.

For the best soccer coverage in the area, there's only one real choice, the Collegian, your source for sports.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 54 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Thursday, November 21, 1985

Summit raises hope for agreement

Local experts attempt analysis

By ROB SKELTON
Collegian Staff

A panel of local experts who met last night to discuss the Geneva meeting had little to go on, an audience of about 90 realized at a post-summit "instant analysis" at Smith College.

The discussion, titled "How did it go?" featured professors from the University of Massachusetts, Smith, Amherst College, and Cornell University; and was sponsored by the Five-College program of Peace and World Security Studies.

"There is little of substance to analyze," — UMass political science professor James Der Derian.

The panelists spoke briefly in turn and invited the audience to field questions and discussion. The news blackout and the nature of such superpower meetings didn't afford much new talk on the subject of arms control.

"There is little of substance to analyse," said UMass political science professor James Der Derian.

Smith College world studies Professor Ann Phillips, disputing Donald Regan's contention that "women aren't interested in the basics of arms control)," received an ovation from the predominantly female crowd.

The Reagan administration's apathy toward any type of arms control and the lack of a suitable framework for arms negotiation were common topics mentioned by the panelists.

Professor Richard Ned Lebow from Cornell, whose scholarly work for the State Department ended shortly after Reagan took office, described the mentality of the current administration.

"Our written and videotaped briefings were disregarded by even the most junior aides there," Lebow said. "I am pessimistic because they have no ideas on how to establish prior groundwork that can lead to negotiation," he said.

The careful lowering of expectations and Gorbachev's reputation as a reformer in Soviet terms are good signs, according to Amherst College Professor William Taubman. "Each will save the most important concessions until the last moment," Taubman said.

As for the outcome, "Both sides have to come home with something," Lebow said. "That takes the heat off them for the moment."

AP Laserphoto

President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev shake hands at the start of the second day of summit talks in Geneva yesterday.

Joint ceremony planned after second day

GENEVA — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev found "broad areas of agreement" during two days of extraordinarily personal summitt talks and, after receiving a report last night from advisers on unresolved issues, scheduled a joint ceremony for today.

"The news is so good that we're going to hold it for tomorrow," Reagan teased reporters. Gorbachev said only, "I hope there will be," when asked if any joint agreements would be signed today.

The president's chief adviser on arms control, Paul Nitze, was among those who worked int the evening yesterday to finalize summit findings — an indication that the summit's most contentious issue remained unresolved as the leaders adjourned for dinner.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, adhering to the news blackout even after formal talks has concluded, declined late last night to provide any details on the summit talks, promising a briefing following the ceremony set for 10 a.m. Geneva time 4 a.m. EST.

Speakes said neither Reagan nor Gorbachev would take questions at the ceremony. But he refused to say whether a joint statement or communique would be issued by the leaders or whether they would sign specific agreements.

Speakes was asked if observers would be able to clearly understand the value of the summit based on today's public remarks. He said they would.

The ceremony was Reagan's final announced event in

continued on page 3

AIDS victim speaks out

By BRION McALARNEY
Collegian Staff

A victim of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) spoke last night at Mahar Auditorium about public misconceptions about the disease and stressed the need for a national public policy.

Jim McIntyre, a 25 year old AIDS victim, spoke along with Dr. John Mazzullo, professor of Medicine at Tufts University, and Anne Marie Silvia, Health Education Coordinator for the Massachusetts AIDS Action Committee. The program was sponsored by University Health Services and the committee.

"The disease is really difficult to get," McIntyre said. "If I thought for a second that hugging or kissing my mother, or beating up on my little brother, that there was a remote possibility that they'd get it, I'd stay the hell away," he said.

"The government should say we'll make sure you won't get discriminated, won't lose jobs and houses," he said. "People who feel they have something are afraid to get tested."

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Anne Marie Silvia

AIDS is a disease that attacks the immune system and leaves individuals vulnerable to illnesses that a healthy immune system would combat. The high risk groups most vulnerable to the disease are sexually active homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

The transmission of the disease is through intimate sexual contact and direct contact with contaminated blood, usually by drug users who share the same needle, or blood

continued on page 3

SGA budget takeover draws opposition

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

The Student Activities Director Randy Donant has assumed more student budgetary responsibility, an action which is resulting in intense controversy because of opposition from the Undergraduate Student Senate.

The senate voted unanimously last night to call for the resignation of Donant in response to the action. (Related story, page 5.)

A memorandum issued by Donant and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson Tuesday outlined seven points of action concerning future Student Government Association budgets starting in fiscal year 1987. The actions give much more budgetary power to Donant, resulting in less student input of programs contained in the Student Activity Trust Fund. The fund is a resource for the SGA to provide services, activities, and advocacy to the student community.

The guidelines in part give Donant the responsibility to control funding of certain operations and organizations that were run by students and to oversee various accounts that were under student control. Donant said he assumes responsibility now with the issuing of the memo.

The SGA's fiscal crisis, Donant said, has led to these actions which he said are not political in any way. Concerning the seven points, Donant said "now we can begin to move forward together and begin to really respond to the needs of students on this campus."

Several senate leaders, including the budget chairman, treasurer, and speaker, to whom the memo was issued, said the actions are "a direct violation" of students' rights.

Dianne Rossi, SGA treasurer, citing the memo's guidelines asked "What respect does Randy Donant and Dennis Madson have for student input?" She said the memo's effect would be a backward step for the trust fund and for student control of it.

John Ruddock, senate speaker, question-

continued on page 5

Inside:

Women's cancer rate up.....3
Bill Spain on life in Turkey.....9
Basketball preview.....16

"What respect does Randy Donant and Dennis Madson have for student input?"
—Student Government Association Treasurer Diane Rossi

the Great American SMOKEOUT Fast For A World Harvest

ABSTENTION DAY: Today, Americans nationwide will try to quit smoking — or at least try to go 24 hours without — during the Great American Smokeout; hunger foes will refrain from eating and donate to Oxfam American during its Fast For A World Hunger. Stories with the local angle, page 3.

NATIONAL

Ohio state senator missing since July

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) -- A 23-year veteran of the state Senate has not been seen in public since July, and when she failed to show up for this week's legislative sessions some of her friends at the Ohio Statehouse got worried.

Sen. Marigene Valiquette "has been missing from the Senate, and I haven't seen her for months," said state Sen. Oliver Ocasek.

Even the Toledo Democrat's secretary, Shari Josephs, claims not to know Valiquette's whereabouts.

Josephs told The Blade of Toledo that she has no telephone number for the senator and does not know where she lives. Valiquette, 61, has no legislative aides.

"I really can't tell you anything," Josephs said yesterday. Asked if she thought Valiquette was all right, she said, "I don't know that, but I'm sure she is."

State Rep. Barney Quilter said Valiquette called him Sept. 19 to say she would miss an event in Toledo to which she had been invited.

AP Laserphoto

Ohio state Sen. Marigene Valiquette has been missing since last July.

Night Editor	John Yonce
Copy Editor	Nancy Stern
Layout Technician	Conor Plunkett
Photo Technician	Michele Segall
Production Supervisor	Conor Plunkett
Production	Kelly Sieger, Pam DiSalvo, Leslie "Crusty" Nakajima, Sandy Dias, Ken Levinson

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS permit #58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exams and vacations periods. Content is determined solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

the Hungry U
DRIVERS WANTED
Apply Within
Must Have Own Car

HAPPY 20th BIRTHDAY FELIX

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
Gas Saving Tune-up
4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95
Lube, Oil & Filter
$17.99
Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil and safety check
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd. No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wash-o-ba's Store
549-4704

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES
549-3840
228 Triangle St.
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

The great beers of the world go by one name: Löwenbräu. Brewed in Munich, in England, Sweden, Canada, Japan and here in America for a distinctive world class taste.

THIS WORLD CALLS FOR LÖWENBRÄU

© 1985 Miller Brewing Co. Milwaukee, WI

Smokeout aims to decrease puffing for good

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

Students may notice a decrease in the number of cigarettes sparking up today on campus and throughout the United States in celebration of the fifth annual Great American Smokeout.

The smokeout is sponsored by the American Cancer Society which hopes to encourage smokers to quit puffing during this 24 hour period but ideally, indefinitely.

"I'm going to try and quit for good," said Donna Diotte who once quit smoking for a year before starting again. Diotte, a first-year business major, will try to quit permanently along with millions of other Americans. Since 1978, the number of ex-smokers has increased from 31 to 35 million, according to the society.

"They (smokeouts) have been pretty effective in the past," said Cheryl Rollish, co-chairman of the Student Health Advisory Board. She said the board will give out information to those who want to quit smoking. "Our table will be in the campus center concourse from 9-4 today," Rollish said, adding that next Monday the board will sponsor a quit-smoking workshop.

Rollish said she thinks that the new laws which require designated smoking sections at work places, restaurants and motels are a good idea. "It is good for other people especially around eating places. You can get disgusted," Rollish said.

The demand for such areas has forced restaurants to make smoking boundries. This demand has spread into the hotel industry as well -- there are entire hotels where smoking is taboo and violators may be fined as much as $100 if caught in the act of smoking.

Complaints on campus have triggered passage of a reinforced smoking policy. Last week the Faculty Senate passed a proposal which tightens enforcement of existing smoking policies.

Despite the fact that there has been a decline in the number of smokers since 1978, almost 54 million Americans still smoke.

According to the society, support from family members and friends will help smokers abstain from lighting up. The society suggests that smokers do anything possible to keep from smoking. Stocking up on chewing gum and low-calorie munchies such as carrots and celery are a few options. Keeping busy is the main idea.

Rollish said that many smokers start because their parents set an example. "I think it has a lot to do with peer pressure. I would say most people probably start in high school," she said. The most common question she expects to receive is "Where can I go for help" or "How can I quit?" If the questions can't be answered, she said, she'll refer them to pamphlets.

If the encouragement of peers and family doesn't deter smokers, the statistics of smokers' susceptibility to lung cancer may make that impact.

Lung cancer, which is the single largest contributor to the cancer death rate, is the number one cause of death among men, according to the society. Meanwhile, the cancer death rate for women has increased 300 percent in the past 30 years

Fast feeds the hungry

Micheal Sophino will be going without his supper tonight.

Sophino will join an estimated 1 million sponsors of Oxfam America in donating the cost of his dinner to feed the hungry. Students may sign up today at lunch with cashiers at any dining commons to give up tonight's meal. The cost of the meal will be donated to Oxfam.

"It's a small sacrifice for me to make," said Sophino, a social thought and poltical economy major. "It's not much to ask of me but it has the potential of doing something great for someone else."

Off-campus students may donate to Oxfam America at tables in the Campus Center concourse and the Student Union.

The University of Massachusetts Hunger Task Force along with Oxfam America, are sponsoring this year's "Fast for a World Harvest."

This year marks the 12th year of Oxfam's campaign. Last year more than $1.5 million was raised. Oxfam is a nonprofit, international agency that funds self-help development projects and disaster relief in Africa and Asia.

--LESLEY CLARK

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

SUMMER DREAMIN'- Junior premed major Jay Zerner takes adavantage of yesterday's balmy weather to read a book atop the Campus Center yesterday. The weather the rest of the week is not expected to be quite as nice, with rain forecast for tomorrow.

Lung cancer increasing in women

By BETHANNE MOSKOV
Collegian Staff

For the first time in history, lung cancer has caught up with breast cancer as a leading cause of death among women, according to the American Cancer Society.

"The high figure is largely due to the increased number of female smokers, which is almost even with the number of male smokers", said Charles Dahle, who represents the society.

Collegian photo

Ashtrays as well as lungs should be alot cleaner if today's Great American Smokeout achieves its goal.

In the past, the number of female smokers has been considerably lower than the number of male smokers. However, Dahle said, since World War II more women have begun smoking, and because of time lag, the effects of smoking on women can now be seen through the increased levels of lung cancer.

"In 1985 an estimated 38,600 women will die of lung cancer, 75 percent of which will be caused by smoking." Dahle said, adding that this rate is quickly approaching the rate of 85 percent for males.

Cancer is not the only disease which can result from extensive smoking in women. They stand a high chance of developing bronchitis, emphysema, chronic sinusitis and peptic ulcers. Also women who smoke are at a high risk of having heart problems.

Pregnant women who smoke, Dahle said, have a higher rate of miscarriage, stillbirths, premature births, and complications of pregnancy.

"More of their (women who smoke) babies die soon after birth than the newborns of nonsmoking mothers", Dahle said.

In Hampshire County the rate of lung cancer in women is equal to the national rate of 15.3 per 100,000 women, he said.

"One of the main reasons for looking at these rates is because we want people to re-evaluate their smoking habits. There are already enough factors in society that have been deemed cancer causing smoking is one thing that can be eliminated." Dahle said.

★ AIDS continued from page 1

transfusions, Silvia said.

"No one really knows why the virus hit gay men first," Silvia said.

The risk from blood transfusions is very low as high risk donors have been told not to donate, she said.

Children have contracted the disease during the birth process, not through contact with other kids or family members, she said.

The symptoms of the disease include severe fatigue, loss of weight, persistent coughs, recurrent diarrhea, and skin rashes, Mazzullo said.

"The symptoms are absolutely scary because everyone has had them. In the beginning, they are similar to a head cold or flu," he said. Any symptoms lasting more than four weeks should be checked, he added.

McIntyre stressed that AIDS victims need public support.

AP Laserphoto

Two Moscow women read the front page of the Soviet paper Pravda yesterday. The paper's headline, reporting the first day of summit meetings Monday, reads "M.S. Gorbachev's meeting with R. Reagan."

★ summit continued from page 1

Geneva before leaving for Brussels to brief NATO leaders on the summit and then return to Washington to address a joint meeting of Congress that will be nationally televised.

Dinner was to have been a social affair, but like the formal negotiating sessions, the agenda did not hold. Speakes said the experts' final recommendations were relived by telephone at the dinner, and the leaders discussed them over coffee in the library of Reagan's mansion.

He added: "The president's frame of mind is very good. He will sleep well tonight."

A State Department negotiator, Raymond Benson, said the two sides had approved cultural exchange provisions that call for exchange of students, performing arts groups, exhibitions and sports teams, but it was not known whether a document would be signed before the delegations leave Geneva.

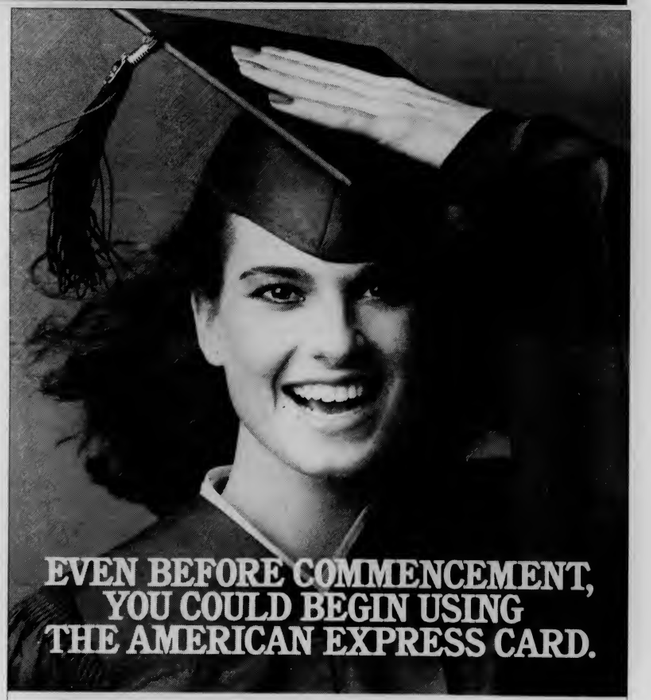
At a reception before dinner, Gorbachev confirmed he had been invited to visit the United States, but did not say whether he had accepted. Reagan, Gorbachav and voth their wives all have indicated that a visit by the Soviet leader to the United States within the next year or so has been discussed here, and there are indications that a reciprocal visit by Reagan to the Soviet Union the following year was likely.

Gorbachev also said "I hope there will be agreements to announce at the summit's end."

The Soviet leader was said to be headed for Prague after leaving Geneva to brief Warsaw Pact leade a.

In assessing the summit, Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin was more cautious than Speakes, emphasizing to reporters, "Believe me, in such limited space of time the enormous amount of difficult issues that have accumulated cannot possibly be solved."

He added, "Of course there are disagreements. This doesn't mean the sides are not trying to come to terms on joint problems."



Speakes said both sides agreed on the content of his "good progress" report that said, "There are broad areas of agreement and other areas on which further discussions must take place."

The Campus Shop
ON THE GREEN — SOUTH HADLEY
CLOTHES FOR CONTEMPORARY WOMEN

- Spectacular -
Sweater Event
SAVE 25-70%
Fabulous Groupings of
• Full-fashioned lambswool pull-overs (cowl and V-neck) • Bulky acrylic knits • Beaded mohair blends • Chenille prints • Stunning wool knits size (S-M-L) (orig 26.00 to 85.00)
Hurry! they wont last long at these prices
P.S. Don't forget the fabulous savings in "Shoe-Bert Alley"

TONIGHT - THURS, NOV. 22 at CHANGES
Dance Club
All Schnapps 99¢
Bar Drinks $1.25
Changes Cash
REVERSE COVER CHARGE
All Customers Arriving Before 10:30 Receive $1.00
Rt. 9 Amherst 256-8284

One test where only you know the score.
(Check One)
Yes No
Do you want to be the only one who knows when you use an early pregnancy test?
Would you prefer a test that's totally private to perform and totally private to read?
Would you like a test that's portable, so you can carry it with you and read it in private?
And how about a simple, one-step test with a dramatic color change that's easy to read and is 98% accurate?
e·p·t plus
Simple to perform
Easy-to-read color change
Fast, accurate results
1 PORTABLE TEST KIT
If you checked "Yes" to the above, EPT PLUS is for you. Use it, and only you will know your test score.

As soon as you get a job, you could get the American Express® Card.
If you're a senior, all you need is to accept a $10,000 career-oriented job. That's it. No strings. No gimmicks. (And even if you don't have a job right now, don't worry. This offer is still good up to 12 months after you graduate.) Why is American Express making it easier for you to get the Card right now?
Well, simply stated, we believe in your future. And as you go up the ladder, we can help in a lot of ways.
The Card can help you begin to establish your credit history. And, for business, the Card is invaluable for travel and restaurants. As well as shopping for yourself.
Of course, the American Express Card is recognized around the world. So you are too.
So call 1-800-THE-CARD and ask to have a Special Student Application sent to you. Or look for one on campus.
The American Express Card. Don't leave school without it.℠

For Less Than The Price of A Lift Ticket Alone...
Peter Pan's Stratton Mt. Express Package Combines Transportation and Skiing Fun From $25.00
Dec. 3, 1985 - March 16, 1986 Stratton
Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season...a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday...less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

★reactions

continued from page 1

ed the legality of the memo. "I defy Randy Donant and Dennis Madson to cite specific authority which allows them to carry out the gross violations which they propose."

The University board of trustees, Donant said, is the only group whose powers are specifically defined and that his power to issue the budgetary guidelines is less direct. However, he said he does have the right, and more importantly the responsibility to issue the guidelines.

The memo's guidelines, Donant said, "are in the best interest of the trust fund and the best thing to do. We're running out of time."

Even though Donant has said the guidelines are non-negotiable, most senators said they will not abide by them.

"I see the memo as an attempt by the administration to take the SATF away from the student body," said Jordan Rosner, chairman of the budget committee. "Instead of students making the decision, the administrators have handed down the decisions to us and that is totally unacceptable."

Donant, who said he expects unanimous opposition to the guidelines, said he can't allow "emotionalism" affect him.

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall
Student Activities Director Randy Donant

Senate condemns Donant

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Undergraduate Student Senate last night voted unanimously to call on Director of Student Activities Randy Donant to resign, in response to Donant's attempt to gain more control of the student budget process.

The senate also voted to demand an apology from Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson.

The senate then approved of a letter, sponsored by SGA Treasurer Dianne Rossi and Chairman of the Budget Committee Jordan Rosner, that aims to counter the memorandum issued Tuesday by Donant. Donant's memo, co-written by Madson, revealed a set of actions concerning the fiscal year 1987 SGA budget process. The actions categorized a series of rules giving power to Donant for more fiscal control over certain SGA operations and organizations that were under student control. Donant said the actions have gone into effect as of the memo's release Tuesday.

Stacy Roth, SGA co-president, said Donant and the administration are attempting to reverse the budget process by ridding students of any say concerning their own funds.

"They (Donant and Madson) are trying to reverse a process that exists and has existed for many years," Roth said.

"We need to look beyond the personal vendettas and personality conflicts and unify to win this battle for the students," Roth said of the senate's need to cooperate on this issue.

The senate, which is acting on the notion of "business as usual," voted to hold a campus-wide referendum on a $12 Student Activity Fee increase for FY 87. The referendum, approved 51 to 10 after more than one hour debate, will seek student approval in raising the fee $12 per year per student.

Donant's memo specified that there would be no fee increase in FY 87, and he said this and the memo's other guidelines are "non-negotiable."

There's Something for Everyone on your list at
THE OLD MILL
Rte. 63 N. Amherst
1 mile north of UMass
Open Daily 10-6
THINK CHRISTMAS AT OUR ONE STOP SHOP

MONEY MOTIVATED?
If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This
We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

SALE!
3 DAYS ONLY ...
FRI./SAT./SUN. NOV. 22,23,24
brightly colored, hand knit
SLIPPER SOCKS
wool & acrylic
plain sole REG. 7.95 NOW 5.95
leather sole REG. 9.95 NOW 7.95
A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst / Daily 10-6, Sun. 12-5
FAGS

CHANCELLOR'S LECTURE SERIES
1985 · 1986
VIRGINIA A. BEAL
Department of Food Science and Nutrition
THE CHALLENGE OF NUTRITION

Why is the public bombarded by conflicting nutrition information? Why cannot nutritional scientists agree about dietary recommendations? Does food intake in childhood affect adult health and longevity? Does a fat child become a fat adult? How much do we really know about human nutrition?
NOVEMBER 21, 1985 • 8 PM • MEMORIAL HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Free and open to all • Refreshments to follow lecture

SPORTSWEAR
Factory Outlet

Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA

All
N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
50-75% OFF

Sweat Shirts Reg. $32.00 NOW $15.
Beer Mugs Reg. $17. NOW $4.00
NFL Telephones Reg. $65.00 NOW $25.
Stadium Blankets Reg. $32.00 NOW $10.
Wall Plaques Reg. $14.00 NOW $4.00
Infant Wear Reg. $22.00 NOW $9.99
Coffee Mugs Reg. $8.00 NOW $2.00
Toddler NFL Wear Reg. $13.00 NOW $6.99
NFL Back Packs Reg. $18.00 NOW $5.00

Plus much, much more!

TIPS
ON PRE-REGISTRATION

Beginning on Monday, November 18th, the counseling period and pre-registration begins. Complete pre-registration forms are due at the Registrars office in 213 Whitmore on Wednesday, November 27th.

For information to help make the process a smooth one for you, call:

TAPED INFORMATION PHONE SERVICE
545-1540

Ask for tapes by number

1020	Changing Your Major
1009	Credit Load
1409	Finding or Changing Your Academic Advisor
2031	Graduation Requirements
1032	The Pass/Fail Option

For a complete listing of information tapes come by our office in 227 Whitmore.

TIDBITS
IDB 545-1855
TIPS 545-1540

A service of the Dean of Students Office

NOW OPEN
WORCESTER
MUNCHY

Binders, Notebooks, Paper, Backpacks, Clothing, Gifts, Cosmetics, Health and Beauty Aids, Candy, Tobacco, Cards, Calendars, Clocks, Batteries, Electrical Supplies, Magazines, Memo Board, Ice Cream

Grocery, Cold Soda, Juice, Pop Tarts, Glassware, Cups, Decals, Pennants, Chips, Cookies, Popcorn, Umbrellas, Newspapers, Tote Bags, Film, School Supplies, Typewriter Ribbons, Pencils, Pens

There's no need to hurry!
Our convenient hours allow you to shop early or late.

Munchy Open
Mon-Sun
8 am - 9 pm

UNIVERSITY STORE

UMass Winter SESSION

January 2-24
Your chance to get ahead now.
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 25.

In Person Registration
November 25

Campus Center Auditorium, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.
November 26-December 31

Records and Registration Office
Division of Continuing Education
University Library
8:30 a.m.-7 p.m., Mon.-Thurs.;
8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Fri.

Call 545-2414 for more information.

Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts
at Amherst

LORD'S & LADY'S HAIR SALONS SM

The Hampshire Mall
586-7913
20% off Student Discount*

not valid w/specials exp. Dec. 31

TUESDAY "PERFECT PERMS":
Reg. $53.00 & up ..... Now $39.95 & up

WEDNESDAY CUTS:
Women ....Reg. $18.00 ..... Now $14.00
Men .....Reg. $16.00 ..... Now $12.00

Walk-in Service Welcome • No Appointments Necessary.
Not to be confused with Frank Stiriacci's Lords & Ladies

EARN MONEY FOR COLLEGE
LOADERS & UNLOADERS

$8/hr • PART-TIME EVENINGS & EARLY MORNING HOURS

We offer steady employment, paid vacations and health benefits. Interviews will be held every Wednesday 9am—1pm

UNITED PARCEL SERVICE UPS
120 Wayside Avenue
West Springfield, MA 01089

HOUSING SERVICES
INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

The Division of Housing Services announces its 1986 Internship Program for sophomore and junior students. The three semester program is financed jointly by the offices of Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Housing Services.

PURPOSE

The program is designed with emphasis on increasing the competencies needed for career advancement through projects, seminars, and internship training.

INTERNSHIP AWARDS

Eligible students may earn $3.85/hour for 8 to 15 hours/week. Three credits for independent study may also be arranged.

QUALIFICATIONS

Six interns will be selected from applicants who have attained sophomore or junior status and will continue their full-time academic status throughout the 1986-87 academic year. Applicants should submit a resume, two letters of reference, and a brief statement of achievement objectives. Submit applications to the Internship Coordinator:

Dale Finn
Southwest Residential Education Office
545-0626 or 545-1550

Applications must be received no later than December 11, 1985.

The University of Massachusetts is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity employer. Students of color and women are urged to apply.

Governors Program Council presents:

The Razz-Bang Dance Bonanza

Sick of the Bars or Don't have an ID?

Last Chance for Fun before Thanksgiving at the Bluewall, Nov. 23
9 pm to 1 am
$2.00 Admission
with D.J. Peter Gold

GRAND OPENING

川 滬
北京園

WE WELCOME YOU TO PEKING GARDEN

We hope to introduce you to a new, authentic taste in Chinese cuisine. We emphasize the use of different Chinese spices in making a dish, such as fresh ginger root, scallion, fresh garlic, pepper corn, star anise, sesame seed, and of course, hot pepper. We also have a variety of Chinese sauces made from assorted beans and spices, will give a dish its unique, exotic flavor.

In our Menu we combine the most famous dishes from the south and the north to enable you to taste a wide range of genuine Chinese cooking. Our spicy dishes are prepared in three categories, mild, hot, and very hot. Please advise your waitress which category you desire. Our Chef has had 20 years of experience from all over the world, such as Mainland China, Hong Kong, and New York City. Therefore, we can guarantee you the finest in Chinese cuisine.

We sincerely hope that you will enjoy both our food and service. We welcome your comments and criticism.

Mandarin & Szechuan Restaurant

Luncheon Specials from $2.25 - $4.50
Mon-Sat 11:30 am - 3:00 pm (except Holidays)

Sunday Brunch served from 11:30 am - 3:00 pm
$6.95 per person $4.00 per child under ten

Banquet Room Available for larger parties

Cocktail Lounge
Full Liquor License

For take out orders and reservations please call 586-1202
Sun-Thurs 11 am - 10 pm; Fri & Sat 11 am - 11 pm

48 Russell Street
Hadley, Mass. 01035

IBM
IBM Portable PC

$1075.00*

DEMONSTRATION and SALE
FINAL DAY
Display located in Campus Center Concourse

Certified check or money order required at time of order
This special offer available to students, staff, and faculty.

* Certain restrictions apply see store for details

Sale Hours 10-4
Located in The Campus Center
545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskov, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Shouldn't you stop now?

Today is the Great American Smokeout and many people will try to kick the habit.

Some staggering statistics have been released by the American Cancer Society that should make people think twice or even three times before torching up.

- Some 320,000 Americans will die prematurely this year of diseases linked to smoking, a number equal to the number of Americans who have been killed in all the wars fought in this century.
- Cigarette smokers, who represent less than one-third of the adult population, account for about 83 percent of all cases of lung cancer.
- Lung cancer is the number one cause of death stemming from cancer among men.
- Lung cancer is the number one cause of death among women.
- There has been an increase of more than 300 percent in women's lung cancer death rates.

The person who smokes is not the only one affected. The odor gets in other peoples' clothes, hair, and eyes. Cigarette smoke makes some non-smokers gag, feel nauseous and generally uncomfortable.

For reasons such as those mentioned, as well as complaints about smokers, the University Faculty Senate has approved a policy to reinforce no-smoking rules in all public areas on campus.

Smoking affects everyone.

That is why we whole-heartedly support the goal of the Great American Smokeout, which is to get at least one in every five smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours, and possibly for good.

Make a fresh start. Quit smoking and regain your energy, your wind, and even your fresh-smelling breath.

Prove to yourself and to those around you that you can do without smoking for one day. You will be joined by millions of other Americans across the country.

Your life may depend on it.

Unsigned editorials reflect the majority opinion of the Collegian Board of Editors.

Pre-registration important

Roth/Burgess

As we approach the end of pre-registration, many students are questioning themselves; why they are here and what they would like to get out of their college education. What courses should I sign up for? What should I major in? What do I really want to accomplish at UMass?

We feel that it is imperative that students think a lot about these questions. A University of Massachusetts education can offer a person intense growth and insight into both themselves and the world. However, it can also be an unrewarding and painful experience. As students we need to create our own education, our own experience, and our own agenda. Our tenure at UMass is only as good as we make it. Clearly one of the most ambivalant aspects of UMass is its size. The resources available here are tremendous, while the mega-bureaucracy can easily shrink each of us into a simple number.

Pre-registration should be taken seriously for a number of different reasons. First of all, entering the University in February without a decent schedule and having to 'add' everything offers a somewhat abrasive re-entering experience. Thus our time and anxiety level next semester can be much more positive by already having a clear idea of our schedule. Secondly, pre-registering now offers more time and flexibility to process our visions for ourselves and to research courses and professors. The Student Government Association-produced Course and Teacher Evaluation Guide is an absolutely invaluable tool to learn about courses and/or professors. If you don't know what this guide is, ask! If you don't have one, get one! Copies are available in room 420 of the Student Union.

Ideally, students are at Umass to learn about themselves and the world and to use this increased awareness to better themselves and our world. Learning how to think critically is essential to education. "Minds are like parachutes, they only function when open."

To contemplate next semester it is usually helpful to evaluate this semester . Did we meet our expectations? Did we do well enough in school? Did we make enough money? Did we have enough fun? Did we do enough for the country? Did we do enough for ourselves? Are we comfortable with our present major? Are we using UMass to help us meet our goals?

This is one of the best times in our lives to experiment, to take risks, and to explore. If something doesn't feel right, try something different! Perhaps engineering isn't the best choice, maybe education would be better —or perhaps the answer is women's studies.

Take some time this week to contemplate what you want and where you're going. Then, figure out how to get there. Be an active student! You'll be glad you did. Good luck — we all need it!

Stacy Roth and Dani Burgess are the SGA co-presidents.

Farrakhan's true colors

David Mark Hatch

I was rather surprised with the statements made by some UMass educators in the Collegian story titled "Farrakhan not seen as a threat to community" on Oct. 25. This story, which appeared in the Black Affairs section, attempted to legitimize Minister Louis Farrakhan, the fiery leader of the Chicago-based Nation of Islam.

Sherwood Thompson, the director of the Office of Third World Affairs, praised Farrakhan's leadership ability and described him as, "a visionary leader who wishes to win friends and influence people especially in his own culture." What Thompson failed to elaborate on was the extent of Farrakhan's vision. The Muslim leader has predicted a race war for 1986 and he foresees a day when there will be a separate black state in America. And who are these friends that Farrakhan wishes to influence?

Possibly Thompson was referring to Col. Muammar al-Qaddafi, the fanatical leader of Libya, who recently gave Farrakhan a $5 million interest-free loan. The minister plans to use the money to establish People Organized and Working for Economic Rebirth (POWER), a company which will manufacture health-care products for the black community. Needless to say, the acronym power was no coincidence. Or maybe Thompson had Thomas Metzger, the former head of the California Ku Klux Klan, in mind when he made his comment. Metzger recently chaired the 'white nationalist' contigent at Farrakhan's September Los Angeles rally and donated $100 to the cause. If you don't believe me, then consult the front page of the Oct. 25 New York Times.

Chester Davis, a professor of Afro-American STudies at UMass added, "From what I know and have heard and read, I do not think that Farrakhan is any more anti-Semitic than any other black." With all due respect, where do people get their information? On March 11, 1984 Farrakhan declared, "the Jews don't like Farrakhan so they call me Hitler. Well, that's a good name. Hitler was a very great man." During his July 22, 1985 speech in Washington D.C. (I was at that rally), Farrakhan proclaimed, "Jews know their wickedness, not just Zionism, which is an outgrowth of Jewish transgression." If you're still not satisfied, I suggest you read the compilation of quotes in Newsweek's "What Farrakhan Said." You'll find it in the April 23, 1984 edition on page 32. Please consider it required reading.

Last of all, Ernest Allen and Esther Terry, two more professors in the Afro-American Studies department, mentioned that Farrakhan represents a positive element in society. I sympathize with the frustrations of many blacks in our society. They are facing unemployment, substandard living conditions, and even discrimination in many areas, especially in our cities. Unfortunately, Minister Louis Farrakhan is not the answer. Through his demagoguery, he has only exacerbated the situation of blacks by isolating them from whites and Jews for their troubles. The problems of black America must be addressed constructively with whites and blacks working together, not against each other.

In the same way that as a Jew, I unequivocally condemn Rabbi Meir Kahane for his racist rhetoric, the black and Third World communities must do the same about Farrakhan. I have also read that the Third World Caucus at UMass attempted to secure a speaking engagement for Farrakhan here. It was a blatant display of insensitivity on their behalf which can only be rendered by a public apology. So to the third World Caucus and the four local scholars who contributed the Rhonda's article, I leave you with one of Alexander Pope's immortal aphorisms, "At every word a reputation dies."

David Mark Hatch is the executive editor of Shofar, the Five College Jewish magazine.

All letters submitted for publication must be signed and include the author's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Letters must be typewritten and double spaced at 67 characters per line. Column submissions should be between 40 and 60 lines. All submissions are subject to editing for clarity and length. —Editor.

The Collegian welcomes letters, column, and cartoon submissions. Submissions should be mailed to the Editorial Editor at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, or they can be dropped off at the Collegian classified ad counter in the basement of the Campus Center. Due to the volume of mail received, individual replies cannot be made.

Sandinistas do it again

Peter Dow

Nicaragua has entered the headlines of American newspapers once again, as Sandinista President Daniel Ortega announced a "state of emergency" in his country. Through this declaration, the FSLN has virtually eliminated the few restricted civil liberties the Nicaraguan people enjoyed. The suspension decree encompasses all aspects of basic freedoms, and eliminates the rights of trial by jury, public assembly, free speech, habeus corpus, strike, free press, and the right to free travel. Yet the significance of the decree is mostly symbolic, since it merely formalizes and extends government policies which have been in effect since the triumph of the Snadinista revolution in 1979.

Leftist writers and other American sympathizers of the Sandinista regime mildly denounced Ortega's actions, but were quick to defend the decree as necessary to defeat the contras. Syndicated columnist Mary McGrory was more concerned with Ortega's experiences of "bad timing" than with the destructive effects of the state of emergency upon the Nicaraguan people. Indeed, it seems that each time the American apologists of the Sandinista regime succeed in building up the image of the Nicaraguan government, Daniel Ortega shows his true Marxist-Leninist colors and destroys all of their hard work.

The Sandinistas claim that the latest restrictions were needed so that they could better combat "U.S. directed sabotage and destabilization." Democracies, for instance, have been known to suspend habeus corpus in times of war. But the accused's rights to trial by jury and adequate time and resources to present a defense were also suspended, which cannot be justified as emergency measures. Judgments of guilt are now made by Popular Anti-Somocista Tribunals, composed of three persons, two of whom are members of Sandinista Defense Committees (CDS). The CDS are neighborhood vigilante groups whose duty it is to report "counter-revolutionary" activities, and thus the tribunals are not objective bodies, but rather they are further FSLN instruments used for mass control.

Likewise, the other restrictions were imposed with one goal in mind; to stifle any group or person who would dare to criticize FSLN policies. Indeed, one of the most important opposition groups in Nicaragua is the Roman Catholic Church, led by Cardinal Miguel Obando Bravo. Ever since the Sandinista victory in 1979, the Nicaraguan Catholic Church has been subject to increasing government repression. Examples include the visit of Pope John Paul II in March 1983, when FSLN turbas divinas, "divine mobs," chanted and interrupted the Pope's mass. Also, on Oct. 26, FSLN soldiers and police prevented 2,000 Catholics from attending a mass in Juigalpa led by Cardinal Bravo. The FSLN has also forced priests into military service.

In addition, many Catholics have been brutalized by the government security forces; a recent incident involved Sofonias Cisneros, a member of the Catholic Schools Parents' Association, who was protesting the FSLN indoctrination of children. Cisneros was arrested and taken to Managua's infamous El Chipote prison, where he was allegedly tortured and beaten by the head of Sandinista Internal Security himself, Commandante Lenin Cerna.

Nicaragua's only independently-owned newspaper, La Prensa, has also been the target of FSLN repressive tactics. Since 1979, La Prensa has been subject to daily government censorship, and, according to its editor, Carlos Ramirez, the level of censored material approached "80 percent and more." However, due to the latest FSLn crackdown, La Prensa has been forced, for all intents and purposes, to cease operations.

The Sandinistas' international image was also injured by Ortega's decree, when Ecuador recently broke diplomatic relations with Nicaragua. Yet American leftists continue to eagerly absorb Sandinista rhetoric as gospel, and, at the same time, these apologists ignore the worsening situation of the Nicaraguan people. What we see in the latest FSLN repressive measures is simply the further consolidation of an increasingly totalitarian government. The many thousands of Nicaraguans fighting against the FSLN already know this; and it's about time all Americans saw the Sandinistas for what they really are.

Peter Dow is a Collegian columnist.

Snow provokes mob rule

Mark Schwartzman

Turning a page of my notebook, I began to write: a rumbling of excitement from the near distance aroused by senses on this snowy night. Twas a Saturday evening; yet the need for studying with the added draw of a talent show, Hejira, had brought me willingly this far. Loud voices outside become siren chants as a methodic pounding shook this Amherst College library called Frost. Curiously I arose from my seat, as did many others around me, to investigate the source of this foolery. No sooner than I turned the corner did I realize I was in the midst of a war. Crude shells made of snow thundered against a transparent entrance shield. My amazement quickly rose, then about faced to a level of utter disgust, as the first projectile barely grazed the Guardian of the Books of Knowledge in which we place our trust.

A few students tried to hold the gates to this sacred fortress shut but to no avail as the mob's most courageous fighters of under-educated, uncultured students picked up their crude weapons and launched an attack on the helpless stacks of oppressing knowledge.

As soon as the battle of wisdom was won the restless mob moved on, to rape and pillage with each thrust of their arms, the well mannered homes to which they would never belong.

The first window crashed with a boom, a symbolic event to heighten the frightening mood. "One translucent vigil had been torn, by an unarmed soldier turned hero. Let there be more!" The mob aimed for all that could shatter.

Yet another battle call was silently cried, "Now that we have violated their personal shelter, let us place the fear of us in their comfortable lives." The College Green turned to antique battle field. Be it Rome, Israel, India or Concord, the restless under-educated, uncultivated mob had yet another yearly victory over their worst fears; knowledge, culture and order.

A light drizzle turned to downpour, washing away the mob's conviction to increase their score. They finally turned back their wave of destruction towards home. The defenders, as proud as our Minutemen once were, chased after the intruders, jaunting back their well felt emotions. Yes, they swore.

A pity though; the real casualties, wounded deep in their hearts, were those who stood and could only watch, belittled, embarrassed, ashamed on the steps of Frost, murmuring under their breath, "UMASS does suck."

I know not where my comrades went, as I headed to the Amherst talent show, Hejira, emotionally spent. And yet in the mood of the night, I picked up my pen and I began to write, "UMASS loses one in snow. . . "

Mark David Schwartzman is a UMass student.

Letters

No longer a member of the club

I'm sorry that Caroline Murray ("Student Senator's Motives Vague", Collegian,Nov. 15) will no longer be representing the Bill Collins Fan Club at Undergraduate Student Senate meetings. To be perfectly honest, though, Murray was not doing the best job. Although she knew that all representatives of the Bill Collins Fan Club should "question authority," Murray carried a voting record identical with SGA co-presidents Roth and Burgess. When I brought this to her attention, she promised me that she would not be a lackey for the SGA leadership.

When I introduced the bylaw amendment for rules reform, I thought Murray would support it, and it appeared she did. The motion was popular and passed by a wide margin. But then our Speaker John "J.R." Ruddock, was declared ineligible to request a vote to reconsider. Murray, much to my surprise, made Ruddock's motion for him. Well, the motion to reconsider was crushed and she became concerned about her fan club membership. I assured her that she could still be a member, that the club forgave her (again).

Just when I thought all was well, she wrote an absurd letter to the Collegian, misquoting me as sayinbg "everyone in the senate is so stupid." Now, Murray knows very well that I like the senate and think that they are very intelligent (they voted down her motion, didn't they?). Now why on earth does she keep doing these things? Why does she vote with the SGA leadership on every vote? Why does she make the speaker's motions for him? Why does she write absurd letters to the editor misquoting me?

Thank goodness Murray says that she is no longer representing the Bill Collins Fan Club. Her membership card would have been revoked anyway.

Bill Collins, senator
Southwest

Workshop attacked men only

Recently we attended a workshop titled Not A Love Story put on by the educator/advocates of the Everywoman's Center. It included a shocking yet informative film about women and pornography. We began to see that the film was one sided — only dealing with the degradation of women in pornography. Discussion period developed and it became apparent that the facilitators wished to keep the discussion narrow, only attacking men. They maintained that pornography was caused by men only, and only hurt women. The point is that pornography, when viewed, becomes degrading and shameful to both women and men alike. Women become degraded and shamed because of the submissive role they play in most pornography. Likewise man feel degraded and shamed because they are stereotyped as insensitive, egotistical monsters.

We think that the format of the workshop should take an evolutionary step forward to include the injustice pornography subjects everyone to. Pornography is disgusting and insulting to members of both genders. We resent the personal attack made on men. Most men, including us, are sensitive human beings. We hope the educator/advocate program will take our friendly advice. Let's fight pornography together, as fellow human beings. Everyone is to blame.

Ed Rauscher
Matt Naimie
Orchard Hill

In defense of the ancients

William Spain

BODRUM, Turkey — As an increasingly popular resort on the Aegean, this city has joined the modern world. There is plenty of ice-cold beer, rock music and even (occasionally) hot water in the hotels. Long known by the locals as a relaxing seaside retreat, Bodrum is now seeing growing throngs of vacationing foreigners.

However, there is a lot more to the place the Greeks called Halicarnassus than great swimming and sun-seeking tourists. Home to one of the seven wonders of the world, it has been around for a long time. No matter that the tomb of Maussolinos is presently little more than a few broken columns and a large hole in the ground, a feeling of the original persists. So does its namesake in the form of our word 'mausoleum."

Sitting in the ruins of the amphitheatre under a full moon, I found myself thinking not only about what a great place it would be to make-out but also about the people who spent evenings there thousands of years before me. As I started to reflect on their society and its accomplishments, comparisons with our own era inevitably surfaced.

Our ancestors in this part of the world were an impressive lot. Though poor in technology by standards, they nonetheless managed to build large cities with a level of spiritual and cultural enrichment that we have yet to exceed (some might say to even match). Oh, there is no doubt that we have advanced beyond them in some areas. I would surely not want to live in a time without airplanes, birth control, and eyeglasses but the lack of said accoutrements is not in itself a valid reason to assume inferiority.

In the realm of intellectual endeavor (as opposed to purely technical — the two, I firmly believe, are not always inextricably linked) the former residents of the West coast of Asia Minor and other ancient Greek areas were no slouches. The fragments of art and literature they left behind are all the more incredible when considering how much more did not survive the centuries.

In many ways, they had it all over us. Unfettered by Judeo-Christian morality, they were free from the start to explore topics forbidden to subsequent peoples by laws both civil and religious. They were the true groundbreakers of poetry, drama, satire and experimental government. The entire human condition could be publicly examined without guilt or fear of censure. That is, unless one ran afoul of the wrong tyrant — an occasional and often fatal happening.

Of course they were hardly all noble. Every group (and, for that matter, every individual) has a dark side. Their grand temples and theaters were rarely built by citizens seeking only to contribute to the greater good of the whole. The labor was usually done by slaves taken in the periodic rape-and-pillage excursions against neighboring communities. And then there was the large segment of the population which was perpetually confined to the cheap seats. These are still not reasons for us to look down on them, for there are plenty of modern parallels. As a race, we occupy lofty moral ramparts only in the rhetoric of money-grubbing television preachers and power-hungry politicians.

Unfortunately, we live in an age that strongly feels itself to be the most enlightened in history. It is a rather cocky belief and one that has no doubt been shared by every society from Babylonia to the Third Reich. It is also one that I must ultimately reject on the basis that human motivations have stayed pretty much the same. Greed and lust have always coexisted with compassion and love and always will. Only the faces and the tools ever really change. You can call me cynical, I call myself a history major.

William Spain is a Collegian columnist currently in Sri Lanka.

live wire
by Peter Wissoker

Well, Jason and the Scorchers was cancelled because of low advance ticket sales. This of course teaches us a lesson. Buy your/my tickets in advance. This isn't the first time this has happened, but I think that there is a lesson here.

But don't fret. There's still all kinds of things to do. For example the great Ray Charles will be at Pearl Street. Ray will be accompanied by a 16 piece orchestra and the inimitable Raelettes. There are two shows, who can resist?

On the other side of town, Ellen McIlwaine will be playing at the Iron Horse. Ms. McIlwaine is one of the most electric folk performers around. She usually plays alone, but when she plays the electric guitar, she (get ready for a cliche) really wails. And she's really calm about it.

If you're willing to travel to Boston, Adrian Belew and the Bears will be playing at the Paradise. It would definately be worth the trip.

Tomorrow night, feminist humorist, (that rhymes) Kate Clinton will be amusing folks down at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton. Could be fun. Opening for Ms. Clinton will be Nancy Vogl. At the Red Balloon in Easthampton, the Stompers will also be amusing folks. Arlo Gutherie, David Bromberg, and John Sebastion will be taking a trip down some kind of lane (Memory? Past? Present?) at the Bushnell Auditorium in Hartford.

On Saturday Eighth Route Army will be having a record release party at the Northampton Center of the Arts. If you're nice maybe they'll sign the album for you.

Also on Saturday Monica Jakuc will be playing Sage Hall at Smith. And for those who want to be sure that they are tripping down Memory Lane: Steppenwolf and the Guess Who will be playing the Agora in Hartford. Steppenwolf was responsible for such monster hits as 'Magic Carpet Wild' and the amazing 'Born to be Wild'.

So there it is, your week.

Violent Femmes are sold out and Jason and the Scorchers are undersold. Got to hand it to UPC, and I'm usually a chronic complainer, this has been a really good semester as far as concerts are concerned and I personally look forward to next semester, in other words I eat my words from the beginning of the semester. For once.

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco
imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes
imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

SURE RENT-A-CAR
Good reliable rentals at a better than fair price.
CARS, TRUCKS, VANS
Low Daily & Wknd. Rates
50 Russell St., (Rte. 9)
Hadley, Ma.
tel 584-2319
-Just over Coolidge Bridge-

PERSONAL COMPUTING FOR THE LIBERAL ARTS
Math 197Q MWF 2:30
- For Freshmen & Sophomore nonscience majors
- No prerequisites
- Learn elementary programming
- Learn basic quantitative analysis
- Applications to real public policy problems: economics, the environment, public health, consumer issues, taxes
- Information: Prof. Frank Wattenberg, 5-0984

ASSISTANT SUBSCRIPTION MANAGER NEEDED AT THE Collegian
Great Pay, need mornings free
Apply at the Collegian Office
at 113 Campus Center
Monday-Thursday 8:45-3:45,
Fridays 8:45-2:30

MONEY MOTIVATED?
If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This
We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

Peloton Sports
Cross-Country Ski Jamboree Sale!
Sample Savings on 2 of 12 Complete Outfits:
Nordic Waxless Outfit
Leather 75mm Boots
Tonkin Poles
75mm Bindings
Special Sale $69.95
Kneissl HC Waxless Skis
Salomon SR 301 Boots
SNS System Bindings
Swix Fibreglass Poles
Reg. $178.00
This is the lowest price ever on this outfit! $119.95
- 20% to 40% off all cold weather clothing
- Last years ski leftovers ½ price
- All used boots $10.00
- Specials on Childrens' Outfits
- Childrens Free Boot Exchange

FREE — Refreshments
FREE — Get a pair of Peloton Ski Straps just for stopping by
FREE — Mounting and Base Prep on all XC Outfits
FREE — Wax Kit with every Waxable Ski Outfit
FREE — 5 days worth of trail passes for Touring Centers Savings of over $20.00
Peloton Sports
the cross-country ski experts
Sale from Wed., Nov. 20 - Sun. Nov. 24
►Thurs. & Fri. open until Midnight◄
1 E. PLEASANT ST. — AMHERST — 549-6904
trak LIFA SWIX SPORT!
kneissl SALOMON

John Dellaria
presents a
"CUT-A-THON" with ALL
proceeds going to the EveryWoman's Center
Haircuts will be $8.00
at Wilder Hall (behind Morrill Science Center)
Sun. November 24th
Time: 11 am - 3 pm
FREE Dellaria products will be given out!!

ARTS

Maverick Suzanne Vega pulls off 4 sellout shows

SUZANNE VEGA
IRON HORSE, NORTHAMPTON
Tuesday, November 19

By ANDREW WOLFF
Collegian Staff

It could not be called a virtuoso performance, but Suzanne Vega in her fourth and last sold out show in two nights sent an Iron Horse crowd home with smiles Tuesday night.

The 25-year-old Californian-turned-New Yorker showed the color and versatility that has made her the new sensation on the folk-rock scene. She calmly began her solo show with an acapella version of "Tom's Diner," and ended it more than an hour later with a strong and emotional rendition of her own "Marlene on the Wall."

The audience, almost motionless throughout the hour, greeted Vega's opening number with surprise, and in the end, appeared pleased.

Fans must be careful when they tag Vega as a folk artist. A strong, resounding guitar, intertwined with a light voice and captivating personal lyrics make Vega more jazzy than anything else. Add to that a cool, contemporary attitude evident in all of her songs, and what one has is a sound reminicent of other artists, but never quite hitting the nail on the head.

And last night Vega was Vega, although run ragged and slightly short of breath by a recent European tour. She has made quick stops since then in places like Southeastern Massachusetts University and Wellesley.

After Thanksgiving at home, Vega will continue on tour before returning the studio and aiming for the release of her second album, now planned for the summer.

Communication with the audience is an important part of performing in a cozy cafe like the Iron Horse. And Vega took advantage of the setting, freqently reminiscing about her European trip, during which she had most of her luggage stolen, including the black tuxedo jacket she wears on her album sleeve.

Her third number, "The Queen and the Soldier," from her first and only album, was very composed with loose yet powerful lyrics. Her use of crescendo and decrescendo, a trademark of Vega music, created the ambience that brought the 85-seat cafe to one of its longest ovations of the evening.

With words in her song such as: "Out in the distance her order was heard/ And the soldier was killed, still waiting for her word/ and while the queen went on strangling in the solitude she preferred/ the battle/ continued on," Vega captivated the audience.

It was followed by a related tune, "Knight Moves," in which her voice seemed to falter. She lost her breath at one point and was forced to skip some words, but nonetheless, her lilting voice came through clearly and had its usual calming effect.

In perhaps her lightest song of the evening, "The Rent Song," (not part of the album) was a most fitting piece for the predominantly student audience.

"I've been told it's a mental health song," she said before setting out on the upbeat and perhaps biographical journey through the mind of a penniless musician.

"I am singing for my supper," she sang. "I am singing for my life." And she later added: "I am sitting looking through the window/thinking about my rent. I am wondering where it went."

Suzanne Vega

ENERGY CONSERVATION OPPORTUNITIES
Don't miss this chance to become a part of one of the nation's fastest-growing leaders in the energy conservation field! DMC Energy currently has immediate part-time temporary openings for energetic individuals to install conservation measures in homes in Hampden, Franklin, and Hampshire Counties. We will provide training, but background in conservation or construction preferred. Professional attitude, excellent public relations skills, and a commitment to energy conservation a must. Car and valid driver's license required. No sales involved.

For more information, or to arrange for an interview, contact Ms. Temple at 1-800-332-2754 as soon as possible.

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

TONIGHT

The UMass Music Theatre Guild will be holding an organizational meeting to decide its spring production. If you are interested in directing, choreography, designing, music direction or performing in the production please come to the meeting 6;30 - 7;30 Bartlett Auditorium.

at amc THEATRES
PRICES OFF THE AXE
Adults $3.75
Same great Movies and Service!
Sr. Citizen $1.95
Children $1.95
STUDENTS $2.75 MATINEES
All New Prices Starts 11/22
Twilite Shows $1.95
(Late Afternoon Times — Check Newspaper)
amc HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
amc MT. FARMS 4 584-9153

amc THEATRES
ANNOUNCE THE EXPANSION OF amc HAMPSHIRE 4 TO amc HAMPSHIRE 6
TO SERVE THE PUBLIC BETTER WITH
• STATE OF THE ART PROJECTION • DISCOUNT TWILITE & MATINEES
• DOLBY STEREO SOUND • FRONOMIC SEATS
Grand Opening FRIDAY NOVEMBER 22nd
Back to the Future | Jagged Edge | That was Then This is Now
After Hours | Santa Claus the movie 11/27 | Rocky IV 11/27
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL 584-7550

Pleasant St. Theater
"A Potent, Provocative, Sizzlingly, Sexual Bundle." — People Magazine
Dance With A Stranger
R
times 5:45, 7:55, and 10:05 pm (also at 3:40 Sat and Sun)
ERICH VON STROHEIM
QUEEN KELLY
at 5:30, 7:40, and 9:40
27 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-0933

ROYAL CRANE
ORIENTAL FOOD MARKET
360 College St., Amherst
Rte 9 East 253-5658
Exotic imported mink blanket ($110-130)
Homemade Bedspread from Korea ($110-150)
with a large variety of AUTHENTIC ORIENTAL
• Fresh Produce • Sauces & Spices
• Noodles • Frozen & Canned Goods
• Cooking Implements & Supplies
• Homemade take-out food
• New items arriving every week
• Gourmet foods at everyday prices
• Asian cookbooks at Publisher's prices
• Large Indian Inventory
Decorative Oriental Tableware and accessories for Christmas giving • Open 10-8; Sat. open 9-8

jam on the side...
Enjoy a piping hot slice of live jazz every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night from 9 to 12 pm.
plus complimentary hors d'oeuvres in the cozy ambience of The Loft at Seasons Restaurant.
Seasons
529 Belchertown Road • Amherst • 253-9909

- New to Our Menu -
MEXICAN PIZZA
Crispy Flour Tortilla Chips covered with a Tangy Tomato Sauce, your choice of Toppings and lots of Melted Mozzarella Cheese. . .
...Offering Quality Mexican Foods
TACO VILLA
NORTHAMPTON 21 CENTER ST 584-0673 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine
AMHERST 41 BOLTWOOD WALK 256-8317 Beer & Wine Served
SPRINGFIELD 749 SUMNER AVE 788-0919 Bring Your Own Beer or Wine

CHINESE KITCHEN
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
興旺樓
Eat In or Take Out Hours:
Sunday - Noon to 10 PM
Mon-Sat - 11:30 AM to 10 PM
Pu-Pu Platter $12.00
Try Our Luncheon-Dinner Specials
Only $1.49 before 3 PM, $1.90 after 3 PM
2 LOCATIONS:
430 Russell St (Rt 9) Hadley 253-2571
150 King St, Northampton 586-8220

JUSTIN RYAN'S
BEAT THE CLOCK
11-closing $2.00 cover
9-11 $1.00 cover
7-9 No cover
50¢ Drinks - All Night Long!

The Special Charm of One of a Kind Jewelry
Antique and unique styles available in a wide range of prices.
J. AUSTIN JEWELER
on the common, amherst, 253-3986
mon.-sat. 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Season's Sunday Brunch Buffet
It's your choice and what a choice! Season's specialties from traditional Bacon & Eggs to Seafood Casseroles to Scrumptious Desserts. Season's Sunday Buffet from Eleven to Three only $7.95
All major credit cards accepted
Experience the Joy of Dining with family and friends at
Seasons
529 Belchertown Road Amherst (413) 253-9909

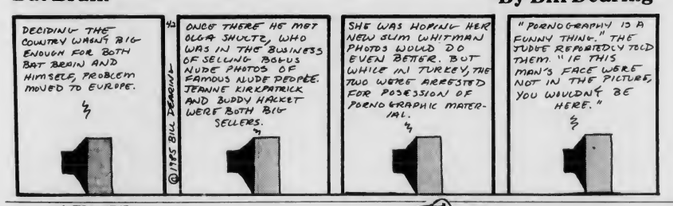
FUNNYBONES
Cocktail Lounge
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
FRI. NOV. 22, 1985 5-9
Direct from Cape Cod
"JUST GEORGE"
Fri & Sat Nov 22, 23 9-1
SQUARE ONE BAND

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed



GORDY

By Gorde

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

Today's Menu

LUNCH
Hamburg on Roll
Pork Fried Rice/Soy Sauce

BASICS LUNCH
Oatburgers
Vegetable Fried Rice/Soy Sauce

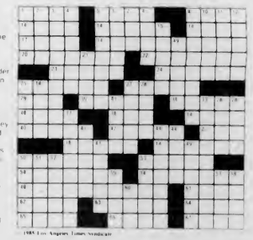
DINNER
Simmered Corned Beef
Horseradish, Steamed Cabbage
Sweet and Sour Chicken Fingers
Tomato Torte

BASICS DINNER
Sweet and Sour Chicken Fingers
Tomato Torte

Weather

Today:
Sunny today, with highs 45 to 55. Partly cloudy tonight, lows 25 to 35.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE



Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Pro's foes
5 Ironic art style
9 Related
13 Hanging limply
14 Fatty acid
16 Sandy tract, in Devon
17 Persian fairy
18 Natant man-o-war
20 A drag, but not a bore?
22 Sang like a bird
23 Roof edges
24 Fanfares
25 Barracks blowhard?
27 Balance sheet item
29 Before gram or graph
30 Synthetic fabric
32 Benches
36 ___ since ___ was a pup
38 Copenhagen coin
39 Etch
40 Composition for nine
42 Paces
45 Tibetan gazelle
46 Blanket in the Southwest
48 Affirm
50 Framework
53 One born under the ram's sign
54 Heavenly bodies
56 Was worthy
59 Natant crawl
61 Modena money
62 Division word
63 Legal
64 Wave in Paris
65 Humorist Bell et al.
66 Coops
67 Coarse grass

DOWN
1 Mint rank
2 Bread spread
3 Kind of elk hound
4 Helicoid
5 Resembling element #29
6 Prants in a Fugard title
7 "La ___" Debussy
8 First Earl of Chatham
9 Flattened
10 Parts of ships
11 Map extra
12 Requirements
15 Checks
19 Patron saint of beggars
21 Household need
25 Haricot
26 Hair style
27 Main artery
28 Snicker follower
31 Was defeated
33 Silvery
34 New Mexico tourist center
35 Smart blow
37 Keepsakes
41 Less wild
43 PTA members
44 Agitate
47 Port of NE Brazil
49 Fit carefully
50 Most of Iberia
51 Type of lace
52 Swiftness
53 At full speed
55 Flow smoothly
57 Earth, in Essen
58 Legal document
60 Frost the cake

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

HAIRCUTS $8.50 with this coupon CALL STYLES BY DEBORAH 65 University Dr., Amherst, MA 549-5610 expires 11-30-85

It's not how you feel, it's how you look!

UNWANTED HAIR? Have it removed the Electronic Way! Call NEW REFLECTIONS 586-8371 No Needles, No Pain, No Hair

Change your tires NOW . . . $4.99 per pair Alignment and balancing available North Amherst Tire & Auto Center Full Service Tire Store 78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA 549-4704

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT* While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26. * Upon faculty approval

HAPPY 20th BIRTHDAY FLEX!
Have a Great Day!
Love, Kath Em Chris Ellie Danny BMW

nassau SEE florida
WILL HOLD YOUR BED
SPRINGBREAK
CALL NOW! 256-1551
COUNCIL TRAVEL SERVICES
79 SO PLEASANT ST AMHERST

NOW OPEN
Riverboat Village
APARTMENTS, SOUTH HADLEY.
1, 2 or 3 BEDROOM UNITS
BEAUTIFUL MODELS FURNISHED BY CHAP DeLAINES & EPSTEIN FURNITURE CO
•Swimming Pool •Tennis Court •Club House •Shuffle Board Court
FINANCED BY MHFA LEASED ON OPEN OCCUPANCY BASIS
OPEN SEVEN DAYS A WEEK 10 AM - 4 PM
PHONE 532-9461 532-9462
CALL FOR DIRECTIONS
Riverboat Village River Lodge Rd So. Hadley, MA 01075

Ticket Connection
tickets on sale now
RUSH dec 13
ROGER DALTRY dec 8
SADE dec 5
BILLY CRYSTAL jan 16
mon-fri 10-6 pm 1-788-6938

★swimming

continued from page 16

pears ready for Sunday's opener at Boston College.

Mike Hoover broke his hand during the fall water polo season and will be out until January. A versatile breaststroker, Hoover will be needed come the New Englands.

Fred Marius, also nursing a bad back, is one of the top six in the breaststroke in New England. He too is being counted on.

Rick Bishop and Mark Waters are two other juniors with potential. Both are freestylers with Bishop a middle distance man and Waters navigating the longer distances. Both, according to the coach, have great attitudes and will help the team.

Sophomore Jim Flannery was one of the top freshmen in the region last year and Yarworth is looking for even more this season. "He's a good tough swimmer," said the coach. "Jim's a hard worker."

The freshman class also looks strong. Mike Bolles, Ed Burton, Scott Kessler and Chris Payson lead the group.

Bolles was the Western Mass 50 free champ, Burton is a butterflier, Kessler comes from a strong prep school program in New Jersey while Payson is a distance freestyler.

Boston College hasn't been traditionally strong, but Yarworth isn't sure what to expect for Sunday's opener.

"Right now, I just want to figure out our injury situation, get everyone healthy and get some good swimming in," said the coach.

UMass will also face tough competition this season from Tufts, Williams, Souther Connecticut and in the Atlantic 10 Championships in February.

SWIMMING NOTES: Injuries are plaguing UMass. Sophomore Tony Baker is having recurring knee problems and Bolles has a broken finger, but may swim Sunday. . .'It's frustrating," said Yarworth. . .Bishop and Marius both have shoulder strains and on a day-to-day basis. . .Surette meanwhile has been benched due to disciplinary reasons. . .Turner, right now, is healthy, but his back problems may suddenly come on limiting his swimming.

So, UMass is going into the meet with cautious optimism. "We're going in there cold," said Yarworth, the New England coach of the year last season. "I know they have a good freshman spriner, but they were in the Big East last season, so I really don't know that much about them. I'd like to say we'll win, but I really don't know with those injuries.

Pearl Street

MILLER ROCK SERIES presents
If you thought we're only playing big arenas you were almost right. . .

RUN DMC

But they're playing THE big night club

Weds. Dec. 4th

this is not a mirage

10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

Yesterday & Today Records

Grateful Dead Psychadelic

Grand Opening

Punk Jazz Blues

Top CASH PAID for USED:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's

An Alternative Record Store

96 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-9209

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY

SKI & PARTY WEEK

JAN. 19-24

TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING HOTEL OR CONDO

ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES . LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES. FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK. ECT. ECT

HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199

FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP
Sign-up before Nov. 19th and get a free T-shirt.

LAGNAF 86

Vermont Drinking Age is 18 yrs.
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

SILADIUM RINGS

NOW ONLY $89.95

SAVE $50

ArtCarved Siladium® college rings are now more affordable than ever.
Choose from an incredible variety of styles.
See your ArtCarved representative now and save $50 on a great Siladium college ring.
Every ArtCarved ring is backed by a Full Lifetime Warranty.

ARTCARVED CLASS RINGS

ASK ABOUT OUR EASY PAYMENT PLANS $

11/20 - 11/22 DATE
10 - 4 TIME
UNIVERSITY STORE PLACE

Deposit Required

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS

THE GREAT SKI SNATCH

$500,000
WORTH OF TOP NAME
WINTER CLOTHING
&
SKI EQUIPMENT

PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437
STARTS TODAY

NOV 21 - 23
T F HIGH NOON TIL 10 P.M.
S 10AM TIL 4PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
UMASS, AMHERST

Gobble Up the Savings!

4 Day Shoe Sale
10% to 50% Savings Storewide on Shoes & Boots

Thurs.-Sun., Nov. 21-24

SHOE BIN

OPEN SUNDAYS
187 n. pleasant st amherst

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

June Rachuy Brindel, Pulitzer Prize nominee, will be reading from PHAEDRA, Friday, Nov. 22, 7:30 pm at The Chocolate Bakery 241 King ST (Route 5) Potpourri Mall, Northampton

UMMTG - Organizational Meeting to decide Spring Production TONIGHT Bartlett Auditorium 6:30-7:30

Prophets and Other Heretics: Today's discussion will address "The Authority Within Ourselves" Rev. Esther Hargis facilitates, 12:18-1:15, UCF, 428 SUB.

Attention Lesbians - weekly meeting for Lesbian Union Thursday 11/21 5:30 pm Campus Center 802.

Southwest Residents - Get Involved! Weekly Southwest Assembly Meeting tonight 7:00 pm in Hampden's Southside Room. All are welcome.

The Alliance Christian Fellowship will meet tonight at 7:15 in the Campus Center. All welcome! See you there!

International Womens Event planning meeting Today at 4:30 pm CC 903

Newman Friday Night Video's present a Walt Disney Double Feature "A Jungle Book & Winnie the Pooh & Friends" tomorrow night 7:10 Main Lounge

AUDIO

For sale Technics 35 watt Rec. $40 12 band graphic eq $70 both $100 call 549-6591 - Brian for info.

AUTO FOR SALE

1977 Chevy Malibu Classic air, fog lights, nice condition, dependable $1400 or BO call 665-3921

Pontiac GTO 1968 strong. New parts. $1100 BO 546-6417

1974 Ford Pinto good condition $900 584-5742

77 Honda Accord 5 speed must sell to pay bills call Scott 253-9015

74 VW Bug strong eng. exc. frame and int. good body $850 549-7778

1976 "Sunbug" stereo by Sony, solid body, runs great $1400 584-6205

1976 Ford Maverick, 60,000 miles, auto, power steering, 4 door, runn fine. BO over $700. 549-1902

1974 Audi 100LS black exterior/red interior. Front wheel drive. Very little rust. Engine good condition also. $1200 549-7194 Sarah

74 Chevy Malibu good condition $650.00 call 549-3591

VW Superbeetle 1971 rebuilt engine very reliable great heat . AM/FM $850 (best offer) 586-8475 or 253-4253

1970 Chevy Malibu excellent running condition good body AM FM cassette deck $500 call Linda evenings after 6 549-6313

1975 Audi Fox rebuilt engine lots of new parts must sell $600 253-7454

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

Turn the Tables professional party/club D.J. 5 yr experience widest selection cal 24 hr. 586-9691

THE BREAKFAST CLUB
Fri Nov 22 at 5, 7, 9, 11
Engineering East Aud
$1.50 at 5, 7 $2.00 at 9, 11

Do you need bands for your party. Professional bands that didn't just get together yesterday. You name the sound and songs you want. We'll set up the band. Different varieties from $150 call Steady Sounds 549-0385

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

1 or 2 females to share apt call even 549-4483

1 bedroom Cliffside apt. 375/month, includes everything avail Jan 1 call 665-8455

Large modern loft-style apartment in Northampton Center AC, sundeck, heat included available Jan 1 call 586-4460

Amherst Brandywine 2 bdrm apt busline $80/month available 1-1-86 549-1119

Large one bedroom apartment 10 minutes walk from campus available 1/1. $400 549-3859

Single room available in a house on Main St. in Amherst rent is $153 per mo plus utilities on bus route and close to town and campus lease runs from Jan 1 to Aug 31 call Mike at 256-1233 pref after 5 pm

FOR SALE

Water Bed $250.00 call 549-0194

Fender Super-Six Amp. Twin heads. Six tents. Also G & L Caviler. Excellent guitar black. Just got set up and intonated. Designed by Leo Fender himself. 700 new last year. Right now $400 549-0385

Technics SL5 Linear Tracking Turntable w/cartridge, direct drive, fully automate $100 or BO call between 4 pm -12 pm 546-5086

Brand new 12" B & W TV only $70!! Brand new port. Sharp typewriter, 2 pg memory only $170!! Don't forget that Christmas is coming!! Call 6-4475 for more details.

Celebrate the Holidays
by sending a Turkey Gram
on sale in the Concourse
11/19-22

Apple Personal Computer monitor, disk drive and computer. Great to link up with the Cyber or just to play around! A 2200 dollar value but yours for the low, low price of $700 call Tim at 546-9592

Phi Sig Kappa - 160s good condition boots Caber size - women's - 8 call 545-0162 ask for Hope

Electric Guitar: Music Man with active electronics and Kahler tremolo exc cond asking $325 call Bruce 6-9563

Tabadabedoo UMass "Bed Rock" cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

1976 Nova. Runs good. As is. $500 or best offer. 546-8096

FOUND

Key on a brass ring found at WMUA meeting 11/18 contact Pat Mahoney to claim 545-2876

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Part-time temporary positions available for the Annual Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Program. Starting date -November 22 until December 24. For more informa tion call 586-5243

Accountant: The Economic Development Office is hiring for Spring semester. Sophomores and Juniors needed to work with student controlled businesses, approx 10 hrs/wk. Applications available at 409 SUB. Deadline is noon 11/27

Marketing Interns needed for Hampshire Mall Management Office must be energetic and reliable with excellent communication skills. Apply Office of Internships 545-0725

The Commuter Area Government has one work study position for an office assistant. Interested people should have good organizational skills, typing skills, and 10-15 hrs a week free. Undergrads only should apply to 404 SUB before November 26th. EOE/AA employer.

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

Intersession bartending classes covers all aspects sign up starts Monday Nov 25 room 111 credit free registration Tower Library

LOST

Gold bangle bracelet somewhere around CC on Thurs 17 reward if returned please! Has much sentimental value please contact Beth at 256-1758

Lost two small notebooks on campus Fri. evening, Nov 8 (possibly in Union) please contact me in Grad Writing Office 5-0979

In the "Pub" parking lot Saturday night a set of tools in a silver tool box. Please return them they're not mine. Call Eric at 546-7888

Blue LeSportjac wallet with great sentimental value. If returned, no questions asked. Reward. Call 546-8380 or 546-8390

Watch by Belair. Silver w/gold lost Friday 11/15 near Southwest. Unrepairable but sentimental. Reward. Please call Chris 546-5557

Men's UMass Ring: Steven Sobeck inscribed. Lost in Townehouse area. Call 549-5924, for Kelley. REWARD!

MOTORCYCLES

1983 Honda V45 Saber low miles ex. condition Shoei helmet also $2000 545-4612 after 8 pm ask for Sean

MOVER

Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM

Counselor applications available for summer '86, 101 Berkshire House

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Where else can you get good issues, great food, and the best coffee. The People's Market of course! Around the corner from the Post Office.

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Ski and Party at Sugarbush. See Ski Club Sale. S.U.B. Wed-Sat Hotel $149

Attention Musicians: Experienced drummer seeking to form a funk/jazz fusion group. Are you interested? If so, call Scott at 546-5149

LAGNAF
nudge, nudge
wink, wink
Know what I mean?!

Music Theatre Guild organizational meeting for anyone interested in working on Spring Production Bartlett Auditorium 6:30-7:30 Nov 21

Susan O. Malcolm - See what happens when you don't hold onto your umbrella! The Saute Chef

Need 100 overweight people to try our new weight loss product call 546-9632

Help I need Femmes tix please call 1-772-6469

Grunnio, A few beersand look what happens. Shoo be doo wop wop, say what yeah. What's this world coming to?

Send a flower to a turkey or a friend. Flowers and messages can be sent for Thanksgiving (or whatever). Look for the table on Campus Center Concourse Fri Nov 22 and Mon Nov 25. Pick up day Tues Nov 26. Names will appear in the Collegian. Sponsored by Mortar Board.

Larissa - There are many dark corners in the Mews.

Help! Our kitten needs a nice home. Call late nights 256-1603

HEY JESSIE cosmic mates can still hear in the silence too bad I don't want anymore diamonds and rust sorry white knight this black hearts had enough I'm done paying playing and saying goodbye and to the truth that not need be spoken love was the answer what a shame you couldn't speak it when it was real ME

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FELIX!! Your room in 10 minutes for the "celebration"! Haha! Love ya! Ellie

Happy 19th Birthday Wendy O from all your buddies of Cance

Robyn H Happy 19th Birthday! Love Holly and Audrey

Fokey da M...! 1; 12; 52; 365. Anyway you count it, it's been a great start. Don't fight that feeling. I love u, D-.

Pe-He: Is it your 20th or 22nd? What is your SS - anyway? I'll bet you look so good on your Birthday that you break us up. Have a great one, love Pinhead & ES

To the guys at Theta-Chi You have the best parties with the best bands on campus. You men are the most. Love the girls of Coolidge

Jen - To Lola, Wawaa, Morsels, Ella, Bruce, Purple Rain, Archeology, Kickback, "Why do you HATE ME?" Buddyyy, Peanutbutter, Slop & Shop, Lead Guitar, 194 Massacres, and snowy birthdays! Happy Belated Birthday! Love Robyn

Dear Flamer, Here's to our new attitude hope it lasts! Love the one and only -- Bruce Bruno, I love the bracelet. Now you can buy me the necklace to go with it. They have a great selection between 77.$150 (40-70 savings at Golden Opportunity 13 N Pleasant, Amherst at Lodestone love, Mary Jane

Merryl what am I saying? I think you know! I love you and wish you the best B'day ever! Luff me

Spacecoaster you're terrific! So what if you can't be really mean. We all know meaness isn't nice anyway. Be happy CB

LUCKY CHARM LIPS. Thanks for a great weekend, I love you very much, Mike

Raff - Happy Birthday! I love you! PSSH

Snoopy - It has been an exciting and fun filled year together I love you so much! 4-ever Woodstock

Joshua - Happy..Happy Birthday! Je t'embrasse tres fort. - Susan

KML, great first month. No more risks. Love you KJM sorry it's late!

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To (from) Seattle Washington for Christmas break - share driving and expenses call PeterGeo at 546-4401

Ride needed to Rochester or Syracuse for Thanksgiving weekend. Will pay $. Please call Jay - 546-6066

To Long Island this Friday or Thursday call Rich 549-4726

ROOM WANTED

Female looking for housing or sublet for Jan 1 thru May 86 call Lisa 256-1301

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6895 evenings

Wanted: Easy-going, studious female to share clean, quiet, furnished, one bedroom Puffton apt. Spring semester 549-1313

Looking for female to share 1 bedroom apt in Cliffside Apts beginning Jan 1 187/mo inclusive! Call Christine 666-7729

Roommate wanted to look for an apartment with two nonsmoking females interested in North Amherst or Sunderland. Call 6-5068 or 6-4009 must be female!!

1 bdrm in 3 bdrm apt $200/mo on Rt 9 next to bus stop 586-4969

Female to share room in Brittany Manor apt. Nonsmoker. Feb to June call 253-3766 after 5:00

Wanted - person to share furnished house in N. Amherst musician/student, near bus, heat provided, $200.00/month only til May 256-8432 Randy

One bedroom in beautiful two bedroom fully furnished Southwood apt 1 or 2 p. call 253-9917 anytime

Brandywine apt. looking for someone to rent my room for Spring semester. Rent is $290 per month. Heat is included in price. Possibility that entire apt will be available. Couples welcome. Call 549-6289

One male wanted for Brandywine apt beginning Jan 1 call 549-5796 anytime

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1289

Typing, Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7662

EXPERT TYPING SERVICE Any length papers, grammar correction, modern WORD PROCESSING Letter quality Steve 549-7161

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2128 for an escort ANYTIME.

Don't let others beat you to it. Earn $400-$1200 parttime or $2000 $6000 fulltime call 546-9632

TO SUBLET

2 rooms available in 4 bedroom apt in Swiss Village. On busline. $215 inc for info call 256-1061

1 utility room apt $260/mth,* utility South Deerfield. Gas heat,* stove. Washer/dryer, fridge.Call Dominique at 665-3146. Available 12/01

TRAVEL

TAKE A BREAK ON THE FRENCH SIDE! Skibreak's January trip to Tignes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT airfare (Swissair), transfers, accommodations, skipass (116 lifts), slalom races, cocktails for $740? nights in resort. Skibreak: (203) 354-6069, or 546-4733

TYPING SERVICE

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

Drummer -- to play in 4 piece band i.e. EchoGunClub mostly original tho call Bill 546-5234

WANTED TO RENT

To take over 2 bdrm apartment lease in January. Call 546-5337 or 546-5287

Two females looking for one bedroom apartment in Puffton or Brandywine call 549-5188 ask for Amy or Brenda

To take over lease January 1 for a 2 or 3 bedroom apartment in N. Amherst or Sunderland. Call 546-4009 or 546-5568

WORD PROCESSING EDITOR

Must have Apple IIE, matrix printer Wordstar facility 256-0628 7-9 am/5-11 pm

SPORTS

Sports Information photo

University of Massachusetts guard Lorenzo Sutton is one of the top sophomores in the Atlantic 10 conference this season.

Atlantic 10 preview

UMass in midst of Atlantic Ten race

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 is looking for a little respect.

Born in 1976 as the Eastern Collegiate Basketball League, it evloved a year later to the Eastern Athletic Association. 1978 saw the league become the Eastern Eight and with the addition of two more teams, the Atlantic 10 was born in 1982.

Got that straight? Few people did and the league suffered from exposure problems. Exposure problems lead to recruiting problems and with the exception of West Virginia and the Philadelphia schools, the brand of basketball wasn't a good one.

The birth of the Big East and the continued success of the Atlantic Coast Conference has done little to help the league, but as the 1985-86 season begins, the league seems firmly established.

"Granted, we aren't the Big East or the ACC, but there's potential to become a very good league, even better then we are already," said second-year commissioner Charlie Theokas, under whose leadership the A-10 has stabilized.

West Virginia, Temple and St. Joseph's dominated the league last season, going a combined 44-10 in the league while no other team was over .500. Temple, by virtue of winning the league tourney, made the NCAA tourney. West Viginia and St. Joseph's setled for the NIT.

Those three teams, while still strong, face challenges to their supremacy this season. The University of Massachusetts, sparked by pre-season second team all-conference point guard Carl Smith, smooth off-guard Lorenzo Sutton and a cast of eight talented newcomers, will contend as will a Duquesne team that returns two key players that missed last season due to university-imposed suspensions.

St. Bonaventure and Rutgers lost key players, but are also tough. George Washington lost All-American center Mike Brown and controversial coach Gerry Gimblestob, but new head man John Kuester could field a strong team. Fiery Brendan Malone had a good recruiting year at Rhode Island, but he should still only ahead cellar-dwelling Penn State, a football power that doesn't have a strong committment to hoop.

A look at the individual teams:

St. Joseph's: All-American swingman Maurice Martin (16.5 points-per-game) is back along with 6-8 big man Rodney Blake (9.5 ppg). Guards James Flint and Geoff Arnold are tough guards. "With four starters back, we should be contenders," understates coach Jim Boyle.

Temple: The backcourt, with Nate Blackwell (11.8 ppg), Howard Evans (8.4 ppg and A-10 rookie-of-the-year) and Ed Coe (10.1 ppg) is tremendous. The frontcourt is a little shaky, but in this league, guards can win you games. "There's no question this league is balanced," says coach John Chaney. "But I think we can do well."

Massachusetts: Smith and Sutton are a potent backcourt, but UMass' future is in the hands of their rookies. Duane Chase, David Brown and John Milum are three of the best newcomers UM has had in a while. If UM comes together, they will surprise.

Duquesne: Emmett Sellars (21.1 ppg) and Ron Stevenson (9.2 ppg) won't be back until January, but when they join hot-shhoting guard Rick Suder (17.1), guard Collins Dobbs (12.2 ppg) and Mark Beavers (10 ppg), the Dukes will be tough. "I can't wait to see us when we have everybody," said coach Jim Satalin.

West Virginia: The cockiest team in the A-10 lost starter J.J. Crawl for the year with a suspension and two other starters until December 21. Rookie Daryl Prue, Dale Blaney (12.3 ppg) and Renardo Brown (9.1 ppg) are tough, but the Mountaineers are due for a fall. "The league's strong, but we're unconcerned," said the ever-friendly Gale Catlett.

Rutgers: Eric Riggins (12.6 ppg) and big (260 pounds) Lloyd Moore (8.2 ppg) will help new coach Craig Littlepage.

St. Bonaventure: has Barry Mungar (12.3 ppg), but a lot of questions too. George Washington, will soon be a power under Kuester, but Brown's absence will be greatly noticed. Rhode Island, has good recruits, but little support for Bryan Mitchell (14.5 ppg) and Carlton Owens (13.5 ppg). Penn State coach Bruce Parkill means well, but Paternoruled PSU is led by Ware product Carl Chrabascz, a bonafide member of the "who's he?" squad. Guard Tony Ward (8.3 ppg) may help the Nittany Lions somewhat.

UMass coach Ron Gerlufsen led the Minutemen to a fourth place finish in the A-10 last year.

St. Joseph's guard Maurice Martin is one of the A-10's best players

Previewing the 1985-86 Atlantic 10 season

Pre-season Prediction

1. St. Joseph's University.
2. Temple University.
3. University of Massachusetts.
4. Duquesne University.
5. West Virginia University.
6. Rutgers University.
7. St. Bonaventure University.
8. George Washington University.
9. University of Rhode Island.
10. Penn State University.

Pre-season All-Conference
Maurice Martin, 6-6 G/F St. Joseph's
Dale Blaney, 6-4, G West Viginia
Rick Suder, 6-4, G Duquesne
Carl Smith, 5-11, G Massachusetts
Rodney Blake, 6-8, C/F St. Joseph's

Freshmen of Influence
UMass' Duane Chase joins Rhode Island's Ric Blevins and West Virginia's Darryl Prue as the Atlantic 10's best incoming freshmen. Duquesne's Brian Shanahan could figure into the Duke's season.

Other freshmen to look for are UMass' David Brown, St. Bonaventure's Sam Graham

UMass men's swimming preview

Minutemen will be a N E power again

By JOE ROBERTS
Collegian Correspondent

Entering the 1985-86 season, University of Massachusetts men's swim coach Russ Yarworth is more than optimistic.

"For the second straight year, we're setting our goal to be New England champions," said Yarworth. "Last season, we were third, missing out on first by 40 points."

Another goal, although not as important as winning the New England championship, is an undefeated season.

"It's not really a goal," said the coach. "We don't even talk about it. Out major emphasis is the New Englands and not as much on dual meets. We try to win the dual meets, but the New England's are more important."

Yarworth seems to have the team to reach his lofty goals this season.

Led by co-captains Drew Donovan and Pat Mullen, the Minutemen have a powerful team. Donovan, a transfer from Iowa, holds New England records in the 100, 200 and 500 freestyles. A All-America and Olympic trials veteran, Donovan is one of New England's best swimmers.

"Drew's in a class by himself," said Yarworth. "He's tremendous."

Mullen, according to Yarworth, is one of the top five divers in New England, excelling on both the one and three meter events.

Two seniors that will bolster the team are Marc Surette and Paul McDonough. Surette was a New England finalist in the bacstroke and an academic All-American with a 3.98 grade point average in computer engineering.

"Marc can really be good if he shows the dedication he did last year," the coach noted. McDonough is a consistent butterflier and point scorer for the Minutemen.

In the junior class, five swimmers hope to help UMass to the title this season, but pre-season injuries have slowed three of them.

John Turner, a transfer from Kentucky, will have a Donovan-like impact on the program. An excellent backstroker, Turner is a threat to score a lot of points in the New Englands.

He has been nursing a bad back, but ap-

continued on page 14

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 55 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Friday, November 22, 1985

UM officials to review AIDS policy

By ANDREW WOLFF
Collegian Staff

Top University of Massachusetts officials are expected to review an interim policy for students and campus employees with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), or AIDS-related disorders, during a routine Executive Committee meeting Monday.

Sarah Boy, special assistant to Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson, said she knows of no one on campus carrying the disease, but believes the University should be prepared.

"We decided to be forewarned," Boy said Wednesday. "We figured it was an issue that will not go away too soon."

The aim of the policy, drafted by University Health Services Medical Director Thomas C. McBride and edited by Boy, will be to allow any University student or employee to attend their class or job, according to Boy.

"Individuals diagnosed with having AIDS or with clinical evidence of infection with the AIDS-associated virus (HTLV-III) and receiving regular medical attention are allowed to attend work or school at the University of Massachusetts/Amherst," the policy says. "As with any personal medical problem, every effort should be made to protect the individual's privacy and confidence with this diagnosis."

The policy also delegates McBride as the on-campus medical manager and will examine anyone infected before allowing the person on campus, Boy said.

The AIDS virus can be transmitted through sexual contact, needle sharing, or blood or its components, according to a report of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The report also said the virus cannot be transmitted through casual contact with AIDS victims.

"Since AIDS isn't spread by casual contact," Mark Clukey, a senior HRTA major and member of the Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Alliance, said yesterday, "people should be able to work and study at the University. I just hope that their policy is adhered to."

Vice Chancellors Madson, John DeNyse, administration and finance, Deirdre Ling, University relations and development and Samuel Conti, research, along with Provost Richard O'Brien, and members of Chancellor Joseph Duffey's staff will convene at 10:30 a.m. and discuss the policy, according to Boy.

Once approved by the vice chancellors and signed by O'Brien, the policy will be distributed to deans, department heads and possibly faculty, according to Boy.

"We want to be clear where we stand on the issue before it's a problem on campus," Boy said.

UMass hoop returns to Cage

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

It has been 629 days since the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team last played in the Curry Hicks Cage.

March 3, 1984 saw a capacity crowd of 4,200 watch UMass lose to Duquesne, 74-64. Only three players: Carl Smith, Tom Emerson and Jack Sheehan remain from that team.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

A workman helps prepare the newly-renovated Curry Hicks Cage for tomorrow's men's basketball game against Merrimack.

The Minutemen spent the 1984-85 season playing before silent crowds at the half-empty Springfield Civic Center while the Cage underwent extensive renovations.

Tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m., the Minutemen return to the Cage. Division 2 Merrimack College provides the opposition. Tickets set aside for the general public were sold out as of early Thursday afternoon. Students will be admitted free (with ID), but are advised to arrive early due to the expected sellout.

The Minutemen return to their home court free of the loser's image that has dogged them since 1978. Last season, despite the lack of fan support, the Minutemen became a contender. UMass finished 13-15, not great by any means, but much improved from years past when a game against UMass meant an automatic win. A 9-9 finish in the Atlantic 10 (good enough for a fourth place tie) marked the first time UM wasn't close to last place in the Atlantic 10 conference.

That season also sparked one of the best recruiting seasons ever for a UMass team. Eight talented rookies represent a new era for the UMass program. They team with six returning lettermen to form what, potentially, is the best UMass team in some time.

Potential. The 1985-86 UMass basketball team has that. Just how much fans will see against Merrimack, an underated Division 2 team that would like nothing better than start its season with a victory over a Division 1 team.

continued on page 27

Trade unions help blacks

Movement has force against apartheid

By RHONDA SWAN
Collegian Staff

Although it has not been given much media attention, the trade unionist movement in South Africa has been having a tremendous amount of impact in the struggle against apartheid, a University of Massachusetts labor studies professor said last night.

"Trade unions have made it possible to openly fight and collectively struggle against apartheid," Bill Fletcher, an adjunct faculty member in the Labor Studies Program, said in a lecture titled "Labor and the Fight Against Apartheid in South Africa."

Despite the fact that the Independent Trade Union movement has been developing since the mid 1970s, Fletcher maintains that it is "little known" because the media "plays up personalities and workers movements are not glamorous."

However, despite this lack of publicity, these labor movements have been gaining momentum and as a result have been met with stiff opposition from the South African government. According to Fletcher, one of the major issues of the trade union movement is the improvement of health and safety standards in the workplace.

It is by maintaining these abysmal working conditions that the regime increases its revenue and stays in power, said Fletcher.

Fletcher said he feels that the reason the unions have had such an impact is because "the workers have an independent voice." According to Fletcher, the two major unions in South Africa are the Federation of South African Trade Unions (FOSATU) and the Council of Unions of South Africa (CUSA). FOSATU is a non-racial trade union which permits whites to hold leadership positions while CUSA came about as part of a movement for black consciousness movement and promotes black leadership.

Despite their differences, Fletcher said that both unions have a "strong commitment to workers controlling and leading the unions." This is a major problem with unions in the United States because their leadership is, for the most part, maintained by intellectuals and not the rank and file workers, said Fletcher.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

Bill Fletcher: "Trade unions have made it possible to openly fight and collectively struggle against apartheid."

Inside:

Women respond to Reagan comment....3
The campus by night in photos....7
Budgetary dispute goes on....8
MFA exhibit, in arts....18
Minutewomen in Final Four....28
Volleyball hosts tournament....28

"Overall, this is the best team I've ever coached here."
—Women's soccer coach Kalerkeni Banda story, page 28.

Duffey counters criticism on phones

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey was in Boston yesterday to answer accusations that university officials in Massachusetts are wasting taxpayers' money through the "sloppy" monitoring of long distance phone calls.

The House Post Audit and Oversight Committee, chaired by Rep. Robert Carasoli (D-Quincy), has been looking into the "widespread abuse" of the state's telephone system, including phones, credit cards and equipment at UMass at Amherst and Boston, the University of Lowell, and Southeastern Massachusetts University.

"There is no evidence of major abuse on the Amherst campus," Duffey said last night. "The University of Massachusetts is totally different than most of the state agencies which the committee is examining. We are working on a scale here which is beyond any insitution they are discussing."

Duffey said the University is a public institution, but half of the phone costs here are paid for by non-state appropriated funds.

Committee members questioned Duffey about the 11,200 telephones on the Amherst campus, which cost a total of $2.2 million dollars a year.

The chancellor noted there are telephones in every dorm room, paid for by students. Only about half the money for Universityphone bills comes from the state, Duffey said, while the remainder comes from grants from the federal government and other resources.

The committee would like to see a centralized "policing and regulation" of the phone systems at the University, Duffey said, but he added: "I don't think that is necessary."

"There certainly may be things we can do to monitor University-wide phone use," Duffey said. "But I think department heads and chairmen are paying attention to proper procedure."

WORLD/NATIONAL

AP Laserphoto

Actor Larry Hagman breaks a cigarette as Gretchen Orthen, his adopted smoker during the American Cancer Society's anti-smoking day, watches him help "kick the habit."

Smokers quit for a day

Smokers in California watched the dancing Cancerettes, in Harlem they attended a "cold turkey" rally, and even the villainous J.R. Eviwng helped a smoker try to kick the habit yesterday during the ninth annual Great American Smoke-out.

The goal of the American Cancer Society, which sponsored the nationwide anti-smoking day, was to get one in five of the nation's 55 million smokers to quit for at least 24 hours. A preliminary survey showed that more than one in three smokers made the attempt.

Last year, a record 20.4 million smokers tried to quit and 5.4 million succeeded for the day, according to estimates drawn from a Gallup poll. About 3 million were still off cigarettes five days later.

An initial survey showed that 19.7 million smokers participated, but officials said that did not represent a drop because last year's early poll showed that 18.5 million had participated. That figure rose to 20.4 million after a later poll, and this year's total is also likely to rise when the final count is made next week.

The estimate is based on a telephone survey of 2,172 households.

One smoker got special help on yesterday. Gretchen Orthen, a nurse at St. John's Hospital and Health Center in Santa Monica, Calif., was "adopted" for the day by actor Larry Hagman, who plays J.R. Ewing on television. Hagman escorted Ms. Orthen around the "Dallas" set and to a rally and other activities in an effort to keep her mind off cigarettes.

South African police fire on thousands

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Police opened fire yesterday at a crowd of tens of thousands of black protesters outside Pretoria, witnesses said. A newspaper reported at least six people were killed and hundreds injured.

Police headquarters confirmed two deaths but made no mention of violence at the gathering, estimated by reporters to number more than 50,000, in Mamelodi, a sprawling black township north of Pretoria, the country's administrative capital.

It apparently was one of the biggest confrontations in 15 months of violence against apartheid, the legal system by which 5 million whites rule 24 million voteless blacks. More than 800 people, primarily blacks, have dies in the rioting, two-thirds of them killed by police and the rest by other blacks who suspect them of collaborating with the government, officials say.

The Mamelodi protesters were demanding lower rents, an end to restrictions on funerals, and the departure of soldiers and extra police from Mamelodi.

Several hours after the clash, Magistrate P.A.J. Burger banned all funerals in Mamelodi from this evening to Sunday evening. He said they could endanger the peace.

In Cape Town, Winnie Mandela, wife of jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, said the government had approved her husband's request to see his lawyers today amid persistent rumors he is about to be released. She said she regarded the speculation seriously because of its "unprecedented intensity."

However, President P.W. Botha's office said in a statement, "there is no truth in the rumors." The president was quoted earlier in the day as saying, "no decision has been taken" on releasing Mandela.

Mandela, 67, the former head of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement, is recovering in a hospital from prostate gland surgery Nov. 3. Although sentenced to life in prison 21 years ago, he still is widely regarded as the most important black leader in South Africa.

News of hostages delay

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Terry Waite, the archbishop Canterbury's envoy who is trying to free American hostages in Lebanon, was pinned down by gunfire between battling Moslem militias yesterday.

But in a message for the hostage's families, he said he is still optimistic about the kidnapped Americans' chances for freedom. He urged their relatives to be brave.

"Have courage. Keep calm We're making progress," Waite said in an interview in The Associated Press office as fighting raged in the streets below.

But, he cautioned, "We've a long way to go yet."

The street battles forced Waite to delay a news conference and his departure by plane to Larnaca, Cyprus. From there, he planned to fly on to New York for meetings with U.S. officials and church leaders on Waite met the Americans' kidnappers last week, flew to London to talk to U.S. officials and then returned to Beirut on Tuesday for more contracts with the Shitte fundamentalists holding the hostage.

Islamic Jihad, the group holding the Americans, had demanded the release of 17 comrades convicted in Kuwaite in the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassises. Kuwait has refused to free the prisoners.

Fla. storm forces evacuation

APALACHICOLA, Fla. (AP)—Hurricane Kate, carrying winds up to 100 mph, pelted the Florida Panhandle with heavy rain and gale-force winds yesterday as thousands fled waterfronts menaced for the fourth time in as many months.

Authorities closed roads, bridges and schools yesterday ahead of Kate, which continued its journey north through the Gulf of Mexico from Cuba, where it left up to 10 people dead and severe damage to crops.

Some people refused to leave, but many tiny coastal towns between Apalachicola and Pensacola were ghostly quiet and motels inland reported they were full.

Gov. Bob Graham, who a day earlier ordered that 37,000 people evacute lowlying areas, yesterday warned mobil-home residents inland to move away from Kate.

"Even though residents of the inland counties will not be subjected to the full force of Hurricane Kate as it crosses onto land, they still face extreme danger from extensive flooding, gale-force winds 39 to 54 mph and possibly even tornadoes," Graham said.

Tornado watches wereposted for parts of northern and central Florida and southern Georgia, the weather service said.

AP Laserphoto

SANTA SCHOOL - Mike Wallace, who has been Santa Claus at Christmastime for over 20 years, stands in front of a row of trainee Santas during a training program for this season yesterday in a Boston hotel.

MARKET STREET
Hampshire Mall

THE PERFECT GIFT
HANDYMAN'S BEST FRIEND
$3.00 REBATE!!

VISE-GRIP®
reg. price 12.99
sale price 8.99
factory rebate 3.00
YOUR COST $5.99

limit 2 per customer while supplies last

To the Womens Soccer Team:

BEST OF LUCK IN THE FINAL FOUR

The John Adams Tower is behind you all of the way

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Anne McCrory
Copy Editor: Jim Patriquin
Layout Technician: BethAnne Moscov
Photo Technician: Derek Roberts
Production Supervisor: Norm Achin
Production: Kelly Sieger, Laura Bell, Paula Saucier, Mark Parker, Lynn Smiley, Nancy Rivers
Day Graphics: Norm Achin, Martha Connors Ruth Devine, Betty Ann Murphy, Jim Podesky, Madog Rice, Kathy Wheeler and Faye Thanks Day Graphics Crew!!

Correction:

The length of time that the Great American Smoke Out has been held was incorrectly reported in a page 3 story in yesterday's Collegian. It has been held annually for nine years.

Action against apartheid urged at rally

By BRION McALARNEY
Collegian Staff

A member of South Africa's outlawed African National Congress (ANC) yesterday urged students to form anti-apartheid organizations and said Americans are ready to support the struggle in his country.

Jackie Selebi of the ANC, along with Doug Calvin, student coordinator of the New England Central American Network, spoke at a University of Massachusetts rally outside the Student Union Building that drew about 100 spectators. The rally was titled "From Soweto to San Salvador" and was sponsored by the University of El Salvador campaign, the Office of Third World Affairs, Radical Student Union, Third World Caucus, and the Organization for Marxist Studies.

"We believe people in the U.S. are ready to support our struggle," Selebi said."Reagan doesn't represent the majority."

Apartheid is the forced segregation of the races in South Africa, where a minority white government rules over a majority of blacks.

"Apartheid is institutionalized, written into our constitution," Selebi said."It prohibits 80 percent of the population from having any political, economic, and human rights.

"In South Africa, racism uses law to prohibit black people from taking part in the law making process," he said.

Selebi criticized countries that have made investments in South Africa.

"Every penny invested supports the racist regime, whose army kills our people. They become accomplices in the repression of our people," he said.

Selebi called absurd the argument that blacks would suffer most by the withdrawal of U.S. investments. "We will not be the first ones to suffer, we are suffering now...it is only a slavemaster who says if you free a slave, he will suffer," Selebi said.

"These companies benefit from our oppression by using cheap labor...they should go back to the U.S. and open plants there," he said.

"On apartheid, we can all agree it is important to destroy that evil, regardless of our political ideologies," Selebi said.

Calvin talked about the repression of education and free speech in El Salvador.

"The repression of students and faculty has not ended in El Salvador," Calvin said. In 1984, buildings on the University of El Salvador campus were bombed, equipment was sold to the military or destroyed, and the government refuses to reimburse the university for destroyed equipment, Calvin said.

A right-wing death squad recently published in a daily newspaper the names of student and faculty who would be killed if they didn't leave the country," Calvin said.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

NEON NIGHTS—These streams of light that illuminate downtown Northampton are actually car head lamps as captured in an 8-second time exposure. View is from the train bridge on the edge of town.

Letters protest future of teams

By ANITA ROYE
Collegian Staff

A total of 575 people had signed letters as of yesterday in a letter writing campaign to state officials to protest the dropping of five University of Massachusetts sports teams from varsity status.

The letters, which protest the athletic department's plan to reduce the varsity status of the men's and women's tennis and ski teams and men's golf to club standing, are being signed at a table situated near the Student Union Mini-Store and operated by members of these teams until Tuesday. They will be sent to state senators and representatives.

The budget cut, which will be finally decided upon by the board of trustees on Dec. 4, will allocate more funds for football and basketball scholarships and general support of these two teams.

Athletic department officials have said the cuts are necessary because the department cannot afford to fund the sports enough for them to be competitive.

The letter campaign is a culmination of efforts including more than two years of lobbying, rallying, and protesting to preserve the teams, said Stacey Roth, co-president of the Student Government Association.

The campaign is designed to "put pressure on the trustees through the Legislature," said Roth.

Between 1500-2000 letters are expected to be signed by the end of the campaign.

"If you're going to maintain diversity at the University, you need all the teams," said Roth.

Roth also said these teams provide a good involvement in the University sports for those who are not interested in contact sports.

If the teams are dropped from varsity status, they also lose medical benefits, busing to meets, and division standing.

Laura Morgan, a third-year tennis team member, said club standing would mean the team could only compete against other clubs or teams, if the opponents have the time.

Franklin "Flicker" Rodman, co-captain of the men's tennis team, said the reduction in status would mean that other teams such as Boston University and Boston College would not want to play a club group.

Bill MacConnell, head coach of the men's and women's ski teams, said status reduction would make the continuation of the teams not feasible. He also said the cut would mean the "end of the ski teams (which) won't work as a club" as a result of lack of travel, insurance, and medical expenses.

John Leaman, coach of the men's golf team, said if the budget cut goes through, the "intensity and quality won't be the same."

Police break up fight, 'war games'

Six men were stopped and searched Wednesday afternoon in the west experiment station area after police received reports of a man being thrown in front of the car they were in, University of Massachusetts Police said.

Police were sent to the area to break up a fight and later received reports that a man, whose hands were bound, was being thrown in front of a car, police said.

The car was stopped when it was leaving the parking lot by Worcester Dining Commons. The hands of one of the men in the car were bound, police said. The men and the car were searched and a bottle of vodka as confiscated.

The men said they were "playing war games," police said.

In other police reports:

A 19-year-old student was arrested and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol Wednesday night. In a further investigation, three bongs and a marijuana pipe were confiscated and the student was found to be in possession of an altered Massachusetts driver's license, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Women debate Regan's remark

Ap File Photo

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan

By LISA DIMEO
Collegian Correspondent

Several University of Massachusetts women faculty members expressed anger yesterday over White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan's comment that women wouldn't understand the issues involved in the U.S.Soviet summit conference in Geneva.

Regan's expectation that women would find the "human-interest stuff" of the summit most appealing didn't carry much weight with political science professor Jean Elshtain.

"Regan's comment indicates that he's rather out of touch with the world around him,"said Elshtain.

Elshtain pointed out that Regan was incorrect in current as well as historical terms since there have always been women interested in international politics and human rights.

"The majority of people don't have expert knowledge," she said, but it is "anti-democratic" to suggest that only experts can understand and comment on important issues.

Regan in his address suggested that women following the summit wouldn't understand the technical aspects of the talks and should follow what Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev are doing.

Joyce Berkman, a professor of history, said, "Regan is in error as to the contemporary nature of women's understanding and involvement in political issues."

Berkman praised Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for his insight that women are "keenly concerned" with world peace.

On a more cynical level, Berkman suggested women might be better off by reading human-interest since the media cannot be trusted in its coverage of the issues.

"There is a massive ignorance about culture and nations," she said, "and the media is an insufficient means with which to build an understanding."

Arlene Avakian of the women's studies program said Regan's comment is "more evidence of the Neanderthal mentality in the Reagan administration."

"The Reagan administration knows only how to violate human rights," she said.

GREAT GIFT IDEA
We ship Holiday Gift Boxes.
Choose from a wide variety of cheeses, coffee
and condiments.

THE CHEESE SHOP

79 Main Street, across from Plumbleys

Imported Cheeses Coffee Beans
Bulk Tea Fresh Pasta
Delicious Giant Cookies and other Baked Goods
Gourmet Groceries
Daily until 6; Saturday until 5; Sundays 9-1

C & C LIQUORS
61 Main St., Amherst
Next to Town Hall
FOR FREE DELIVERY OF $20 MINIMUM ORDER.
(OFF UMASS CAMPUS)
Dial
253-3091
All Prices In Store Cash Only

1982 Chateau Cos d' Estournal — 97 Points - Robert Parker — our everyday price! 750 ml $24.95
1982 Chateau Gruand LaRose — 95 Points - Robert Parker — our everyday price! 750 ml $24.95
CAN BE ASSORTED WITH OTHER WINES FOR A 10% PRICE DISCOUNT

YVONNE'S
CARRIBBEANA RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials
with Super Island Vegetarian and Regular dishes
Prices from $2.50 and up
50¢ DRAFT BEER
with all lunches
Route 9, Hadley
586-4389
Lunch Hours 11:30-3:00 pm Monday - Friday
Dinner Hours 5:00-10:00 pm Every Night

ST. PAULI GIRL
6 pk. $3.25 + dep.
after rebate

Sutter Home
Sparkling
White Zinfandel
750 ml $6.25

Peter Dawson
Scotch
1 liter $7.99

KAHLÚA
750 ml. $11.49

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco
imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes
imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

NOW OPEN
Riverboat Village
APARTMENTS, SOUTH HADLEY.
1, 2 or 3 BEDROOM UNITS
BEAUTIFUL MODELS FURNISHED BY CHAP DELAINES & EPSTEIN FURNITURE CO.
•Swimming Pool •Tennis Court •Club House •Shuffle Board Court
FINANCED BY MHFA
LEASED ON OPEN OCCUPANCY BASIS
OPEN SEVEN DAYS A WEEK
10 AM 4 PM
PHONE 532 9461
532 9462
CALL FOR DIRECTIONS
Riverboat Village
River Lodge Rd
So. Hadley, MA 01075

DELANO'S
FINE FOOD
&
SPIRITS
Mon & Tues Nite
Free Taco Bar*
* 9 - till it lasts!
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL
Heineken
57 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

HIGH SCORERS

NIKE® AIR JORDAN™
$48.
Reg.$59.99

BROOKS® UNIQUE™
$40.
Reg.$49.99

PONY® CITY WINGS™
$38.
Reg.$47.99

Move ahead on and off the court. Our brandname leather high top basketball shoes are designed to keep you ahead of the competition. At these sale prices you're already a step ahead.
Men's sizes 6½ to 12

OLYMPIAN
We thrive on competition.
Hampshire Mall, Rte. 9, Hadley.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

Nutritionist Virginia Beal: Fad diets are "the rhythm method of girth control."

Nutritionists' opinions differ

By LESLEY CLARK and JOE SHARTRAND
Collegian Staff

Nutritionists have conflicting opinions about the relationship between diet and long life, University of Massachusetts nutritionist Virginia Beal said last night.

Beal, speaking in Memorial Hall as part of the Chancellor's Lecture Series, said there is an overabundance of theories as to the part nutrition plays in health, but "very little concrete evidence."

"Broccoli has had an increased popularity in restaurants and cocktail parties but there is shaky evidence in the relationship between broccoli and the prevention of cancer." —Virginia Beal

Beal said recent dietary recommendations have dodged the issue of precise guidelines by issuing vague advice such as to "avoid too much salt." She said the primary reason there are no definitive answers is the inadequacies in the data available. Animal studies, she said, have limited usefulness because the animals are in a controlled environment. "Man is not a rat," she said. "Animals are not subject to the same lifestyles as humans."

The advances we have made in nutrition have allowed us to live longer, Beal said, "but more of us are getting to the age where we see slower developing diseases such as heart disease and hypertension." She said the role of nutrition in such diseases is hard to trace because of the slow development of the disease and the money needed to fund such extensive research.

"New studies are continually undermining firmly held beliefs," Beal said. Sodium has traditionally been the culprit in hypertension (high blood pressure), she said, but recent studies indicate that calcium may be a factor in some individuals.

Beal said the emphasis on fad diets is based on incomplete evidence. "Broccoli has had an increased popularity in restaurants and cocktail parties," she said, "but there is shaky evidence in the relationship between broccoli and the prevention of cancer."

Beal, who came to the University in 1971, has written extensively on nutrition and development. Her work includes a series of articles on diet and growth of infants in Western Massachusetts.

All Day Conference
Workshops on NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS
Political and Social Issues
- Defense of Sacred Landi Navajo
- Political Issues in Guatemala - Mayan Indians in Sanctuary
- Archipel Project Dam - the threatened Mohawk people
- North American Indian: Political Prisoners
- Health Trends on Reservations
Nov. 23 10-5 p.m.
Campus Center Rms. 804-815

RCA MODEL VLT 375 VCR

• remote control • 14 day, 4 event timer
• cable ready • reg $350
NOW ONLY $299.00
limited quantities — hurry in today!
VIDEO To Go
44 Main St., Amherst
256-1509

John Dellaria
presents a
"CUT-A-THON" with ALL
proceeds going to the EveryWoman's Center
Haircuts will be $8.00
at Wilder Hall (behind Morrill Science Center)
Sun. November 24th
Time: 11 am - 3 pm
FREE Dellaria products will be given out!!

BLAZER BUTTONS
With the University of Massachusetts Crest
A distinctive accent to enhance your favorite blazer. The university crest, authentic in design and colors, is hand-crafted in cloisonne enamel and finished in 24 kt. gold plate. The set of 3 large and 4 small buttons is beautifully giftboxed.
Other college, university and prep school blazer button sets are available by special order.
House of Walsh
32 Main St., Amherst • 253-3361 • Mon.-Sat. 9-5:30

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

"Golden Arches"? The concrete arches of the Fine Arts Center lookin west lead to fast food but to Herter Hall.

Jonathan Reid

Buy one suit at $150.00
& get the SECOND $150.00 suit
FREE

also OLEG CASSINI
All Weather Coats
Reg. $125.00 now only $69.99
Reg. $135.00 now only $79.99

located at Hampshire Mall in Hadley

There's Something for Everyone on your list at

THE OLD MILL

Rte. 63 N. Amherst
1 mile north of UMass
Open Daily 10-6

THINK CHRISTMAS AT OUR ONE STOP SHOP

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS

THE GREAT SKI SNATCH

$500,000
WORTH OF TOP NAME
WINTER CLOTHING
&
SKI EQUIPMENT

PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437

NOV 21 - 23

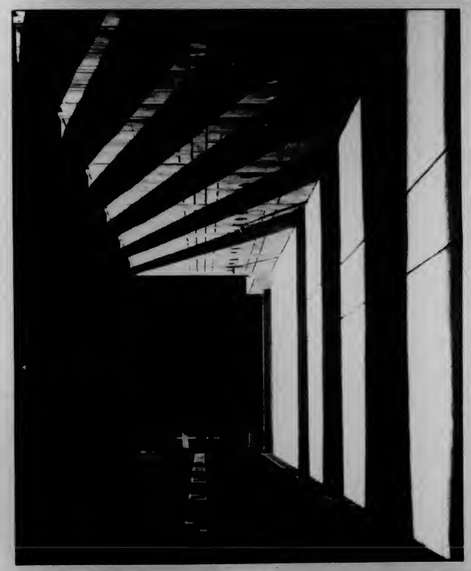
T } HIGH
F } NOON
TIL 10 P.M.

S 10AM TIL 4PM

STUDENT UNION
BALLROOM
UMASS, AMHERST

Gobble Up the Savings!

4 Day
Shoe Sale
10% to 50%
Savings Storewide on Shoes & Boots



Thurs.-Sun., Nov. 21-24

SHOE BIN

OPEN SUNDAYS

187 n. pleasant st amherst

All of these photographs are of subjects seen by many students every day (or night). The viewer need only exercise a little imagination to see that something is not as ordinary as it appears to be. Many of the buildings at the University have this type of graphical potential: it only requires a few basic technical skills, a camera and an interest in photography.

All of the photographs in this essay were taken with a Canon AE-1 (35mm single lens reflex) camera mounted on a Velbon VEF-3 tripod and Kodak 400 speed (b&w) Tri-X film.

Images were enlarged using a Besseler 23CII enlarger on Kodak RC (resin coated) polycontrast paper (grade F) with a No.3 1/2 contrast filter.

Collegian photos by Paul Desmarais

TOP: Whitmore Administration Building northside ramp. Star effect Canon 199A flashgun hand held. Exposure: 75 seconds at f/16.

LEFT: Tobin Hall overhang looking west. Photograph was made using available light from a halogen type street lamp. Exposure: 50 seconds at f/11.

BOTTOM: John Adams Tower, west side looking skyward. Exposure: 40 seconds at f/11.

SGA, Donant clash over control

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

Student government officials are in opposition with Director of Student Activities Randy Donant about the student budgetary process, as both sides yesterday defended their right to have more input.

Donant explained his actions by saying he holds a fiduciary role for the University, which he said means he has been placed in trust by those people above him such as vice chancellors and the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees. He said there are no clearly written documents on who has trust fund control, and added "that it's how you interpret these documents" that is confusing senators who say he is violating students' rights.

Several senators said Donant has absolutely no right to assume more control of the trust fund, because the trustees have in the past granted the Student Government Association the right of budgetary input involving student fees. Senators produced various documents which they said proved that the senate has the power to control its resources and programs. However, Donant said none of the documents is officially recognized by the trustees as to whom has budgetary control.

The Undergraduate Student Senate, angered by Donant's move to gain more responsibility of the operations and organizations within the Student Activity Trust Fund, voted unanimously Wednesday to call for his resignation.

Last night the Campus Center Board of Governors voted unanimously to also call for Donant's resignation, issuing a statement that it "pledges its full support to the SGA in an attempt to deal efficiently with the situation."

Donant and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson issued a memorandum Tuesday to senate officers which outlined actions concerning future SGA budgets starting in fiscal year 1987. The actions increase Donant's input and allocation power of programs and agencies which were under student control prior to the memo's release.

"Personally, I don't think he (Donant) has the right to do this at all," said Senator Joel Rabinowitz, who met with Donant for 90 minutes yesterday. "The purpose of this (memo) is to take away a lot of power from the student government and the students as a whole."

Donant, responding to the call for his resignation, said "I'm not surprised." He said someone had to do something in light of the fiscal crisis the SGA is facing, and that he was exercising his responsibility.

Citing Donant's bid to assume more control of the trust fund, Senate Speaker John Ruddock said "It could be said that Randy has been hired to disempower students."

Native Americans topic of seminar

The Native American Indian as a "political prisoner" and other problems that face North American Indians will be discussed at a conference in the Campus Center.

The conference presenting workshops on social and political issues, form 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in rooms 809 and 815 is designed to "expose, educate, and bring in support," Donna Goodleaf, a major coordinator of the convention and first year graduate student said.

Throughout the month, cultural workshops, art exhibits, traditional dances, and films on Native Americans have been presented to prompt university and community awareness of American Indian history and culture.

Six workshops will be offered throughout the day, including the following: American Indians, political prisoners; Political issues in Guatamala, Mayan Indians in sanctuary; Defense of Sacred land, Navajo; Archipel Project Dam, threat to Mohawk Nation; Current Health Trends on Reservations; and Cultural Perspectives.

An information booth will open at 9:30 a.m. the 8th floor of the Campus Center

—Kristin Aiello

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO

1177 North Pleasant St., Amherst
549-3669

For Fresh Veal, Chicken, Seafood, and Homemade Pasta, Pizza and Subs
Serving the Finest Italian Specialities
Full Beverage License
Cappuccino Expresso Homemade Desserts
Serving Dinner Hours: Weekdays 5 'till 9:30
Weekends 5 'till 10:00
FAST, FREE DELIVERY FOR PIZZA & SUBS

Sophia bookshop

Book Of the Year
How Can I Help? Stories and Reflections On Service.
by Ram Dass and Paul Gorman.
$5.95
103 North Pleasant Street
Amherst 253-5574

SEMESTER AT SEA

PRESENTS A SPECIAL SLIDE SHOW

Discover an exciting way to travel around the world and continue your undergraduate studies aboard ship. Visit major ports in the Mediterranean, the Middle East and the Orient. More than 60 voyage related university credit courses are offered.

SPECIAL SLIDE PRESENTATION
& INFORMATION SESSION
Monday Nov. 25, 7:30 pm, CC Room 165
Financial Aid is available to qualified students
APPLICATIONS ARE STILL BEING ACCEPTED
FOR SPRING 1986!!!
SEMESTER AT SEA TOLL FREE NUMBER (800) 854-0195

"Seas, but join the region they divide."
. . .Alexander Pope

The Institute for Shipboard Education cordially invites all interested faculty, staff, and students to "Celebrate and Evening of Academic Adventure"
with
Semester At Sea
Special Presentation and Information Session
Monday, Nov. 25
7:30 PM CC Room 165
Come Meet:
Dr. Max H. Brandt, Director of Academic Affairs, Doreen Kelly, Associate Director of Admissions, and Semester at Sea alumni from the University of Massachusetts.

Attention Skiers:
Free Airline Ticket to Austria Ski Resorts
Fly with us to Greece and stay for at least a week and we will give you a free roundtrip airline ticket from Athens to Austria.
For reservations call:
UNIVERSITY TRAVEL & TOURS
225 Main St.
Northampton, Mass 01060

If you ski in Greece you get another free airline ticket from Boston to New York. Parnasos, an excellent and inexpensive resort in Greece, two hours driving from Athens.
Deadline: Tues, Nov 26, 1985

Daily Collegian
Advertising that works!!
Call: 545-3500

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA (NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

安城中国飯店
Amherst Chinese Foods
Best Mandarin Food
62-64 MAIN ST., AMHERST
BEER & WINE LICENSE
Fresh Vegetables from Our Own Farm
CLOSED WEDNESDAY
WE DO NOT USE MSG OR ARTIFICIAL COLORING
253-7835

nassau florida
$25
WILL HOLD YOUR BED
SPRINGBREAK
CALL NOW! 256-1261
COUNCIL TRAVEL SERVICES
79 SO PLEASANT ST AMHERST

For Less Than The Price of A Lift Ticket Alone...
Peter Pan's Stratton Mt. Express Package Combines Transportation and Skiing Fun From $25.00

Dec. 3, 1985 - March 16, 1986 Stratton
Peter Pan Bus Lines and Stratton Mountain are offering a special ski package this season... a way to further stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun.
Arrival at Stratton Mt.: 9:00 a.m. • Leave Stratton Mt.: 4:30 p.m.
Peter Pan's Stratton Mountain Express round-trip service is available Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and a day's lift ticket for just $25.00 Tuesday, Thursday and $27.00 on Sunday... less than you'd pay for a lift ticket alone! A great value to stretch your skiing dollar and your skiing fun. Advanced reservations only.
Tickets available at all local college campuses and at the Peter Pan Bus Lines Atlantic City Office. For further information on pick up points and reservations...
Contact: The People Professionals
Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc.
1776 Main St., P.O. Box 1776
Springfield, MA • 781-2900 Ext. 253
MA Toll Free 1-800-332-8995

SILADIUM RINGS
NOW ONLY $89.95

SAVE $50
ArtCarved Siladium college rings are now more affordable than ever. Choose from an incredible variety of styles. See your ArtCarved representative now and save $50 on a great Siladium college ring. Every ArtCarved ring is backed by a Full Lifetime Warranty.
Final Day
ARTCARVED CLASS RINGS
ASK ABOUT OUR EASY PAYMENT PLANS $
11/20 - 11/22 DATE
10 - 4 TIME
UNIVERSITY STORE PLACE
Deposit Required

BRUEGGERS
BAGEL BAKERY
Open Seven Days
A Week
Bagels Baked Fresh Daily
Try Our Pizza Bagel
Only $1.59
Tel 253-5713 170 N. Pleasant St.

Le Boudoir
Intimate Fashions

warm snuggly nightgowns and robes, silk long johns for women and men, undershirts, camisoles, tap pants, teddies, body stockings, pantyhose, and much more.

It's not too early to think about holiday gift buying.
We have lots of ideas.

Carriage Shops, 233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 549-6915
M-S 10-5:30, Sun. 12-5:00

Juniors, Seniors & Grads...
GIVE YOURSELF SOME CREDIT!

· High Approval Rates · No Cosigner
· Free to Apply · No Job Requirements
LOOK FOR OUR BOOTH ON CAMPUS OR CALL NOW TOLL-FREE FOR AN APPLICATION
DIAL 1-800-824-4000 ext. 425

Governors Program Council presents:
The Razz-Bang Dance Bonanza
Sick of the Bars or Don't have an ID?

Last Chance for Fun before Thanksgiving at the Bluewall, Nov. 23
9 pm to 1 am
$2.00 Admission
with D.J. Peter Gold

adirondack music
"THE STEREO PROFESSIONALS"
15 East Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-3100

PRE-THANKSGIVING TURKEY DAY SALE

SONY

Trinitron cable ready perfect size for anyone!
* blemished units with full new warranty
$249.95

SHERWOOD
Buy of a lifetime
2620 50 watt electronically tuned RECEIVER with presets 3 yr warranty plus a whole lot more
S90 Dolby Cassette Deck with metal tape capability
A $370 value and $53 below our cost at:
both pieces for
$99.95

JAMO
This is another opportunity to own one of the industries "most amazing speakers", from one of the largest loudspeaker manufacturers in the world today.
POWERLINE SERIES
P180 3 way loudspeaker handling cap. 120 W full five year warr save $400
$199.95 pair
P270 3 way loudspeakers handling capacity 180W full five year warranty save $500
$299.95 pair

SONY
CFS 3000 (refurb) Boom Box with detachable speakers music search and more seen elsewhere for $170.00 only $69.95
PSLX410 fully automatic quartz lock direct drive turntable
$99.95

Store Hours
Mon-Sat 10-6
Thur 9 a.m.
til 7 pm
15 East Pleasant St. Amherst
MC/Visa/Check add 3% all items
Limited quanity subject to prior sale
TDK SA90 audio cassettes
$1.99

UM project resolves conflicts

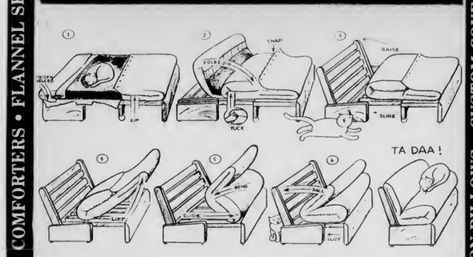
By INGRID DYCK
Collegian Correspondent

The Mediation Project at the University of Massachusetts offers an alternative means of settling disputes, without the aggravation of formal court proceedures.

It is a voluntary process which is "completely confidential," and people can "feel free to discuss their problems," said Julie Andrews, a staff assistant and student intern for the project.

Janet Rifkin, a legal studies professor, is the founder and director of the project. Plans for the project began in 1979 as an experiment that realized the limits of the legal system. In a case involving a fight between two brothers, "the court only wants to know so much, while the mediateors try to get at the reason why someone would hit his brother," said Andrews.

Mediation is available to students and members of the community. While the project deals with about five to 10 various cases a week, the more common ones include landlord-tenant disputes, and conflicts between roommates.



The first step a student must take is to explain the problem at a session called the "intake." If the dispute is suitable for mediation, Andrews said, the other party is contacted and asked to come in. Occasionally, disputes may be referred to other agencies.

The second step is to schedule a mediation session at the convenience of both parties. First there is a "Public session," where the two mediators and parties in disupte have an open discussion. Then there is a "private session," where a disputant meets with his/her mediator.

Mediators then meet in private and look for points of agreement, Andrew said.

"Mediators cannot tell you what to do, they are neutral and they are there to help you communicate," Andrews added. On the average it takes about two or three two-hour sessions to reach a settlement.

GOOD NIGHT BEDDING
FUTONS • COMFORTERS • FLANNEL SHEETS
COTTON PILLOWS • CUSTOM COVERS

56 Main Street
NORTHAMPTON
586-0259
Carriage Shops
AMHERST
549-3507
10:30 - 5:30 Tues - Sat

FUNNYBONES
Cocktail Lounge
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
FRI. NOV. 22, 1985 5-9
Direct from Cape Cod
"JUST GEORGE"
Fri & Sat Nov 22, 23 9-1
SQUARE ONE BAND

Roger
former manager of John Dellara
now appearing at:
Michael's Hair Studio
Carriage Shops, Amherst
Upper Level
549-6973

"A roaring, wonderfully funny '10'! Everyone who likes a good, funny movie will like GHOSTBUSTERS. Don't miss it."
— Gary Franklin, KCBS-TV

"GHOSTBUSTERS is pure gold all the way."
— Sheila Benson, LOS ANGELES TIMES

"Grandly comic...neatly timed and perfectly packaged."
— Richard Schickel, TIME MAGAZINE

Friday, November 22
umass campus center auditorium
5:00 pm - $1.75
7:00 pm - $2.00
9:00 pm - $2.00
11:00 pm - $2.00
sponsored by: AAS

Winter's coming...
Get prepared now and SAVE!
$5.00 Off
Any Women's Winter Boot
WITH THIS COUPON
ALL THE LATEST STYLES AVAILABLE!
Offer good thru 11/30/85
at
BOLLES SHOES
8 Main St.
AMHERST
253-5598

Letters

Ineffective leadership the problem

I wish to respond to the column by fellow senator Brian Culverhouse that appeared in the Collegian (Nov. 18). He seems to believe that the problem with the student senate rests with a "few disruptive senators" who do not respect the rules of order that exist. Culverhouse impressions are clearly wrong.

I too am a first year senator who is dismayed by the progress that the senate has made so far this year. However, the problem is not with the "few disruptive senators" but with the ineffective leadership abilities of the Senate Speaker and the way that many "progressive" senators view the body as a whole.

The student senate was set up to address questions of student empowerment, but in recent years this question has not even been discussed, except by those "few disruptive senators." The "progressives" have held control of the senate for so long that they have forgotten what the senate was set up for in the first place. If one looks at the motions that these "progressive" senators have brought to the floor of the senate one can realize my point. They attempted to give our student money to the Black Panther Organization; they condemned the United Technologies Corporation; and they even attempted to condemn the U.S. invasion of Grenada. Clearly, these issues do notbelong on the floor of the student senate.

The "few disruptive senators" are the only senators actually working for their constituents. They are vocal because they have seen the body turn from a place where student issues were discussed to a place where endorsing (or condemning) national issues have become a priority. If we are the minority, so be it. But, I believe that most of the student body agrees with us. The student senate will continue down its current path until many senators realize what the senates original purpose was.

Tony Rudy
Sylvan

Safe in bed, or so they thought

Dear Robber,

The other morning I awoke to a freezing cold apartment and discovered that my back door was wide open. You had visited me in the night while my roommates and I were asleep safe in our beds; or so we thought. When I realized that my purse and wallet had been stolen I was both shocked and frightened. How could I have been so careless as to leave my purse in my own living room? After all, shouldn't I expect that you would invade my home uninvited in the middle of the night?

How could you know that the $100 that you took from me was the result of four nights of work. "Thank God,"my mother said, "they didn't take you." And I agreed that I was lucky, until I realized that you ran off with my camera bag as well. Now as far as I'm concerned you did take part of me. Do you know that that camera has been a constant companion for two years? I'm devastated and I cannot replace it. Have you found the picture of the Pope in the back of it yet? Will you develop the wedding pictures? Don't forget to clean the filters carefully.

What will you do with my camera and lens? Sell it? How much does a hot camera go for—a hundred bucks? You already have the $100! Keep it and keep my wallet, but please, please, please Robber find it in your heart to return my camera.

Lynda Mooney
Amherst

Lamentable tendency to judge

Columnist Rusty Denton merits commendation for sincerity addressing his concern about the lack of genuine dialogue which sometimes surfaces around socio-political issues in the college community, ("Rhetoric not impressive," Nov. 19).

What I found dismaying, though, was his tendency to adopt the judgemental stance he finds lamentable in others. While decrying the unfortunate proclivity of human beings to label those who are perceived as irretrievably "other," one should recognize he may be also labelling them. To transcend this morass, we might recognize the universal trait to resist change and cling to the familiar. In a region such as the Pioneer Valley where the climate of intellectual ferment is conducive to both human growth and the development of workable solutions to the various dilemmas facing the globe, we each have a responsibility to facilitate communication.

An additional dynamic which deserves examining is the one Denton cites as the "adversarial" style of some activists. Various factors may contribute to this, including the sometimes forced desire for human solidarity, a sense of urgency vis-a-vis certain issues: the arms race, the relationship of sex and race discrimination with poverty rates, and the general malaise of so many Americans today which expresses itself as antipathy to those voices which challenge the status quo. As a Christian, one might expect Denton to reveal more magnanimity for this group. Let us all perservere in seeking genuine communication; the grim alternative is what Erich Fromm termed a "humaniod" existence—one where people are "well-fed and entertained" but passive and lacking human feeling. That prospect, which I would resist dismissing too quickly in this age of realism which masks the flight from seeking a better world and official "hate sessions" which term whole nations as "evil," is one which we'd all do well to better struggle against despite the inevitable resistances, both inner and outer.

R. Jay Allain, '73
Pacifica, CA

Sorry to miss the Coors party

I'm sorry I missed the Southwest Coors Party at Changes on Nov. 13. Oh yes, I did have the time to attend and I am of legal drinking age, but I believe in a moralistic lifestyle.

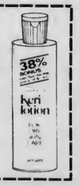
Last year, the recommended banning of Coors from this campus had a positive effect on the University. The reason for the recommendation was that Coors is a neo-fascist, anti-union, sexist, and racist company. Coors also invests money in the apartheid government of South Africa.

This University holds views against apartheid. I am expressing this because of all the positive gestures that have happened this semester, such as the anti-apartheid rally and the symbolizing of anti-apartheid through blood-soaked ribbons. This type of activity gives students positive outlooks on life. When dealing with problem states, students learn that they can help even if they are not directly related with the state.

To get back to my main subject, Southwest, with 5,000 students, the majority underage, sponsored a Coors party. This type of activity amazed as well as shocked me. I think this pro-Coors attitude represented by Southwest's Coors party should not occur with University sponsorship. This sets up bases for the racist and sexist attitudes that UMass is trying to break down.

Now that I recall Nov. 13, I wish that I had attended the party. I could have received a free Coors hat, poster, t-shirt, and key chain. I could have worn my shirt and become a walking billboard for a un-American company called Coors.

Michael Wysocki
Orchard Hill



COLLEGE DRUG
9-9 weekdays/9-6 Sat/9-3 Sun
4 Main Street, Amherst. Phone 253-2523

9 oz. Keri lotion Sale price $3.99
WITH COUPON $2.99

Valuable Coupon

$1.00 OFF
Keri lotion 9 oz.

good thru Nov. 27 or while supplies last

Hey dude, how about you and me headin to J.B.'s tonight?!?

You're repulsive!!

J.B.'s where relationships start!!

JBs HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

If you are either one of these people, come in Today (11/22) or Saturday (11/23) and you will receive a complimentary Large Beef, Mozzarella Sticks, and Medium Coke
11 am - 2 am 7 days
253-7018
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

FOUR SEASONS
Wines/Liquors

BEER SPECIALS
MICHELOB/MICHELOB LIGHT..... $11.99
LOWENBRAU..... $11.99
BUSCH..... $8.99
COORS..... $11.50
MOOSEHEAD..... $12.99
UTICA CLUB..... $6.50

LIQUOR SPECIALS
MALIBU RUM.....750.....$6.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT.....750.....$7.49
VODKA & GIN.....1.75 L.....$8.99

WINE SPECIALS
ALMADEN WINES.....1.5 L.....$3.99
TAYLOR CALIFORNIA CELLARS...3 L...$5.99
GALLO TABLE WINES.....3 L.....$4.99
PARDUCCI VINTAGE RED & WHITE.....$5.99

Lots of In Store Specials!!

'85 BEAUJOLAIS NOUVEAU IS HERE in store tasting Friday and Saturday

Route 9, Hadley 584-8174

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985

Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Elizabeth Luciano, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Susan Eaton, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

The nearest to excellence

Michael Thelwell

As a faculty member of many years service and a former West Indian soccer player and coach, I had all semester felt it my patriotic duty to attend a home game of our women's team. Schedule conflicts and a certain chauvinism prevented me from so doing until their penultimate game against Springfield College.

The chauvinism was not particularly based on their gender, but on their nationality. After all, Americans regardless of gender, could hardly be expected to display either the fundamental soccer skills, much less the sophisticated grasp of the nuances and finer points of the game required to excite my expert interest, say nothing of my admiration. True, our young ladies had labored all semester under the burden of a number one national ranking, but so what—in the country of the blind, the one-eyed person is king or queen, as the nature of the state dictates. Let me now hasten to confess my error, my most grievous error. I was at the same time chagrined, surprised and delighted. What I saw, first against Springfield and then against BC in the slushy mud, was a soccer team of first excellence. They were excellent, not as women or as Americans, they were simply excellent as soccer players.

Not only was there surprising skill and talent at every position, but at several positions the talent, physical skills and competitive brilliance of the players filled one with wonder and admiration. I could hardly believe the degree of progress that their game demonstrated over past years.

But there, indeed, was more. A group of exceptionally gifted athletes, supported by fundamentally sound and well-schooled teammates, does not necessarily result in team excellence. What we have here at UMass is a supremely well-coached, extraordinarily coordinated, selfless, disciplined, and cohesive team. They are a spirited, unified, supremely efficient soccer team made up of remarkably engaging young women. Over 16 games they have not been beaten or tied. They have been scored on but twice. I do not recall a similar record for any athletic team in collegiate competition. Having seen them play I understand that this record is no accident.

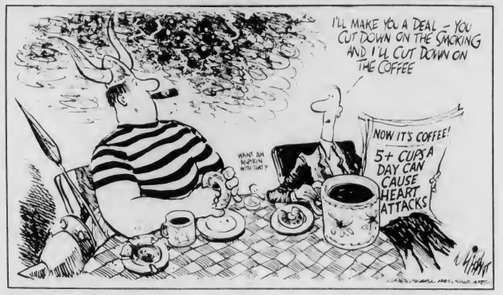
If Jimmy the Greek paid attention to such matters they would be overwhelming favorites to sweep the national tournament. And if they do not, it will either be because of mischance or injury or because, implausible as it seems, they meet a team that surpasses them in skill, preparation and spirit. Neither is likely, but should it happen it would detract in no way from the extraordinary brilliance of what they have given us thus far. Over the years at this institution I have heard many exhortations to excellence. In an institution of higher learning that is to be expected. The nearest we have come in my experience, is this year with Coach Banda's young women warriors. I thank them all, and wish them the best in the Final Four. As they themselves so elegantly and expressively put it Kick Ass UMass.

Michael Thelwell is a professor in the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies.

Getting the entire story

Mitch K. Gaslin

The Big Chill is about to make a return engagement to UMass, and although I hate to disappoint you films buffs, this time we're talking about a not-so-nostalgic return to a different point in American history—a return to the 1950s and the rabid anti-communism of Senator Joe McCarthy. That's right, a return to the times of the House Commitee on Un-American Activities and blacklists.



This time around, instead of the crazy activities of McCarthy, we're being threatened by a group with the ambiguous name of "Accuracy in Academia, Inc." While the "Purpose and Goals" of this organization sound pretty tame, a closer look at their activities should give us reason to feel threatened. According to AIA, their goal is to "promote greater accuracy in education at the college level." This rather mild statement makes you wonder why groups like the American Association of University Professors have referred to the group as a "threat ot academic freedom" and why professors like Dr. Mark Reader at Arizona State have denounced AIS as "thought police." Why even our own Chancellor Duffy, never one to go out on a limb unless it's to prosecute students, has come out against the group.

Maybe we students aren't really getting the entire story. While Accuracy in Academia claims that their activities will "improve the quality of education," the direction of their attacks makes it clear that they only wish to insure that their version of the truth is the only one students have access to. While claiming that there are over 10,000 Marxist professors across the country influencing the tender minds of America's youth, what people like AIA's president Reed Irvine fail to realize is that aside from some chemical formulas, there is no absolute truth in most subjects being taught at colleges and universities. In its first newsletter, AIA viciously attacks Reader because his political science course apparently "overemphasizes" such things as "fears of nuclear war, power and weapons." Apparently fearing the destruction of the entire planet is nothing but leftist propaganda and should be replaced by the truth of "Peace Through Superior Firepower!"

While Accuracy in Academia would like us to believe that they are just a group of "patriotic" Americans concerned with keeping tabs on all the liberal/leftist-professors in the United States, (ever wonder what a liberal leftist is?) they are in reality nothing more than apologists for the corporate and governmental abuses that professors occasionally point out. But while McCarthy was at least an elected public official, who are these anonymous people at AIA and their parent group "Accuracy in Media"? AIA's true reactionary ideology can be seen in the backgrounds of its staff. John LeBoutillier, AIA's new president, was a former right-wing Republican Congressman from New York exposed in the film "Quest for Power" about the New Right. The founder Founder of both organizations, Reed Irvine, is reportedly a frequent speaker at various CIA and FBI "alumni" meetings, and AIM's communication director, Bernard Yoh, has recently done publicity work for the leader of the CIA-backed anti-government forces in Angola. I certainly wouldn't want to be accused of guilt by association, but it kind of makes you wonder about these people, doesn't it?

Clearly the true goal of AIA is not to promote greater accuracy in our classrooms, but rather to threaten the discussion of any ideas that would be critical of the status quo in American society, and to threaten professors and students alike who might choose to speak out. As students and other members of the University community, it is important that we speak out against this attempt to take America back to the Red Scare of the 1950s. If you're concerned, add your name to the petitions calling for a student referendum on the activities of "Accuracy inAcademia." The petitions are available in room 413A of the Student Union. It's time we all took a stand!

Mitch K. Gaslin is a member of the Radical Student Union.

Random notes

Larry Bouchie

If Provost O'Brien can implement any of the new commencement plans, I'd prefer the idea of staggered ceremonies for each different school at the University. While O'Brien and I were at the University of Rochester, these ceremonies comprised commencement activities.

Beginning in the morning, the schools would hold their graduation at different times and places on campus. Ceremonies ran for about one hour, the head of each school delivered the main address, and then a few professors, advisors, and/or students addressed those present. After awarding degrees, a reception would be held for another hour or so.

The beauty of this method is that students, parents, and professors could attend several graduations and receptions in a more intimate, unhurried, and less crowded atmosphere. If someone is willing to tackle the logistics of doing this at UMass, I think we could have commencements that would dazzle everyone.

* * *

While no one I've ever met cares to relinquish fiscal responsibility or control, the Undergraduate Student Senate is positively enraged over Randy Donant's sweeping fiscal reforms, which he maintains are set in stone.

If senators can unite, stir student interest, and shed their paranoia about who else may try to gain further control of the senate while they're embattled with Donant, there's no reason why the senate cannot soon seize and define its true authority. That's a lot of "if's," but there are a lot of intelligent, concerned senators.

* * *

Meanwhile, the other administrator who signed Donant's ultimatum to the senate, Vice Chancellor Dennis Madson, is reportedly "concerned and interested" about the reaction of the senate and the campus community, and why shouldn't he be? After all, he signed the memorandum, but was "out of town" for most of this week.

* * *

Fellow columnist David Valade has reminded me that some Collegian reporters and columnists have felt a sting of criticism in their academic work. Apparently, some graders and professors expect Collegian writers to perform similarly in their academic work.

Not that I'm complaining—some of my academic efforts are worse than my journalistic ones, and some are better, but to my knowledge, I've never been penalized or unduly accomodated by professors because of my association with the newspaper.

* * *

Maybe I'm not getting the proper message, but the only result of the Reagan-Gorbachev summit that I can discern is an agreement for two more summits. Granted, the event was historic, but are the media and the people expecting more of an event merely because it takes place?

Like most political events, the summit led me to be overly optimistic just before it culminated, but then completely let me down afterward.

Larry Bouchie is a Collegian columnist

THE SAGA CONTINUES — 3 REHABILITATED DEFECTORS EXCHANGE NOTES.

All letters submitted for publication must be signed and include the author's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Letters must be typewritten and double spaced at 67 characters per line. Column submissions should be between 40 and 60 lines. All submissions are subject to editing for clarity and length. —Editor.

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...

RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles

FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00

CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 44a Central Ave., Albany, N.Y.(518) 438-2601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-3821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today.

UTOPIA SPAS

CHRISTMAS IS ALMOST HERE AND THIS IS A GREAT GIFT IDEA!

SEND A HOT TUB THRU THE MAIL

TO: NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
_____
FROM: NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
TELEPHONE _____
VISA/MC/AMEX # _____

Send check, money order or VISA/MC/AMEX to:
UTOPIA SPAS
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

Tub for 2 people for ☐ 1 hour ($22.00) ☐ ½ hour ($14.00)
We'll mail it to you or for you, if you like!
Or stop by and pick one up!

Good Luck UMass Minutemen

NOW OPEN IN HADLEY
Route 9
A Family Restaurant & Take Home Pie Shop
Serving Breakfast, Lunch & Dinner
Full Menu • Full Liquor License
Open 7 am to 10 pm Sun thru Thurs
To 12 pm Friday and Saturday

Enjoy your Thanksgiving with an Ann Fields Pie

401 Russell St. (Rte. 9)
Hadley 584-0311

(adjacent to Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge)

Try Our Ice Cream Pies over the Holidays.

Steve's®
A first name in ice cream.™

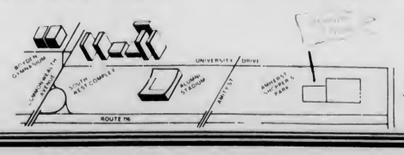
48 North Pleasant St, Amherst, MA 01002

Kegs ★ Beer ★ Wine ★ Soda ★

STADIUM LIQUORS
Amherst
Mass

Good Luck in the New Cage Minutemen!!

SPECIALS



6 PACKS
Meister Brau.. 12 oz bottles.. $2.00 + .30 deposit
Molson..... 12 oz. bottles. .... $3.35 + .30 deposit

12 PACKS
Meister Brau... 12 oz. cans... $4.40 + .60 deposit
Busch..... 12 oz. cans..... $4.90 + .60 deposit

CASES
Carling. ..... $7.20 + 1.50 deposit
St. Pauli Girl. ...$14.50 - $5.00 rebate + 1.25 dep

WINE
Tosti Asi Spumante..... 750 ml..... $5.95
Brati Asi Spumante..... 750 ml..... $6.39
Almaden Wine..... 4 liter..... $7.49

LIQUORS
Vodka..... 1.75 liter..... $9.95
Burnett Gin..... 1.75 liter..... $12.99
Clan McGregor Scotch..... 1.75 liter.. $13.99
Ron Rico Rum..... 1.75 liter..... $12.99

175 University Drive

253-5595

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Whately
665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open:
Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

LOTS for LITTLES
Toys To Inspire Learning and Fantasy
Stocking Stuffers & Hanukkah Toys
178 N. Pleasant Amherst 256-6823
Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30 Sunday 12-5
open Thurs & Fri till 8 PM

UTOPIA SPAS

Get A
SUN TAN
ADVANCED MEMBERSHIP SPECIAL
• 8 Visits
• Free ½ Hour Hot Tub
for $29.95
Offer Expires Dec. 5, 1985
175 University Dr. 253-SPAS

HIGH STYLE at Low Costs
Even college students can afford to look good at Marjon

also: Tanning and waxing

	start at
cuts	$8.00
perm	38.00
foiling	45.00
shampoo/cut/dry	14.00

Marjon Hair Design Inc.
Marjon Hair Design
Mountain Farms Mall
Rt 9
Hadley, Ma
586-4551

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS
33 E. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST / 549-5160

FREE
16 oz. Soda
with the purchase of Whole Sub
FREE FREE

OPEN 11 AM - 2 AM SEVEN DAYS A WEEK
549-5160 33 E. Pleasant St. 549-5160

TRADER FRED'S

LABELS FOR LESS

"HURRICANE FRED SALE"

100% Cotton Heavy Weight
CHAMOIS SHIRTS $9.99 ea.!

MENS
8" Leather Waterproof Insulated Irr.'s
☐ Herman Survivors reg. $85 OUR PRICE $49.99
Mesh Leather ¾ high
☐ Adidas Basketball Sneakers reg. $30 OUR PRICE $19.99
100% Cotton
☐ Rugby Shirts reg. $24 OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $8.99
70% Cotton Button Down Oxford
☐ Dress Shirts reg. $20 OUR PRICE $8.99 2 for $15
Pleated Denim
☐ Brittania Jeans reg. $28 OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $8.99
100% Cotton
☐ Corduroy Slacks reg. $18 OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $5.99

LADIES
100% Cotton
☐ Tomboy Vests reg. $10.99 OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $4.99
Limited Express 100% cotton
☐ Oversized Plaids reg. $30 OUR PRICE $9.99
Forenza 100% Cotton
☐ Khaki Slacks reg. $30 OUR PRICE $9.99
Forenza
☐ Baggy Jeans reg. $32 OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $9.99
Mass Confusion
☐ Huraches reg. $30 OUR AMAZING SPECIAL $8.99
"Sporto-Style" Nylon
☐ Winter Boot reg. $32 OUR PRICE $12.99

UNBELIEVABLE SAVINGS

NEW SHIPMENTS DAILY

FREE SURF & BATH TOWELS
WITH ANY PURCHASE OVER $25
WHILE SUPPLIES LAST

IF YOU DIDN'T BUY IT AT TRADER FREDS, YOU PAID TOO MUCH!

48 North Pleasant St., Amherst
in the new Tucker Taft Building
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-9
Sun. 12-5
253-7155

FRIDAY FILM FOLLIES

By DON LIPPER
Collegian Staff

The theatres are coming! The theatres are coming! Just in time for the holiday season, the Hampshire 4 has become the Hampshire 6. Wednesday night, the theatre had a big celebration to mark the opening. Drinks were served. Some Collegian staff members are still missing.

The best new movies around this weekend are old movies playing at the Amherst Cinema. The Big Sleep stars Humphrey Bogart as the legendary private eye Philip Marlowe and Lauren Bacall as Vivian in Howard Hawks' classic 1946 adaptation of the Raymond Chandler novel. It's a really terrific example of film noir.

What happens when you take a great novel, put it in the hands of one of Hollywood's most competent directors and starring Tinseltown's greatest leading man and lady? You get To Have And Have Not, Bogie's best film by far (with the possible exception of Casablanca).

This is the ultimate tough-guy-with-a-soul adventure movie. Based on the novel by the first king of Macho (Hemingway), Bogie stars as the rough and ready American skipper of a fishing cruiser living in Martinique after the fall of France. Bogie is asked by the French resistance to go on a dangerous mission, but being the typical American loner he is, Bogie says he doesn't want to get involved. A twist of fate leaves him in need of money and I'm not going to tell you what happens next. All I'll say is that Lauren Bacall is strong, dynamic and just great. You must see this movie or you will die.

Starting on Sunday at the Cinema are two films from the master Japanese director Akira Kurosawa (The Seven Samuri, Roshomon). Kurosawa is one of the greatest directors, not just in Japan, but of anywhere, at anytime. Of his almost 30 films, Throne Of Blood is considered one of his best. Throne is an adaptation of Shakespeare's Macbeth set in feudal Japan. Toshiro Mifune (the Shogun in NBC's Shogun, the Japanese commander in Midway) stars as the warlord who murders a king to become one.

Kagemushi is the two and half hour tale of a thief in 16th century Japan who is saved from crucifixion so that he can impersonate a warlord, if the warlord ever falls ill. In this 1980 film Kurosawa beautifully contemplates the nature of glory and the ruin that power must eventually bring.

That's All Folks.

Plays by, about women

By DEBBIE FISHER
Collegian Staff

The New World Theater Ensemble presents "In Living Color" this weekend, after a successful opening performance last Thursday night.

"In Living Color" is an arrangement of three one-act plays by contemporary Third World Women playwritghts. The backgrounds represented are Chinese-American, Puerto Rican, and Black American. The plays are particularly appealing in their portrayal of women's lives and in the consortium of talented players.

"Pigeons," by Genny Lim, is about a lively, old Chinese waoman and a cynical, young Chinese-American girl. The play is set at a park bench in New York City, where the old woman comes to feed her family of pigeons, and the young girl goes to listen to her walkman and "think". As the play unfolds, the two women develop a respect for each other, and at last a lesson in "living" is learned.

Ming-chien Liang presents a convincing and noteworthy performance as the old woman. Alison Hui, playing the younger, also adds latitude and variability to her character.

"Marine Tiger," by Estrella Artau, is about a Puerto Rican interpreter who is attempting to file welfare for a Puerto Rican woman in a welfare office in New York City. The play shows the odds that the Puerto Rican interpreter and the young mother are up against. The three welfare secretaries dress alike, talk alike, and answer for each other, like programmed dummies.

The Puerto Rican interpreter, played by Celina Leite Cavalcanti, provides the comic relief in the play with her interplay between the two cultures. She can play games with the system, but she can not beat the sytstem at its own game.

"Loner," by Joan California Cooper, centers on the life of a young black man. "Cool," played by Brian Tinker is a gigalo whose life focuses on women and sex. Tinker provides an excellent protrayal of Cool as he boasts of his wonderful control of women and of his own life, in the local bar. His audience and those who enter the

The Third World Theater, under the direction of Roberta Thelwell, is successful in its second featured performace this semester. The group's earlier performance, "Dance in the Railroad," was of equal professional quality and direction. The performances of "In Living Color" will show at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday in Hampden Theater. Tickets for students are $2.00, $4.00 for the general public.

Home Style™ Laundry
★ Clean, modern, attended
★ Self service or drop off
(Next to 7/11)
Squire Village Plaza - Rt. 116
Amherst Rd., Sunderland, MA
OPEN 7 DAYS · 665-2641
This coupon good for
ONE FREE WASH ($.85)
One per cust. Good thru 12/31/85

• LPs • BLANKS • CASS • 45s
MAGS • IMPORTS • SUNGLASSES
ALBUM'S
NEW ENLARGED STOCK OF RECORDED CASSETTES $3.99-5.79
ALL CDs IN STOCK $12.99
DON'T FORGET WE
BUY • SELL • TRADE
USED LPs, CASSETTES & CDs
ALBUMS•181 N. PLEASANT STREET•AMHERST •253-7137
POSTERS • PINS • ACCESSORIES

Summit Leather
BELTS ▲ BUCKLES ▲ HATS ▲ REPAIRS ▲ WALLETS ▲ BRIEFCASES ▲ SHEEPSKINS
There's nothing like the appeal of leather in fashions, accessories and more.
Hadley, MA 586-2014
MOCCASINS ▲ JACKETS ▲ HANDBAGS

FRESHMEN □ SOPHOMORES □ JUNIORS
SENIORS □ GRADUATE STUDENTS
NOW...Work PART TIME and step into Phase I of our dynamic new Training Program
CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVES
BUILD YOUR FUTURE WITH PEOPLExpress
It would take the nation's most innovative airline to "reinvent" career training like this! We're seeking highly competent individuals with a real capacity for compassion, caring and concern for people. Join PEOPLExpress NOW as a Customer Service Representative, and you will be on the most direct route to eligibility for POST-DEGREE TRAINING and a long-term career in the airline industry.
If you've got:
▪ Matriculated status in a full-time college program
▪ 2.5 cumulative GPA
▪ Professional appearance
▪ Customer contact experience
▪ Good communications skills
▪ Ability to provide own transportation
We'll offer you:
▪ $4.00 an hour for working 15-25 hours a week at BRADLEY INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT
▪ Schedules to fit your classes
▪ Travel privileges on PEOPLExpress
▪ Free parking
GET MEANINGFUL TRAINING–as you handle challenging responsibilities like customer check-ins/boarding, baggage procedures, and other operational support activities. PEOPLExpress offers you so much more than just a part-time job–here's a chance to really LEARN and EARN!
For further information, call (203) 627-5704 or stop by the Ticket Counter and pick up an application.
PEOPLExpress
FLY SMART
Equal Opportunity Employer

ARTS

Invader's Plan is the first in a dekalogy of Sci-Fi

The Invaders Plan
By L. Ron Hubbard
Bridge Publications: $18.95

By HERB RAMY
Collegian Staff

Very few writers still write what is considered classic science fiction.

This doesn't mean to say that there is not an abundant supply of science fiction books out there, it's just these books rely heavily on gadgets and gimicks to get their points across. Classic science fiction (or space opera as it is often refered to) relies more on the characters and their worlds, be they human or otherwise.

L. Ron Hubbard's latest book, The Invaders Plan, confirms the notion that he is one of the finest writers of this particular genre. To call Hubbard a master storyteller would be a gross understatement.

The novel's setting is the planet Voltar of the Voltarian Empire. It is here that Combat Engineer Jettero Heller is being trained for Mission Earth. A mission that because of politics and power plays must fail.

The novel has two main strengths, the first of which are its characters. In the beginning of the novel, the characters seemed like simple good guys and bad guys, but as I read on my opinion changed. The bad guys weren't just bad, they were despicable. As for the good guys, they took on the proportions of mythic heroes. This obvious exaggeration created characters that were truly fun to read about.

The novels second strength is its ability to make the reader feel he or she is actually there. Hubbard accomplishes this by creating a complete world as a setting. We know everything about Voltar, from its economy to its politics. As for its people, we know their strongest desires and their greatest fears. To put it simply, no effort has been spared in giving us the most complete picture possible of what we are reading.

This desire for detail on Hubbard's part does create some problems. The Invaders Plan is 556 pages long. This is no problem in and of itself, except that this book is only the first part of a series of novels. No, it's not part of a trilogy as some of you may be guessing. It is the first installment of a dekalogy entitled Mission Earth. When he is finished, the entire dekalogy will be 1.2 million words long. The length will probably scare some people away from reading it, and that would be a shame because here we have a great story told by a great writer.

Book Review

Conflicts and Contrasts in Yang's paintings

By JENNIFER ACKERMAN
Collegian Staff

Chihung Yang's work is showing at Herter Gallery until Dec. 10.

Nude figures of women, bones, skulls, and plants are all consistent motifs in the Chihung Yang exhibit showing at the Herter Gallery through Dec. 10.

The contrasts between beauty and beast and life and death are main themes throughout Yang's work. This contrast is relayed through the figures and their settings, for instance in "Love and Death," there is a figure of a woman sitting next to a skeleton.

There are paintings which portray contrasts between the beautiful and repulsive sides of nature as well. In "The Beauty and the Beast," there is a woman lounging in a dark wooded landscape, with a gigantic wild animal's head looming above her. A colorful parrot in the picture sets off the drab landscape.

There is an overwhelming sense of the primitive, with ritualistic and violent undertones, such as in "Killing with Seduction," where a woman is in conflict with an animal and is about to kill it with a knife. This theme of violence pops up in many of the other paintings, where the figure is holding skulls of animals or entire carcasses.

The interesting aspect of Yang's paintings is that the contrasting elements of each painting are isolated and detached from one another. The figure is never completely intergrated into the setting , and never seems comfortable in it.

This show is a contrast to the whimsical paintings and graphics by Hui Ming Wang that were previously showing in Herter Gallery.

Yang's work is intriguing and well worth seeing.

amc THEATRES
$1.95 TWILITE SHOW LIMITED TO SEATING
MT FARMS 4 584-9153
A killer is loose. TO LIVE AND DIE IN L.A.
Fri at 1:45 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:45
Sat-Sun at 1:45 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:45
Lauren Hutton in ONCE BITTEN A TASTY COMEDY.
Fri at 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:30, 9:55
Sat-Sun at 2:30 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:30, 9:55
FEVER PITCH
Fri at 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:45, 9:55
Sat-Sun at 2:30 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:45, 9:55
KING SOLOMONS MINE Fri at 1:45 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:45 Sat-Sun at 2:15 1:45 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:45 PG13
GODZILLA 1985 ALL NEW
PG13 Sat-Sun at 2:00
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
Michael J. Fox in BACK To The FUTURE
Fri at 1:45 @ $1.95! 7:30, 9:45
Sat-Sun at 2:00 1:45 @ $1.95! 7:30, 9:45
Wild and Wonderful! After Hours
Fri at 9:55
Sat-Sun at 7:45, 9:55
WALT DISNEY PICTURES Presents ONE MAGIC CHRISTMAS
Fri at 1:15, 3:15, 5:15 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:15
Sat-Sun at 1:15, 3:15, 5:15 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:15
Glenn Close Jeff Bridges JAGGED EDGE
Fri at 1:30 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:55
Sat-Sun at 2:15 1:30 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:55
Emilio Estevez THAT WAS THEN...THIS IS NOW
Fri at 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:30
Sat-Sun at 2:00 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:15, 9:30
BAD MEDICINE Fri at 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:45, 9:55 Sat-Sun at 2:15 5:00 @ $1.95! 7:45, 9:55 PG13
RAINBOW BRITE AND THE STAR STEALER
Fri at 5:30 @ $1.95! 7:45
Sat-Sun at 1:30, 3:30 5:30 @ $1.95! 7:45
THE CAPITOL LATE SHOWS
FRI & SAT at 12:15 - SEATS $ 3.50
ROCKY HORROR
PEE WEE'S BIG ADVENTURE
PINK FLOYD THE WALL
MAD MAX - BEYOND THUNDERDOME
FRIGHT NIGHT
THE BREAKFAST CLUB

THE FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
TONIGHT!
Stories about the life of Hans Christian Andersen
JOFFREY II DANCERS presenting "Once Upon A Time"
Friday, November 22 8 pm.
Tickets: $16,14,12

at amc THEATRES
PRICES SLASHED THE AXE
Adults $3.75
Same great Movies and Service!
Sr. Citizen $1.95
Children $1.95
STUDENTS $2.75 MATINEES
All New Prices Starts 11/22
Twilite Shows $1.95
(Late Afternoon Times Check Newspaper)
amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
amc THEATRES MT. FARMS 4 584-9153

AmHErst CINEMA
Friday - Saturday
The Big Sleep 7:00
To Have and Have Not 9:00
Sunday - Tuesday
Kage Musha 6:30
Throne of Blood 9:00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

amc THEATRES ANNOUNCE THE EXPANSION OF
amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 4 TO amc THEATRES HAMPSHIRE 6
TO SERVE THE PUBLIC BETTER WITH
• STATE OF THE ART PROJECTION • DISCOUNT TWILITE & MATINEES
• DOLBY STEREO SOUND • ERGONOMIC SEATS
Grand Opening FRIDAY NOVEMBER 22nd
Back to Future | Jagged Edge | That was then... this is now...
After Hours | One Magic Christmas | Bad Medicine
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL 584-7550

Beer with us!
Choose from our bounty of more than 80 varieties of imported beer!
We won the Valley Advocate's "Best Beer Selection" award - 1982!
Our selection now is EVEN BETTER
We now feature our own brand of low priced LIQUORS as well as our super selection of WINES at very affordable prices.
Plus BULMER'S CIDER
BILLY'S BEVERAGES
Beer - Wine - Liquor
SUNDERLAND • 665-2727
We welcome your empties!

Get Radical! Tune In To ED/OP!

ARTS

Six at the Midway: Art grads show their stuff

By ROB SKELTON
Collegian Staff

If you'd like a varied taste of what art is coming to, check out Six at the Midway this week at the Student Union Gallery.

This exhibition is a sampling of the creations of six graduate students, who are now half-way to getting their MFA's here at UMass.

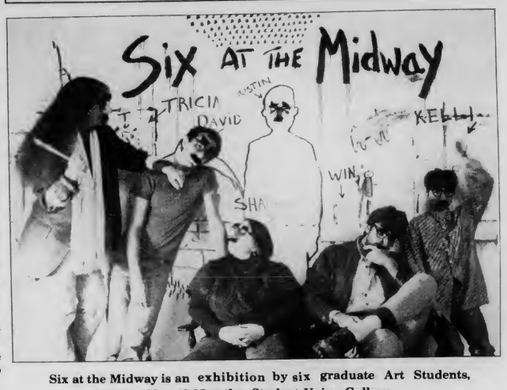
It's all valid (it's art, right?) as a display medium, but some works are more intense, innovative, political and multi-faceted than others.

David Palmer's "The Long Summer" features families and dogs, sprinklers, some sultry scenarios, and unfortunately, too little excitement on his canvases. But the dog days of autumn are that way, so...it works.

Justin West starts out with a poem about a barn he sees daily, and his dreams of painting it. A series of on and off-the-farm forms follow, then the poem, resumed 18 months later, indicates procrastination with his painting plans, how he lost the desire for it, but that it is still a daily subject for his thoughts.

Kelli Scott is a printmaker whose layered mixed-media presentations are hauntingly textured with dancing figures. Hanging from the ceiling is a three dimentional version of same, head detached from shoulders somewhat, figure from a different world.

Scott's work travels, transcending into the tribal. Down on the floor, on a make-shift altar, a bride's veil covers a frightening assortment of relics: Pulled teeth, hair tufts on a clay tray, crude, pretty earrings, stick figures in a casket, and, a plaster-encased light bulb. Lightbulb? It dawned on me how intertwined world cultures have become.



Tricia Fay's sixteen ceramic creations have a delicate beauty to them. The Uniformity of the glazing indicates her practiced and methodical approach to the medium. Her breadth is evidenced by the mixed-media mats nearby numbering six, refreshing like costume jewelry, and punctuated with shiny trinkets.

The paintings and clay art of Sharon Harper are two distinct yet complementary art forms. Her chalky pastel blue paintings have titles such as "Tethered," "Dance without Motion," and "Ziploc," and they feature shadowy figures in stages of lonely motion.

The painted clayworks are half-shells of a house, with clay characters inside, who are being stalked by outsiders, their own neuroses, or both. "A Quiet Evening at Home," shows a reclining male with his newspuper, and his companinon lashed to a chair. "No Safe Place" has lovers on a bed watched by a gun-toting visitor just outside the window. These are all funny, the way they show people trapped.

Win Redding is a sculptor whose work in this exhibition is intricate but to the untrained eye (mine) not too interesting.

So this is what's going on at the Student Union gallery this week and next. Some of the stuff is great, and some not so. But don't take my word for it, go and see for yourself.

Six at the Midway is an exhibition by six graduate Art Students, showing Nov. 18-27 at the Student Union Gallery.

DONT BE A DISORIENTED YOUTH
READ THE ARTS PAGE

Catch the newest tunes with Arts!

the Hungry U
DRIVERS WANTED
Apply Within
55 University Dr.
549-5713
Must HaveOwn Car

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

15th ANNUAL BUSH BASH
UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN. 19-24
TRIP INCLUDES:
5½ DAY LIFT TICKET — SUN - FRI
5 NIGHTS LODGING — HOTEL OR CONDO
ENTERTAINMENT: FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
HOT TUB PARTIES, LONG UNDERWEAR PARTIES
TURTLE RACES, FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES
FREE BEER & WINE PARTIES, NASTAR RACES
SUGARBUSH COUPON BOOK, ECT. ECT.
HOTEL PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $149
CONDO PACKAGE (TAX INCLUDED) ONLY $199
FIRST 100 PEOPLE TO SIGN-UP WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR A FREE TRIP
Sign-up before Nov. 19th and get a free T-shirt.
LAGNAF 86
Vermont Drinking Age is 18 yrs.
FOR MORE INFO 545-3437 430 STUDENT UNION

EPSON
QX-16 COMPUTER
THANKSGIVING DAY SALE

The Three-In-One Computer
'Valdocs' five function, easy to use software
- CP/M computer
- MS DOS computer
Regular Price $2695.00
SALE PRICE $2195.00
SAVE $500.00
Sale Ends Dec. 14
Computer Works
228 Triangle Street Amherst
549-7133
Store Hours:
M-F 10-5:30
Sat 10-5

ARTS

The Jagged Edge a mystery without all the gore

Jagged Edge
Starring Glenn Close and Jeff Bridges
Directed by Richard Marquand

By RENEE BACHER
Collegian Staff

Jagged Edge is a well thought out whodunnit, old-fashioned style. It need not rely on the gory blood and guts that cause of much of today's hair raising effects at the movies. Jagged Edge relys heavily on its plot and the good acting skills of Glenn Close and Jeff Bridges to keep even the most calculating minds nervously puzzled until the last few minutes.

The first scene opens with a brutal murder. A woman is knived to death in her bed and "Bitch" is scrawled on the wall above in her blood. From this point on, the film centers around the courtroom where her husband, Jack Forrester (Jeff Bridges) is being tried for her murder.

Teddy Barnes (Glenn Close) plays the attorney that has been talked into taking the case. She has developed an aversion to criminal law and doesn't decide to take it until she finds that an innocent man she sent to jail when she was a prosecutor, has hanged himself. Her decision is in part, a method of redressing her wrong and trying to alleviate a conscience heavily laden with guilt. Barnes believes Forrester is innocent and she takes the case strictly as a matter of good conscience. It also helps that she has a vengence for the prosecutor.

The reason she is asked to take the case is that she is the only attorney working for the firm Forrester uses that has had any criminal experience. You think, hmmm, why does Forrester regularly utilize the service of a law firm? Well, you see, he's the editor of a major city newspaper (everyone knows that newspapers need all the legal help they can get). This editorship just happened to come about as the result of his marriage to the wealthy, and beautiful owner of the paper, Paige Forrester. Actually, her reputed beauty is merely heresay. We never see her face, only her blood on the wall in the form of a profanity.

It seems that all fingers point toward Forrester, and we're almost wary that perhaps he has been framed. He has a motive and the whole bit; he is the sole heir to his wife's family fortune. It looks too simple.

But, the plot thickens and I won't tell how or any of the sordid details. You'll have to go see for yourself because it's well worth it. Even if you're a scaredy cat you should go see this movie. Even if you get scared at Walt Disney movies. It's a worthwhile, suspenseful, intellectual scare. Hitchcockian, if you will.

Glenn Close, Robert Loggia, Jeff Bridges, and Jay Crimp in Jagged Edge.

LIVE COVERAGE OF WOMEN'S SOCCER PLAYOFFS on WMUA FM 91.1
NOON TOMORROW
made possible by a grant from the Univ. of Mass. Alumni Association

La Cazuela
THE MEXICAN RESTAURANT
DISTINCTIVE FOOD AND DRINK FROM MEXICO AND THE AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
7 OLD SOUTH STREET
NORTHAMPTON • 586-0400

Come see our wide selection of fine Christmas Cards and Advent Calendars!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Pearl Street
MILLER ROCK SERIES presents
If you thought we're only playing big arenas you were almost right. . .
RUN DMC
But they're playing THE big night club
Weds. Dec. 4th
this is not a mirage
10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

BLACK AFFAIRS

Announcements

The women of Delta Sigma Theta cordially invite you to attend a Thanksgiving party on November 23 from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. at the Malcolm X Center. Food will be served. A small donation will be requested.

Javier Colon Morera, a representative of the Puerto Rican Institute for Civil Rights, will address the audience on a forum that is going to be held in room 162-75 in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center on Monday, November 25 at 11 a.m. The title of his speech is "The role of Puerto Rico in Latin America." Some of the topics on which he will be focusing are: "Puerto Rico: Whose Agenda?", "U.S. Government and Civil Rights" and "Issues on Political Freedom." After his address, the forum will be open for questions and discussion.

Mr. Colon Morera, who works as a lawyer for the Puerto Rican Institute for Civil Rights, is presently involved in the anti-nuclear activities carried out at the U.S. military bases in Puerto Rico. During this year, he has been instrumental in campaining against the amendment that would have permitted recording telephone conversations for court uses, which finally due to the pressure exercised by people of different ideologies, was not approved by the Senate of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. Previous to his most recent activities, Colon Morera has represented the student movement in different international forums during his academic years.

The groups sponsoring this forum invite you to participate of this activity. The groups are; AHORA, Bilingual Collegiate Educational Access and Outreach Office, Every Woman Center, Residential Education, Staff and Faculty for Peace in Central America, and Office for Third World Affairs.

Malcolm X and King planted seeds which are ready to break through

By MARK LAWRENCE MCPHAIL
Special to the Collegian

Commentary

(Editor's Note: Mark Lawrence McPhail is 1986 communications studies doctoral candidate.)

"Sometimes," observed El Hajj Malik El Shabazz. "The price of freedom is death." Shortly afterwards, the life of this lover of freedom was stolen from all of us by a country which professed to be the guardian of freedom and the champion of justice.

Malcolm X was executed by America, not because he was a traitor to liberty or an enemy of democracy, but because he knew a truth about America that this country could not live with. To black people, he was our "Black Prince", and to all people of color he had a message: "When we learn to assert and define ourselves with our own words, then, and only then, will a new story be born, and His story die."

They were the orators who planted the seeds which are now ready to break through the old ground of yesterday and grow towards a new tomorrow.

Malcolm was a communicator of the finest caliber, for he not only knew how to use words effectively, but at the same time he told us of their power. If Malcolm was a Prince, it was a King who also offered us the means to empower ourselves, to define ourselves in the cold face of history. These were two men among many who shook the foundations of history with what historians have called "mere words". They were the orators who planted the seeds which are now ready to break through the old ground of yesterday and grow towards a new tomorrow. Those seeds, planted by the visionaries of only 20 years ago, are ready now to spring up amidst a communications revolution unlike any other in history, one that offers the chance of a true "global village". But the success of the crop will, of course, depend upon how well it is tended.

Thus, students today are like farmers. We have the chance to take the knowledge which we have now and put it to good use. It is time to, as Rev. Jesse Jackson suggests, "Study war no more." As we take the time to look around us we see the old leaves withering away, the old crop choking to death from the weeds with which it was planted. American liberty was a seed planted amidst many bad weeds; inequality, injustice, and hypocrisy, and since 1619 they have been growing ever tighter around the stalks of democracy.

Twenty years ago, those weeds had almost smothered the very life of America, but the force of words brought the weeds to bear. "Black Power" meant black empowerment, and a King and a Prince both began to ascend the throne of truth, to bury the lies of the American past once and for all. It was communication which brought us close to the death of history.

But once again good words were distorted by bad weeds. "Black Power" began to mean black capitalism, the most vicious of contradictions, and from the seeds of the 60's a black class system grew, more weeds in the garden. Our leaders were murdered by American democracy, the most vicious of cycles.

And now, here we stand in 1984, with no King, no Prince, and Monly a few seeds grown to fruition, so we must plant more. The ground has been broken in 1984 and the seeds need to be planted now.

Those seeds begin with words, for words give life to things, and it is through this process of communication that we will give life to ourselves, each other, and the future. We must talk about the death of history first, before we can be reborn.

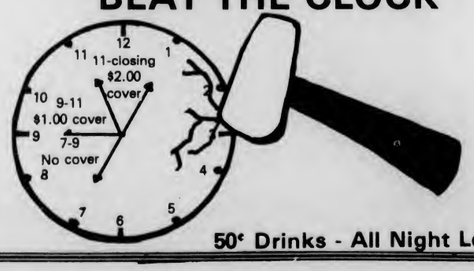
READ BLACK AFFAIRS

THE TEXTBOOK ALTERNATIVE

Professors, check these advantages for your students:

- Longer, more convenient shopping hours
- Open Saturday and Sunday
- 10% discount on school supplies and regular (noncourse) books
- No long waiting lines - no hassle
- A helpful, warm, friendly shopping environment

Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
call us now:
253-3381
256-8735



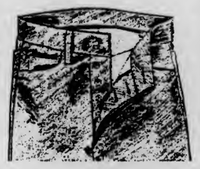
CHINESE KITCHEN
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
興旺樓
Eat In or Take Out Hours
Sunday Noon to 10 PM
Mon-Sat 11:30 AM to 10 PM

Pu-Pu Platter $12.00

Try Our Luncheon-Dinner Specials
Only $1.49 before 3 PM, $1.90 after 3 PM

2 LOCATIONS:
430 Russell St (Rt 9) Hadley 253-2571
150 King St, Northampton 586-8220

JUSTIN RYAN'S
BEAT THE CLOCK



50¢ Drinks - All Night Long!

LEVI'S 501 JEANS

WE'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER—501®

They're still the original Levi's® blue jeans that won the west over 130 years ago. Five pocket, button-fly, copper-riveted, shrink-to-fit denim jeans. But since that's a mouthful to ask for, we thought you might like to call them by their name—501's® jeans.

Levi's JEANSWEAR
QUALITY NEVER GOES OUT OF STYLE.
now available at Saturday Clothes
open 7 days
253-9729
Downtown Amherst

BLACK AFFAIRS

Citizens misled by corporate controlled media

By KIMBERLY A. BURGE
Collegian Staff

The press may have been banned from covering the events in South Africa, but that doesn't make them isn't any less newsworthy or the struggles of black South Africans any less important. Jackie Selebi, member of the Executive Committee of the African National Congress (ANC) Youth Section and a representative in the World Federation of Democratic Youth, has been speaking on college campuses across the country about the struggle in South Africa.

He finds American people to be very ignorant about the problems in South Africa. "Some people don't even know where South Africa is." However, he is not generalizing all American people. "There are some people who know about the problems in my country and try their best to help." Selebi said.

Selebi doesn't blame the American people for their ignorance, he blames the media. "The media is controlled by corporations who suuport the racist South African government. It is important to keep the American people misinformed and misled because it enables them to support the racist regime without challenge from the American people."

"The media gives more prominence to what they call "changes" in South Africa when there is no change in that country. They treat lightly the lives of our people who are being murdered. They intend to make a conflict between the east and west and they raise the issue that there is nothing wrong in South Africa except outside interference from socialists countries." he said.

He believes that it is a very bad thing for the media to be banned in South Africa. "It is nothing new. It has always existed in South Africa. When we told the world about it, they wouldn't except it. Now, they have to except it."

"When the president of this country can stand in front of the American people and tell them that there is nothing wrong and to be told that things are changing there, shows that ignorance can be very dangerous." Selebi said.

According to him, divestment and sanctions are the quickest way to bring about changes in the government. "I call on all those who invest in the racist regime to divest. If they continue to invest, they benefit from the oppression of our people. Every penny they put in goes into the strengthening the economy which helps the South African army have more weapons to kill our people." he stated.

The arguement against divestment is that if companies divest then the black people will be hurt the most by it. This arguement comes from leaders of corporations who are not known to have the interests of the South African working people at heart.

Selebi stated, "The society is structured like a step ladder at the bottom of which are the black people and at the top are the multi-national corporations. If the ladder was to fall, the ones at the top would suffer the most."

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Wairoba's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Mortar Board presents:
"Buy a Friend a Flower"
Thanksgiving Carnations on sale Friday and Monday in the Campus Center
Let someone know you care (or that you don't)
$1.00

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
15 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
BEER:
Bud 12 oz. cans suitcase.....$11.99 case + dep.
Busch 12 oz. cans suitcase.....$9.95 case + dep.
Utica Club 12 oz. long necks.....$6.49 case + dep.
Heinekens, Amstel.....$3.99 6/pk + dep.
Ballantine Beer.....$3.40 12/pk + dep.
LIQUOR & WINE:
Champagnes.....$2.99 + up 750 ml
Flavored Schnapps -all sizes and flavors
Wine Coolers. . .you name it - WE'VE GOT IT!!!

HAIR • NAILS • MAKE-UP
WHITMAN AND WHITMAN
56 Maplewood Shops
Northampton, MA 01061
413/586-7506
Main Street Gallery
Brattleboro, VT 05301
802/257-4349

Bruno's
PIZZA SUBS
SPECIAL
1 FREE SODA with any Small Pizza
2 FREE SODAS with any Medium Pizza
3 FREE SODAS with any Large Pizza
Choose From Polar Cola, Diet Polar Cola And Other Polar Sodas Including Orange, Grape, Root Beer, Strawberry, Ginger Ale and Cream Soda.
Five Cents Deposit Required On All Cans
ALSO AVAILABLE
WORLD CLASS SUBS
FREE DELIVERY!
EXPIRES DECEMBER 21, 1985
4:00pm to 2:00am
363 MAIN STREET, AMHERST
256-0222

Find the new you
at RVC
Amherst's own Specialty Department Store clothing for men & women • jewelry • unique gifts at the triangle, Amherst 10-5:30 Mon-Sat, 12-5 Sun.

"free parking in the rear of store"

ZACA TRADING CO.
ALL CARDS AND GIFT WRAP ½ PRICE

• MALDEN FRAMES ½ PRICE
• INCENSE STICKS 12/pk for 79¢
★ SCHOOL SUPPLIES DISCOUNTED ★
• 2 TONE POSTER BOARD 29¢ EACH
• LONG STRAND PEARL NECKLACES $1.99

NEW SELECTION OF GIFTWARE
INCLUDING BRASS & CRYSTAL

LOCATED IN THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

THE SPOKE
A Drinkery to Meet, Relax and Enjoy

12 oz. Drafts 75¢
Pitchers $3.75

Beer Of The Month
Molson Golden
$1.25

Spoke Long — Sleeve T's are in!

Spoke Drink of the Week -
"The Brain" Strawberry Schnapps and Baileys Irish Cream $1.50

35 EAST PLEASANT, AMHERST, MA 01002

MONEY MOTIVATED?
If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This

We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

SALE!
3 DAYS ONLY ...
FRI./SAT./SUN. NOV. 22,23,24

brightly colored, hand knit
SLIPPER SOCKS
wool & acrylic

plain sole REG. 7.95 NOW 5.95
leather sole REG. 9.95 NOW 7.95

A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst / Daily 10-6, Sun. 12-5
FACES

Spirit Haus

Spirit Haus Beer Specials
Bass Ale. $4.70 6/pack
Moosehead. $3.70 6/pack
Holland Swinkles. $2.99 6/pack
Busch suitcase. $9.75

Thanksgiving Wine Specials
Libby School Chardonay
Cabernet Sauvignon 2 for $12.95
Garvey Sherry ea. $4.99
Fino
Cream
Amotillado
Dry Amotillado

Also featuring many more holiday specials on beer, liquor and wines

Spirit Haus Inc.
338 College St. Amherst, MA
256-8433 253-5384

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

WEATHER

Today:
Cloudy with freezing rain and sleet developing by late morning, turning to all rain in the afternoon. High temperatures in the mid-30's.

Tonight:
Heavy rain tapering by midnight, temperatures rising to mid-40's.

Tomorrow: Partly sunny, high temperatures in the mid-50's.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

GORDY

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

The Weekend's Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Seafood and Shell Casserole
Pizza

BASICS LUNCH
Seafood and Shell Casserole
Pizza

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Jardinerre Sauce
Fisherman's Plate
Tartar Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Colache
Fisherman's Plate
Tartar Sauce

Saturday

BRUNCH
Sausage Scramble Tacos

BASICS BRUNCH
Scrambled Eggs
Vegetable Taco

DINNER
Country Chicken Pie with Cranberry Sauce
Spaghetti and Meatballs with Tomato Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Country Chicken Pie with Cranberry Sauce
Hi-Protein Spaghetti with Tomato Sauce

Sunday

BRUNCH
Fried Eggs
Bacon Slices
Tuna Grinder

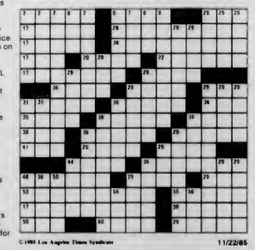
BASICS BRUNCH
Fried Eggs
Tuna Grinder

DINNER
Baked Ham with Fruit Sauce
Sirloin Strip Steak
Mushroom Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Broccoli and Cauliflower Casserole
New England Style Scrod
Crumb Topping

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Impressionist painter
6 Resign
10 Indian mulberry
13 "West Side Story" role
14 Derange
17 Power
18 A choice
19 Dusseldorf exclamation
20 Waste allowance
22 More senseless
23 Colonist
25 Molecule part
26 Woos
27 LXXVI doubled
28 RR stop
31 Cold sensations
33 Gloomy, of yore
34 Bad actor
35 Monastic titles
36 Deck member
37 One kind of duck
38 Angler's essential
39 Baseball ploys
40 Wednesday's god
41 Part of IOU
42 Passageway
43 Aromatic spice
44 Word written on the wall
45 Conjugal
48 Part of AWOL
51 Earthnut
52 Baseball stat
53 These equal 40¢
55 Indian, in one
57 Muncie, Ind. university
58 Sister's daughter
59 A Udall, to friends
60 Certain votes
61 Secretaries

DOWN
1 PTA members
2 All stewed up
3 Belladonna, for one
4 Numerical suffix
5 Gossips
6 Odd
7 One
8 Union org.
9 Society islander
10 Unknown: Abbr.
11 Skin problem
12 Get an eyeful
15 —— Rhyne, N.C. college
16 "My Name is ——"
21 QBs' targets
24 Calendar abbr.
25 Sheltered sides
27 Island of King Minos
28 Oak and elm
29 Domesticate
30 Kind of corner
31 Mod hairdo
32 Boast
33 Irene of the screen
36 Amount
37 Places: Lat
39 Mixes
40 Patriot's purchase in 1942
43 —— de tete
44 Blackbird
45 Clio and Erato
46 Taken —— (stunned)
47 Queues
48 Mtl. Installations
49 Scow or trow
50 "Star Trek" role
51 Greek letter
54 West
56 Co., French style

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	A	M	P		B	A	B	E		S	P	L	I	T
A	S	E	A		E	B	O	N		C	R	O	N	E
N	E	E	R		L	E	A	D		T	H	E	W	A	Y
C	A	T	C	A	L	I	S		R	E	I	T
E	T	H	E	R				C	A	M	E	L	O	T
		A	T	O		J	A	P	A	N	E	S	E
O	D	L		S	A	B	E	R			S	A	I	L	E
H	E	F	T		I	R	A	D	E		E	V	E	I	N
A	T	W	O			I	N	S	E	T		E	R	Y
S	T	A	N	T	I	O	N	S		E	R	S	T
M	A	T	T	I	M	E				I	M	A	M	S
			I	L	E		M	A	N	N	I	K	I	N
S	T	A	N	D	E	A	D	Y		L	I	N	O
P	A	R	E	E		A	D	E	S		E	N	O	W
A	M	I	S	S		R	E	N	E		S	G	T	S

11/22/85

© 1985 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/22/85

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

The Curry Hicks Cage has undergone a million dollar renovation and is ready for Saturday's opener.

★ hoop

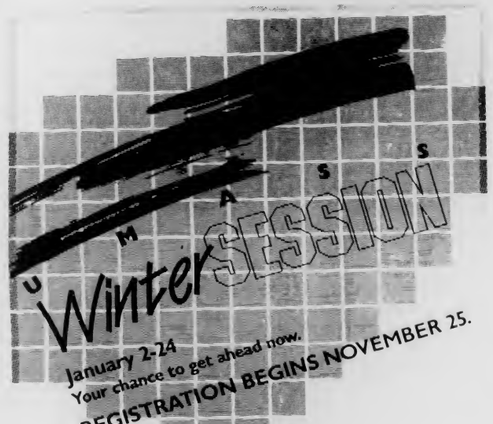
continued from page 27

. . . with all the publicity the freshmen have received.

Emerson, a 6-9 center from Nashville, hopes to make his presence felt in the pivot this season. A likely starter, Emerson has been battling a bad back but is expected to be ready for Merrimack.

Sophomore Wilbert Hicks, as 6-7 power forward will also be looked upon for help.

What about Merrimack? Picked second in the pre-season Northeast 8 poll, the Warriors have a solid team.



Tom Lewis, a 29-year-old forward that played on the same Minnesota team as Kevin McHale, Mychal Thompson and Ray Williams before joining the armed services, is coach Bert Hamel's main scoring threat. He averaged over 17 points last season, plus close to ten rebounds.

"They'll give us a battle, bet on that," Gerlufsen said. "But if we play hard and together, I think we'll do pretty well. There's certainly motivation, there's nothing I or the team want more than a successful return to the Cage."

CAROL'S HEAD QUARTERS
Former Employees of LORDS & LADIES
Carol, Sandy and Ingrid
A Full Service Salon
- Manicures - Cellophane Colors - Perms
Reasonable Rates Walk-Ins
115 Russell St, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA
1-413-584-9948
Student Discount w/valid ID

University of Massachusetts
POLICE OFFICER
The Amherst Campus is accepting applications for the position of University of Massachusetts Police Officer, in order to establish a listing of eligible persons for future positions. All applicants will be required and notified to take examinations appropriate to the position. These positions carry full fringe benefits. Beginning salary $329.55 per week. Applicants should apply to Personnel Office, Room 167, Whitmore Administration Building, University of Massachusetts 01003 by 5:00 P.M., Friday, December 13, 1985. An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer.

closing Jan 1st
50% Off
all Beads
DORIS BEADS N JEWELRY
Great Savings on all JEWELRY
Open Wed-Fri
Located in Mt. Farms Mall

In-Person Registration
November 25
Campus Center Auditorium, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.
November 26-December 31
Records and Registration Office
Division of Continuing Education
University Library
8:30 a.m.-7 p.m., Mon.-Thurs.;
8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Fri.

Call 545-2414 for more information.

DCE Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts
at Amherst

In by 7.
Out by $6.95.

Introducing early dinner specials!
Be here by 7 P.M. Monday thru Thursday, and you'll have your choice of the following complete dinners:

Sole Florentine	~~$9.95~~	$6.95
Baked Boston Scrod Broiled Orange	~~$9.95~~	$6.95
Whiskey Chicken Baked Stuffed	~~$8.95~~	$6.95
Breast of Chicken 8 oz.	~~$8.95~~	$6.95
Prime Rib au jus 8 oz.	~~$7.95~~	$6.95
Broiled N.Y. Sirlon	~~$8.95~~	$6.95

Dinners include choice of soup de jour or New England Clam Chowder, Fresh Garden Salad, Fresh vegetables, Baked Potato, Warm Bread & Butter. Served Mon.-Thurs. 4-7, excluding holidays.

What a delightful way to beat the crowds, and you can't beat the prices!

Plumbley's off the common
90 Boltwood Walk Amherst 253-9586

Now's the time to plan that special function or holiday party • Gift certificates available

Minutewomen start season at Maine

Black Bears a rugged foe

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will do a familiar thing tomorrow afternon, play on the road, as they open their season at the University of Maine.

The Minutewomen, 13-15 last year while playing all their home games at Amherst College and the Springfield Civic Center due to the renovations of the Curry Hicks Cage, look to start their season with a victory in hopes of compiling an impressive non-conference record along with some confidence before Atlantic-10 play commences with a game against Penn State on January 2.

"If we put everything together at the start of our non-conference schedule, then we'll have more confidence going into Atlantic-10 play" UMass head coach Barbara Stevens said.

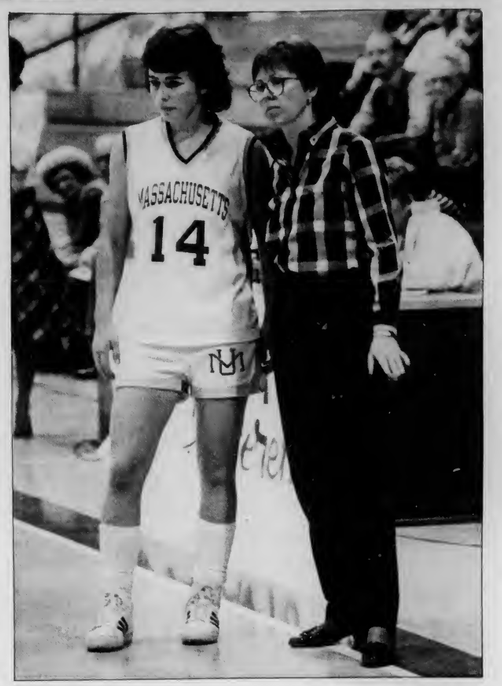
Last season the Minutewomen compiled a 1-8 conference record, including a 70-60 overtime conference tournament loss to powerhouse West Virginia. UMass has a much tougher schedule this year however, as the Minutewomen must face their Atlantic-10 rivals twice each, and if last season's conference play is any indication of this year's, UM's seasonal outlook should be grim.

Stevens doesn't expect UMass' season performance last year to have any bearing on this year, saying that even though the team did struggle in the Atlantic-10 last season, they did finish with four strong showings in the season's final week.

"No question we are a better team this year than last year," Stevens said.

Stevens did say that the Minutewomen aren't expected to [illegible] the league however as no UMass player received pre-season laurels in any category and has been picked to finish no higher than sixth in the conference.

"Our goals center around improving our record. I would love to be .500 or better, but we have a tough schedule," Stevens said. "It's going to be a challenge, but we'll be a better club to face that challenge."



"We're going to be going against the best but we know we can hang with them," senior captain Jerrie Bernier said. "I'm expecting a successful season. We're very determined."

Considering that UMass senior guard Barbara Hebel, coming off a 12.8 points-per-game season, was a second team all-conference pick her sophomore year, its surprising that the conference's pre-season selection committee has overlooked the high scoring 5-9 shooting guard. But Hebel was forced to do more ball-handling chores than is usually expected of a shooting guard last season, and that, many people feel, was a contributing factor to last year's drop in scoring from the Minutewomen's third all-time leading scorer.

With the addition of freshman point guard Christel Zullo and the return of juniors Mary Marquedant, last season's starter, and JoAnn Dupuis, in her second year at UMass after transfering from Vanier College in Canada, the ball-handling pressure's Hebel felt last year will be reduced and will allow her to free herself for more open shots.

"Last year a few people I know are capable of scoring had bad years," Stevens said. "Because we're not very big inside, we rely on our perimeter shooting, and last year our shooters were tentative."

Maine upended the Minutewomen in a cliffhanger, 66-65 last year at Amherst College. Hebel scored 18 points in that game.

Sports Information photo

University of Massachusetts head coach Barbara Stevens (right) and point guard Mary Marquedant (left). The Minutewomen open at Maine at Saturday.

SPORTSWEAR
Factory Outlet
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA
All
N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
50-75% OFF

Sweat Shirts Reg. $32.00 NOW $15.
NFL Telephones Reg. $65.00 NOW $25.
Wall Plaques Reg. $14.00 NOW $4.00
Beer Mugs Reg. $17. NOW $4.00
Coffee Mugs Reg. $8.00 NOW $2.00
Stadium Blankets Reg. $32.00 NOW $10.
Infant Wear Reg. $22.00 NOW $9.99
Toddler NFL Wear Reg. $13.00 NOW $6.99
NFL Back Packs Reg. $18.00 NOW $5.00

Plus much, much more!

★volleyball

continued from page 28

"I think it helps," Sortino said. "But a volleyball court is a volleyball court. About the only advantage we have is that we practice here."

UMass and James Madison met earlier this season at the Delaware Tournament with the Minutewomen sweeping JMU for the championship title. Sortino expects tonight's match to be very tough.

"They are very scrappy and very offensive at times," Sortino said. "They can run an offense as well as anybody."

"The bottom line is that everybody has got to play well," Sortino said. "We basically have to put our whole game together. We have to pass and establish our attack. Beyond that, we hope to be successful blocking as well."

The implications of possibly attending the National Division II tournament are high. An ECAC championship could spell an at-large bid to the national tournament for UMass.

"The way things have stacked up, whoever wins this championship could go to the tournament," Sortino said. "James Madison is already going because they are seeded number one in the their region. If we can beat them, that would have a great bearing on our tournament chances."

The keys to winning are quite clear for UMass. The Minutewoman offense is at its best when a middle attack is established early. Sophomore middle hitter Marcy Guiliotis and freshman middle hitter Barbara Meehan have been devastating at times this season running the middle attack. This means that the spiker passing game must be accurate to allow freshman setters Juliet Primer and Ann-Marie Larese to get the ball to Guiliotis, Meehan, and senior outside hitters Sally Maher and Ann Ringrose. UMass will also have to block well to stop a sizeable James Madison front line. Serving has been a long-time UMass strong point and must be sharp to get the spikers offense rolling.

VOLLEYBALL HITS: UMass was selected to host this year's ECAC championships over Northeastern, James Madison, and Navy because of its location.

"They tried to pick a mid-point for the schools," Sortino said. "Northeastern didn't have as suitable a sight as we did and James Madison is way too far away for everybody. Navy wasn't much better, so they decided to have it here."

JMU is located in Virginia and Navy is located in Maryland.

ECAC Information

Where: Boyden Gym (third floor).
When: Friday at 6 p.m. and Saturday at 2 p.m.
Who: UMass, Northeastern, James Madison and the Naval Academy.

The Matches: Northeastern will play Navy at 6 p.m. on Friday before UMass takes on James Madison at 8 p.m.

The Finals: The ECAC Championship Finals will be held Saturday at 2 p.m.

Tickets: Students with an identification card: $1. General Public: $2. Children under 12: free.

UMass team information: The Minutewomen are 34-7 this season and have lost only once at home this season. This is UM's last season as a NCAA Division II team and with a win in this tournament, the Minutewomen could qualify for the Division II National Championships. James Madison has already qualified and Northeastern is considered a power, two UMass victories over these teams could propel them into the tourney.

Daily Collegian Advertising that works!! Call: 545-3500

OOPS!

Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

EARN ACADEMIC CREDIT*
While gaining experience in marketing, public relations, counseling and student affairs administration. Become an intern in the University's Undergraduate Admissions Office. For more information sign up for a planning session at the University Internship Program by November 26.
* Upon faculty approval

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES
549-3840
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

Lite BEER
WinterBreak SWEEPSTAKES
Drop the books and hit the slopes during National Collegiate Ski Week January 4-11, 1986.

3 GRAND PRIZES:
Expense paid trip for two to Steamboat Springs, Colorado.
50 FIRST PRIZES:
Sun Ice Ski Parkas
75 SECOND PRIZES:
Vuarnet Sunglasses
100 THIRD PRIZES:
Obermeyer Ski Sweaters
TRAVEL ASSOCIATES

HURRY, ENTER TODAY AND GET YOUR FREE ISSUE OF SKI MAGAZINE WHILE SUPPLIES LAST

ENTRY BLANK LITE BEER WINTER BREAK SWEEPSTAKES

NAME (PLEASE PRINT)
ADDRESS (NO P.O. BOXES PLEASE)
CITY STATE ZIP
( ) TELEPHONE AGE

I state that I am of legal drinking age in my state of residence and hold no interest in an alcoholic beverage license.

Mail this entry form to:
Lite Beer Winter Break Sweepstakes
P.O. Box 4883 Blair, NE 68009

MILLER BREWING CO., MILWAUKEE, WI

OFFICIAL RULES NO PURCHASE NECESSARY

Here's How To Enter
1. On an official entry form or plain piece of 3" x 5" paper, hand print your name and address.
2. Mail your entry in a hand addressed envelope no larger than 4½" x 9½" (#10 envelope) to: Lite Beer Winter Break Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 4883, Blair, NE 68009. Enter as often as you wish, but each entry must be mailed separately. All entries must be received by December 12, 1985. We cannot be responsible for lost, late or misdirected mail.
3. All grand prizewinners through third prizewinners will be determined in a random drawing on or about December 16, 1985, from among all entries received. Random drawing will be accomplished under the supervision of the D.L. Blair Corporation, an independent sweepstakes administration company whose decisions are final in all matters relating to this offer. The first 5,000 entrants will receive a bonus prize of a free issue of Ski magazine.
4. This sweepstakes is open to college students who are residents of the U.S. and are of legal drinking age in their state at time of entry. The Miller Brewing Company, Prinz Motris, Inc., Times Mirror Magazine Inc., their distributors, affiliates, subsidiaries, advertising and promotion agencies, retail alcoholic beverage licensees and the employees and families of each are not eligible. This sweepstakes is void in the states of OH, MO and TX and wherever prohibited by law. Limit one grand through third prize and one bonus prize per family. Taxes on prizes are the sole responsibility of prizewinners. All federal, state and local laws and regulations apply. The odds of winning a prize depend upon the number of entries received.
5. Travel prizewinners must agree to depart from and return to their home on dates specified by the Miller Brewing Company. Travel prizewinners and their companions must be of legal drinking age in their state of residence as well as in the state of Colorado. No substitution of prizes permitted. Grand prizewinners may be obligated to sign and return an affidavit of eligibility within 10 days of notification in the event of noncompliance within this time period an alternate winner will be selected. Any prize returned to the sponsor or to the D.L. Blair Corporation as undeliverable will be awarded to an alternate winner. The approximate retail value of the grand prize is $2,500 each; first prize - $700 each; second prize - $75 each; third prize - $25.00 each; bonus prize - $2.00 each.
6. For a list of major prizewinners available after February 7, 1986, send a separate self-addressed stamped #10 envelope to: Lite Beer Winter Break Winners List, P.O. Box 4895, Blair, NE 68009.

★basketball

continued from page 1

"It's time to play some basketball, we're tired of playing the same people in practice," said Smith, UM's junior captain and offensive catalyst. "We're anxious for some live hoop in front of the home crowd."

Smith is the one link between the team that left the Cage in 1984 and the one that will play there Saturday night.

A 5-11 point guard from Kings Mountain, NC, Smith burst on the UMass scene as a freshman, handing out a league and school record 212 assists while scoring 7.2 points-per-game. Last season, Smith scored 9.2 ppg despite suffering a broken hand the third game of the season.

Senior center Tom Emerson and reserve guard Jack Sheehan also played on the last team to play at the Cage, but the two saw limited time, averaging a combined 0.8 points.

"The Cage adds a lot to our game, at least four or five points," said Smith, who was voted to the second team Atlantic 10 preseason all-star team. "The crowd is great. They intimidate the other team and don't let us get down. I've been trying to explain to the guys who haven't played there what it's like, it's hard. The Cage is just the Cage.

Smith teams with sophomore point guard Lorenzo Sutton in the Minuteman backcourt. They are the only players to have locked up a starting position so far in the pre-season.

"Right now, Carl and Lorenzo are the only players that I can say will start against Merrimack. There is that much competition for the other spots," said UMass coach Ron Gerlufsen. "I would say at least eight players are potential frontcourt starters."

Eight freshmen, plus four returning lettermen other than Smith and Sutton, give UMass a team with tremendous depth. Gerlufsen said he will be looking to play as many players as possible to see how they respond to game conditions.

Gerlufsen's recruiting class gave UMass eight new players. Five freshmen, a redshirt freshman and two transfers form what is potentially a solid UMass team for years to come.

Two freshman who fans will see a lot of tonight are David "Beatle" Brown and Duane Chase, products of good high school programs in hoop-rich Baltimore.

Brown, a 6-4 swingman, may start at small forward while Chase, a 6-6 forward, could start at power forward. Brown is a versatile player that could play both guard positions as well. Chase is a great inside player that can rebound and play the power game (which for you non-basketball oriented people means he can dunk a baskteball in a variety of impressive ways).

Both Chase and Brown were subjects of intense recruiting battles and have much expected from them.

New York City's Joe Fennell, a 6-6 forward, will probably back up Chase, but could earn himself a starting berth. A second team all-NYC pick, Fennell is a good rebounder.

Gainesville Junior College transfer Ben Jones, a 6-6 forward, has been a pleasant surprise for Gerlufsen. A long-time friend of Sutton's from Albany, Ga, Jones has shown a good shooting touch and rebounding ability.

Sean Mosby, a 6-7 defensive specialist from Camden, NJ will remind a lot of fans of 84 graduate Edwin Green. A great shot-blocker and rebounder, Mosby will contribute a lot of ways.

Redshirt freshman Fitzhugh Tarry came to UMass from Buffalo with good prep numbers: 24.5 points, 11 rebounds and four blocked shots per game in high school. He has slowly been regaining that touch in pre-season drills and should be another big contributer. He has been waiting a year to play for UMass and should be ready.

Smith's understudy will be 5-10 freshman Mike Mundy from Silver Springs, Md. A lightning-quick lead guard with good instincts, Mundy will be looked on for efficient subbing of Smith while learning the UMass system.

The returning UMass veterans have been unfairly overlooked

continued on page 24

Sports Information photo

Senior center Tom Emerson and UMass face Merrimack tomorrow night in the Cage.

Merrimack at UMass

UMass

No.	Name	Hgt.	Pos.
23	David Brown	6-5	G
34	Duane Chase	6-6	F
40	Tom Emerson	6-9	C
30	Joe Fennel	6-7	F
20	Bill Hampton	6-4	G
33	Wilbert Hicks	6-8	F
14	Ben Jones	6-6	F
22	John Milum *	6-9	C
42	Sean Mosby	6-8	C
10	Mike Mundy	5-10	G
21	Matt Ryan	6-4	F
24	Jack Sheehan	6-3	G
5	Carl Smith	5-11	G
11	Lorenzo Sutton	6-2	G
12	Fitzhugh Tarry	6-8	F

* eligible second semester.

Merrimack

No.	Name	Hgt.	Pos.
12	Kevin Lahiff	6-3	G
14	William Nawn	6-1	G
20	Tim McFadden	5-8	G
22	Bob Venora	6-4	F
24	Tommy Lewis	6-5	F
30	Louis Diggs	6-5	F
32	Mike Dunn	6-3	G
34	Tim Hart	6-6	F
40	Tommy Herrion	6-8	G
42	Tim Coyne	6-4	F
44	Scott Anglin	6-4	F
50	Joe Pazera	6-4	G
54	Derek Frame	6-10	C

The Teams: This is the season opener for both teams. UMass is a member of the Division 1 Atlantic 10 conference, Merrimack is a member of the Division 2 Northeast 8 League.

The Coaches: UMass coach Ron Gerlufsen 25-32 over two years, Merrimack coach Bart Hamel is 67-69 over five years.

Returning Lettermen: UMass returns six lettermen, Merrimack returns eight.

Last Season: UMass was 13-15, Merrimack was 11-17.

Players to Watch: UMass—Junior point guard Carl Smith has won or tied seven games at the buzzer in two years. Sophomore shooting guard Lorenzo Sutton is a good shooter and a great leaper. Freshmen Duane Chase and David Brown are exciting young players with great potential. Merrimack—The Warriors have 29-year-old Tommy Lewis, a hot-shooting 6-5 forward that spent some time in the army after playing at Minnesota. 6-6 forward Tim Hart (12.4 points-per-game) and quick point guard Tim McFadden are also strong.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

UPC General Meeting Date: Tuesday, 11/26 Time: 6:30 pm Place: 163 CC New members always welcome!

AUDIO

For sale Technics 35 watt Rec. $40 12 band graphic eq. $70 both $100 call 549-6891 - Brian for info.

AUTO FOR SALE

1977 Chevy Malibu Classic air, fog lights, nice condition, dependable $1400 or BO call 665-3921

Pontiac GTO 1968 strong New parts $1100 BO 546-6417

1976 Ford Pinto good condition $900 584-5742

77 Honda Accord 5 speed must sell to pay bills call Scott 253-9015

74 VW Bug strong eng. exc. frame and int. good body $850 549-7778

1976 "Sunbug" stereo by Sony, solid body, runs great $1400 584-5269

1976 Ford Maverick, 60,000 miles, auto, power steering, 4 door, runs fine. BO over 1700. 549-1902

1974 Audi 100LS black exterior/red interior. Front wheel drive. Very little rust. Engine good condition also. $1200 549-7194 Sarah

76 Chevy Malibu good condition $650.00 call 549-3591

VW Superbeetle 1971 rebuilt engine very reliable great heat - AM/FM $850 (best offer) 586-5476 or 253-4253

1970 Chevy Malibu excellent running condition good body AM FM Cassette deck $500 call Linda evenings after 6 549-6313

1975 Audi Fox rebuilt engine lots of new parts must sell! $600. 253-7454

Volvo '76 great car. Must sell $2400/BO tel 546-5836

1979 VW Rabbit runs great, good cond. 5-speed $1500 Geoff 259-1982

"CUT A THON"

John Dellaria will be giving haircuts on Sun Nov 24th from 11 am -3 pm for $8.00 each cut. All proceeds will go to the Everywomen's Center. Go to Wilder Hall this Sunday!!

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock-A-Dise Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

Do you need bands for your party. Professional bands that didn't just get together yesterday. You name the sound and songs you want. We'll set up the band! Different varieties from $150 call Steady Sounds 549-0385

THE BREAKFAST CLUB
Fri Nov 22 at 5, 7, 9, 11
Engineering East Aud
$1.50 at 5, 7 $2.00 at 9, 11

Turn the Tables professional party/club D.J. 5 yr experience widest selection cal 24 hr. 566-9651

Doctor Music, Boston's favorite DJ, comes to the area with 6 years experience. My preemption for your event: pro audio, lights, and lots of Top 40, oldies, and more! Call now for low introductory rates: 256-8404

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt, on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately. 665-3440, leave message

1 or 2 females to share apt call eves 549-4483

1 bedroom Cliffside apt. 375/month, includes everything avail Jan 1 call 665-8455

Large modern loft-style apartment in Northampton Cneter AC, sundeck, heat included available Jan 1 call 586-4460

Amherst Brandywine 2 bdrm apt busline 580/month available 1-1-86 549-1119

Single room available in a house on Main St in Amherst, rent is $183 per mo plus utilities on bus route and close to town and campus lease runs from Jan. 1 to Aug 31 call Mike at 256-1233 pref after 5 pm

Lg 1 bdrm apt Squire Vill, avail Jan 665-4669 aft 6

FOR SALE

Brand new 12" B & W TV only $70!! Brand new port. Sharp tpwrrior, 2 pg memory only $170!! Don't forget that Christmas is coming!! Call 6-4475 for more details.

Celebrate the Holidays
by sending a Turkey Gram
on sale in the Concourse
11/19-22

Skis - K2s - 160s good condition boots -Caber size - women's - 8 call 545-0162 ask for Hope

Electric Guitar: Music Man with active electronics and Kahler tremolo exc cond asking $325 call Bruce 6-9563

Yabadabadoo UMass "Bed Rock" cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

1975 Volvo Auto good. As is. $590 or best offer. 546-8096

Nordica Ski Roots size 9-10 used twice very cheap! Best offer call Leo 6-8612

Guitar - Yamaha SE200 student electric brand new $200, very negotiable 546-5125

FOUND

Key on a brass ring found at WMUA meeting 11/18 contact Pat Mahoney to claim 545-2876

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Part-time temporary positions available for the Annual Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Program. Starting date: November 22 until December 24. For more information call 586-5243

Accountant: The Economic Development Office is hiring for Spring semester. Sophomores and Juniors needed to work with student controlled businesses, approx 10 hrs/wk. Applications available at 409 SUB. Deadline is noon 11/27

Marketing interns needed for Hampshire Mall Management Office must be energetic and reliable with excellent communication skills. Apply Office of Internships 545-0725

The Commuter Area Government has one work study position for an office assistant. Interested people should have good organizational skills, typing skills, and 10-15 hrs a week free. Undergrads only should apply to 404 SUB before November 26th. EOE/AA employer.

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

Intersession bartending classes covers all aspects, gigs up, starts Monday, Nov 25, room 111 credit free registration Tower Library

KAREN TAYLOR

Hey Boink!! Happy Birthday! I know I have something you want, only one more year, can we deal with it?! I hope its a good one! - The Savage

LOST

In the "Pub" parking lot Saturday night a set of tools in a silver tool box. Please return them they're not mine. Call Eric at 546-7868

Blue LeSportSac wallet with great sentimental value. If returned, no questions asked. Reward. Call 546-8380 or 546-8390

Watch by Belair. Silver w/gold lost Friday 11/15 near Southwest. Unrepairable but sentimental. Reward. Please call Chris 546-5557

Men's UMass Ring: Steven Sobeck inscribed. Lost in Townehouse area. Call 549-5924, for Kelley. REWARD

MOTORCYCLES

1983 Honda V45 Sabre low miles ex condition. Show bike, helmet also $2000. 545-4612 after 8 pm ask for Sean

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-4780

NEW STUDENTS PROGRAM

Counselor applications available for summer '86. 101 Berkshire House

PARKA FOR SALE

Awesome EMS Expedition down parka, size M, worn twice. Paid $160, now only $100. Great buy! Call Mario 6-7086 late eves

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Where else can you get good tunes, great food, and the best coffee. The People's Market of course! Around the corner from the Post Office

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3407

Ski and Party at Sugarbush. See Ski Club Sale S.U.B. Wed-Sat. Hotel $149

Attention Musicians: Experienced drummer seeking to form a funk/jazz fusion group. Are you interested? If so, call Scott at 546-5149

LAGNAF
nudge, nudge
wink, wink
Know what I mean?

Need 100 overweight people to try our new weight loss product call 546-9652

Help I need Femmes tix please call 1-772-6469

Send a flower to a turkey or a friend. Flowers and messages can be sent for Thanksgiving (or whatever). Look for the sale on Campus Center Concourse Fri, Nov 22 and Mon Nov 25. Pick up day Tues Nov 26. Names will appear in the Collegian. Sponsored by Mortar Board.

Suzanne! Happy Birthday!! Hope you have a super 21st. Lots of love, your Roomie

LIZ - You're not gonna transfer without leaving an earring in my apartment, are you?

Stan Alger/Erik Russell - Good luck making it to degree on Sunday! The Brothers of KKPSI

Spike - You are losing your touch! How could a girl possibly have done better than you! Love the Katwoman

Matt - Happy Birthday with lots of love and ice cream from the girl in your BIG shirt

Happy Birthday Aimee!! Don't worry - I won't forget the rake! Love ya, Sheila Southwest Residents! Do you have a single? I will trade my single in Sylvan 4 cash for your single, amount negotiable Toby 6-4314

Kim I'm only shy around guys I think are cute. Tell me ... are you just like our "former" Lifeguard friend?

Huh, if you're down, you don't have to drown. I'm a good listener. Jenny

Cal Happy Birthday Hope it's a good one have a great time love ya JD

Magali Happy Birthday! Don't forget what I told you. Trust no one your neurotic friend

Karen "SB" Towland Happy early Birthday. I hope number 18 is the best ever I'll miss ya next semester. Love 1118 roommate

Happy Birthday Kaye! Have a great 22nd to our favorite apt Mom! Love your roomies!

John Patrick, I love you more and more each day. You're the greatest. Love always, Andrea Sledog - the key word here is Happy have a happy birthday! We're not saying ...love the Mutigans!

Lady Smita, You make me the happiest man in the world! I hope your exams go good so you'll be in a good mood TONIGHT! Love always, Mr. ImposSIBle

Shawn, If Prince Charming doesn't show up, theres always the clouterred nunhood.

Seoral Have a good one Happy 21st love ya Ellen

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To (from) Seattle Washington for Christmas break - share driving and expenses call PeterGeo at 586-4491

Ride needed to Rochester or Syracuse for Thanksgiving weekend. Will pay $ Please call Jay - 546-6056

ROOM WANTED

Female looking for housing or sublet for Jan 1 thru May 86 call Lisa 256-1301

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2749

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-8495 evenings

Wanted: Easy going, studious female to share clean, quiet, furnished, one bedroom Puffton apt. Spring semester 549-1313

Looking for female to share 1 bedroom apt. in Cliffside Apts beginning Jan 1 1987/no inclusive! Call Christine 665-7729

Roommate wanted to look for an apartment with two nonsmoking females interested in North Amherst or Sunderland. Call 6-6868 or 6-4069 must be female!!!

1 bdrm in 3 bdrm apt $200/mo on Rt 9 next to bus stop 586-4969

Female to share room in Brittany Manor apt. Nonsmoker. Feb to June call 253-3766 after 5:00

Wanted - person to share furnished house in N. Amherst nonsmoker/student, near bus, heat provided, $200.00/month only til May 256-8432 Randy

One bedroom in beautiful two bedroom fully furnished Southwood apt 1 or 2 p. call 253-9917 anytime

Brandywine apt. looking for someone to rent my room for Spring semester. Rent is $290 per month. Heat is included in price. Possibility that entire apt will be available. Couple a welcome. Call 549-6269

One space available in Brittany Manor, female, $142.50/, call Bonnie 256-1405

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime. 665-7652

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

Don't let others beat you to it Earn $4000-$12000 parttime or $20000-$60000 fulltime call 546-9632

Editing. Consultation. Ex professor's specialty: dissertations, professional articles, books 268-7772

SUSAN GAUDETTE

Happy Birthday! Sorry I can't be with you, but I'm thinking of you!

TO SUBLET

2 rooms available in 4 bedroom apt in Swiss Village. On busline $215 inc for info call 256-1961

1 utility room apt $260/mo, 1 utility South Deerfield. Fan heat * stove. Washer/dryer, fridge Call Dominique at 665-3146 Available 12/01

TRAVEL

TAKE A BREAK ON THE FRENCH SIDE! Skibreak's January trip to Tignes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT airfare (Swissair), transfers, accommodations, skipass (116 lifts), slalom races, cocktails for $740/7 nights in resort. Skibreak (203) 354-6059, Ted: 546-4733

London Spring break 86 - Roundtrip airfare from Boston via Pan Am, 8 nights hotel, breakfasts, transfers, subway pass discount, & taxes Only $625 sponsored by HKTA Travel Club. Call Luis 549-7841

TYPING SERVICE

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

Drummer - to play in 4 piece band i.e Echo&theBunnyMen, Cure, Psychedelic Furs, Echo&theGunClub mostly original tho' call Bill 546-5234

WANTED TO RENT

To take over 2 bdrm apartment lease in January. Call 546-5337 or 546-5257

To take over lease January 1 for a 2 or 3 bedroom apartment in N. Amherst or Sunderland. Call 546-4069 or 546-5568

Single room desired Intersession only in Amherst area preferred please call Marybeth at 546-6944 after 6:30 PM

WOMEN SOCCER RIDES

Ride offered to Women's Soccer final 4 in Virginia. 5 seats available, call 546-9266 Holly

WORD PROCESSING EDITOR

Must have Apple 2E, matrix printer Wordstar facility 256-0626 7-9 am/9-11 pm

SPORTS

Third time the charm for UM?

Women's soccer in Final Four, wanting a national title

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

FAIRFAX, Va. — In 1983 and 1984, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team was the underdog for the national title at the Final Four.

This year, the 16-0-0 Minutewomen are seeded first but UMass coach Kalekeni Banda still sees his squad as an underdog when they take on third-ranked George Mason University in the NCAA semifinals on Saturday at noon, here at George Mason.

"We're a very young team," Banda said. "Look at all the rosters, you'll find that we're the youngest team."

Massachusetts starts four freshmen, five sophomores and two seniors. The first two off the bench are a sophomore and freshman.

UMass is in its third Final Four in as many years, finishing third the last two. George Mason (16-2-1) finished second in its only Final Four appearnce in 1983.

In the other semifinal, four-time national champion North Carolina (17-1-1) faces Colorado College (16-4), who is making its first Final Four appearance.

The NCAA final is Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

UMass will be facing a Patriot squad that relies heavily on the scoring of senior All-American fowards Lisa Gmitter (13 goals, four assists, 30 points) and Pam Baughmann (7-5-19).

"We're not going to worry about marking up one or two of their best players," UMass' senior co-captain Sue Bird said. "We're going to play our own game and play at our level of soccer. Any of our players can mark up their best players."

Total soccer is the name of the game for the Minutewomen. Banda's squad is one where everyone plays defense and offense.

"As long as we can play strong and aggressively as a team, I don't see any problems," Banda said.

"We've developed the team concept," senior Jamie Watson, the other co-captain, said. "We believe in ourselves and it shows in our record, our team offense and team defense."

The Minutewomen go to the national championships with a balanced scoring attack. Nine players have scored points in double figures and six have 20 or more points.

Freshman Beth Roundtree (10 goals-4 assists-24 points) and sophomore Monica Seta (9-6-24) lead the team while Carolyn Micheel (5-13-23), Cathy Cassady (7-8-22), Cathy Spence (9-4-22) and All-American Kristen Bowsher (7-6-20) have 20 or more points.

The UMass defense has given up just two goals. Starting goalie Jan Holland (0.07 goals against average) has only given up one goal and has 12.5 shutouts of her credit. UMass has outscored its opponents 68-2.

"We're just doing the same things that we've done all year," Watson said. "We're hungrier this year and we really believe in ourselves."

The Minutewomen have never won a NCAA semifinal. Last season, Connecticut upset UMass by a 2-1 overtime score in the semis.

"That (looking ahead) was one of the problems last year," Bird said. "We thought we were going to beat UConn and they beat us. The freshmen were just happy to be there. This year, they (the entire team) wants to go the whole way."

George Mason coach Hank Leuhg also sees his squad as an underdog. "We look foward to it with a lot of anticipation but we're definitely an underdog. They're a very skillful and fast team," he said.

UMass hasn't played the Patriots since 1983, but is 2-0 against them in the season series. George Mason did play North Carolina this year and blew a 3-0 lead, ending up with a 3-3 tie. The Patriots also lost to Boston College, 2-0 and only beat Harvard, 1-0.

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Sophomore forward Cathy Spence (right) and the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team are in the Final Four this weekend.

UMass beat UNC, 2-0, beat Boston College twice, 2-0 and 3-0 and crushed Harvard, 6-0.

But history is still against the Minutewomen as they ready themselves to face George Mason on its home turf.

"I think we're ready," Banda said. "Overall, this is the best team I've ever coached here. Win or lose, we want to come out with some very good games. People are looking foward to see us play."

FINAL FOUR NOTES—"We've got a personal and team venedetta (against George Mason)," Watson said. "We've heard through the grapevine how they bragged in pre-season they would be number one. That kind of cockiness turns us off."

Colorado College is in its first Final Four and coached by Dang Pibulvech, who led Central Florida to a second place finish in 1982 . . .The Tigers is led by senior foward Shelia Jack (10-6-26), and foward Anne Cernicec (8-3-19). Goalie Jeanie Szpara has 12 shutouts.

North Carolina already owns a 2-0 regular season win over Colorado. George Mason beat Colorado, 4-0. . .UMass last played the Tigers in 1984, winning 3-0. . . UMass is 1-0 against the Tigers. . .Colorado hasn't given up a goal since losing to the Patriots, four games ago.

North Carolina is in its fifth Final Four and has won the last four national titles. . . The Tar Heels have outscored its opponents 101-9 and are led by the 1984 Soccer America National player of the year, junior All-American April Heinrichs (18-13-49). . .Other top scorers include Jo Boobas (15-11-41) and Carrie Serwetnyk (18-4-40).

The Final Four

When: Saturday—National Semifinals: University of Massachusetts vs. George Mason University, noon. University of North Carolina (Chapel Hill) vs. Colorado College, 3 p.m.

Sunday - National championship: 1:30 p.m.

Where: George Mason Soccer Stadium (cap. 5,000), George Mason University, Fairfax, Va.

TV/Radio: ESPN will carry the game on a tape delayed basis on Thursday, Nov. 27 at 12:30 p.m. (Championship Finals only). The games UMass is involved in will be carried on WMUA-FM (91.1).

Records: UMass is 16-0-0, UNC is 17-1-1, George Mason is 16-2-1 and Colorado College is 16-4-0.

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:

Today:

Volleyball: ECAC Championship at Boyden Gym. Northeastern vs. Navy, 6 p.m. UMass vs. James Madison, 8 p.m. Students (with ID) $1. Adults $2. Children under 12, free.

Saturday:

Men's Basketball: Merrimack College, Curry Hicks Cage, 7:30 p.m. Students with ID: free. General Public: SOLD OUT.

Women's Basketball: at Maine, 7 p.m.

Women's Soccer: National Semifinals at George Mason University, Fairfax, Va. UMass vs. George Mason, noon.

Volleyball: ECAC Championships Finals, Boyden Gym.

Sunday:

Women's Soccer: National Championship, 1:30 p.m., George Mason University, Fairfax, Va.

Men's Swimming: at Boston College, 1 p.m.

Minutewomen host Eastern powers

Volleyball in ECAC tournament

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

It doesn't seem soon enough but the waiting game is finally over for the University of Massachusetts volleyball team. The second season begins this weekend for the Minutewomen, as theyhost the East Coast Athletic Conference volleyball championships at Boyden Gymnasium.

The spikers, 34-7 on the season and seeded second in the tourney, will face number three seed James Madison University at 8 p.m. tonight. The other semi-final pits the number one seed, Northeastern University, against the Naval Academy, the fourth seed, at 6 p.m.. The ECAC selection committee accepts only four schools from a conference that features over 100 schools in three divisions.

The championship match is scheduled for 2 p.m. on Saturday.

The Minutewomen come into this tournament with a lot of questions to answer. The spikers have been on a two-week layoff after losing to the Huskies at the Northeastern tourney on November 9. UMass did scrimmage the University of New Haven Tuesday in preparation for this weekend's tournament.

UMass is 7-1 this season at home and will have the home crowd advantage which has several times assisted the Minutewomen this season, most notably the spiker's come-from-behind victory over Northeastern back in early October. But UM head coach Elaine Sortino doesn't place an overwhelming amount of emphasis on playing at home.

continued on page 26

Soccer falls in Final Four . . . page 16

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 56 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Monday, November 25, 1985

Crowding at cage 'horrible'

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

Three athletic department officials will meet today to devise a plan for handling crowds outside the Curry Hicks Cage, after nearly 1,000 students were turned away from the sold-out opening basketball game there Saturday night, an official said.

The official, James Patulak, associate to the dean of physical education and head of facility management, said the worst problem at Saturday's game was crowd control.

"We figured it would be held in an orderly fashion," Patulak said last night. "We're going to work on it and there will definitely be changes as to how we go about letting people enter the building."

According to most estimates, nearly 1,000 students were turned away from the 4,024-seat gymnasium. Many of those waiting complained of the lack of outside security and crowd barriers to keep the people in a single line.

The crowd extended the width of the Cage, which students said contributed to "dangerous pushing and shoving" because of impatience with students entering through a single door.

Police did not comment on any possible

continued on page 3

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Students in the back had room to wave, but those up front were not as lucky Saturday night, when nearly a thousand students waited for close to two hours, but were turned away from Saturday night's basketballgame in the refurbished Curry Hicks Cage.

Students beautify city island

By BETHANNE MOSKOV
Collegian Staff

NEW YORK CITY-Twenty members of the University of Massachusetts Urban Forestry Club spent Saturday here pruning the overgrown trees on Ellis island in an effort to beautify the area around the historic immigration office.

"The National Arborists Association invited us to participate in the pruning so we decided to go and do our little part to help clean up America," said Malcolm George, a club member.

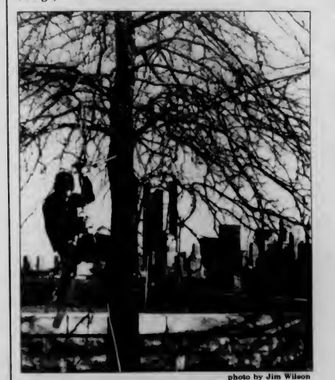

photo by Jim Wilson

UMass student helps clean up New York's Ellis Island during weekend trip.

The club, which is part of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, had originally planned to help clean up the area around the Statue of Liberty on Liberty Island. However, because of the current construction taking place on the statue they were not allowed to work on the island, George said.

"Although we were hoping to work on Liberity Island, the area around Ellis island was overgrown enough to keep us busy the entire day," Bill Collins, another member of the club, said.

According to George, the work consisted of pruning the overgrown trees and cleaning up the general area. The immigration office is being redone, and the island needed work, he said.

Aside from the Urban club, members from various professional tree companies participated in the clean-up.

"In all, 115 tree experts helped with the pruning and the entire island was cleaned by the end of the day", Collins said.

As for the future, the club hopes to return to New York in the spring to prune the trees on Liberty Island. According to Collins the work on the statue will be done by then.

"This was a great learning experience for all who went. Arborculture is the main interest of the members of the Urban club and this was a wonderful opportunity to work hard for something that we love", George said, adding that the club's efforts have brought national attention to the Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

The trip was endorsed by Stockbridge, which donated $100 to help finance the trip. The University also donated the use of vans for transportation.

On campus, the Urban Club works with the physical plant in an effort to improve the trees on campus.

All of the members of the group work on a volunteer basis and are studying Arborculture.

4 protesters will face judge today

Four members of the Faculty and Staff for Peace in Central America will go on trial today for disorderly conduct in connection with a June 12 sit-in at Westover Air Force base in Chicopee.

Tom Roeper, a linguistics professor at the University of Massachusetts, said the four were protesting the Reagan administration's policy of funding for the contras in Nicaraugua.

"I think we'll be let off," Roeper said. "Our defense is based on the narrow legitimacy of the arrest. We weren't actually disorderly."

Roeper said the group would plead "not guilty" on a "necessity defense," which states that it may be legal for citizens to take illegal actions if their government is doing something illegal.

"The administration's action against Central America is illegal as well as immoral," Roeper said, adding that the four hope to introduce their political convictions to the court. "Other institutions including the judicial system must act upon their conscience and promote justice," he said.

The four had intended to block the gates at Westover, "where federal troops are trained to go to Central America," Roeper said, but finding the gates locked they sat in the street where they were arrested for disorderly conduct. Roeper said the four include Ann Ferguson, a philosophy professor at UMass and Tom Nielsen, a staff member at the UMass Center for International Education.

The trial will be at Chicopee District Court.

—LESLEY CLARK

INSIDE

Up to 50 killed in hostage rescue attempt...2
Santa sleds into Hadley.....3
Basketball wins opener.....16

"Little things excite me."

—T.M.

WORLD/NATIONAL

Egypt takes hijacked plane; 40 die

VALLETTA, Malta (AP)—Egyptian commandos stormed a hijacked Egyptair jetliner yesterday and an explosion during the assault killed 40 to 50 people aboard the Boeing 737, U.S. Embassy officials said.

Joel Levy, deputy chief of the U.S. Mission, said the operation occurred at 8:20 p.m. 2:20 p.m. EST and "there were a fair number of casualties among the passengers and at first report, it appears all the hijackers were killed."

The jetliner was hijacked Saturday about 15 to 20 minutes after leaving Athens, Greece, for Cairo, Egypt. Greek security police said 97 people were aboard, including three Americans.

There were reports earlier yesterday that the terrorists had killed seven passengers and threatened to kill more if their plane was not refueled. The Maltese government refused to give in to the hijackers demand until all the passengers were freed, said government spokesman Paul Mifsud.

Levy said in a telephone conversation with The Associated Press that the commandos "blew two doors off the plane and fired seven shots" in their assault on the airliner, which had been commandeered by Arabic-speaking sky pirates on Saturday.

Airport workers had reported hearing gunfire and explosions and seeing smoke in the area of the airport where the Egyptair Boeing 737 was parked.

Authorities issued a "full medical alert" calling for all medical assistance and emergency blood donations, the workers said. The runway and most terminal lights that had been turned off earlier in the evening came back on after the plane was stormed.

Levy said the Egyptian commandos arrived earlier in the day aboard an Egyptian military transport plane.

He said he believed two or three hijackers were killed in the attack. Some reports have put the number of the hijackers as high as four, but he said one of them may have been killed during an in-flight shootout.

At least 11 people, all women, earlier were allowed to leave the plane. Seven people injured aboard the jetliner also either were allowed off or were thrown off the plane, Mifsud said.

Mifsud said the seven people hospitalized included an American man, two Israeli women, two Egyptian stewardesses,an Egyptian man, and a woman believed to be American.

A man who identified himself as the pilot was overheard telling the control tower by radio that the hijackers killed seven passengers.

Mifsud, the government spokesman, said one woman, most probably an American, earlier was shot to death and her body thrown out of the plane. He could confirm no other deaths, but said there may have been "other corpses aboard."

He told reporters that another passenger, who had been also thrown out and left under the plane, was found alive after she was picked up by two airport officials who delivered food to the plane.

He said the woman, in her 30s, "probably is American," adding that officials were trying to determine her identity. He said she had a head wound but is conscious and appears in relatively good shape.

Mifsud said the hijackers had never identified themselves or made political demands, but Egyptian aviation authorities had identified them earlier as members of a group calling itself "Egypt Revolutionaries."

AP Laserphoto

Firemen estinguishing the flames of the explosion of the hijacked Egyptian plane. Flames were ignited after a rescue attempt left up to 50 people killed, including the hijackers.

Anti-terrorism bill debated

WASHINGTON (AP)—To the Office of Management and Budget, it's a normal clearance process. To members of Congress, it's an unecessary delay. To the State Department and 17,000 Americans serving abroad, it's a time of nervous waiting.

Controversy has errupted over OMB's time table for handling a major anti-terrorism bill, which would authorize the nation's most massive—and costly—program for diplomatic outposts overseas.

Drafted by the State Department, the $4.2 billion, seven-year program would include everything from construction of new embassies to installation of better lights and locks.

Democrats and Republicans on a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee accuse OMB of keeping the authorizaing bill bottled up, thus delaying its introduciton in Congress with the White House stamp of approval. The critics speculate there are objections to its cost.

An OMB official denied there is a delay and contended the bill is simply undergoing a normal review.

"I have a classified list of high-risk posts that are potential time bombs," said Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., chairman of the international operations subcommittee conducting hearings on diplomatic security. "They're very inviting targets, sitting there waiting for a problem."

Rep.Lawrence J. Smith, D-Fla., said OMB officials would be to blame "if anything happens in an embassy that could have had security upgraded."

The State Department's undersecretary for management, Ronald I. Spiers, told Mica at a recent hearing that OMB was holding up action while Congress wrestled with the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget bill.

But Edwin L. Dale, spokesman for OMB, said there is no delay and no connection to the deficit reduction fever sweeping through Congress.

AP Laserphoto

RACIAL PROTESTS—Hundreds of people gather Thursday night in southwest Philadelphia and protest near the home of an interracial couple who recently moved into predominantly white neighborhood.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Andrew Wolff
Copy Editor	Steve Higgins
Layout Technician	Leslie Goldstein
Photo Technician	Derek Roberts
Production Supervisor	BethAnne Moskov
Production:	Paula Saucier, Nancy Rivers, Mark Parker, Rob Catalona, Dave Boardman, Andy Diskes

Base area bombed

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP)-A powerful car bomb exploded outside a busy U.S. military shopping center yesterday injuring 34 people, most of them Americans, authorities said.

The blast at 3:20 p.m. damaged 42 cars in the center's parking lot, shattered windows and blew a gaping hole in the back wall of one shop.

"We suspect leftist terrorists because the attack was similar to the car bombing at the U.S. Air Force Base in August," said spokesman Alexander Prechtel of the Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsrube.

That Aug. 8 car-bomb attack at the U.S. Air Force Rhein-Main Air Force Base killed two Americans and injured 20 people.

The terrorist Red Army Faction asserted responsibility for the August attack but there was no immediate claim of responsibility for Sunday's bombing.

"Like in August, Americans were the target of the attack," Prechtel said.

Frankfurt police spokesman Kurt Kraus said the bomb was packed in a blue BMW sedan that was bought by a "Moroccan-looking man" Saturday at a second-hand car dealership near Frankfurt.

He said police were looking for witnesses who may have seen the car or the man since Saturday.

Kraus said the BMW was bought at the same dealership that sold the car used in the August bombing.

Bill Swisher, a spokesman for the U.S. Army's 97th General Hospital in Frankfurt, said 34 injured people were treated at the hospital. He said 27 had been released bv late evening.

"Seven people are still here and they are listed in fair to good condition," Swisher said.

He said a 3-year-old American child was among those released but could give no further details.

The injured included 19 U.S. military personnel, 11 American civilians, a West German civilian and a Filipino, Swisher said.

AIDS study: school safe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)-Boarding-school children with AIDS did not transmit the disease to any healthy classmates during up to three years of living, eating and studying together, new research shows.

The research, done in western France at a school for children with medical problems or handicaps, shows that even close contact between children will not allow acquired immune deficiency syndrome to spread, said Luc Montagnier of the Pasteur Institue in Paris.

Montagnier, who mentioned the unpublished study Saturday during a symposium on African AIDS, said in a later inverview that the children with AIDS were hemophiliacs who had contracted the disease from blood transfusions.

Some 50 of the hemophiliac students-about half of whom had AIDS-slept in the same dormitories and attended classes with about 70 other children who did not have AIDS, Montagnier said.

The children were between 3 and 16 years old and had lived together for one to three years, he said.

"None of the other children have been infected with the AIDS virus,' said Montagnier, who is one of the discoverers of the virus and an internationally known AIDS researcher.

The conclusion that AIDS cannot be spread among school children was reinforced by an additional finding. The hemophiliac students did pass hepatitis B to some healthy classmates, suggesting that an exchange of blood occurred between the students, probably through scratches on their hands, Montagnier said.

The students thus had extremely close contact with one another, but still were unable to transmit AIDS.

The study was not undertaken to determine whether school children could transmit AIDS, but was part of a longterm project to monitor the heatlh of the children at the special school.

Montagnier said retailed results of the research would be published soon in a medical journal.

Parents in several American cities have threatened to boycott school classes-and have sometimes carried out the threat-when they learned their children could be attending school with AIDS-infected classmates.

Public health officials have said repeatedly that the disease cannot be spread through casual contact, and that healthy school children were thus not in any danger from classmates with Aids.

The disease is most often spread through sexual contact, shared needles or blood transfusions. Children with AIDS generally have acquired it either from blood transfusions or from their infected mothers at birth.

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

BANKING TURKEY—Karen DeRoo, freshman CASIAC major, and Bob Segal, junior accounting major, working Friday as tellers at the UMass Credit Union in the Student Union.

Ruddock felony charges heard today

Undergraduate Senate Speaker John Ruddock will face charges of malicious property damage stemming from an incident last May after the anti-apartheid sit-in at UMass Treasurer Robert Brand's office in Goodell.

University of Massachusetts police officer Dennis Bromery has charged that Ruddock caused over $100 in damage to his personal vehicle when he hurdled the car to inform police officers that a bus holding handcuffed demonstrators was leaking gasoline.

Ruddock was arrested while he was calling the roll at a senate meeting one week after the May 1 incident.

A group supporting Ruddock has said that when they examined Bromery's vehicle no damge was found, and the charges against Ruddock are harassment motivated by an attempt to quiet activism on campus.

Ruddock said last night he believes the charges against him are "frivolous."

"I feel that the entire matter is an outrage to myself and the entire student body," he said, "It is my hope that justice will be done."

Trespassing charges against nine protestors who sat in at the treasuer's office last May were dropped one day before the group was scheduled to go to trial last Tuesday.

Ruddock will be arraigned on a felony charge at Hampshire District Court at 9 a.m. today.

—STEVE HIGGINS

★ cage

continued from page 1

injuries that may have occurred, but Patulak said a few students suffered from hyperventilation after entering the Cage.

Walter Novak, the University's ticket manager, and Daniel Ghormley, the associate athletic director will discuss possible use of barriers and more outside security for future games, Patulak said.

Brian Khung, 19, a resident of Gorman Hall, said nobody was present to tell the crowd anything concerning how many seats were available inside the arena.

"The crowd was already big there at six o'clock. They had one and a half hours to do something," Khung said. "We're college students, all we needed was an explanation."

Novak said the students outside the Cage were disorderly and 90 percent of those inside were "well inebriated."

"The problems outside were created by the students themselves," Novak said. "It wouldn't have done any good putting up barriers."

However, most students said they waited in line for up to one hour before finding out the Cage was full, and many described the situation as "horrible."

Caroline Killilea, 21, a resident of South Amherst, said she waited in line for an hour before discovering the Cage was full and people kept on arriving and pushing from the back of the crowd.

"They should have told us earlier that it was sold out," Killilea said. "It should have been organized."

Novak said that because the crowd of students did not listen to the security on duty, problems such as not hearing that it was sold out occurred.

Santa visits Hadley

Parks sled at mall

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

It was bigger than the sale at J.C. Penny's.

More than 100 little children and some not-so-little children waited Saturday at the Hampshire Mall in Hadley with eyes wide open in anticipation of the arrival of the merriest of all men–Santa Claus.

The cold temperatures and strong winds did not deter the youngsters from dragging their parents outside just before noon to wait with a giant snowman, Papa Smurf, a toy soldier and a giant green bird whose beak scared one little boy into a loud scream of "he's going to get me."

At exactly noon one woman yelled out a scream that sent the crowd rushing forward: "There he is, Santa's at McDonald's."

Santa Claus had arrived on schedule.

On a sleigh pulled by one lone horse, Santa and Mrs. Claus drove around the parking lot with a police escort in front. The Hopkins Academy Marching Band from Hadley struck up a rousing rendition of "Jingle Bells" as the roar of the crowd greeted the man in red.

One little boy, Jeremy, 4, of Hadley, started to cry at the sight of Santa, who looked as though he lost weight in his legs and had shrunk an inch or two from last year.

"Mommy," Jerry cried, "I don't like Santa, he's ugly." But Alison, 5, of Amherst, was quite impressed with the grand entrance of Kris Kringle.

"He's so wonderful," Alison said. "You know what, I'm gonna get my picture taken with him and ask for a "My little Pony," a popular Christmas toy.

Julie, also 5, of Amherst, said she was excited about Santa coming, even though her older brother Kevin had called him a fraud.

"He is real, look at him, he's here, I can't believe it," she said.

As Santa made his way through the crowd shouting, "HO HO HO," the marching band led him through the mall as merchants in the middle clung to their merchandise trying to protect it from a collision with the entourage.

Santa and the band marched from the Penny's entrance down to K-Mart, as all the children who had stood outside formed a line at his picture booth.

Tom, 22, a University of Massachusetts student, said that he wanted to get his picture taken with Santa to prove to his mother he was still a kid.

"She's always saying grow up," he said. "But hey, as long as I keep believing in Santa Claus I can stay as young as I want forever."

Some children waited in line as long as an hour to sit on Santa's lap and have their picture taken. Santa will be around evenings and weekends, until the night before Christmas when he goes on his merry way.

AP Laserphoto

Santas like this will be sliding down chimneys all over, when Christmas arrives one month from today.

Staff performance cited

Eleven employees of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst have been chosen to receive the Commonwealth Citation for Outstanding Performance from Governor Michael Dukakis.

The award is given annually to state employees for outstanding performance. The governor will present the awards at a Dec. 10th dinner at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

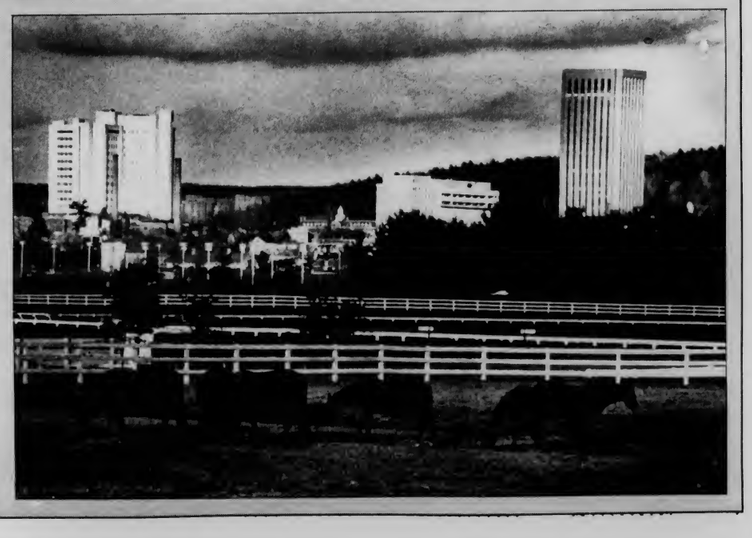
The recipients are:

Arlene Avakian, a staff assistant in the Women's Studies Program. Avakian was cited for for helping to incorporate the perspectives of women of color into the academic curriculum.

Jake Bishop, director of procurement, was recognized for his work with the Massachusetts Higher Education Consortium.

Karen Cerow, principal clerk at the Stockbridge School of Agriculture and Elizabeth Wiernasz, Stockbridge senior clerk, will share an award for their service to the community.

Lawrence Holmes, assistant director of the Public Safety Department, was recognized for his work in the area of crime prevention.



Janet Hrynshyn, staff assistant in the chemistry department, will receive the award for her service to the community.

Sara Ives, staff associate in the college of arts and sciences, was recognized for her work with faculty, staff and students.

Charles Moran, director of the writing program, was recognized for his work with the writing program.

Victor Patnaude, Bartlett Hall janitor, was recognized for his high standard of performance and cooperation.

Oretta Taylor, head clerk in the dean 's office in the college of engineering, was recognized for her 19 years of service to the dean and the department.

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

HORSING AROUND—Feeding time for horses at breeding farm on Route 116 in Hadley.

AP Laserphoto

WIDOW'S GRIEF–The widow of former Cambodian President Lon Nol, her husband's portrait draped in black, weeps Saturday at her husband's funeral in Fullerton. Lon died of a heart attack a week ago.

Inquiry promised

JERUSALEM (AP)—Israeli government pledged a thorough investigation and possible dismissals yesterday over a spy scandal that threatened to damage its relations with the United States, its closest ally.

The Foreign Ministry statement was the first time Israel has conceded that it might be linked in some way to the Jonathan J. Pollard case, although high-ranking official said that the government had not been involved.

Previously, government officials have denied any knowledge or involvement with Pollard, a civilian U.S. Navy analyst arrested Friday and accused of selling classified military documents to Israel and Pakistan for $50,000 in the past two years.

Pollard, 31, was arraigned Saturday on espionage charges. His wife, Anne L. Henderson-Pollard, 25, was ordered held without bail on charges of posessing unauthorized classified documents.

High-ranking officials stressed Sunday that if Israel was involved, the governnment knew nothing about it.

"The orders didn't come from Jerusalem," said one official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We are checking whether it was a local intitiative...We are checking how something like that could have happened without our knowledge."

The ministry statement said Israel's policy "is to refrain from any intelligence activity in the United States" because of the traditionally close ties between the two countries.

"A thorough examination is being undertaken to determine whether there has been a deviation of any kind from this policy. Should such a deviation be found to have occurred, the necessary conclusions will be drawn," said the statement, using a phrase indicating sever punishment.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres received a preliminary report on the investigation earlier Sunday and consulted with his top Cabinet ministers.

"Actions of this kind against the United States stand in total contradiction to the policy of the Israeli government," said the statement, which was coordinated between Peres and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

An Israeli official, who insisted upon anonymity, said he expected "heads to roll" if an unauthorized intelligence operation was conducted in the United States.

Pope opens reform council

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John Paul II opened yesterday an extraordinay Synod of Bishops convened to assess the Second Vatican Council's far-reaching reforms and the divisions they spawned.

"We begin the synod...with the same openness...which filled the council fathers 20 years ago," he said in his homily, delivered in Italian before about 10,000 dignitaries and faithful packed into St. Peter's Basilica.

The service followed a procession of more than 300 cardinals, bishops and priests, all clad in white and golden robes and white miters, through St. Peter's Square.

At the pope's request, the procession was fashioned to resemble the 1962 opening ceremonies of the Second Vatican Council, commonly known as Vatican II, that were presided over by Pope John XXIII. The council ended its meetings in 1965.

John Paul convened the two-week synod toe valuate Vatican II, which recast the church image from unchangeable monolith to an institution ready to modernize its structures and ways of teaching.

Although the synod is an advisory body that can make only recommendations to the pope, the current meeting is considered crucial because it represents the first official Vatican forum for the bishops to air their views on the effects of teh Vatican II reforms on local churches and to make suggestions.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the pope refrained from discussing specific issues facing the church in his homily because he didn't want to influence the work of the bishops.

Yesterday & Today Records

Grateful Dead Psychadelic
Grand Opening
Punk Jazz
Blues
Top CASH PAID for USED:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's
An Alternative Record Store
96 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 253-9209

Great Lunches with Daily Specials at the TIME OUT

37 N. Pleasant St.

SAVE
MIDAS
MUFFLERS
THE ECONOMIZER MUFFLER
$24.95 Regular $29.95
INSTALLATION INCLUDED
The Economizer muffler from Midas fits most American-made cars and trucks. Your satisfaction with this product is assured.
Guarantee: The Economizer Muffler is warranted by Midas for one year from the date of installation and will be replaced free of charge if it fails during this period.
expires Nov. 30th
BRAKES
$59.95
Per axle (most cars) Regular $74.90
BRAKE SPECIAL
DISC BRAKES
• Free 4-Wheel brake inspection
• Replace pads with new guaranteed disc pads
• Resurface rotors
• Replace grease seals
• Inspect and repack wheel bearings
• Inspect calipers
• Inspect hydraulic system
• Lubricate caliper anchors
• Inspect fluid levels
• Add fluid if required
• Road test
DRUM BRAKES
• Free 4-Wheel brake inspection
• Replace shoes with new guaranteed linings
• Resurface drums
• Inspect wheel cylinders
• Inspect hold down springs
• Lubricate backing plates
• Inspect hydraulic system
• Readjust brakes
• Road test
Guarantee. Midas brake shoes and disc brake pads are warranted for as long as you own your American or foreign car, van or light truck (under 7,000 lbs.). If they ever wear, new Midas brake shoes or pads will be installed without charge for the shoes or pads or the labor to install the shoes or pads. Additional parts and/or labor required to restore the system to operational condition are extra.
FREE WRITTEN ESTIMATES
143 KING ST. NORTHAMPTON 586-4840
JCT. RTES. 9 & 116 HADLEY 586-9991
Midas

TURKEY GRAM RECIPIENTS

Pick up gram in Campus Center Concourse

Alison Adams
Sheenie Aggonwal
Alan - 425 Thoreau
Timmy Anderson
John Anderson
Julie Angelone
Jerry L. Ashlock
Lisa Bachman
Jim Bailey
Rick Baldwin
Scott Bartlnett
Amy Brachfeld
Patty Brazile
1st floor Brooks
Peter Bullis
Alison Butler
Pam Byron
Martha Capers
Ted Capidolupo
Alison Capolla
Sara Capstick
Susan Carriero
Carolyn & Allison DZ
Cathy Carroll
Maria Carsenaro
Mike Chambers
Tricia Chambers
Ray Clarke
David Cohen
Stephanie Corrigan
Karen Courtney
Scott Craig
Teresa Curran
Brian Curro
Michael Davis
Sandra DeJesus
Suzanne Delaney
Jim Devellis
Jane Distaleau
Pat Dolan
D.J. Driscoll
Tom Duby
Linda S. Dumat
Katy Edwards
Matt Eline
Denise Forbes
Rachel Strauss
Maria Sweeney
Elizabeth Sullivan
Richard Thomas
Scott Tuchinsky
Marc Fortin
Jeff Galin
Chuck Garabedian
Dave Garrity
Cliff Gawron
Linda Gibbs
Robyn Gilchrist
Godfrey 59 S.E. St.
Lauren Goldsmith
Meredith L. Goldstein
Doe Gondell
Michele Gregory
Scott Greenspan
Robert Griffin - LCA
Andy Hart
2111 Washington
Heather Hartmann
Steph Hering
Julie Herried
Suzanne Hirsh
Rich Huang
Jane Hugo
425 Thoreau
Julie, Tammy, Heidi, ACO
Bill Johnson
Katie Jurczyk
Audrey Karikas
Audrey Keithe
Scott Kneeland
107 F McNamara
Jay Libon
Frank Lucchesai
Ron Manning DU
Crush Groove Mason
Matt - TX
Amy Marin
Tom Marinel
T. Joseph Martin
Molly McDaneld
Debbie McDonald
Rene McGarry
Nicole McGlynn
Chris Meeser
Michelle - SDT
Jennifer Milliken
Jeff Morton
Tim VanderVeen
Lisa Vassar
Heidi ACO
Lisa Warshauer
Mercy Wellyn
Paul Mottola
Lisa Mulligan
Julianne Murphy
Marti Nichols
Andrea Nuafor
Mikd O' Connor
Bill Olohan
Tim O'Neil
Ann Ott
Lori Pagilone
Bobbie Pearson
Lino Pereira
Michelle Perkins
Christine Perruclo
Joshua Phillibert
Wayne Pike
David Proto
Meaghan Quigley
Jeff Quimby
Sheila R. Quinn
Mark Reardon
Dave Robinson
James Robinson
Bob Ross - LCA
Paul Rumson
Normand Russeau
Bill Russell
Cheryl Ryan
Dave St. Pierre
Mardee Sanchez
Dave Sasdi
Debbie Schwalb
Amy Seidan
Gary Shepard ATG
CHris J. Showalter
Sichi
Ted Silva
Lauren Singleton
Susan Sloan
Stacey Smith
David Sowter
Bob Stanton
Jean Staples
Neil Steiger
Pam Stone
T.S. Wilder ACO
Lisa Williams
Robin Winston
Dianna Yellen Chi O
Diane Zezza

SOMETIMES IT TAKES AN ARMY TO PAY BACK YOUR COLLEGE LOAN.

Paying back your college loan can be a long, uphill battle. But the Army's Loan Repayment Program makes it easy.

Each year you serve as a soldier, the Army will reduce your college debt by 1/3 or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. So after serving just 3 years, your college loan will be completely paid off.

You're eligible for this program with a National Direct Student Loan or a Guaranteed Student Loan or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975. And the loan can't be in default.

And just because you've left college, don't think you'll stop learning in the Army. Our skill training offers a wealth of valuable high-tech career-oriented skills. Call your local Army Recruiter to find out more.

586-9334
Northampton Army Office
241 King St.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Have questions concerning legal services and related issues?

CALL TIPS: 545-1540

Ask for tapes by number.

2492 Consumer Auto Repair Rights
2486 Disorderly Conduct
2484 Evictions
2422 Legal Services Office
2493 Operating Under the Influence
2488 Search and Seizure

For a complete listing of information tapes, pick up a copy of the IDB–TIPS brochure from our office in Rm. 227 Whitmore.

Taped Information Phone Service

IDB 545-1555
TIPS 545-1540

A service of the Dean of Students Office

Letters
Get it straight

In response to Peter Dow's latest column (Nov. 21), I would seriously question who truly is blind to the situation in Nicaragua and Central America. It seems reasonable to assume that a person who ignores the following is not only wearing blinders, but must be dead;

there is truly a great deal of murder and torture in Nicaragua today. Unfortunately it is all being carried out by what Dow calls "freedom fighters', but which most people refer to as terrorists. Further, it is an insurgency that is attempting to topple a popularly elected government which in the last six years has done more to improve the quality of life in Nicaragua than 100 years of US supported dictatorships; that Dow's favorite bastion of freedom in Central America--El Salvador-- is ruled by a government made up for the most part by ruthless killers who have massacred a sizeable portion of the population to continue their hegemony. Moreover, that despite the pretty face Duarte presents, his government would not last a day if those same killer's position in the country were at all weakened; that there is a new reality in Central America which the US had better come to understand, for every time the US destabilizes a popular government, or supports a government that massacres its own population, it only weakens its own position within the area.

It is unfortunate indeed that someone is able to present such flawed and misleading arguments week after week. One especially has to question whether the desire for a well-informed population is served by such bogus trash.

John Hayes
Amherst

What hippy?

The interesting thing about the column "The bars lack a certain..." (Nov. 11) was the fact that the only other person besides Mary Cresse who calls me a hippy is my mother. More interesting is the fact that both of these people bore me.

"I'll say it again; I am not a hippy and I've never been a hippy." Richard Nixon.

Eric S. Page
World famous "hippy bouncer"

Biased column

I am writing in response to Mary Cresse's biased column Nov. 18, in regard to what bars in Amherst and Northampton lack.

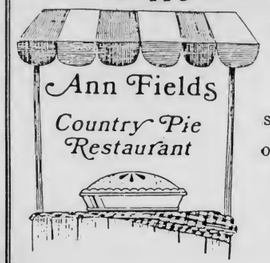
First of all, I think that was a generous generalization on her part since she focused particularly on one bar in Northampton which she did not want to leave at the hour required by law. Since she seems to know so much about the "strictly enforced drinking laws" to which the bar has to adhere, she neglected to do her research in conjunction with the similar noise reduction law this bar must also abide by, requiring all bands to be off the stage by 12:45 a.m.

I also find it very hard to believe that it was "(formerly) her favorite hang-out" since she knows very little about the place thinking it "(formely) punk"; unless she considers Wildcat O'Hallorhan (blues), The Chills (oldies), and Peter Newland (rock and roll) punk--all of them being regular entertainers in the past and still.

Her obviously prejudiced attitude toward outward appearance (for example, the bartender's clothing, the "hippy bouncer" (?), and the patron's hair and attire) makes it difficult to place any credibility in her opinion.

My facts concerning the laws can be checked. Just come to the club and ask me or my manager, Mary. I am a bartender there. By the way, if it will make you feel more comfortable I'll wear some of my nicer clothes while running back and forth behind the bar, cleaning the glasses and shaking drinks, which for some reason akin to nature tend to spill out. I am sorry you weren't the only one allowed to stay beyond the 1:00 closing time and am equally as sorry that you and everyone else had to be told about it. We'll assume next time that everyone is wearing a watch and will leave in an orderly fashion at exactly that time with no encouragement from the doormen doing their jobs.

Furthermore, your aversion to paying a $3 cover charge can be rebutted by the fact that this club is one of the only three that regularly has live entertainment. If you would rather dance on an overcrowded floor to a stale dj, I'm sure that's fine to all parties concerned. And good luck finding a place that will let you stay as late as you want since "you're the one with the money."



It's a good thing for you your editor told you not to use any names. "God forbid" you commit libel.

Stacia Hill
Northampton

The Wheatley Chr
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd.
Wheately
1-665-3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open: Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
RADIAL TIRE SALE
P155/80R13
$29.95
Includes Mounting plus MA State Tax
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watroba's Store
549-4704
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES
549-3840
228 Triangle St.
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

Happy Thanksgiving

NOW OPEN IN HADLEY
Route 9
A Family Restaurant
&
Take Home Pie Shop
Serving Breakfast, Lunch & Dinner
Full Menu • Full Liquor License
Open 7 am to 10 pm Sun thru Thurs
To 12 pm Friday and Saturday
Treat your friends and family to a Thanksgiving Pie!
401 Russell St. (Rte. 9)
Hadley 584-0311
(adjacent to Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge)

DONT BE A DISORIENTED YOUTH
READ THE ARTS PAGE

FRESHMEN □ SOPHOMORES □ JUNIORS
SENIORS □ GRADUATE STUDENTS

NOW...Work PART TIME and step into Phase I of our dynamic new Training Program

CUSTOMER SERVICE REPRESENTATIVES
BUILD YOUR FUTURE WITH PEOPLExpress

It would take the nation's most innovative airline to "reinvent" career training like this! We're seeking highly competent individuals with a real capacity for compassion, caring and concern for people. Join PEOPLExpress NOW as a Customer Service Representative, and you will be on the most direct route to eligibility for POST-DEGREE TRAINING and a long-term career in the airline industry.

If you've got:
- Matriculated status in a full-time college program
- 2.5 cumulative GPA
- Professional appearance
- Customer contact experience
- Good communications skills
- Ability to provide own transportation

We'll offer you:
- $4.00 an hour for working 15-25 hours a week at BRADLEY INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT
- Schedules to fit your classes
- Travel privileges on PEOPLExpress
- Free parking

GET MEANINGFUL TRAINING--as you handle challenging responsibilities like customer check-ins/boarding, baggage procedures, and other operational support activities. PEOPLExpress offers you so much more than just a part-time job--here's a chance to really LEARN and EARN!

For further information, call (203) 627-5704 or stop by the Ticket Counter and pick up an application.

PEOPLExpress
FLY SMART
Equal Opportunity Employer

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Mosko, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Who's in control?
David Valade

"Why should I care?", you may ask yourself. "So What! Randy Donant and Denny Madsen are taking budgetary control of Undergraduate Student Senate agencies away from the senate. Big deal, it doesn't matter. Besides, the senate doesn't do anything anyway." When it comes to control of the budget you couldn't be more wrong. If there's only one important thing the senate does, this is it. It affects you in more ways than you know. This single event could change your everyday life.

Through control of the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) budget the SGA oversees several agencies. Among these are the Legal Services Office, the Off-Campus Housing Office, and the Office of Third World Affairs. All of these agencies were created by students and student government. All of them work on student issues and have their programmatic and advocacy goals determined by students.

If budgetary control of these agencies is transferred to the administration then the first step towards stopping work on student issues has taken place. If University administrators such as Donant and Madson are controlling the senate agencies, services provided to students could be eliminated. These services provide assistance to students and often work against the interests of University administrations.

The LSO provides perhaps the greatest advocacy service on campus. Annually, the UMass police were placing over 300 people into protective custody. Many of these appeared to be unwarranted and in violation of the guidelines which allow protective custody. Because of the actions of the LSO the annual number of protective custodies has fallen below 100. Ask yourself, "With the administration controlling the policies of the LSO, would this type of work be allowed?" The answer is a resounding no. The administration is often more interested in controlling students than with protecting their rights. The LSO works to ensure that your constitutional rights aren't violated.

The LSO provides further assistance to students. Attorneys provide student government leaders with day-to-day advice about the legality of University policies. Current issues have included the alcohol policy and the Code of Student Conduct. The Legal Services Office has found parts of the originals of these documents that violate your rights. Without LSO these "errors" would have become a part of University policy. Donant has already asked the director of LSO to stop advising student government leaders. Based on this, if he had total control, would he hesitate to put a stop to this practice? If this happens, you and I are the ones that lose.

The LSO also provides assistance to students who have been written up in the dormitories. It seems highly unlikely that the University administration will allow this to continue if they are making the policy decisions for the office.

The Off-Campus Housing Office has also done valuable work for students. In addition to providing listings of available rental apartments and houses, the office does advocacy work for students. The director of OCHO was instrumental in helping pass the recent Rent Review article in Amherst Town Meeting. OCHO also helps students with landlord complaints. They often work closely with the LSO to ensure that your rights as a tenant aren't violated. Without student control over policy decisions this work could be stopped. Donant asked the director of OCHO to stop working on rent control. If he had direct control over OCHO, how long would it be before work on other tenant issues was stopped?

The Office of Third World Affairs provides critical support to Third World students here at the University. OTWA provides leadership training and organizational skills to members of the Third World community. It also provides advocacy skills and resources to Third World organizations to fight discrimination on campus. When issues of discrimination on this campus are exposed they embarrass the campus administration. If they had control over OTWA would they allow these types of services to continue?

If budgetary control is relinquished to Donant and Madson the seeds will be sown for the death of student rights on this campus. The agencies they wish to take over are part of the main defense of our rights on this campus. Coupled with the student government, they work to ensure that the very rights the American Revolution was fought for will not be denied to students by the University administration.

What can be done about this flagrant abuse of student empowerment? Start by calling Randy Donant at 545-3601. Tell him you're not going to put up with this kind of abuse. Call Dennis Madson at 545-2333. Tell him to mess with someone else's money, but not ours. And find out who your student senator is. You can call 545-0341 and they'll tell you. Talk to your senator and tell him or her you support this struggle and you'll be there now that it's time to fight for your rights.

David Valade is a Collegian columnist and the chair of the Legal Services Governing Board.

Locked out of cage
Conor Plunkett

A funny thing happened on my way to the hoop game.

After reading all of the hype in the Collegian over the past two weeks I figured I would get to Saturday night's basketball game a bit early, because there was expected to be a crowd. Figuring an hour early would be sufficient, I arrived at the Curry Hicks Cage a little before 6:30 pm to find not a crowd, but rather a mob of two thousand or more screaming UMass students.

This looked like an excellent time. Memories of past Southwest Block Parties flashed through my mind. Fun nights of wild partying with thousands of other students which were pleasurable as long as you could duck under the catapulted beer bottles. However, this night was actually very different.

Unlike the Block Parties, this mob was not there to stand around; but rather, each person had a goal. THE MISSION: get into the cage, crushed or uncrushed.

Upon approaching the throng of students I immediately put my gophering skills to work and proceeded to burrow my way toward the center. Halfway in, my forward motion came to a complete standstill as I could no longer penetrate through the dense crowd. It progressively became more and more difficult to even raise my arms above my head, because the pressure from the people surrounding me was so great.

Up to this point I had been having a pretty good time, screaming, cracking humorous jokes and chalking the whole situation up as yet another wild collegiate experience. However, experiencing the pain of slowly having your ribs crushed in was no longer my idea of a wild collegiate experience, but rather a potentially dangerous one.

Memories of what happened years ago at the Cincinnatti WHO concert now flashed through my mind. Reading in the newspaper about several people being crushed and trampled as the crowd pushed its way in to see the WHO. However, this is not the WHO, it's merely the UMass Minutemen. The team had trouble drawing even 500 fans to watch them in Springfield.

This was madness. Then the waves started. Not the fun wave experienced inside the stadium, but rather, a total movement of the crowd swaying back and forth. At points the force of the wave was powerful enough to knock me over, but this was impossible, due to the density of the people in the crowd. I just pitied the people up against the cage's brick walls when the waves came. It looked painful.

Finally, the mob's pressure and a bit of my own muscle forced me through one of the two open doors to the cage. Thank God for osmosis. The student attendant didn't even ask for my student I.D., instead he affirmatively stated "you have an I.D.. Right?" as I was rapidly pushed past him into the cage. What a relief, being able to breath once again.

I was lucky, over two thousand other people weren't. I was one of the last 100 people admitted (or rather, fought my way) into the game. Now I merely had the chore of finding a seat. Easier said than done.

After this exhilarating experience, I did realize two important things. First, we badly need a 16,000 seat sports complex. Second, I better get to the next hoop game at 5:30, not 6:30.

Crisis management?

The worst part of it is that your life changes, just when you want everything to be normal, when you want to be lulled numb by routine.

You get scared by the physical changes; the blue jeans that go from skintight to comfortable, the class ring that slides around on your finger. You get annoyed at not being able to eat very much, and of tiring, early, like an elderly person.

You try not to think about it, but it hangs over your head. You get tense.

You don't want to explain it to your friends, why you're flying off the handle, crying, acting crazy. You set up fights then wonder if you did it on purpose; separation anxiety, maybe?

Then it happens. You spill; you tell somebody. You're seriously ill. You're explaining away your latest mood, or you're trying to find a pair of pants that still fit, or you're trying to somehow make your life seem normal again, and you tell somebody.

Which, of course, means it might be true.

Which is scary.

Suddenly, you turn quiet. You get calm, start coping. You, who had to be dragged to church right through high school, start attending daily Mass. You take Communion. You look at the cross a lot. Sometimes you cry during the service, but mostly you pray.

You hang in there. You hike to classes, and fill out your internship applications. You mend your fences. You're touched by how many people offer a word, an ear, or a heart. You're a little hurt by those who, from fear or embarassment, cannot.

You get calm. You appreciate people more than you used to. You see past the trivial errands and annoyances. The endless trips to the Post Office, and quarters lost in soda machines don't matter much anymore. The days matter, the people matter.

You hope that it will turn out all right, that the tests will come back negative, so you could remember the lesson, but forget all the bad things.

And in the meantime, the time in which you wait to find out, you learn to live with it, and you learn to love the people around you as hard as you can, for as long as God will let you.

Due to the sensitive nature of this topic, the editor has honored the author's request for anonymity.

Femmes no surprise

By ILANA LEVENSON
and PHIL SERAFINO
Collegian Staff

The Violent Femmes proved to an overloaded and enthusiastic crowd at the Blue Wall Cafeteria last night that it does not take any gimmicks to deliver powerful music.

Gordon Gano, Brian Ritchie and Victor DeLorenzo, the three band members, strode on stage, placed a stick of incense on the table and proceeded to pump out an hour and a half of jarring frustrations. They opened with the haunting version of "Country Death Song", the story of a father who shoves his daughter down a bottomless pit and hangs himself in shame. The foot-stomping country beat contrasts sharply with the dark theme of the song.

The Femmes played a set that contained a number of spiritual-gospel tunes, a direction in which they moved with the release of their second album, Hallowed Ground, while at the same time churning out songs that screamed with sexual frustration and anger.

"I believe in the father, I believe in the Son, I believe in the spirit for everyone," sang guitarist Gordon Gano, in a song that stressed the strength of his faith. This sharply contrasted with "why can't I get just one screw, believe me I'd know what to do but something won't let me make....love to you," which Gano sang in a tortured version of "Add It Up".

The packed crowd immediately responded to the music by throwing themselves around in a chaotic frenzy. Most of the audience seemed to know the lyrics by heart.

The group's sound is based on the unique voice of Gano and the unusual instrumentation they use. At the end of "Confessions," bassist Brian Ritchie and keyboardist Sigmund Snopek III overpowered the audience by blowing furiously on a pair of conch shells. Drummer Victor DeLorenzo pounded a stripped-down drum set with a washtub over one of the drums.

The Femmes played many of the songs that the audience craved including "I Hear the Rain, Prove my Love" and a rousing version of "Hallowed Ground." They also introduced a few new songs that the audience greeted with approval. After ending with the anthemic "Add It Up," they came back to play "Blister in the Sun, The Bat Man Theme" and left the crowd joyously singing.

Pajama Slave Dancers, a popular local group, opened the show with a satirical set of thrashing tunes that included Husker Du's "Homo Truck Drivin' Man." The audience began slamdancing madly, prompting near riot conditions in front.

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

Gordon Gano, Violent Femmes lead singer, on stage in the Blue Wall last night.

Monday Night Football at the TIME OUT

Seattle vs. San Fran
37 N. Pleasant St.
Proper ID Required
Don't Drink and Drive

Are you denying yourself a better shot at grad school?

Okay, it may be too late to get a 4.0. But it's not too late to try to do better on your LSAT, GMAT, GRE, or MCAT. For that, there's Stanley H. Kaplan.

No one has prepped more students than Stanley H. Kaplan. Our test-taking techniques and educational programs have prepared over 1 million students.

So whatever grad school exam you're taking, call us. Remember, the person next to you during your exam might have taken a Kaplan course.

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD
The world's leading test prep organization.
358 N. Pleasant
549-5780
Intersession Classes Enrolling Now
MCAT GMAT GRE LSAT
FREE SPEED READING LESSON
at your convenience

SPECIAL PURCHASE!
famous brand watches
all gift boxed,
fully warranteed by the manufacturer
3 days Only 11/25 to 11/27

BENRUS • GRUEN • JULES JURGENSEN • HELBROS
WALTHAM • GALAXIE/ELGIN • CARAVELLE BY BULOVA
DUFONTE BY LUCIEN PICCARD • AND OTHER FAMOUS BRANDS

Save on your choice of quality famous maker watches for men and women. Choose from day date, diamonds, nurses, sports, fashion and dress styles. Shop early for the best selection. Styles and brands may vary

YOUR CHOICE
$39.95

Located in the Campus Center
Open M-W 9-5

UNIVERSITY STORE

ARTS

Ray Charles mesmerizes crowd with performance

By Dode B. Levenson
Collegian Staff

Ray Charles
Pearl Street
Thursday, Nov. 22,
10 p.m. show.

With his trademark dazzling smile, cool shades and raspy blues voice, Ray Charles and his 16-piece band eased through a one-hour set to a packed audience at Pearl Street Thursday night.

The show opened with a rousing blues number by the horn section led by Clifford Solomon that had every foot of the predominantly post-college crowd toe-tapping in time to the music. The solos by Rudy Johnson on the bass sax and Ricky Waters on alto ushered in Charles for his first hit "Let the Good Times Roll."

Slowing down the pace, but not the emotion, Charles kicked into "Georgia on My Mind." Milking each word for as much emotion as could be wrenched, Charles had the crowd shouting slogans of approval throughout this song as well as most others in the set.

Then came the Raylettes. Five silver-voiced women who harmonized to Charles' driving vocals were especially effective on the old-time favorite "I Can't Stop Loving You." At the end of each song the audience reacted as though it was the finale, letting everyone on the dance floor know they had just seen and heard something special.

When Charles switched from piano to electric organ, it was as smooth as going from fourth to fifth in a Porsche. He took notes that were normally stiff and bent and stretched them as only a bluesmaster can.

Testing the spell he had over the audience, he had them repeat oohs and aaahs after him. The audience performed flawlessly until Charles sailed to a note so high there was only room for one to sing it. And sing it he did.

The show was not problem-free. Some technical difficulties with the microphones forced the audience to lip-read a portion of one of the Raylettes' solo songs. Charles also complained that there was a ringing in the mikes. The technical problems didn't seem to bother the fans though, who rocked back and forth rhythmically to his cool, jazzy beat.

The show sampled a little bit of country & western, plenty of slow, rich jazz numbers and enough blues so no one walked out with a frown. The legendary genius of soul had left his mark.

Ray Charles and the Rayelettes at Pearl Street on Thursday night.

ARTS LINES

Dec. 3, there will be a Faculty Recital featuring Maureen Gallagher, viola; Michael Sussman, clarinet; and Nadine Shank, piano, at Byzanson Recital Hall at 8 p.m.

The University Dancers tour concert will be held at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. on Dec. 5-7.

On Dec. 7, The University Opera Workshop will be held at Byzanson Hall at 3 p.m.

Also, the "All Jazz Stars" featuring drummer Max Roach, will appear at 8 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are $13, $11, and $9, at the Fine Arts Center box office.

The Fine Arts Center presents The Cleveland Orchestra on Dec. 9 at 8 p.m. Christopher Von Dohnanyi will be director. Tickets are $20, $18, $16, at the Fine Arts Center box office.

Also on the 9th, the Afro-American Music and Vocal Jazz Ensemble, directed by Stephen Newby, and featuring vocalist Bev Rohlehr. Works by Irving Berlin, Gershwin, Hawkins, and more.

On Dec. 10, the Langdon Piano Quartet will perform at the Bezanson Recital Hall at 8 p.m.

The University Jazz Ensemble I and the Chapel Jazz Ensemble will perform at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Jeff Holmes and David Sporny, directors, and special guest: jazz saxophone virtuoso, Michael Brecker.

FIVE COLLEGE:

Amherst College: On Dec. 5, "Calliope", a renaissance band with Jane Bryden, will play noels from Europe on original renaissance instruments.

Smith College: On Dec. 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, "Miss Firecracker Contest" will play at Theatre 14. It is a comedy by Beth Henley, directed by P. J. Tone.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT · HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

JAZZ ALL ★ STARS
Ray Brown, bass
Milt Jackson, vibes
Hank Jones, piano
Max Roach, drums
Stanley Turrentine, sax
Saturday, December 7, 8 pm.
Tickets $13.11

CLEVELAND ORCHESTRA
Christoph Von Dohnanyi, Music Director

MOZART Symphony No. 25
HARTMANN Symphony No. 2
DVORAK Symphony No. 7
Monday, December 9, 8 pm.
Tickets $20.18

• Gift Certificates Available •
Five College Students Half Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413)545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

the Hungry U
DRIVERS WANTED
Apply Within
55 University Dr.
549-5713
Must Have Own Car

AmHErst CINEMA
Monday - Tuesday
Kagemusha 6:30
Throne of Blood 9:00
Double Feature $3.00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

AUDITION NOTICE

Busch Gardens, The Dark Continent, could be the perfect showcase for your talents if you're a singer, dancer or musician — especially country fiddle, steel guitar or accordian — or if your abilities lie in specialty areas such as sound technician or show operator. There's only one way to find out. Plan to join us for:

AUDITIONS and INTERVIEWS
Thursday, December 5, 1985
8:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.
Boston Marriott Long Wharf
296 States Street

Auditions are limited to 5 minutes each and will be given on a first come basis. Dancers should be dressed to dance. Musicians should prepare selections demonstrating their versatility on their principle instrument as well as on any secondary instrument. Sound technicians will receive personal interviews and should bring a typed resume of related experience.

Accompaniment will be provided.

Good starting pay and full and part-time positions are available.

BUSCH GARDENS
THE DARK CONTINENT
TAMPA, FLORIDA

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/H/V

Now's the time to call...

North Amherst Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

Expert Repairs & Reconditioning

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

Free roundtrip airline ticket to Israel

If you fly with us to Greece, and stay for at least a week, we will give you a free roundtrip airline ticket from Athens to Israel and much more.

Call UNIVERSITY TRAVEL & TOURS
225 Main St.
Northampton, Mass 01060

UTT

Reservations limited, first come, first served

Need to finish a paper this week?
Let us help you.
THE WRITING CENTER
(No tutoring on Wed or Thurs this week)

Mon, Thurs 7-9 pm: Pierpont (SoWest), Baker (Central)
Tues, Wed, Thurs 3:30-5 pm: Bartlett 101
Wed 7-9 pm: Bartlett 101

MONEY MOTIVATED?
If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This

We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Attention Students and Student Coops.
The Space Committee of the Board of Governors will be accepting requests for student coop space in the CC/SU Complex.
Please pick up criteria sheets for proposals in room 817 Campus Center

SEMESTER AT SEA

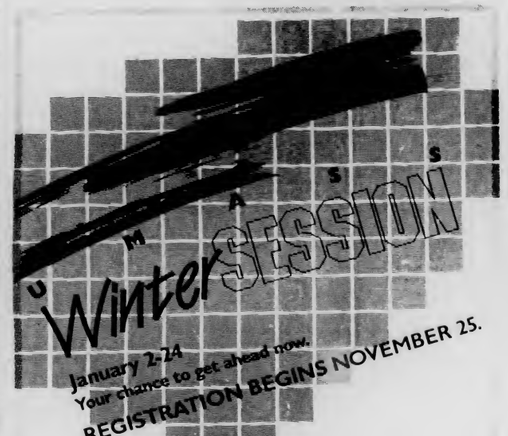
PRESENTS A SPECIAL SLIDE SHOW

Discover an exciting way to travel around the world and continue your undergraduate studies aboard ship. Visit major ports in the Mediterranean, the Middle East and the Orient. More than 60 voyage related university credit courses are offered.

SPECIAL SLIDE PRESENTATION & INFORMATION SESSION
Monday Nov. 25, 7:30 pm, CC Room 165
Financial Aid is available to qualified students
APPLICATIONS ARE STILL BEING ACCEPTED FOR SPRING 1986!!!

SEMESTER AT SEA TOLL FREE NUMBER (800) 854-0195

"Seas, but join the region they divide ."
. . .Alexander Pope



The Institute for Shipboard Education cordially invites all interested faculty, staff, and students to
"Celebrate and Evening of Academic Adventure"
with
Semester At Sea
Special Presentation and Information Session
Monday, Nov. 25

7:30 PM CC Room 165

Come Meet:
Dr. Max H. Brandt, Director of Academic Affairs, Doreen Kelly, Associate Director of Admissions, and Semester at Sea alumni from the University of Massachusetts.

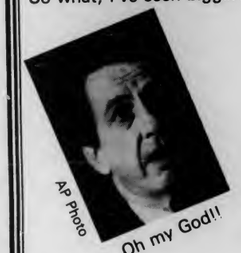
BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Attention Students and Student Coops.
The Space Committee of the Board of Governors will be accepting requests for student coop space in the CC/SU Complex.
Please pick up criteria sheets for proposals in room 817 Campus Center

In-Person Registration
November 25
Campus Center Auditorium, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.
November 26-December 31
Records and Registration Office
Division of Continuing Education
University Library
8:30 a.m.-7 p.m., Mon.-Thurs.;
8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Fri.

Call 545-2414 for more information.

DCE Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts at Amherst



So what, I've seen bigger.

Aarrrgh!!

THE BIG ONE

All 3 of these individuals may come in TODAY (Mon 11/25) or Tuesday (11/26) and they will receive A Big One, order of FRies and a medium Coke FREE!

AP Photo

Oh my God!!

HOT ROAST BEEF SANDWICHES

JBs SUBS

253-7018

11 am - 2 am 7 days
50 Main St. Amherst, MA

★ notebook

continued from page 14

who sported a semi Carl Lewis style haircut. "I get pretty excited and with the crowd getting into the game it helped me. I like playing here."

– – –

MINUTEMAN MUTTERINGS: Smith is featured in the recent Sports Illustrated college hoop preview issue in a picture showing him wearing a Minuteman outfit. He was listed in a short story about unlikely places to find exciting basketball. . .as with the football stadium, the Cage, despite the renovations, has a bad public address system. . .John Milum, who is eligible in late December, sat on the bench wearing a tuxedo. . .the 45 second clocks were inoperable. . .State Rep. James Collins of Amherst was at the game and said a lot of state money is coming for the proposed new arena for UMass. "Look at the crowd," Collins said, "There's the reason UMass needs a new place."

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

UNWANTED HAIR?
Have it removed the Electronic Way!
Call NEW REFLECTIONS
586-8371
No Needles, No Pain, No Hair

let us do your wash-dry-fold and hand pressing
SPEEDWASH
10-5 PM MON-SAT
SELF SERVICE
7 DAYS--7AM-10 PM
549-1665
Quality Laundry
11 Pray St.
Amherst, MA

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco
imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes
imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

Mortar Board presents:
"Buy a Friend a Flower"
Thanksgiving Carnations on sale Friday and Monday in the Campus Center
Let someone know you care (or that you don't)
$1.00

CLASSICAL JAZZ REGGAE BLUES ROCK SOUL FOLK JAZZ ROCK SOUL CLASSICAL
#1 IN THE VALLEY!
DYNAMITE RECORDS
Maxell XLII90 $2.00
TDK SA90 — $2.00
New, Used, Buy, Sell and Trade
584-1580
THORNES
150 MAIN ST NORTHAMPTON

TAKE CHARGE OF YOUR FUTURE.

Whether you're on the bridge of a 200-million-dollar Navy destroyer, an officer on a nuclear sub, or piloting a Navy F-14 Tomcat, you'll be in charge. And moving up fast.

At 22, you'll be well on your way in a career that provides the kind of excitement, responsibility and satisfaction you've always dreamed of.

And as a Navy officer, you'll be in a position of decision-making authority. With expert management and technical training behind you to help you get the job done right.

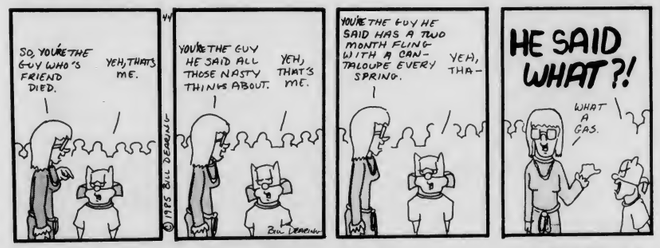
The rewards are right, too. An excellent starting salary with a chance to earn up to as much as $33,600 after four years with regular promotions and increases. Even more with bonuses.

After four years of college, you'll be on your way. Get there fast in the Navy. See your Navy recruiter or call 800-327-NAVY.

NAVY OFFICERS GET RESPONSIBILITY FAST.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU



BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

Bat Brain

By Bill Dearing

GORDY

By Gorde

Freaker Patrol

By Dowe and O'Brien

WEATHER

Today: Sunny and cold, high 35 to 45.
Tonight: Increasing cloudiness, lows in the 20s.
Tomorrow: Rain or wet snow, high 35 to 45.

MENU

Monday, November 25

LUNCH
Tri-County Fair Sandwich
Sausage Patties
Corn Fritters and Syrup

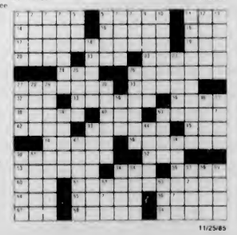
BASICS LUNCH
Vegetable Grinder
Corn Fritters and Syrup

DINNER
Roast Lamb
Gravy and Mint Jelly
Breaded Scallops
Tartar Sauce
Italian Garden Plate

BASICS DINNER
Colden Carrot Bake
White Sauce
Breaded Scallops
Tartar Sauce

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Old hat
6 Statement of belief
11 Baby food
14 With speed, to a poet
15 Word before Quarter or America
16 Hoosier humorist
17 Happens
19 Bribe
20 Easy on the ——
21 Decide in favor of (with for)
22 Skip
24 Gavel sound
26 Tells
27 Wide area
31 Hebrew letter
32 Diamond stat
33 Church councils
35 Comparative endings
38 Tiberian city
40 The Sweet heart of Sigma ——
41 Like a short term commitee
42 Arrangement Abbr
43 Quarterback at times
45 Gardner
46 Tablelands
48 Pot store purchase
50 Coal bucket
52 Bakery selection
53 Reject
54 Ending with violin or harp
56 Pierre's girlfriend
60 —— into (attacked)
61 Put the blame on the other guy
64 Wrath
65 Where the Tiber flows
66 Fracas
67 Crag
68 Block
69 Positions the contestants

DOWN
1 Change of ——
2 Port of SE China
3 Alike
4 Nino's nap
5 Printer's measures
6 Bridle path sound
7 Ecrsatic
8 Greek letter
9 Drives away
10 Bargain rack words
11 Collect, in a way
12 Sun dried brick
13 Diarist of note
18 —— curvy
23 Tasty
25 Handle
26 Relish tray vegetable
27 Congers
28 Roentgen's discovery
29 Be adequate
30 Box
34 Exclamations
36 Wander
37 Blemish
39 Proofreading words
41 Multitude
43 Examine in a way
44 Down to —— (practical)
47 Dumb
49 WWII Navy builder
50 Skedaddle
51 City on the Nile
54 —— of Man
55 Ukranian river
57 Stubborn one
58 Chilled
59 —— out (makes do)
62 Was in session
63 River to the North Sea

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

A	S	I	A	S	C	O	R	E	P	A	R	I
S	H	O	P	L	A	N	E	S	E	K	E	S
H	A	R	P	A	N	T	I	O	N	R	I	V	E
H	O	R	N	A	T	I	S	E	T	M	O	U	R
			D	O	E	S		A	I	M	E	E
		S	A	V	E		D	E	A	D
A	L	B	A		H	A	I	R	D	O		D	O	D
W	I	L	L	I	A	M	C	R	A	W	F	O	R	D
E	T	E		T	R	U	E	S		L	I	N	D
			H	A	I	K		P	O	L
A	L	G	A	E			A	S	E	A
B	A	R	R	Y	G	O	L	D	W	A	T	E	R
A	T	T	E		A	M	I	D	E		T	E	E
S	E	E	M		A	L	E	D		N	A	I	D
E	R	N	S		S	N	I	D	E		G	L	E	E

11/25/85

11/25/85

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Sophomore guard Lorenzo Sutton (right) scored 15 points as the Minutemen held off Merrimack, 59-56 on Saturday night.

★ basketball wins opener

continued from page 16

UMass held on to its shaky lead until the 11:27 point of the half when Mike Dunn hit two foul shots to give the Warriors a 39-38 lead. Foward Tom Lewis hit one of two from the line just 22 seconds later and Merrimack had a 40-38 lead and the crowd was getting restless.

The teams traded the lead until UMass grabbed a three point advantage at 49-46 on a pair of Smith free throws with 5:56 left. They would never trail again.

UM's 5-11 junior captain stole a pass and drove the length of the court before being mugged by Tim Hart. Smith had his usual solid effort: 12 points on four-of-eight shooting (four-of-four from the line), a game-high seven assists and two steals.

Lewis' tip in made it 49-48 but a Sutton jumper and a layup off an offensive rebound by junior college transfer Ben Jones gave UMass a 53-48 lead with 3:16 left.

Hart and Bill Nawn then hit hoops to cut it to 53-52 with 2:20 left before Sutton answered with a 15-footer from the left. Venora continued to bother UM, his layup making it 55-54 with 1:33 to go.

Freshman center Sean Mosby, in the midst of a strong effort off the bench that saw him score eight points (three-of-three from the floor) and grab a game-high nine rebounds, was then fouled by Lewis and missed the first of a one and one with 1:02 left.

But Jones, a 6-6 forward from Sutton's hometown of Albany, Ga., swooped in and got the rebound before hitting a layup for the winning points. Kevin Lahiff connected on two foul shots with 50 seconds left before Smith canned a clutch pair of free throws with 20 seconds remaining to clinch the victory.

For UMass, freshman forward David Brown had 11 while Jones added six and Hicks five. Venora led Merrimack with 14 as Lewis added 12. UMass shot 44 percent from the floor and 57 percent from the line.

UMass' biggest problem however was its tempo. The Minutemen played to a slower pace than anticipated, walking the ball over halfcourt and playing a step slower on defense than coach Ron Gerlufsen had hoped for.

"They didn't know what to expect," said Gerlufsen of his eight new players, two of whom (Brown and Duane Chase) started. "We'll play better in the future now that the first one is out of the way. We were overcatious and that hurt us."

"Sean (Mosby) played a good game, I liked what I saw from him," said the coach, who indicated that as the season wears on he will try and develop a nucleas of six-to-seven players that will see most of the action. "As a team I thought we passed the ball too slowly and didn't look inside or for good shots. There's a lot of things to improve upon, but we did a lot of things well too. The potential is there without a doubt for a good team."

UMass (59): Lorenzo Sutton 7-19 1-2 15, Carl Smith 4-8 4-4 12, David Brown 4-6 3-4 11, Sean Mosby 3-3 2-5 8, Ben Jones 3-4 0-1 6, Wilbert Hicks 2-5 1-3 5, Mike Mundy 1-2, 0-0 2, Duane Chase 0-4 0-0 0, Tom Emerson 0-1 0-0 0, Matt Ryan 0-2 0-0 0, Joe Fennell 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 24-54 11-19 59.

Merrimack (56): Bob Venora 7-13 0-0 14, Tom Lewis 5-13 2-3 12, Kevin Lahiff 4-8 2-2 10, Tim Hart 4-8 0-0 8, Bill Nawn 3-7 0-0 6, Mike Dunn 1-5 2-2 4, Derek Frame 1-3 0-0 2, Tim McFadden 0-0 0-0 0, Scott Anglin 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 25-57 6-7 56.

UMass (1-0)	30 29 - 59.
Merrimack (0-1)	25 31 - 56.

Fouled Out: None. Total Fouls: UMass - 13, Merrimack - 19. Rebounds: UMass - 38 (Mosby 9), Merrimack - 30 (Venora, Hart and Lahiff 5). Assists: UMass - 10 (Smith 7) Merrimack - 14 (Lahiff 7). Technicals: none. Attendance: 4,024 (sellout).

Basketball notebook

Crowd played major role

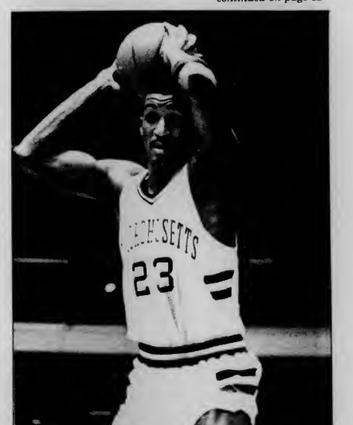
By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

The overflow crowd at the Curry Hicks Cage proved to be both an emotional aid and a deterrent to the University of Massachusetts basketball team.

"I think the support we have on campus is great," said UM coach Ron Gerlufsen. "But we also have 11 players that have never played before this crowd. It's tough to play before them, you tend to overtry and sometimes that leads to mistakes."

UMass junior captain Carl Smith, a veteran of the Cage wars, agreed with his coach.

"I remember when I played here for the first time, it was against a foreign team in an exhibition," he recalled. "I think I was something like one for seven from the floor, I missed a bunch of foul shots and had a lot of turnovers. Thankfully, it was an exhibition that didn't count. The guys didn't have that luxury with this game."



— — —

Freshman center Sean Mosby quickly became a crowd favorite with his infectious enthusiasm. His eight points (on three-of-three shooting from the floor), game-high nine rebounds and one blocked shot helped spark UMass in several key situations.

Mosby didn't start at basketball-rich Camden (NJ) High and didn't start on Saturday. But he played 30 minutes, the third most the team behind Smith and Sutton.

"I felt pretty good, I enjoyed contributing," said Mosby,

continued on page 12

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Freshman forward David Brown has a successful debut, 11 points and four rebounds.

HOUSING SERVICES INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

The Division of Housing Services announces its 1986 Internship Program for sophomore and junior students. The three semester program is financed jointly by the offices of Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Housing Services.

PURPOSE

The program is designed with emphasis on increasing the competencies needed for career advancement through projects, seminars, and internship training.

INTERNSHIP AWARDS

Eligible students may earn $3.65/hour for 8 to 15 hours/week. Three credits for independent study may also be arranged.

QUALIFICATIONS

Six interns will be selected from applicants who have attained sophomore or junior status and will continue their full-time academic status throughout the 1986-87 academic year. Applicants should submit a resume, two letters of reference, and a brief statement of achievement objectives. Submit applications to the Internship Coordinator:

Dale Finn
Southwest Residential Education Office
545-0626 or 546-1550

Applications must be received no later than December 11, 1985.

The University of Massachusetts is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity employer. Students of color and women are urged to apply.

Governor's Program Council

We program entertainment in the CC/SU, and are currently seeking acts for the upcoming Winterfestival, as well as other times this and next semester. Contact us, GPC 817 Campus Ctr 545-0198 $$$$$

Women's soccer Final Four notebook

Seniors helped to push George Mason

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

FAIRFAX, Va.–The 1985 NCAA women's soccer national championship was won by seniors.

"This was a senior dominated tourney. The senior laden teams won each time," said George Mason coach Hank Leung whose team won the title with a 2-0 victory over North Carolina on Sunday after beating UMass 3-0 in Saturday's semifinal.

"The seniors have the maturity and the experience. They know what has to be done," said UNC coach Anson Dorrance, who lost the finals for the first time in the last five years.

George Mason, which hosted the tourney, has six seniors on its roster, the first time they have had seniors since women's soccer was instituted at the school four years ago. "It was a very emotional game for us," said Leung. When asked if he thought his team would defeat UMass, the nation's top-ranked team, 3-0, the coach said, "I would've thought you had to be smoking something funny to say that."

— — —

Carolina had to overcome a 1-0 Colorado College lead to knock off the Tigers 3-2 in their semifinal on Saturday. Marsha McDermott scored twice for the Tar Heels who scored two goals in the first five minutes of the second half.

— — —

It was the first time UMass has been shutout since Harvard turned the trick at Boyden, 1-0, in 1984. . .George Mason also knocked off top-seeded Connecticut in the 1983 national tournament, 2-0. . .UMass is 6-4 in NCAA play. . .the loss marked the first time all season UMass was outshot. . .Saturday's crowd was the biggest UMass played before all season as 4,000 packed the George Mason soccer stadium. . .3,100 saw the UNC-Colorado College game. . .the weather cleared up for the game after torrential downpours forced Friday practice sessions indoors.

— — —

UM's goalie Jan Holland played on a club team in Colorado with Colorado College's Jen Murphree and Michelle Bell and Dana Haden of GMU. . .UMass fall teams ended at a combined 86-23-3 as both soccer and volleyball came to a close with tourney losses.

★ soccer

continued from page 16

to a defensive error by UMass freshman sweeper Susan Montagne and Holland both went for a ball in front of the goal. Holland dove on it, it squirted free and GMU's Chris Tomek had an open net and scored.

Gmitter drew the defense to her, and passed the ball to Cathy Mooon who made it 2-0 George Mason with a drive into the lower left corner of the net past an out-of-position Holland.

The third GMU goal, with 12:30 left in the game, was a great one. The Patriots drew the UM defense to the left, before getting a pass to Dana Hedin, all alone on the right side. Her shot beat Holland, just sneaking a pass to Dana Hedin, all alone on the right side. Her shot beat Holland, just sneaking inside the post.

UM didn't get its first real shot on goal in the second half until freshman forward Michelle Powers' shot with 9:24 to go rolled off the finger tips of goalie Kim Maslin before it was covered.

"I think it's a major upset," Gmitter said. "We just wanted it. They're (UM) a young team. We have a lot of seniors and had nothing to lose.

"I'm proud of them. This is the best team I've ever had in coaching. My plan for this team was for (winning the title) next year," said Banda in reference to the youth (only two seniors) of his team. Jamie Watson and Sue Bird are the seniors.

★ women's hoop loses

continued from page 16

Stevens said that despite the loss, she said she was particularly dissapointed with the play of her seniors and some of the more experienced players which she felt had not played up to her expectations. Stevens said that despite good efforts from sophomore center Sue Burtoft, senior forward Karen Damminger and senior forward Jerrie Bernier, she cited senior guard Barbara Hebel, senior forward Juanita Matthews, sophomore forward Tara Lewis and freshman guard Christel Zullo as being responsible for jittery play and guilty of a lot of turnovers.

"We had more mistakes than I thought we should've had. We threw the ball away and made lots of mental mistakes," Stevens said. "But we learned a big lesson in that we've got to make a more sincere effort to hold onto the ball. Sometimes it seemed we were just content with running up and down the floor, not doing anything with the ball."

When the Minutewomen weren't doing anything with the ball, the Black Bears were, scoring at will on the inside. Burtoft played a great game scoring 13 points and hauling in a game-high 16 rebounds, but single-handedly forced to hold her own in the middle against a taller lineup, she was unable to stop Black Bear center Liz Coffin, who scored a game-high 34 points and had 11 rebounds.

"Coffin had an All-American day, and I mean it, she has got to be one of the best players you're going to see anywhere," Stevens said of the 6-1 center. "No one could stop her. She scored inside, outside, she ran the floor well and pretty much just dominated. She was terrific."

Forward Laurie Gott had 15 points and guard Mary Walker added 10 to go along with Coffin's effort for the Black Bears, who led 41-36 at the half.

UMass led only twice, first at 22-21 with eight minutes to go in the first half and then 23-22 after a Maine free-throw. With decent shot opportunities, UMass had their chance to win but Stevens said it was difficult to score when the team was throwing the ball away.

"I could understand the turnovers from a freshman in her first start," Stevens said of Zullo. "But not from the seniors. Not that that's any excuse, a team should never have so many turnovers. I just hope the seniors will take charge against BU (Boston University) on Tuesday."

For the game, Damminger scored 13 points and added five rebounds. Hebel scored nine points while Matthews and Lewis added eight apiece. Hebel fouled out early in the second half while Burtoft, Damminger and Zullo committed four fouls each.

★ volleyball drops ECAC final

continued from page 16

fought back. A Debbie Cole service ace started things to draw the spikers to 10-2. UMass continued to chip away at the Huskie lead and trailed 10-9 off an NU miscue. The Huskies went up 12-9, but UMass rallied and took the lead 13-12. NU tied the score at 13-13 and went up 14-13 off an Ellis crush.

Again, UMass rallied and regained the lead 15-14 thanks to a perfect Marcy Guiliotis solo block. The lead changed hands again before another Guiliotis block put UMass up, 18-17. But, the Huskies responded and survived, 20-18.

Such an emotional loss would have spelled doom for most teams, but the Minutewomen would not die and roared back to win game three after trailing 7-3. The main UMass weapon was sophomore hitter Violetta Gladkowska who nailed several key kills to keep the spikers alive.

Game four looked to be another close affair. Northeastern led 7-6 before an Ann Ringrose crush tied matters, 7-7. An Ellis hit sailed wide, giving the spikers an 8-7 lead they would not relinquish. Guiliotis and Gladkowka combined with freshman middle hitter Barbara Meehan to lift UMass to a 15-9 game four victory, much to the liking of the 100-plus partisan fans.

The stage was set for the fifth and decisive game. But Northeastern did away with the dramatics early, as the Huskies jumped out to an 8-1 lead, consistently feeding Ellis for kills. The Minutewomen rallied, but could not close any closer than seven points as NU escaped with a 15-8 win and an ECAC championship.

A win against Northeastern would have put UMass in excellent position for a Division II national tournament at-large bid. However, the loss doesn't neccesarily end the spiker's season. The Minutewomen have beaten James Madison, a team that has already been invited to the tournament, twice this season. UMass also has a 35-8 mark, a record that will not be overlooked by the NCAA selection committee. The Division II tournament bids will be announced this afternoon. 15-9 game four victory.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Representatives from the work in Britain/Ireland today at table in CC Concourse 10 am - 4 pm. Informational meeting tonight at 7 pm CC 804

Imagine. . .

ATTENTION U.MA DARTERS

Meet and compete fellow U MA Darters at the Student Union Concourse tomorrow and a darts clinic & exhibition by W MA Darts Assoc Pres. Glenn Remick. Register for U MA Darts Club membership for additional info contact Games Room director Marty Fallon

AUDIO

For sale Technics 35 watt Rec. $40 12 band graphic eq. $70 both $100 call 549-6581 - Brian for info.

AUTO FOR SALE

77 Honda Accord 5 speed must sell to pay bills call Scott 253-9015

1976 "Sunbug" stereo by Sony, solid body, runs great $1400 584-5205

1976 Ford Maverick, 60,000 miles, auto, power steering, 4 door, runs fine. BO over $700. 549-1902

1974 Audi 100LS black exterior/red interior. Front wheel drive. Very little rust. Engine good condition also. $1200 549-7194 Sarah

1970 Chevy Malibu excellent running condition good body AM FM cassette deck $500 call Linda evenings after 6 549-6313

Volvo '76 great car. Must sell $2400/BO tel 546-5826

1979 VW Rabbit runs great, good cond. 5-speed $1500 Geoff 259-1582

1978 Nova. Runs good. As is. $500 or best offer. 546-8096

Audi 1977 100LS 4 dr AT AC SR FM & Tape FWD great winter car in excellent mech shape good radials 20* mpg on regular best $1500 German car around 665-8217

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

Turn the Tables professional party/club D.J. 5 yr experience widest selection cal 24 hr. 586-9691

Do you need bands for your party. Professional bands that didn't just get together yesterday. You name the sound and songs you want. We'll set up the band. Different styles from $150 call Steady Sounds 549-0385

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

1 or 2 females to share apt. call eves 549-4483

1 bedroom Cliffside apt. 375/month, includes everything avail Jan 1 call 665-8455

Amherst Brandywine 2 bdrm apt busline 580/month available 1-1-86 549-1119

Single room available in a house on Main St in Amherst rent is $158 per mo plus utilities on bus route and close to town and campus lease runs from Jan 1 to Aug 31 call Mike at 256-1233 pref after 5 pm

Lg 1 bdrm apt Squire Vill. avail Jan 665-4669 aft 6

Single room for rent all inclusive rent! Available to female or male Jan 1 call Sheryl 256-1645

Rooms available for those interested in home cooked meals and easy access to campus. For more info call 545-0527

1 or 2 roommates to share large modern loft-style apartment in Northampton Center AC, sundeck, heat included available Jan 1 call 586-4450

1 dble rm available Jan 1. Second house off campus. Hardwood floors call 549-4368 Pat or Emmy

FOR SALE

Yahadahadoo UMass "Red Rock" cafe T-shirts with Fred Flintstone 6-6314

Nordica Ski Boots size 9-10 used twice very cheap. Best offer call Leo 6-8812

Guitar - Yamaha SE200 student electric brand new $200. very negotiable 546-5125

Keyboards! Korg poly-61. $500. Moog Prodigy lead synth. $200. Keyboard stand $150. 549-1739

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2050

Marketing interns needed for Hampshire Mall Management Office must be energetic and reliable with excellent communication skills. Apply Office of Internships 545-0725

Accountant: The Economic Development Office is hiring for Spring semester. Sophomores and Juniors needed to work with student controlled businesses, approx 10 hrs/wk. Applications available at 409 SUB. Deadline is noon 11/27

The Commuter Area Government has one work study position for an office assistant. Interested people should have good organizational skills, typing skills, and 10-15 hrs a week free. (Undergrads only should apply to 404 SUB before November 26th. EOE/AA employer.

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

Intersession bartending classes covers all aspects gign up starts Monday Nov 25 room 111 credit free registration Tower Library

LOST

Is the "Pub" parking lot Saturday night a set of tools in a silver tool box. Please return them they're not mine. Call Eric at 546-7888

Blue LeSportSac wallet with great sentimental value. If returned, no questions asked. Reward. Call 546-8380 or 546-8090

Watch by Beisir. Silver w/gold lost Friday 11/15 near Southwest. Unrepairable but sentimental. Reward. Please call Chris 546-5557

Men's UMass Ring: Steven Sobeck inscribed. Lost in Townehouse area. Call 549-5924, for Kelley. REWARD!

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Where else can you get good tunes, great food, and the best coffee . . The People's Market of course! Around the corner from the Post Office.

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J SFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-9437

Hi Jon Come visit sometime! Nancy

Knowlton 4th What be it? Nance

Southwest Residents! Do you have a single? I will trade my single in Sylvan for cash for your single, amount negotiable. Tony 6-4314

Jim I'm only shy around guys I think are cute. Tell me - are you just like our "former" Lifeguard friend?

Karen Murray - A personal, just for you. "Happy Birthday!" Note-clip and save this ad, good for free Root Beer and Fries in the Hatch today. Take care and have a happy day. Luv, Eric

Free kittens to good home Jody 586-5425

Tom: One year closer to 31 at the heartache Happy Birthday Beauta. . .Dave and Alyssa

Bush Bash, Ski Snatch, LAGNAF Do these words mean anything to you? If you are a woman you may feel particularly victimized. Let's end these lude and oppressive slogans that permeate this paper and tell the UMass Ski Club to get the snow out of their minds after all they are blowing it our way. Write the Editor

Sue of 2 JQA Lets turn our acquaintance into something more. . .ASA

Madog did you write that?

John McKeown where have you been all my life!! - A Fan

Jeannette, With each day that we spend together my love for you grows and grows and grows and grows. . . Te Amo Cielo

To the short, blonde haired, cutie with the designer U.S. Army backpack. . . someone loves you!

Congratulations Kim Beaman & Amy McQuarrie for the two new Swiss Sisters of THE! Your American big bros in KKY Tom & Walt

Send a flower to a turkey or a friend Flowers and messages can be sent for Thanksgiving. Table on Campus Center Concourse Fri Nov 22 and Mon Nov 25. Names will appear in the Collegian. Sponsored by Mortar Board

Mazy Reidy! Happy 20th. Who says we don't love you? Have a good one. Love Mike and Rocky

Congratulations to the new sisters and brothers of TBS & KKPSI! Love Delta Delta & Epsilon Nu

Karen Murray - Happy Birthday! I think you're terrific. Who loves you baby? Gary Goodguy, that's who

Amy McQuarrie: Congratulations! You're going to be an awesome sister in Tau Beta Sigma. You've been a super little sister! Love, Karen

THE PEACE CONCERT Bushnell Memorial Hall, Hartford, Dec. 5, 8:00 pm free by calling (203) 560-1610

PIKE LITTLE SISTERS

Thanks for the surprise, you girls are the best. Little Sister's Chairman is the best position in the house

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates. 584-7924

ROOM WANTED

Female looking for housing or sublet for Jan 1 thru May 86 call Lisa 256-1301

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst. Cir 774-2740

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6895 evenings

Wanted - person to share furnished house in N. Amherst musican/student, near bus, heat provided, $200.00/month only til May 256-8432 Randy

One bedroom in beautiful two bedroom fully furnished Southwood apt 1 or 2 p. call 253-9917 anytime

Brandywine apt. looking for someone to rent my room for Spring semester. Rent is $290 per month. Heat is included in price. Possibility that entire apt will be available. Couples welcome. Call 549-9289

One space available in Brittany Manor, female, $142.50/, call Bonnie 256-1405

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Typing. Tape Transcription. Fast, accurate. Available almost anytime 665-7652

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

Don't let others beat you to it Earn $400-$1200 parttime or $2000-$6000 fulltime call 546-9632

Editing. Consultation. Ex-professor's specialty: dissertations, professional articles, books. 268-7772

TO SUBLET

Intersession - 1 double bedroom in Riverglade Apts on bus rte 2 miles from campus $100/person + elec big apt! Call Nina & Lynn 256-4258 after 4:00

TRAVEL

London Spring break 86 - Roundtrip airfare from Boston via Pan Am, 8 nights hotel, breakfasts, transfers, subway pass discount & taxes. Only $625 sponsored by HRTA Travel Club. Call Luis 549-7841

Two airline tickets for sale to Europe - cheap! Full service airline call Jen or Peter 665-4692 or 256-1201

TYPING SERVICE

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED TO RENT

To take over lease January 1 for a 2 or 3 bedroom apartment in N. Amherst or Sunderland. Call 546-4009 or 546-5568

Single room desired intersession only Amherst area preferred please call Marybeth at 546-5944 after 6:30 PM

Take over lease in Jan of 4 person house or apt call 546-4474 or 256-7199

WORD PROCESSING EDITOR

Must have Apple 2E, matrix printer Wordstar facility 256-0525 7-9 am/9-11 pm

Hi Chylosis Phi

Women's soccer falls hard, 3-0

UM's NCAA title dream dies

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

FAIRFAX, Va.—"I think we picked this day to play our worst game of the year," University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Kalekeni Banda stated simply Saturday afternoon at the NCAA national championships at George Mason University.

George Mason, who at 17-2-1 thought themselves two goal underdogs, outplayed and dominated UMass in Saturday's semifinal, handing the Minutewomen their worst loss in over two years and first loss of the season, 3-0.

George Mason won its first national title on Sunday, outlasting a stubborn four-time defending national champion North Carolina, 2-0. Patriots forward Lisa Gmitter clinched the match with a great 15-yard shot that glanced in off Tar Heel goalie Kathleen O'Dell with five minutes to go in the game.

Three UMass players were named to the all-tournament squad. Sophomore midfielder Kristen Bowsher, sophomore fullback Debbie Belkin and freshman forward Cathy Cassady were honored. Bowsher was a repeat from last-year's team.

For the third year in a row, the Minutewomen, who finish the season at 16-1 and entered the tourney as its top seed, have been stopped in the semifinals. Saturday, UMass came out flat against an emotionally fired-up George Mason team that has eight seniors.

"They seemed to want the game more," Banda said. "It was the first time all year we got beat to the ball. UMass allowed more goals in the game then it did all season.

"We wanted to dictate the pace and tempo of the game," Patriots coach Hank Leung said. "We were more patient and we took advantage of our opportunities.

"It's the biggest upset of our school's program," he said. Women's soccer has been a varsity sport at George Mason for only four years.

"There's no excuses," Banda said. "George Mason beat us today. They were good and we weren't."

The Patriots outshot UMass by an 11-€ margin, but had an 8-3 corners advantage that was more indicative of its domination.

The Patriots moved the ball with one and two touch passing through the UMass defense. "Our defense was non-exsistent today," Banda said. "There was no pressure on the ball."

"Our defense is our offense and if we don't have defense we can't turn it around," UM goalie Jan Holland said.

The first half ended with a scoreless tie, but UMass' chances began to improve as the Minutewomen began to control play the last 10 minutes of the half.

Bowsher, an All-American midfielder, and Belkin, a sophomore halfback sparked the offense with runs upfield to get UMass on the attack. But in the second half, it was all George Mason.

"We didn't play as a team," Belkin said. "I'm sure we all tried. We didn't look as quick or as fast."

George Mason scored its winning goal with 16:40 gone in the second half thanks

continued on page 15

SPORTS

UMass survives opener, 59-56

Minutemen hold on before packed Cage

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

It was what you would expect from a young team, over anxious to please its home crowd, a struggle.

The University of Massachusetts basketball team opened its 1985-86 season with a victory, not an impressive victory by any standards, but good enough, 59-56 over Merrimack College before 4,024 fans lucky enough to get into the Curry Hicks Cage on Saturday night.

"It was a big crowd and there was a lot of pressure on ourselves, mostly from within," said sophomore guard Lorenzo Sutton, who paced UMass with 15 points. "We've got a lot of young guys and we were pressing to do well. The game wasn't our style at all, call it first-game jitters or whatever, but we're a better team than we showed."

Over 1,000 students couldn't get into the newly-renovated Cage as long lines starting forming at 6 p.m. for the 7:30 game. Fans holding tickets and members of the press has to be escorted through side entrances as students formed a wall of humanity at the main doors.

UMass baskteball is the hottest ticket on campus and the capacity crowd roared its approval as the Minutemen took the floor at the Cage for the first time since March of 1984, but a plucky Merrimack team was up to its Division 1 challenge.

The game started slowly with only 10 points scored in the first five minutes. The Minutemen trailed at only 2-0, 4-2 and 10-8 and took as big a lead as nine twice, at 22-12 on a Wilbert Hicks layup with 6:47 to go and again at 28-19 when Smith hit a jumper with 3:18 left.

But Merrimack, led by eight points from sharp-shooting forward Bob Venora and a tough zone defense, hung tough and trailed by five at halftime, 30-25.

continued on page 14

Collegian photo by Michelle Segall

Junior Captain Carl Smith finds his way to the hoop blocked by four Merrimack defenders Saturday night at the Cage. UMass won its opener, 59-56.

Women's hoop drops opener, 76-66

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team, plagued by a lack of confidence and sloppy ball-handling, dropped its season opener, 76-66, to the University of Maine, Saturday afternoon in Orono.

With 26 turnovers the Minutewomen, 0-1, were never able to get comfortable as University of Massachusetts head coach Barbara Stevens saw her senior-laden squad locked in a battle of nerves with the Black Bears.

"The game was messier than anticipated," Stevens said. "Our defense caused 23 tournovers, and normally that would be enough for us to have a chance to win, but not when we give up 26 ourselves."

continued on page 15

Lose in five to Northeastern

Volleyball loses in ECAC finals

By ROGER CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

For the second time in two weeks, the University of Massachusetts volleyball team has met the Huskies of Northeastern University in a crucial tournament championship match. For the second time in as many weeks, Northeastern came out on top.

The Huskies, fuelled by their all-everything hitter Monique Ellis, managed to halt a furious Minutewoman rally in the championship match of the ECAC championships as the spikers fell in a five game heartbreaker, 7-15, 18-20, 15-8, 15-9, 8-15.

The Minutewomen, after bolting out to a two game lead, held on to beat James Madison University in another five game marathon, 15-4, 15-7, 11-15, 11-15, 15-3, in the semi-finals. Northeastern defeated the Naval Academy in four games in the other semi-final.

"I really feel that volleyball is a game of momentum," said Sortino after the UMass win over James Madison. "We were waiting for them to make mistakes in game three. We started to look for those mistakes and instead they were hitting lines on us."

"We let that kind of a tempo set and we gave them to many opportunities because they were still missing serves and giving us chances," said Sortino. "We just lost our tenacity in game four. We just had so many miscues and that's not our brand of volleyball."

Nevertheless, UMass prevailed setting up the championship match against Northeastern. At the outset of the match, it seemed as though nothing could save the spikers, as the Huskies cruised through game one, 15-7, and led game two, 10-1.

But the Minutewomen, as they had done earlier against Northeastern,

continued on page 15

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 57 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Tuesday, November 26, 1985

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

READING COMPANY — Senior agricultural economics major Gary McGrath has some company as he reads his paper yesterday near the cardboard silhouettes on the Fine Arts Center.

Campus AIDS policy approved

By BRION McALARNEY
Collegian Staff

A victim of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) spoke last night at Mahar Auditorium about public misconceptions about the disease and stressed the need for a national public policy.

Jim McIntyre, a 25 year old AIDS victim, spoke along with Dr. John Mazzullo, professor of Medicine at Tufts University, and Anne Marie Silvia, Health Education Coordinator for the Massachusetts AIDS Action Committee. The program was sponsored by University Health Services and the committee.

"The disease is really difficult to get," McIntyresaid. "If I thought for a second that hugging or kissing my mother, or beating up on my little brother, that there was a remote possibility that they'd get it, I'd stay the hell away," he said.

"The government should say we'll make sure you won't get discriminated, won't lose jobs and houses," he said. "People who feel they have something are afraid to get tested."

AIDS is a disease that attacks the immune system and leaves individuals vulnerable to illnesses that a healthy immune system would combat. The high risk groups most vulnerable to the disease are sexually active homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

The transmission of the disease is through intimate sexual contact and direct contact with contaminated blood, usually by drug users who share the same needle, or blood transfusions, Silvia said.

"No one really knows why the virus hit gay men first," Silvia said.

The risk from blood transfusions is very low as high risk donors have been told not to donate, she said.

Children have contracted the disease during the birth process, not through contact with other kids or family members, she said.

The symptoms of the disease include severe fatigue, loss of weight, persistent coughs, recurrent diarrhea, and skin rashes, Mazzullo said.

"The symptoms are absolutely scary because everyone has had them. In the beginning, they are similar to a head cold or flu," he said. Any symptoms lasting more than four weeks should be checked, he added.

McIntyre stressed that AIDS victims need public support.

Police called to settle crowd

800 students try to register

By LESLEY CLARK
Collegian Staff

Four policeman were summoned to the Campus Center Auditorium yesterday after more than 800 students attempted to push their way into the auditorium to register for intersession classes.

One student received medical treatment, police said.

A member of the Continuing Education staff which conducted the registration said yesterday afternoon that changes for next years' registration will be made.

"We didn't expect the crowd would behave anything like this," said Continuing Education Registrar Liz Brinkerhoff. She said the number of students registering for classes this year seemed equal to that of last year, although no final figures were available.

"It was like a concert," one policeman said, referring to the Who concert in Cincinnati where several people were trampled to death. "I came close to shutting the doors and telling everyone to go home."

"People were shoving and pushing to get in," said Carolyn Alheim, 19, a hotel, restaurant and travel administration major. "It didn't depend on first come, first serve," she said. "It was whoever pushed the hardest."

Registration began at 9 a.m. Witnesses said students had begun to line up outside the auditorium at 4:45 a.m. The line began at the doors of the auditorium, traveled the length of the floor and looped back around the escalators. At 8:30 a.m. registration forms were passed out and arriving students rushed the auditorium doors.

"This was the most ridiculous event the University has ever coordinated," said Paul Lesser, a BDIC major (Bachelor's Degree with Independent Concentration) in corporate sales. "I've never seen people so mad. This was worse than the Cage," he said, referring to Saturday night's basketball game in which more than 1000 students were turned away.

Last year, registration was held in Continuing Education offices in the Tower library. A line extended to the Campus Pond. Brinkerhoff said registration was moved indoor this year "to accomodate students" in case of rain or snow.

Registration for intersession continues until Dec. 31 in the Continuing Education offices in the Tower library. The office is open 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday-Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Fridays.

Library elevators to be fixed

Renovations begin Dec. 15

By NANCY KLINGENER
Collegian Staff

Students can expect increased waiting time in the lobby of the Tower Library when three elevators are taken out of service on Dec. 15, the day final examinations begin.

The modifications beginning in December are the first phase of a renovation project expected to continue into next fall. After modifications, three elevators will stop at every floor up to and including the 16th while the other two will stop at the floors from the 17th up.

"Everybody who uses that building realizes that the elevators are a real problem," said Gordon Fretwell, the library's associate director for public services. The renovated system should "respond to peaks of ridership better than the current system," he said.

The repair process will be "a long, involved, and complex one," said Fretwell. "We're aware that it's going to cause some problems," he said, but added that the advantages of the renovated system outweighed the temporary inconvenience of the ongoing repair process.

The shutdown has to start on Dec. 15, Fretwell said, because parts for the elevators must be manufactured specifically for each repair. "It's not like you just walk into a hardware and take stuff off the shelf," he said. Once the parts are in, work is being started as soon as possible.

After the first phase is completed, the remaining two elevators will be modified, now slated to begin June 1. Fretwell said that the entire process is expected to take until mid-October, but that "we're hoping that the job will go faster than they [the contracters] think it's going to go."

Justin Cobb, director of the Office of Space Management, said that he doesn't see waiting time for elevators as being a problem. "I don't think it would have a significant effect at all," he said, since the library has a maximum 500-person capacity.

"There has been no request for extra study space," he said. "If there's a properly identified problem, the University will address it."

Protesters given 6-months probation

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Disorderly conduct charges against four participants in a sit-in at Westover Air Force base were "continued without a finding" yesterday after the group pleaded they acted under conflicting legal obligations.

The members of Faculty and Staff for Peace in Central America argued they were caught in "conflicting harms" because international law required that they protest the U.S. government's illegal actions in Nicaragua and U.S. civil law prohibited their sit-in at the air force base on June 12.

"I think this was a definite victory," defendant Tom Nielson said.

The ruling, which puts the four protestors on probation for six months, was "in effect an admission by the state that they did not have enough evidence to find us guilty," Ann Ferguson, an instructor in the University of

continued on page 3

INSIDE

Senate speaker to stand trial.....3
The Tower of UMass.....5
Men and women in action at Cage.....12

"It was a classy season. It just didn't end that way."
UMass women's soccer goalie Jan Holland, p. 11.

WORLD/NATIONAL

AP Laserphoto

NORTHAMPTON TEENS KILLED — Emergency medical technicians treat one of the five victims of a car accident yesterday on Sylvester Road in Northampton. Three teenagers died and their names have not been released.

Death toll reaches 60 in hijacking

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Egypt said yesterday its commandos storemed a hijacked Egyptian jet to prevent a massacre, but fire raced through the cabin killing trapped passengers when terrorists threw phosphorous grenades. A total of 60 people died, a Maltese official said.

One woman, identified as an American, was killed during the hijacking, the official said, and 59 died during the Egyptian attack Sunday night on the airliner parked at Malta's airport.

Maltese government spokesman Paul Mifsud said the dead included nine Palestinian children and four of five hijackers. He said one hijacker survived the assault by Egyptian commandos and was in serious condition at St. Luke's Hospital in Valletta. First report said all of the hijackers were dead. Mifsud said 58 bodies were recovered from the burned out Boeing 737. In addition, he said a Filipino man died of injuries he suffered after Egyptian soldiers blew in two doors and surged aboard to shoot it out with the hijackers.

Also dead was the American woman shot by the hijackers after the plane landed in Malta Saturday night and thrown from the aircraft. She was identified today by the State Department as Scarlette Marie Rogenkamp, 38, a civilian U.S. Air Force employee stationed in Greece.

Defense Department spokesman Cmdr. Bob Prucha said she was from Oceanside, Calif., and was on vacation when the Athens-to-Cairo flight was hijacked Saturday and forced to Malta, a Meditteranean island.

Mifsud said the American woman was the only one killed before the rescue attempt, but that other people were shot and thrown from the plane. Before the commando assault ended the hijacking, the captain had reported the hijackers killed seven people. Apparently he had believed that all of those shot and thrown from the plane had been killed.

The two other American passengers were wounded and thrown from the plane before the assault, said U.S. Embassy deputy chief Joel Levy. Mifsud said 30 people were being treated in Malta hospitals.

The Egyptian government, in its first official reaction to the attack, said today the "terrorists threw three phophorous grenades in the front and rear of the plane, which started large fires and spread burning shrapnel. The available resources at Valletta Airport to face this situation were limited and modest, and therefor the number of people saved were 44 passengers."

The statement said the command attack "took place successfully according to plan." It said the "lightning assault" took five minutes and no passengers were hurt by commandos.

But Tony Lyons, a 46-year-old Australien hijack survivor who spoke from his hospital bed on Britain's TV-AM morning news show, said, "THere was a lot of indiscriminate shooting because the Egyptian commandos didn't know who were the terrorists and who weren't."

The pilot, Capt. Hani Galal, described the hijackers as "first-class killers" and said the ringleader had singled out Americans and Israelis "for execution."

Patrick Scott Baker, a surviving American passenger, told the NBC-TV "Today" show, "I was walked out onto a platform and then shot. It was a graze. I was confused for a second. I fell down the stairs head first... After about two minutes, I got up and ran away."

Gilbert Briard, a 36-year-old Frenchman injured in the raid, told Europe 1 radio in Paris the hijackers called the Americans "and tied their hands behind their backs. They first shot the boy, then waited about an hour to shoot the second person and then ... shot the third."

Levy said initial reports indicated all of the hijackers were killed. But the state-run Egyptian newspaper al-Ahram, without giving sources, also reported today that one of the sky pirates was wounded and recovering in a Valletta hospital.

Pelton sold info to Soviets

BALTIMORE (AP) — A former National Security Agency communications specialist admitted to FBI agents that he has sold extremely sensitive classified information about U.S. intelligence activities to the Soviet Union, according to a federal court document filed yesterday.

Ronald William Pelton, 44, who worked for the NSA from 1965 to 1979, told the FBI in an interview Sunday that he met with KGB officer Anatoly Slavnov on several occasions from January 1980 through January 1983, said an FBI affidavit signed by agent David Faulkner.

Pelton was arrested in Annapolis, Md., yesterday and accused of violating federal law concerning the gathering of defense information for a foreign government.

Pelton admitted receiving cash payments from the Soviet agent on several occasions, including a $15,000 payoff as a result of a trip to Vienna, Austria, in January 1983, according to the affidavit.

Fred Warren Bennett, Pelton's court-appointed attorney, said his client's FBI statement should not be characterized as a confession.

"There are a number of potential defenses," Bennett said.

The FBI said Pelton went to the Soviet Embassy in Washington in January 1980 to offer to spy for the Soviets in return for cash. On that occasion, the FBI said, he provided information about "a United States intelligence collection project targeted at the Soviet Union."

According to the court documents, Pelton failed to meet that contact in Vienna and was asked to make another trip in October. The affidavit does not give any evidence he made the October trip.

Peres to discuss peace

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Monday he is willing to meet Morocco's King Hassan II and discuss peace in the Middle East, an aide told the Associated Press.

Belushi's death probed

LOS ANGELES — (AP) A judge on Monday oredered a former backup singer to stand trial on a charge of second-degree murder in the 1982 drug overdose death of comedian John Belushi.

Cathy Evelyn Smith, 38, who has acknowledged injecting Belushi with "speedballs" of cocaine and heroin, wept quietly after Municipal Court Judge James Nelson oredered her to appear for arraignment Dec. 10 in Superior Court.

Vatican reforms still valid

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Two leading cardinals said yesterday the liberal reforms of the Second Vatican Council remain "completely valid" for today's Roman Catholic church and there could be no going back on those changes.

"The implementation of the council reforms exceeded great hopes that many of the members of the council had at that time," said U.S. Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia.

The cardinals met on the first working day of an extraordinary synod of bishops convened to assess the impact of the 1962-65 council, also known as Vatican II. The two-week meeting was called to chart the course of Catholicism and sum up the state of the church.

Belgian Cardinal Godfried Lanneels of Brussels, a keynote speaker at the synod, said "THe council remains valid, completely valid ... It's impossible to regress."

Krol, one of the synod's three co-presidents, and Lanneels discussed the general thrust of the council's reforms at a news conference to explain the work of the two-week gathering of 165 Roman Catholic bishops from around the world.

They were repeatedly asked if a battle was shaping up between conservative and progressives at the synod. Krol replied, "It's not a boxing match we are conducting."

Asked to comment on suggestions that conservative prelates might try to fight the council's liberalizing reforms, Krol said: "THe reality is, even from a juridical standpoint, the synod cannot change, overturn, retrench or amplify the ecumenical culture."

What if you dont get into the grad school of your choice?

Of course, you may get into another school, but why settle? Prepare for the LSAT, GMAT, GRE, MCAT or any grad school entrance exam with the best test prep organization — Stanley H. Kaplan.

For nearly 50 years, Kaplan's test-taking techniques have prepared over 1 million students for admission and licensing tests of all kinds. So call. Why go to just any grad school, when you can go to the right one?

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

The world's leading test prep organization.

Intersession Classes Enrolling Now
MCAT, GMAT
GRE, LSAT
Take advantage of our
FREE SPEEDREADING LESSON
at your convenience

MONEY MOTIVATED?

If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This

We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor Gerry diSimas
Copy Editor Kathy Hart
Layout Technician Anne McCrory
Photo Technician Scott Maguire
Production Supervisor Matkins
Production Sonja Sabels, Kelly Sieger, Danielle Charbonneau, Conor Plunkett, Ken Levinson.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian USPS permit # 58), a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is published Monday through Friday excluding holidays, exams and vacation periods. Content is determinded solely by the Collegian Board of Editors without prior approval from University administrators, faculty or staff. Operations are funded solely by advertising and subscription revenue. Subscriptions and advertising rates are available at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003, (413) 545-3500. Postmaster: send address changes to the above address.

Authority question underlines fund controversy

News Analysis

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

Student affairs administrators and Undergraduate Student Senators are as far apart as possible over who has the authority to control student monies which make up the Student Activity Trust Fund.

Since the release last Tuesday of a memorandum by Randy Donant, the director of student activities, and Dennis Madson, the vice chancellor for student affairs, both senators and those on the side of the administration have grappled over the right to control the trust fund.

The memo outlined seven points of action concerning future Student Government Association budgets starting in fiscal year 1987. The various budgets make up the trust fund, which is a resource for the SGA to provide services, activities and advocacy to the student community.

The memo's guidelines, initiated by Donant in response to what he says is currently a $120,000 deficit, gives him much more budget responsibility and input. Donant has said it was his "responsibility" to draw up the guidelines.

The senate, however, voted unanimously to call on Donant's resignation last week. In the process, the assembly made it known that it believes it's not Donant's responsibility at all, but rather a "violation of students' rights. The senate voted to fight the memo and call for Donant's resignation and ask Madson to apologize.

For the past week, Donant and Bob Jenal, the business manager of the Student Activity Office, have met with senate leaders to discuss the newly-formed budget process, which according to Donant, began with the memo's release Tuesday. However, the senate is conducting business as usual, and the assembly has made it apparent that it will not accept Donant's and Madson's guidelines.

"I still think we have the authority to create the budget we want to make," said Dianne Rossi, SGA treasurer, who will meet with Donant and Jenal today. Referring to today's meeting, she said "I don't see us getting anywhere."

Rossi said senators have presented Donant with several trustee documents that affirm student input to the budget process. On the students' right to oversee the process, she said, "I'll keep meeting with them (administration) every day until they accept it."

Jenal said yesterday that there exists a "standoff type of situation" at this time between administrators and senate leaders.

Jenal said at today's meeting he will try to overstep the authority question and move forward with fiscal concerns. Unfortunately, the question of who has the authority is what completely separates both sides. Meanwhile, both students and administrators are working on a budget process that each side says they have control of.

Ruddock to stand jury trial

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON - A District Court judge found Undergraduate Student Senate Speaker John Ruddock guilty of a misdemeanor yesterday after he was accused of property damage to a University of Massachusetts police officer's personal vehicle.

Ruddock will go to jury trial at Hampshire District Court on the charges in January or February.

Ruddock was found innocent of felony charges, which stated that he caused "malicious property damage" last May when he vaulted officer Dennis Bromery's car after an anti-apartheid sit-in.

But Ruddock's attorney appealed the judge's "without finding" verdict to a less severe misdeamenor charge, which stated that he caused "wanton destruction" to Bromery's vehicle in the May 1 incident. Under the no finding verdict, Ruddock may have had to pay for alleged damages to Bromery's vehicle.

Charles DiMare, directing attorney at the UMass Legal Services Office, said he appealed the no finding verdict on behalf of Ruddock because "we're maintaining Mr. Ruddock's complete innocence" of any property damage charges.

When DiMare appealed the no finding verdict, the judge determined Ruddock guilty of the misdemeanor charges and called for a trial by jury.

"I have a very strong belief in the American jury system," DiMare said, "we think that his innocence will prevail with the jury."

DiMare said that many police officers who examined pictures of Bromery's vehicle found no evidence of damage, but the judge found "a slight scratch" when he saw the car yesterday.

Ruddock hurdled Bromery's car after the sit-in last May to inform police officers that a bus was loaded with handcuffed participants of the sit-in at the UMass treasurer's office.

Ruddock will appeal to a six-member jury in Hampshire District Court in January or February, DiMare said.

★trial — continued from page 1

Massachusetts philosophy department said.

In a statement of their purpose at the Chicopee air force base, the protestors said that the International Nuremburg Charter and Tokyo War Crimes Tribunal of 1945 "oblige private citizens to 'take affirmative measures' to prevent the commission of war crimes" by a government when the citizens are aware of the crimes.

The statement said the 1984 U.S. mining of Nicaraguan harbors and U.S. military funding of the Nicaraguan "contra" rebels were "crimes against international law."

"Our argument was that we are legally bound to protest the illegal actions of our government," Ferguson said.

"This is the first time that a judge in this area...has taken into account a legitimate reason for doing an act that violates a (U.S.) criminal statute," she said.

Ferguson said that she hopes yesterday's ruling will encourage similar protests by offering a means of defense for participants.

"We hope other people will take this precedent seriously," she said.

Collegian photo by Michell Segall

TALL TASK — Jim Martin, a senior journalism major, works on installing a sign at the Fine Arts Center last week. Information on the Jazz All-Stars can be obtained by calling the FAC.

Skate to help needy

By ILANA LEVENSON
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Community Survival Center is sponsoring its fifth annual "Can Skate" today. The skate allows participants two hours of skating in exchange for three canned food items to benefit the low-income families of Amherst.

"We expect anywhere from 150 to 200 people" said Ernie Westcott, volunteer coordinator of the center. Between 450 and 600 cans of food is expected to be collected.

The Can Skate will go on from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Interskate 91 located at the Hampshire Mall.

"The community has always been so good" Wescott said about the participation of the Amherst community in the effort to help out low-income families, especially around the holiday season.

The food that is collected will help benefit families in Amherst only.

"We use them for Christmas baskets. We're trying to make it a little more happy" Lisa Lichterfeld, a volunteer for the center said.

In addition to helping Amherst residents, the center also contributes to families throughout Hampshire County.

"We have a large number of people coming in here" Lichterfeld said. Among other things, the center provides clothing furniture and books to those who need them. "We have a food pantry and people come in when their food stamps run out" Lichterfeld said.

"We are a referral service" she said, adding that they help people with all types of problems.

"We help find housing for people in need. If we can't help them, we hook them up with someone who can help," Lichterfeld said.

The families that wish to receive the Christmas baskets sign themselves up on a list. "Right now we have 14 names on the list" Lichterfeld said. With Christmas still a month away, she expects many more requests.

In addition to the Can Skate, the center will sponsor a Toy Skate on Dec. 17. "The price of admission will be a new or used toy" Westcott said.

Student injured when hit by a car in lot 32

By JEANETTE DeFORGE
Collegian Staff

A 20-year-old female student received 'serious visible injuries' when she was hit by a car late Friday night while crossing the Lot 32 access road, University of Massachusetts police said.

The woman was spun around, fell and struck the granite curbing with her head when she was hit. She was taken to Cooley-Dickinson Hospital in Northampton where she was treated and released, police said.

The driver of the car, a 19-year-old female student was cited for failure to keep to the right.

In other police reports:

Four students were arrested and charged with larceny over $100 Friday afternoon. They were accused of stealing a Quasar television set from Memorial Hall which was found on the lawn in front of Bartlett earlier in the day. The students will also be charged with breaking and entering with the attempt to commit a felony.

A man was arrested and charged with doing malicious damage in Boyden Gymnasium Sunday evening, police said.

The man was found by the building supervisor. The man tried to open a door to the building but failed. He broke a window in the door which was valued at $250.

A plexiglass door to the men's basket room and the main west door, valued at $490 in Boyden Gym were reported broken Sunday morning, police said.

Three men were issued trespassing notices Saturday night on the seventh floor of Dickinson House. The men were trying to kick in the door of a woman's dorm room. Police recieved a report later of the men doing the same thing. There was no damage done to the dorm, police said.

A 21-year-old student was arrested and charged with attempted larceny over $100 and malicious injury to personal property, Saturday afternoon outside of Pierpont House. He was trying to steal two 10-speed bicycles which were locked on a bike rack, police said.

A 19-year-old student was arrested and charged with being a disorderly person and malicious injury to state property when he kicked out the divider screen on a police car late Saturday night on Thatcher Way. Police were trying to take the man into protective custory when he became uncooperative. The screen is valued at $250, police said.

A couch and two chairs valued at $500 were thrown off the sixth floor balcony of Dickinson House Sunday afternoon, police said.

A 20-year-old woman was arrested early Saturday morning on University Drive and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, operating with defective equipment and refusing to stop for an officer.

A 1983 Mazda received $1000 damage when the driver hit a 1982 Ford wrecker owned by Amherst towing Friday night on the Lot 44 access road.

The driver of the Mazda, a UMass student, pulled out of the Lot 44 access road and hit the Ford. She was cited for failure to use care in starting

A television valued at $205 and a stereo valued at $150 were reported stolen from a room on the 18th floor of Kennedy Tower. The room was locked and there was no sign of forced entry, police said.

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION
Gas Saving Tune-up
4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95
We'll install new ignition points, condenser, rotor, spark plug wires, set timing, set carburetor and charging system. Inspect cap, distributor cap, PVC valve, ignition cables, air filter and vapor lines. Fix it for life! Includes Emission Test and Printout.
Lube, Oil & Filter
$17.99
Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil, and safety check.
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watrobka's Store
549-4704

Letters

This highway robbery cannot be tolerated

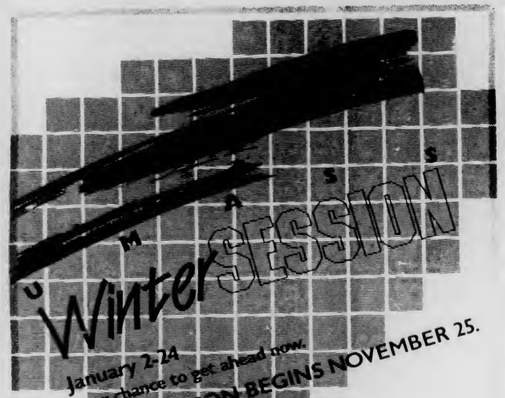
The UMass Republican Club would like to join with the Campus Center Board of Governors and the SGA Senate in condemning Randy Donant and Vice-Chancellor Dennis Madson for their illegal and immoral attempt to take control of the Student Activities Trust Fund away from the students who pay for it.

This act of highway robbery cannot be tolerated. We call on the various elements of the student body to set aside our individual differences and unite in defense of student empowerment.

Loren Spivack, president
UMass Republican Club

Organization was lacking

Barbaric! Barbaric was the mob scene outside of the Campus Center Auditorium at 8:30 a.m. yesterday. Continuing Ed's sloppy attempt to let UMass students pre-register for wintersession was not only unorganized, it was dangerous. I was appalled by the lack of responsibility and authority that this department displayed. There are obviously inherent problems with the Continuing Ed's pre-registration system when students are fainting in line! No police, no roped-off areas for single lines to form, no numbers (for people who really waited in line early in the morning), and most scary of all, no first aid for students was offered.



Students can't be held responsible for their transactions when the system requires such behavior. Continuing Ed is responsible for planning and implementing safe and efficient programs for the pre-registration process. Being practically crushed between the Campus Center Auditorium door and other students is not my idea of a good time folks! The Continuing Ed Department must prepare for the future and not just sit back and wait for a crisis to occur — then deal with it. This is absurd! Dangerous situations that can be avoided cannot be tolerated by UMass students or more than just a small riot will plague our University.

Bailey K. Hare
Amherst

COPYCAT PRINT SHOP
HIGH QUALITY — LOW RATES

549-3840
228 Triangle St.
2nd floor above Computer Works
Hours: 8 am - midnight M-F
11 am - 7 pm Sat
12 pm - 9 pm Sun
3¢ A COPY
Autofeed till Nov. 30

SKI PACKAGE
$699 one week at Ski Resort:
Parnasos, Greece
this price includes: roundtrip airline ticket to Greece, first class hotel, ski lift passes, all transportation and assistance at the airport.
Departures: Dec. 22 and 28, 1985
UNIVERSITY TRAVEL and TOURS INC.
225 Main St.
Northampton, Mass.
584-9913

In-Person Registration
November 25
Campus Center Auditorium, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.
November 26-December 31
Records and Registration Office
Division of Continuing Education
University Library
8:30 a.m.-7 p.m., Mon.-Thurs.;
8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Fri.
Call 545-2414 for more information.
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

BOARD OF GOVERNORS
Attention Students and Student Coops.
The Space Committee of the Board of Governors will be accepting requests for student coop space
in the CC/SU Complex.
Please pick up criteria sheets for proposals in room 817 Campus Center

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ED/OP
The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.
Founded in 1870

Executive Board—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager
Board of Editors—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Mosko, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Where are you?

Liisa Trocki

Hello. Are there any feminist activists out there? Any active feminists? Are you awake? I know there are feminists out there. We are not in post-feminists times. But feminist activism has dropped so steeply in the last six months that I'm alternating between panic and anger.

What is happening? I see feminists in all my classes, at the laundromat reading MS and Off Our Backs, at women's concerts, at poetry readings, and even on the Belchertown Center bus. Why don't I see you at meetings of the Valley Women's Voice, the Women's Caucus, or International Women's Event? Why don't I see your byline in the Collegian or the Valley Women's Voice or hear your voice on the Women's Media Project on WMUA?

Why didn't you come to the Women's Film Festival or the Reproductive Rights Conference this semester? (Both events were very diverse and surely everyone could find a film or workshop of some interest to them.) Why don't you volunteer at EWC or one of the area women's centers? Where is the women's community on this campus? We have more resources than any other school in New England. What is wrong?

Are we talking things for granted? Are we becoming so self-centered that we only seek out things which make us as individuals feel good?

When I began working with women's groups on campus two years ago, there were 15-20 women working in the Women's Leadership Project, the Women's Issues Team, CERRF, the Lesbian Union, International Women's Event Planning Committee, the Women's Caucus and the Valley Women's Voice. That is 105-140 women. There were also women working with the Collegian (3 at least were women's news editors) as well as women working on the WMUA women's media project.

There were women working in the anti-pornography movement. And all these women were organizers. There were also women who attended events like the Women's Film Festival, International Women's Event, and various conferences.

Women fought for these organizations and programs. Are we going to let them die through neglect? Women occupied the Collegian in 1978 so we could have a women's news desk. Women worked to form the Valley Women's Voice. Women broke with the PGA to form the Lesbian Union. Women have fought and continued to fight for funding for all these grous and programs.

Don't we owe it to them, to the women in our lives, to ourselves to keep these groups going? If these groups die we will have no one to blame but ourselves.

There are women working on women's issues on campus (you are all wonderfull), but they need YOUR help. Don't think someone else will do it. You are the someone else. Don't say you are too busy. When you are no longer busy, it will be too late. There is no time to waste: there are no excuses. See you next week.

Liisa Trocki is the director of the Women's Leadership Project.

The Tower of. . .

Ken Levinson

The third week of September I made my first pilgramage of the semester into that whitest of elephants, the Tower Library. As I walked into the place that has come to be THE social center on campus, I was confronted by a pole with a sign saying "Caution, obstruction in floor." The sign is infamous to these of us who walk into it every time we go into the library.

When the third weekend in November rolled around (henceforth to be remebered for the Saturday it snowed), I had to find out whether or not the sign served an actual functional purpose, or was part of some weird psychology experiment. As I should have expected, it has elements of both; there is a piece of metal stripping on the floor that is not being held down due to a missing screw (hence the elaborate paper-weight), and the pole is also a definitive sign of the inherent insanity of this ridiculous building; I was told no one from the physical plant would fix it (put in a screw) until the renovations are finished?!

Renovations. . .now that is really funny. I wish someone from the University had asked me to renovate the Tower, I would have told them to uproot the idiocy and lay the behemoth on its side. Libraries around the world are short in height and long in width. Only at UMass do you go to the card catalog in one building (which is short and wide) to find a book in another (which is tall and stupid). The only legitimate excuse I have heard for the existence of the Tower is that it keeps that sector of our population employed that comprises the very back bone of the American way of life, elevator repair people.

For all of its faults, the Tower does have one redeeming feature that also defines its essence—graffiti. With the exception of perhaps the New York City subways and the Berlin Wall, the Tower has one of the finest collections of magic marker art in the world.

While writing this essay I felt inspired by the old adage, "If you want something done right, you have to do it yourself." So the next time you lace up your Reeboks and slip on your Elesse sweats to go study, remember to dodge the flaking bricks, and be careful of the guy on the floor with a screwdriver in his hand.

Ken Levinson is a member of the Collegian staff.

Inventing a 'god'

Rusty Denton

There is an anthropomorphic argument which I have probably heard 200 times that says that people need a god, so they invent one just like themselves. I find this pretty funny since the God I worship is very unlike my natural inclinations, and since I've seen the miraculous. But I would agree that most people take the biblical picture of God and try to mold it to their own ends. One author has called this "the Great Mush God," who is called upon in ecumenical prayers at public affairs. Personally, I call it the spineless god.

The spineless god has no sex. Or it has the sex of your choice. Or it is hermaphroditic, it just depends.

"You can't be male, that's oppressive!" someone cries.

"Oh, excuse me, how thoughtless of me. Of course I'm female, just like you," croons a voice of putty.

"I can't believe God has a hand in history!" somebody yells. "Look at all the wars and awful things done in the name of God! Look at all the starving nations! God didn't create this world!"

"Oh, my, no," wimpers the spineless god, "I'm above it all. I'm ethereal. You just have to look into yourself because I'm the author of escape from reality."

"God would never do something I disagree with," we hear. "After all, I'm a perfectly rational, emotional, psychic, insightful human being. How dare you suggest that God would make something I like to do immoral!"

"I'm a hero!" cries the voice of day. "I make gods out of mere mortals! I make sacraments out of lust and greed and pride! I make a sin out of the word, 'no'! Unless, of course, you disagree."

A door opens; someone rushes out on the way to a party. "Oh, my vegetable god, I'm sorry I don't have any time to spend with you this month, but I have to study and socialize and sleep. I know you'll understand."

"Of course," says the spineless god, "After all, I would never make a demand on your time. Have a good time. Nobody goes to hell in my kingdom."

Thursday night, a midterm the next day, students on their knees. "Oh, god! Please, please, please, please, PLEEEEZ! I have just got to pass this exam. I'll do anything. I'll be nice to my parents. I'll stop kicking the dog. I'll go to bed early seven days a week, just let me pass this exam."

"Sorry," moans the worm god. 'Miracles are out of my province. Why don't you just do the best you can? Remember, you said I don't intervene in history. . .or history tests."

"God! I don't believe I flunked this exam: I studied for a whole day before I took it. Lousy prof! Stupid roommate! God, you idiot, this never would have happened if you were looking out for me the way you were supposed to."

"I'm ethereal. The stars weren't right for it. The tarot cards didn't line up. The vibes were bad," whispers god, the amoeba. "It just wasn't right, you know–it wasn't your fault. No doubt that professor will suffer bad karma."

It's the summit meeting of two great leaders. Hundreds in candlelight vigils admonish the noble, righteous, just, spineless spirit to bring peace and reconcile nations, and to end the nuclear threat.

"I'm noble, I'm righteous, I'm just. I bring peace and reconcile nations," says the gutless wonder. "The nuclear threat is all the fault of that blockhead in Washington. He won't listen to me."

Millions can't get over their disgust. They get themselves a designer god, they program it, and then it won't come through when they need it. I'm not surprised. It didn't come with a guarantee.

Rusty Denton is a Collegian columnist.

Letters

A Cage sage

So there I was. At six p.m. last Saturday I was standing in line with a few thousand other people. At first the crowd was fun. My friends and I were excited at the prospect of witnessing what had been the topic of conversation on campus all week. It was the return of UMass basketball to the Curry Hicks Cage.

As the number of would-be spectators increased, I was certain that the doors would soon be opened. This was not the case. The crowd grew larger and I began to wonder if we would get into the game at all.

It seems that other people had the same concern. Many began to push and shove their way towards the entrance. I was in between two tall people and my head was twisted in such an awkward position that I could not breathe properly.

The most aggravating part of the situation was that the people in charge refused to open more than one set of doors. Because of this, people like myself were terrified that they were going to get hurt. I have heard rumors that some did get hurt.

While walking by the Cage today, I noticed several other entrances that could have been used. So next time, why not open all of the doors? PLace a security person at each end of the entrances to check student IDs. This would allow the crowd to enter the game quickly and safely.

UMass has a good basketball team. We students should be able to cheer them without having to worry about being injured.

Ann E. Britton
Southwest

La Cazuela
THE MEXICAN RESTAURANT

Pre-Christmas Electronics Sale
We have everything in electronics at Killer Prices!! We order right from the plant and pass the savings on to you!!
Some best deals now are:
ATZ100N Jenson AM/FM Stereo Cassette Receiver (computer integrated, auto reverse)
OUR PRICE $175.80 Save over $150!!
PA1000 Sharp Portable Typewriter
(2 pg. memory, dot matrix print)
OUR PRICE $175 Save $125.!
PA3250 Sharp Portable Typewriter
(letter quality printer)
OUR PRICE $199.00 Save $200!!
(Both typewriters are loaded w/many other features, call and find out)
Call at 549-7379
to get details from University Electronics Sales Rep.

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...
RENT A CAR WITH CASH!
Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted.
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles
FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00
CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 646 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-2601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1270 State St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0421
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

America Needs A Hero For Every Age.
From the Revolutionary War to the War in Viet Nam, in national crises and natural disasters, the National Guard has always been ready when America called.
Today is no different. The Guard still needs the kind of people who know peace and freedom don't come cheap. Who are willing to stand up and be counted when the chips are down.
If you're one of them – and you've got two days a month and two weeks a year to invest in something important – we've got a job, a pay check, and some pretty attractive benefits waiting for you.
Talk to your local Army Guard recruiter today.
Because "hero" doesn't have to be just a word. It can be the face you see when you look in the mirror.
FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 586-4110
100% FREE TUITION
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY National Guard
To any Massachusetts Funded College or University

All Analog Quartz
Benrus. Gruen. Elgin.
Jules Jurgensen.
Helbros. Clinton. Waltham.
Lucien Piccard.
Hamilton-Buren.
Your Choice
$ $39.95
2 DAYS LEFT

LADIES ANALOG QUARTZ
MESH BRACELETS
FASHION LINK
DIAMOND
SPORTS
CALENDAR
NURSE - SWEEP SECOND
DAY & DATE

GENTS ANALOG QUARTZ SPORTSMAN
WATER RESISTANT DRESS
CALENDAR
DAY & DATE
POCKET
"DIGI-ANA"

Warranteed By The Manufacturer
Some items are for design purposes only and do not necessarily represent items on sale.
Located in Campus Center Open M-W 9-5
UNIVERSITY STORE

ARTS

Joffrey Dancers enjoyed by fairy tale lovers

The Joffrey II Dancers perform "Once Upon a Time" last Saturday.

By JENNIFER ACKERMAN
Collegian Staff

I was looking forward to seeing The Joffrey II Dancers perform "Once Upon a Time," about the life of Hans Christian Andersen on Friday night for a couple of reasons. The first was that I heard that they are a wonderful company of young dancers that were worth seeing, and the second reason? Well...

I guess you could say it started when I was about five years old. A person can be addicted to worse things, but I was addicted to fairy tales. I loved to escape to the fantasy worlds of the Brothers Grimm or Hans Christian Andersen.

So the tribute to Hans Christian Andersen by the Joffrey II Dancers was something closet fairy tale addicts like myself should not have missed.

The curtain opened with Hans Christian Andersen (John Sheaffer) rummaging through a box of props. As he takes out the different articles, his imagination begins to build a story from each prop. His first story is one that many of us are familiar with, The Little Mermaid.

The performance in this tale was fine, especially by the two women principals (Monique Irish playing the Little Mermaid, and Jennifer Habig playing the Fiancee). I felt that the character of the Prince (played by John Sheaffer) was underdeveloped. I didn't feel the emotion from him as much as I felt it from the women dancers. The pathos of the ending was relayed well by the performance of Monique Irish as the Mermaid.

I think this episode was so watchable because of the wonderful scenery and

After the second episode, Hans Christian Andersen (John Sheaffer) returns to reality, and in a touching scene, proffers his imagination, his collection of fairy tales to the Children props. They made me feel that the characters were really being tossed about in the huge waves of some legendary sea.

The second episode, from the tale The Nightingale, was much shorter, yet much more powerful and emotional. Again, the principal women dancers were infinitely more expressive than John Sheaffer, who again played the lead male as the Emperor.

The Mechanical Bird (played by Kathryn Ginden) and Death (played by Geoffrey Rhue) were very good, but the best performance was by Johanna Snyder who played the Nightingale.

Change your tires NOW . . .
$4.99 per pair
Alignment and balancing available
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
"Full Service Tire Store"
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
549-4704

ARE YOU PREGNANT & IN NEED OF HELP?
Birthright Can Help
• FREE PREGNANCY TESTING
- Same Day Results -
Services that are Free, Confidential, Caring & Helpful
549-1906
Amherst Carriage Shops Upper Level

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6889

SPORTSWEAR FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA
WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99
All
N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
50-75% OFF

What are you looking for in a part-time job?
* extra cash for holidays
* freedom to make your own schedule
* no experience required
* training provided
* no sales involved
Now You Can Have It All!
DMC Energy has several seasonal openings for people to install low flow shower heads and other conservation methods in homes and in your area. Reliable transportation and good "people skills" is all that it takes. What more can you ask but the phone number? Call 1-800-332-2754 between 9 am and 4 pm for immediate consideration. EEO M/F

The Mortar Board Thanksgiving Flower Recipients:

Aggarwal, Sheemie
Aggarwal, Sheemie
Antonio, Luzulminda
Applebaum, Ronde
Ashape, Missy
Basudet, Steven
Berstein, Robin
Black, Kim
Blanchard, Lucy
Bonde, Dawn
Bonde, Dawn
Boushell, Neal
Brachfeld, Amy
Bradley, Scott
Branco, Chris
Breslin, Ellen
Broughton, Elizabeth
Brown, Tracy
Butter, Alison
Caplan, Jennnifer
Carr, Karen
Carrol, Patrice
Chambers, Tricia
Cohen, Jennifer
Colley, Joan
Corkey, Valerie
Corkey, V. Valeriee
Condrey, Lynda (3X!)
Courtney, Karen
Cumming, William
Cummings, Sean
Czajowski, Jack
Dailey, Kathy
Danner, Virginia
Davidson, Jody
Dearborn, Laenne
Devillis, Jim
Disalvo, Pam
Doherty, Ellen
Donnelly, Sheila (3X)
Donsky, Mark (4X)
Dury, Natalie
Eocher, Tony B'toni
Fairfield, Kelly
Fearson, Dee
Fellows, Bec-y
Fetser, Nick
Fettig, Bill
Finalver, Amy
Fleming, Tami
Fret, Carol
Friedman, Melinda
Gallagher, Mary
Gaton, Rich
Ginn, Claire
Gasaman, Vivian
Gorczyca, Anne
Gorman, Michelle
Gouveia, Linda
Grady, Emmet
Grant, Lavrie
Gregory, Lisa
Gresham, Kim
Guieca, Linda
Heckel, Michelle
Haley, Dan
Hampton, Bill
Heil, Karen
Hellen, Melissa
Hepworth, Rae
Hines, Lynn
Hrynowski, Edward
Huie, Alicia
Hurley, Kathy
Johnson, Brian T.
Johnson, Caroline
Johnston Stephen
Stephen Johnston,
Johnston, Stephen
Hohnston, Stephen
Johnston, Stephen
Johnston, Stephen
Jorden, John
Kaminski, Katie
King, Pam
Knopf, Kimberly (Bub)
Kokotoff, David
Korangold, Robyn
Kelley, Peter J.
Kim from School St.
Koeowsky, Beth
Kumiega, Brian
Kupcheck, Liz
Lally, David J.
Lamoureux, Kathleen
Latta, Chris
Levine, Robert
Liban, Jay
Litzinger, Jan "laneke"
Long, Lannee
Longo, Lori Ann
Lopater, Robin
Lovett, Rachel
Madog, James W.
Mannig, Kathy
Marcinkicwicz, Heidi
Margil, Jane
Marks, Michele
Martain, Maria
McGrath, Suzanne
McIntosh, Sharon
McKanna, Tim
Mcnhinnee, Cathie
Miller, Beth
Milton, Sean
Mitchell, Chip
Mitchell, Sue
Motley, Karen
Mottole, Paul
Nading, Henry Dania III
Nagy, Tomas
Natale, Tricia
Nawn, Sue
Newman, Mark
Nichols, S.C.
Nirenberg, Lisa
Nina Southwood Hosebugs
Neplarsky, Dayna
O'Brien, Bill
O'Brien, Mary K.
Oslander, Michelle
Pagano, Gail
Patterson, Wendy
Peashuro, Joe
Piper, Susan
Plunkett, Patty
Prince, Scott
Proto, Pam
Pujals, Jorge
Rabinovitz, Robyn
Ramirez-Pegen, Emaloth
Reilly, Dasey
Revilli, Robyn
Ringrose, Ann
Rodrigues, Laurie
Rosenberg, Craig
Russel, Liz
Ryter, Wendy
Sale, Holly
Samaras, Sophia
Sammuels, Bonnie
Savage, Kim
Schiller, Karen
Schreiner, Doreen
Sevenson, Linda
Shapiro, Alan I.
Sina, Joe
Singleton, Lauren
Slusser, Kristen
Smith, Carl
Smith, Mike
Spivak, Loren
Spooner, Sharon
Stansil, Joe
Stefani, Raina
Stephens, Derrick
Stetson, Mark
Stevens, Jeanie
Sullivan, Jeanne
Sweeny, Colleen
Tagaya, Maki
Tero, Tom
Teixeria, Kathleen
Three Townhouse Hosebags
Tummino, John
Tweedy, Ann
Vaughn, Cheryl
Vaz, Christine
Verbeck, Sue
Wagner, Chris
Ward, Tom
Watkins, David
White, Hattie B.
Wiggetmon, Andrea
Willinsky, Jenny
Williams, Lisa
Wilson, Cindy
Wisniewski, Mark
Whitney-Lussier, Faye
Whittemore, Diane
Woodward, Herb
Wong, Susan
Wuillemenot, Lisa
Zabik, Christopher
Zelin, Robyn

Please pick up your flower and message at our table Campus Center Concourse Tues. Nov. 26. Happy Thanksgiving

BLACK AFFAIRS

Puerto Rico important for many reasons

By KIMBERLY A. BURGE
Collegian Staff

The island of Puerto Rico is an important military base to the United States. "Puerto Rico is a military base for the United States. The island was used during the invasion of Grenada and the invasion of the Dominican Republic in 1975 was planned there," said Javier Colon Morera, a representative of the Puerto Rican Institute for Civil Rights.

At a forum held yesterday, Morera elaborated on Puerto Rico's importance to the United States. "Puerto Rico is more tied to the situation in Central America than you might think. It is very important in the strategic military plans of the United States. Intelligence agencies can use Puerto Ricans to go into countries such as Nicaragua and El Salvador to gather information for them and the island could be used for the transportation of military troops," Morera said.

There is speculation within Puerto Rico that the United States have buried nuclear warheads all over the island. "There are no eyewitnesses to prove or disprove that fact. It is a very dangerous situation because even though Puerto Rico has no nuclear bombs, they have the potential to initiate a nuclear attack," he said.

Puerto Rico has 32 billion dollar national debt and the official unemployment rate is 23 percent, though Morera says that figure is not realistic and that the percentage is much higher because many Puerto Ricans have stopped looking for jobs out of disgust and disillusionment.

There is a lot of institutionalized fraud and tax evasion going on in American companies. "The companies are getting the money, but they are not putting it back into the economy," he said.

Morera briefly discussed the violation of Puerto Rican civil rights. "On August 30, 1985, 13 people were arrested and 30 homes were broken into in an attempt to break up the organization which is fighting for the independence of Puerto Rico. It is a way to project an image of force and instill fear in the people."

AIDS is color blind

By Dr. MANNING MARABLE
Special to the Collegian

(Editor's Note: Dr. Manning Marable teaches political sociology at Colgate University.)

"Scapegoating" and political intimidation are usually a "normal" part of American society and politics. In previous instances, the victims have been frequently people of color-Blacks, Hispanics, Asians, Native Americans-who have been hounded from their jobs, or victimized by police surveillance and oppressive tactics. But the latest chapter of political harassment and the hysterical manipulation of public intolerance focuses on people afflicted with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS.

Most of the victims have been homosexuals, intravenous drug users, and recipients of contaminated blood. Most prominent civil rights leaders, black religious figures and politicians have been at best reluctant to discuss AIDS, or to address the broader implications of the disease within the black community. At least one prominent black journalist recently characterized AIDS as purely a "white man's problem."

"There's still belief" among blacks "that AIDS is a white man's disease," observes Dr. Wayne Greaves, chief of the division of infections at Howard University. However, "AIDS is color blind." Recent data reveal that one fourth of all AIDS victims are Afro-Americans.

The greatest danger in the AIDS controversy is the abhorrent correlation being made between suppressing the rights of gays and lesbians and the steps needed to halt the spread of the disease. One Massachusetts legislator last month claimed that a child in his district had contracted AIDS because an AIDS victim "deliberately" donated blood.

Blacks, more than any other Americans, should know that political intolerance and bigotry which masquerades as benign policies in the "public interest" are anathema to democracy. We, too, have sons and daughters who are AIDS victims; and we must take a more assertive stance against every form of political harassment and abridgement of civil liberties aimed against any other minority groups.

RENT A WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

the Hungry U
DRIVERS WANTED
Apply Within
55 University Dr.
549-5713
Must Have Own Car

AUGIES TOBACCO SHOP
"the Tobacco and Magazine Shop of Amherst"
108 North Pleasant St., Amherst
— Western Union Agent —
Complete lines of:
Pipes & Pipe Accessories
Tobacco
imported/domestic for pipe or cigarettes
Cigarettes
imported/domestic (including Indonesian clove)
Full range of domestic & imported cigars
Magazines, Paperbacks & Monarch notes
Newspapers, Mass State Lottery
Candy and sundry items, Mass souvenirs
Now Featuring Gourmet Coffees & Teas
— New England Telephone Agent —
253-7896

CONGRATULATIONS to Stan Alger
Eric Krusell
the newest members of Kappa Kappa Psi
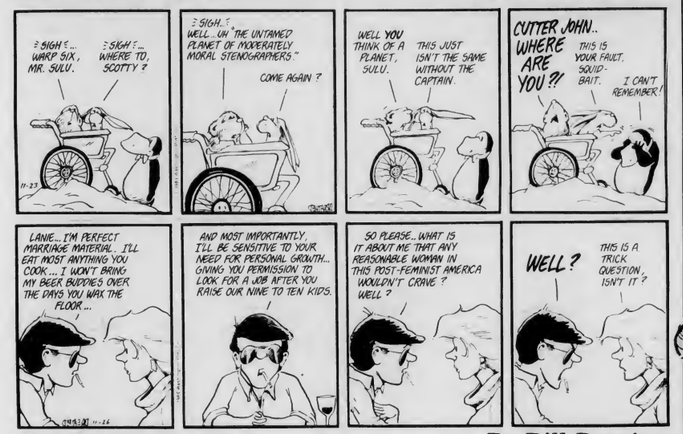
National Honorary Band Fraternity
- from your oldest brother

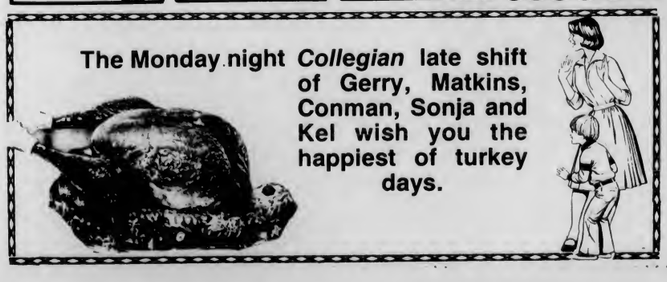
SPORT Style
Join the Club



"Take a Teddy home for Thanksgiving"
photo by Dwayne Autery
Located in the Campus Center
Open 9-5
UNIVERSITY STORE

Doonesbury — Gary Trudeau

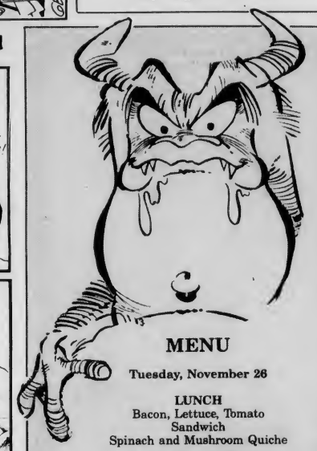
BLOOM COUNTY — by Berke Breathed



Bat Brain — By Bill Dearing

GORDY — By Gorde

The Monday night Collegian late shift of Gerry, Matkins, Conman, Sonja and Kel wish you the happiest of turkey days.



WEATHER

Today
Freezing rain, sleet and possible snow in the morning turning to all rain by the afternoon. Temperatures in the 30s.

Tonight
Occasional rain with highs in the 40s. Great night to study

Tomorrow
Leftover drizzle and cloudy. Highs in the 40s.

MENU

Tuesday, November 26

LUNCH
Bacon, Lettuce, Tomato Sandwich
Spinach and Mushroom Quiche

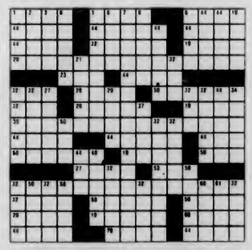
BASICS LUNCH
Cheese, Lettuce and Tomato Sandwich
Spinach and Mushroom Quiche

DINNER
Baked Ham, Fruit Sauce
Baked Ziti
Silver Palate Salad Plate

BASICS DINNER
Chili Cheese Puff
Baked Ziti

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Forms of identification
5 Gourmet's savoring
9 Steve Martin movie (with "The")
13 Arm bone
14 Sealed glass bulb
16 Cousin of etc.
17 Radio signal
18 Suspicious
19 Debussy's "Clair de ——"
20 Behave matter-of-factly
23 Mimic
24 "—— This Moment On"
25 Find fault
26 Normandy town
30 Hot off the press
35 Misjudge
36 Endless time, in poetry
38 Author Wiesel
39 Close up shop
43 Film star Jennings
44 Choreographer Antony
45 Barrel
46 Boxing weight
49 Polish parliament
50 English cathedral city
51 —— Me Tangere
53 Blue
55 Struck a bargain
63 Venezuela copper center
64 Juan's first month
65 Pearl Mosque site
66 Roman god
67 Lazy ——
68 Defeat decisively
69 Reach the maximum
70 Concordes
71 At liberty

DOWN
1 Brass instrument
2 A Waugh
3 Midge
4 Brazilian dance
5 Unnatural singing voice
6 Buddhist mountain
7 Sign in a new store
8 Famous German engraver
9 Coagulate
10 Vanity case
11 File's partner
12 Swiss artist
15 Disinfectant
21 Unexpected outcome
22 Tiny, in Glasgow
25 Mideast desert region
26 Fragrance
27 Jetty
29 Southpaw's trend
31 ——-cent store
32 Lycee student
33 Hemp
34 Easily annoyed
37 Like skinny dippers
40 Farthest: Abbr.
41 City on the Aisne
42 La Douce namesakes
47 Babylonian deity
48 Grandma ——
52 Nobelist Pauling
54 Minimize
55 Humid
56 Dies ——
57 Dickens heroine
58 Lie in the sun
59 Part of QED
60 Stravinsky
61 Loyal
62 Odium

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

P	A	S	S	E		C	R	E	O		O	A	P
A	M	A	I	N		L	A	T	I	N		A	D	E
C	O	M	E		S	T	O	P		A	S	S		S	O	P
E	Y	E	S		O	P	T		P	A	S	S	B	Y
			T	A	P	E		R	E	L	A	T	E	S
E	X	P	A	N	S	E		A	L	E	P	H
E	R	A		S	Y	N	O	D	S		I	E	R	S
L	A	S	S	A		C	H	I	T		A	D	H	O	C
S	Y	S	T		P	A	S	S	E	R		A	V	A
		M	E	S	A	S		M	A	M	S		E	R	A
S	C	U	T	T	L	E			R	Y	E
P	A	S	S	U	P		I	S	I	T		A	M	I	E
L	I	T		P	A	S	S	T	H	E	B	U	C	K
I	R	E		I	T	A	L	Y		M	E	L	E	E
T	O	R		D	E	T	E	R		S	E	E	D	S

11/26/85

Swimmers open season with easy 76-36 victory

UM blows Eagles out of the water

By JOE ROBERTS
Collegian Correspondent

Going into Sunday's meet at Boston College, the University of Massachusetts men's swimming team expected a tough meet. What they did, however, was overcome some injuries and blow out BC, 76-36.

"I'm real pleased. I thought they (BC) would be better but we came out fast and I think they were shell-shocked," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth.

UMass won the first three events, taking the top five out six spots in two of them. John Turner, Fred Marius, Paul McDonough, and Ed Burton teamed to win the 400 medley relay in 3:42.10. Chris Payson won the 1000 freestyle in 10:21.37 followed by Rick Bishop in 10:37 and Marc Waters' 10:42.5. All-American Drew Donovan won the 200 freestyle in an what Yarworth termed an, "easy" 1:44.66. He was followed by Jim Flannery with a 1:50.59. Donovan also won the 100 freestyle in 47.94 later in the meet.

BC showed some life by placing first in the 50 freestyle but UMass placed second, third, and fourth with all swimmers being a thousandth of a second apart. Jim Kuhns, a red shirt freshman, Scott Kessler, and Mike Bolles ,both freshman, all touched in around 23.1. The winning time was 22.99.

UMass came back by placing Turner in first with a 2:02.68 and McDonough in second with a 2:02.70 in the 200 individual medley. "Those were real good times for this time of the year," said Yarworth.

Pat Mullen placed second in both the one-meter and three-meter diving events.

In the 200 butterfly, Burton placed first with a time of 2:02.6 "The two freshman were the best part of the meet. I'm very pleased with them," Yarworth noted. Burton was one of those freshman, Payson being the other, Payson won the 500 Freestyle event in 4:59.74. Flannery placed second in 5:07.83.

Turner won the 200 backstroke in 2:00.78. Marc Surette, who received a late reprieve from disciplinary suspension from Yarworth allowing him to swim, placed second in that event, swimming 2:07.87. "He should be faster," said Yarworth.

The one weakness UMass had was in the breaststroke although, Marius placed second and Chad Stalker third. Yarworth was not overly excited. "Once we get Hover (Mike, out with a broken hand) back we'll be all right. Marius is a taper swimmer which means he gets better as the season goes on, so we should get better."

UMass also won the final event, making it nine out of 13 the Minutemen took. Burton, McDonough, Flannery, and Donavan teamed to win the 400 freestyle relay in 3:17.4.

Overall, Yarworth was very happy. "We still have a ways to go, but I'm psyched because we took it to them. I saw some good things ."

★ the UNH game

continued from page 12

Gerlufsen. . .both the men's and women's game will be on WMUA-FM (91.1). No Loss Department: John Hempel, UM's leading scorer for two years before transfering to St. John's has a less-than-memorable debut with the Redmen at the pre-season Big Apple NIT tournament at Hartford. The first time Hempel touched the ball, he was called for an offensive foul after drilling a shot into the side of the backboard. In SJU's first two games, Hempel played 10 minutes with just two points and four turnovers. He also played his usual matador defense (wave at them as they go by). . .among those that couldn't get into the game on Saturday because of the crowd were the public address announcer, a Springfield station's television crew and various other members of the media. . . the games are being broadcast on Northampton cable TV on a delayed basis and shown on Union Video's screens in the student union. . .Channel 3 in Hartford is also covering the Hartford game at the Cage on December 7. . .George Washington has signed five high school players to letters-of-intent.

DELANO'S

FINE FOOD & SPIRITS

FREE TACO BAR

MON & TUES NIGHT

9 — till it lasts

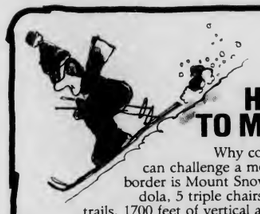
NOVEMBER BEER SPECIAL

Heineken

57 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

TUESDAY
R-RATED HYPNOTIST

World Famous Frank Santos



®Rated Hypnotist Comedian

Radically Different Ridiculously Funny
Richly Entertaining Recklessly Risque

Because of Popular Demand
2 shows 9:00 & 11:00

JUSTIN RYAN'S

Rte. 9, Amherst
corner of University Dr.
256-1059

WHERE HILLS TURN TO MOUNTAINS

Why conquer hills when you can challenge a mountain. Just over the border is Mount Snow with 12 lifts (1 gondola, 5 triple chairs, 6 double chairs), 57 trails, 1700 feet of vertical and 80% snowmaking.

THE SHORTEST DRIVE TO BIG MOUNTAIN SKIING LOCATED IN EASY TO REACH SOUTHERN VERMONT ON VT. 100

LODGING: (802)464-8501
SKI REPORT: (802)464-2151

Enjoy by far the most Thanksgiving skiing in southern Vermont. Top to bottom skiing is open on 2 mountain faces including 2 trails on the North Face and runs up to 1½ miles long on the Main Mountain. 12 trails and 7 lifts for the holidays. A $59 package includes 2 days of skiing and one nights lodging. We've got the snow, let yourself go.

Mount Snow VERMONT

AUDITION NOTICE

Busch Gardens, The Dark Continent, could be the perfect showcase for your talents if you're a singer, dancer or musician — especially country fiddle, steel guitar or accordian — or if your abilities lie in specialty areas such as sound technician or show operator. There's only one way to find out. Plan to join us for:

AUDITIONS and INTERVIEWS
Thursday, December 5, 1985
8:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.
Boston Marriott Long Wharf
296 States Street

Auditions are limited to 5 minutes each and will be given on a first come basis. Dancers should be dressed to dance. Musicians should prepare selections demonstrating their versatility on their principle instrument as well as on any secondary instrument. Sound technicians will receive personal interviews and should bring a typed resume of related experience.

Accompaniment will be provided.

Good starting pay and full and part-time positions are available.

BUSCH GARDENS THE DARK CONTINENT
TAMPA, FLORIDA

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/H/V

Young UMass team points to '86

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

FAIRFAX, Va.--The three-year jinx of the NCAA women's soccer number one seed continued this past weekend as Massachusetts (16-1) fell to eventual champion George Mason, 3-0.

Undefeated Connecticut was knocked off in the semifinals by George Mason in 1983 and undefeated Brown lost in the quarter-finals to UConn in 1984.

UMass had given up only two goal through 16 games before giving up three against the Patriots, the most since Harvard beat the Minutewomen in October, 1983, by a 3-2 overtime score.

It was a disappointing loss to end the season. "We can't dwell on it," freshman goalie Jan Holland said. "It was a classy season. It just didn't end that way."

"This is a team of youth," UMass coach Kalekeni Banda said. "This year and last year we supposed to be rebuilding years. People have been taking (UMass' youth) for granted."

The Minutewomen were ranked first in the nation for the last month of the season after shutting out North Carolina for the first time in UNC's history, 2-0 on Oct. 12.

UMass started five sophomores, four freshmen and two seniors. The first two off the bench were a sophomore and a freshman. It was the youngest starting lineup at the Final Four.

"My goal for the year has already been achieved," Banda said before the tourney. "I wanted to win the New England title and make the playoffs.

"My plan for this team (to seriously contend for the title) was next year."

But when UMass ran off with a 15-0-0 regular season, beating North Carolina (2-0), UConn (1-0) and demolishing other teams in Brown (6-0), Harvard (5-0) and Boston College (3-0 in the playoffs), expectations soared.

A balanced scoring attack, with freshman foward Beth Roundtree (10 goals, four assists, 24 points), sophomore foward Monica Seta (9-6-24), sophomore midfielder Carolyn Micheel (5-13-23), freshman foward Cathy Cassady (7-8-22), sophomore foward Cathy Spence (9-4-22) and sophomore All-American Kristen Bowsher (7-6-20) bolstered the attack.

Sophomore fullback Debbie Belkin (7-5-19) set a school record for most points for a fullback. Belkin, Bowsher (for the second straight year) and Cassady were named to the all-tourney team.

The team scored a school record 68 goals and gave up a school record five. It was the most wins ever and Micheel set a school assist record (13). The team set a record for most wins in a row, 17, dating back to 1984.

Banda had a team concept in 1985. Everyone played offense and everyone played defense. Until UMass lost its third consecutive NCAA semifinal on Saturday, it worked very well.

"We were going to bounce back," Holland said. "I can't wait for next year," Banda said after lone loss. In 1986, UMass will have nine starters back, only senior co-captains Sue Bird and Jamie Watson are leaving.

★ women

continued from page 12

"It's good that we got the first game in because now I think we've settled down," Lewis, a sophomore, said. "It will be good to have a big crowd. The senior's are psyched, hey I'm psyched myself, it'll be my first time in the Cage too."

Aside from the turnovers, Stevens said that against Maine, her team reacted more to the game itself than to the action in the game. Playing in the Cage for the first time in 20 months before an expected large crowd, the Minutewomen will be faced with the challenge of playing before another large audience and odds are, they will be nervous once again.

"We're just glad to get the first game out of the way. Now we're really going to roll. I think we'll win," said Lewis.

BU is coming off its season-opening win, 64-59 over Lafayette College on Saturday, and boast a tall, high scoring lineup.

"BU is always an intense rivalry. They're going to be gunning for us. We beat them twice last year so they will be out for revenge," Stevens said.

Leading the Terriers is junior guard Renee Kurawski, who had 22 points against Lafayette and forward Andrea Ashuck.

UMass beat BU 59-53, in the Warner Classic at Fairfield and 62-60 in Boston last season.

CLASSICAL JAZZ REGGAE BLUES ROCK SOUL FOLK JAZZ ROCK SOUL CLASSICAL

#1 IN THE VALLEY!
DYNAMITE RECORDS
Maxell XLII90 $2.00
TDK SA90 — $2.00
New, Used,
Buy, Sell and Trade
584-1580
THORNES
150 MAIN ST NORTHAMPTON

Pre-registering for courses next semester?
...Consider the University Health Services

Peer Education Program
★ Peer Health Promoters
★ Peer Alcohol Educators

LEARN ABOUT YOURSELF
TEACH YOUR PEERS
GAIN CAREER EXPERIENCE

For more information about these 3 credit courses sponsored by the University Health Services call the Health Education Office at 549-2671 ext 181

TONIGHT - Tuesday Nov. 26 at

CHANGES Dance Club

All Schnapps 99¢
Bar Drinks $1.25

All Customers Arriving Before 10:30 Receive—$1.00

Rt. 9 Amherst 256-8284

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon - Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Imagine. . .

Join Hillel Rabbi Saul Perlmutter for bagel lunch and informal conversation. Tuesday 11/26, 12:20 pm, Suffolk Room, Student Union 301.

Holiday Employment! Make money, protect consumers and the environment with MASSPIRG. Interview Tues 11/26 CC 902 3p & 5p; 256-6434

AUDIO

For sale Technics 35 watt Rec. $40 12 band graphic eq. $70 both $100 call 549-6391 - Brian for info.

AUTO FOR SALE

77 Honda Accord 5 speed must sell to pay bills call Scott 253-9015

1976 Ford Maverick, 60,000 miles, auto, power steering, 4 door, runs fine. BO over $700. 549-1902

1970 Chevy Malibu excellent running condition good body AM FM cassette deck $500 call Linda evenings after 6 549-6313

Volvo '76 great car. Must sell $2400/BO tel 546-5838

1975 Nova. Runs good. As is. $500 or best offer. 546-8096

Audi 1977 100LS 4 dr AT AC SR FM & Tape FWD great winter car in excellent mech shape good radials 20# mpg on regular best $1500 (German car around) 665-8217

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Disc Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals. 549-7144

Do you need bands for your party. Professional bands that didn't just get together yesterday. You name the sound and songs you want. We'll set up the band.

Different varieties from $150 call Steady Sounds 549-0385

Turn the Tables professional party/club D.J. 5 yr experience widest selection cal 24 hr. 586-9691

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline, 420/month, everything included. Avail. immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Amherst Brandywine 2 bdrm apt busline 580/month available 1-1-86 549-1119

Single room available in a house on Main St. in Amherst rent is $153 per mo plus utilities on bus route and close to town and campus lease runs from Jan 1 to Aug 31 call Mike at 256-1233 pref after 5 pm

Lg 1 bdrm apt Squire Vill. avail Jan 665-4669 aft 6

Rooms available for those interested in home cooked meals and easy access to campus. For more info call 545-0627

1 or 2 roommates to share large modern loft-style apartment in Northampton Center AC, sundeck, heat included available Jan 1 call 586-4490.

1 dble rm available Jan 1. Second house off campus. Hardwood floors call 549-4368 Pat or Emmy

One bedroom apartment from Dec 1 $285 a month call Tel 256-1859 evening

FOR SALE

Nordica Ski Boots size 9-10 used twice very cheap! Best offer call Leo 6-6812

Guitar - Yamaha SK200 student electric brand new $200, very negotiable 546-5125

Keyboards! Korg poly-61 $500. Moog Prodigy lead synth $250. Keyboard stand $150 549-1739

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2060

Marketing Interns needed for Hampshire Mall Management Office must be energetic and reliable with excellent communication skills. Apply Office of Internships 545-0725

The Commuter Area Government has one work study position for an office assistant. Interested people should have good organizational skills, typing skills, and 10-15 hrs a week free. Undergrads only should apply to 404 SUB before November 26th. EOE/AA employer.

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

Interession bartending classes covers all aspects gign up starts Monday Nov 25 room 111 credit free registration Tower Library

LISA AND GREGG

You saved my life. . . well my finger, anyway. For this I am eternally grateful. What else can I say . . . You're two in a million! Love, Betty Ann

LOST

Men's UMass Ring: Steven Sobeck inscribed. Lost in Townehouse area. Call 549-5924, for Kelley. REWARD!

Guess jeanjacket at Changes Thurs 11/21 my keys. Dk. red gloves please return reward call mary 546-4350 or 256-8080

Reward - Lost bracelet 14k gold link with latch. Lost near Gorman dormitory in Central. If found call Leon at 546-4774

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

PEOPLE'S MARKET

Where else can you get good tunes, great food, and the best coffee . . . The People's Market of course! Around the corner from the Post Office.

PERSONALS

G - Happy Birthday! Love ya J - G & J BFFE

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3437

Free kittens to good home Jody 586-5425

John McKeown where have you been all my life?! - A Fan

Jeannette, With each day that we spend together my love for you grows and grows and grows and grows. . . Te Amo Cielo

THE PEACE CONCERT Bushnell Memorial Hall, Hartford, Dec. 5, 8:00 pm free by calling (203) 560-1610

 SUE BOLTZ **
Congrats
I knew you could do it!
Love, Beth

Betty Ann - It's too bad about your finger. Come in anyway and brighten up our otherwise boring lives.

Kara, Are you as passionate as you seem? Forget Sushi II yours, Peppermint

K.S. - Happy Birthday Karen! Have a great day! Thought we forgot didn't you? Best Buds Always. Love, Dawn, Amores, Susan Wigwam - I'm glad we became friends. Have a Happy Birthday!

M and S: Happy Thanksgiving to my two favorite turkeys!

Jeanine Hartman
Happy Birthday!
74 days and counting
Love, J.H. (the a.h.)

Hey Jill Hovan - You're 19 today, so don't be such a sweetball. You are the Queen of inversion boots!

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

ROOM WANTED

Female looking for housing or sublet for Jan 1 thru May 86 call Lisa 256-1301

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant, reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6895 evenings

Wanted - person to share furnished house in N. Amherst musician/student, near bus, heat provided, $200.00/month only til May 256-6432 Randy

Brandywine apt. looking for someone to rent my room for Spring semester. Rent is $290 per month. Heat is included in price. Possibility that entire apt will be available. Couples welcome. Call 549-6289

One space available in Brittany Manor, female, $142.50/mo call Bonnie 256-1405

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

Editing. Consultation. Ex professor's specialty: dissertations, professional articles, books. 268-7772

TO SUBLET

Intersession - 1 double bedroom in Riverglade Apts on bus rte 2 miles from campus $100/person + elec big apt! Call Nina or Lynn 256-4258 after 4:00

TRAVEL

London Spring break 86 - Roundtrip airfare from Boston via Pan Am, 8 nights hotel, breakfasts, transfers, subway pass discount & taxes. Only $625 sponsored by HRTA Travel Club. Call Lisa 549-7841

Two airline tickets for sale to Europe -cheap! Full service airline call Jen or Peter 665-4692 or 256-1201

"Take a Break on the French Side!" Skibreak's January trip to Tignes/Val d'Isere in the French Alps includes RT airfare (Swissair), transfers, accommodations, skipass (116 lifts), slalom races, cocktails for $740?? nights in resort. Skibreak: (203) 354-6059, Ted 546-4733

TYPING SERVICE

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED TO RENT

To take over lease January 1 for a 2 or 3 bedroom apartment in N. Amherst or Sunderland! Call 546-4909 or 545-5568

Single room desired Intersession only Amherst area preferred please call Marybeth at 546-5944 after 6:30 PM

Take over lease in Jan of 4 person house or apt call 546-4474 or 256-7199

To take over lease next fall. 2 or 3 bedroom. Rolling Green, Cliffside. Summer sublet negotiable. Call Julie or Julie at 6-6909 or 6914 reward!!!!

SPORTS

UM looks for second straight

Minutemen want to open up offense against UNH at Cage

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts basketball coach Ron Gerlufsen is hoping the real Minutemen take the court tonight against the University of New Hampshire at the Cage.

A team that edged Division 2 Merrimack, 59-56 before a packed house on Saturday night, isn't the one Gerlufsen has spent three years forming.

Against the Warriors, UMass tooks its time on offense instead of running the fast break, and laid back on defense, content to watch Merrimack shoot from the outside, rather than pressure the ball as they did so successfully at times last season.

"I really don't know what gone into us," said Gerlufsen. "We're not that kind of team at all. We weren't doing the type of things we usually do."

Against a solid New Hampshire team (7:30 p.m. after the women's game and before another expected full house), UMass will have to pick up the tempo of its game in order to win. New Hampshire, unlike Merrimack, can't be simply out-talented by UMass, they have to be beaten.

"UNH is a tough, physical team that rebounds well. They seem to get up to play us," said Gerlufsen. "This is a big game for them and for us, we want to start off on the right track.

Gerlufsen said he expects to start the same lineup as he did against Merrimack. The backcourt will see junior captain Carl Smith at point guard and sophomore Lorenzo Sutton (a game-high 15 points against Merrimack) at shooting guard.

The frontcourt will see 6-10 senior Tom Emerson at center, 6-4 freshman David Brown at small forward and 6-6 freshman Duane Chase a power forward.

Matching up for the Wildcats will be 6-1 point guard Andy Johnston, 6-3 off-guard Todd Black, 6-9 center Dirk Koopman, 6-7 small forward Greg Steele and 6-6 power forward Ted diGrande.

The Wildcats, opening their season for the sixth year under Gerry Friel, lost their leading returning scorer James Best (17.2 points-per-game) to academic troubles in the pre-season. They are 27-57 against UMass over the years. UMass won 55-51 in Durham last season, but dropped the previous four straight. The Wildcats were 7-22 last season.

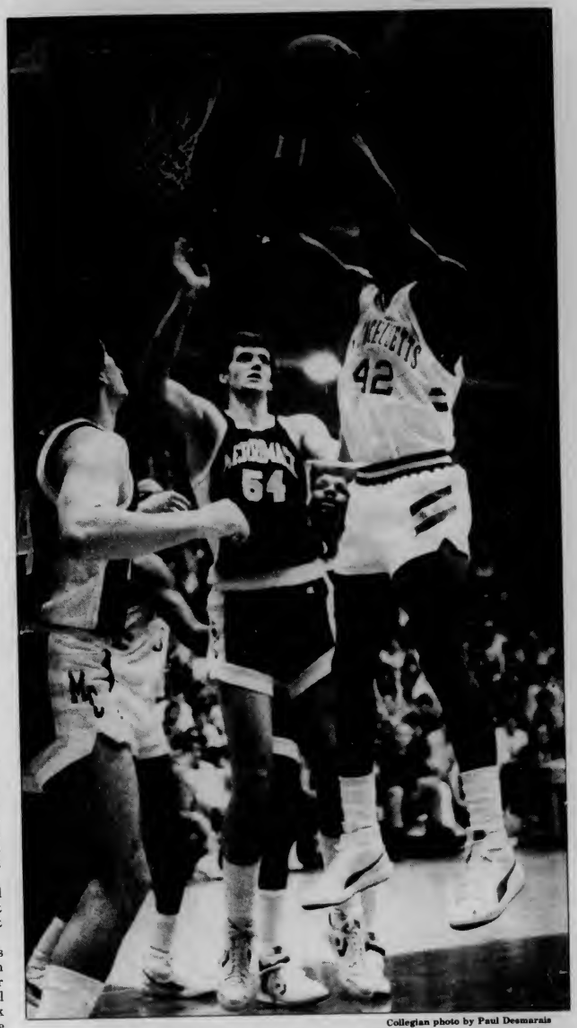
Koopman is a high-post center, a solid rebounder that can hit the short jumper. diGrande is a physical forward who makes up for his offensive shortcomings with solid defense and rebounding. Johnston, Steele and Black are perimeter shooters that rarely venture into the lane, leaving the 'Cats with little inside game to speak of outside of an occasional Koopman foray into the paint.

"I think we'll do well if we push the ball upcourt and pressure them on defense, what I've been advocating all along," said Gerlufsen. "I told the team on Sunday that they looked tentative and that we have to overcome the jitters. It's easier to keep a team to increase its pace rather then get a team to slow down. I'm happy we didn't make a lot of mental mistakes, but we still need to pick up the pace."

Of the seven new players eligible to see action on Saturday, six played and with few exceptions impressed their coach. Brown played like a veteran at forward, scoring 11 points and getting four rebounds. Reserve center Sean Mosby played 30 minutes and had a game-high nine rebounds to go along with eight points. He also exhibited tough defense.

Ben Jones, a junior college transfer, saw only limited action but scored a big hoop late in the game and had four rebounds. Mike Mundy was sharp at point guard, spelling Smith with eight quality minutes. Joe Fennell didn't score in nine minutes, but showed some talent. Chase, the freshman with maybe the most expectations, had the worse case of the freshman jitters, missing a layup among other miscues, but Gerlufsen is looking for a strong effort from him tonight.

Emerson saw only nine minutes of action after starting against Merrimack, including just two second half minutes. Against a banger like Koopman however, Emerson should be of more use and play some effective minutes.



"Tommy has the potential to give us a solid effort in the middle," said Gerlufsen. "Sean was just playing so well, it was hard to take him out."

"But that's what I like, having the flexibility of two good big men," continued the coach. "We have a lot of good frontcourt players. Cartain ones are going to see a lot of time in certain situations, others are going to have to wait to play. It's a competitive situation in practice and when a player's out on the floor, he knows he has to play well or be taken out, it wasn't always like that before here."

"I like this team for a lot of reasons," said Gerlufsen. "We can do a lot of things out there, hopefully we'll show our fans that tonight."

HOOPS SCOOPS: Black was Smith's roomate when the two were at Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia the year after high school. . .UNH's Steele as well as Emerson and Sutton are also Fork Union products. . .Johnston worked at the UMass basketball camp this summer for

continued on page 10

Collegian photo by Paul Desmarais

Freshman center Sean Mosby (42) came off the bench to score eight points and get nine rebounds against Merrimack. UMass plays New Hampshire at the Cage tonight.

Doors open at 4 for Cage hoop doubleheader

The doors to the Curry Hicks Cage will open this afternoon at 4 p.m. for the men's and women's basketball doubleheader.

The UMass women face Boston University at 5 p.m. in their home opener. The UMass men, 1-0, face a tough New Hampshire team at 7:30 p.m.

Once 3,000 students enter the Cage, it will be closed and those not in will be asked to leave. Tickets for reserve seats only are on sale at the UMass ticket office on the second floor of Boyden Building and at the Cage ticket office until 4 p.m.

To make sure you see the games, be at the women's game early, or to be positive, be there at 4 p.m. UMass basketball fever is catching, catch it tonight.

Women open at home

Minutewomen to tangle Terriers

By JOHN A. NOLAN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team missed out on the re-opening of the Curry Hicks Cage, Saturday, as it spent its opening day committing turnovers, giving up inside baskets and losing to the University of Maine, 76-66, in Orono.

An anti-climatic debut to be sure. UMass coach Barbara Stevens said that despite seeing some good play, the game was a dissapointment. She felt that her team was as prepared as well as it could be and that before travelling north, she was very confident in her team's chances of dumping the Black Bears.

But Stevens said the team was outplayed by an excellent team and that there is no time to dwell on a loss, especially one so early in the season. Now is the time to realize the team's strengths and weaknesses, now is the time to make adjustments, now is the time to return home to the Cage after 30 games on the road.

"Now is the time to establish our home court advantage just as Maine did," Stevens said. "The place was really hopping at Maine, it was hard to settle down in front of a foreign crowd. We've got to intimidate our opponents and feel the security of the home court. We've missed it."

Like the men's team, there will be several Minutewomen who will be experiencing the Cage, or the new Cage, for the first time when they tangle with Boston University, tonight at 5 p.m. in their home opener. Nerves will once again be a factor in the early going. Sophomore forward Tara Lewis thinks that opening season jitters have been eased and that though there may be some nerves, the Minutewomen will play well and come together as a team, something Stevens said UMass didn't do when the pressure was on.

continued on page 11

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:

Today:

Men's Basketball: New Hampshire, Curry Hicks Cage, 7:30 p.m.

Women's Basketball: Boston University, Curry Hicks Cage, 5 p.m. (Doors open at 4 p.m. for both games and will be closed for good after 3,000 students enter).

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 59 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Monday, December 2, 1985

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

EASY COME, EASY GO—Shoppers traipse the Hampshire Mall in Hadley yesterday, as they spend their money during the first weekend of holiday shopping. Thanksgiving Weekend is traditionally the busiest time of the year for stores nationwide.

Sophomores off campus a possibility

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

Next year's freshmen may have the option of moving off campus after their first year, if a proposal currently on the drawing board becomes policy.

The proposal, a two-part plan, would give sophomores a choice of whether to live in dormitories or off campus, and would require any dorm resident to purchase a meal plan.

"The motivation here is one based on choice," Dennis Madson, vice chancellor for student affairs, said last week. "It is a matter of students being told not what they have to do, but what they can do. We would rather have students in the residence halls who choose to be there."

Madson said data from colleges and universities nationwide and "educational philosophy" show freshmen should be required to live in the residence halls and UMass supports that belief.

According to Madson, there are two reasons for administrators to oppose the plan. One is the possibility that Food Services would be hurt by the decrease in revenue and the other is the probability of sophomores putting an even tighter squeeze on off-campus vacancies.

That worries Joanne Levenson, director of the Off Campus Housing Office.

"We can't turn a one percent vacancy rate into a five percent vacancy rate," Levenson said. "My office is more than prepared to counsel students who would want to live off campus, but the proposal would only serve to put more pressure on the town."

Other administrators agree.

"The off-campus situation is awfully tight," said Gerald Quarles, director of Housing Services. "The initial projections are that we might lose 1,000 students or more, but the final numbers are always different."

Quarles said he has "a feeling that we won't see a major shift in students moving from the residence halls to the off-campus market."

"What we are talking about here is everyone (in the dormitories) on a meal plan. This might not be acceptable. We are not into antagonizing students, but we have not gauged students' feelings about the issue of the meal plan."
—Gerald Quarles, housing assignment coordinator

Madson said he foresees only a one or two percentage point difference between on- and off-campus populations after the policy takes effect.

Seven years ago, when the administration allowed students the option of moving off-campus after their sophomore year, a minimal number of student took advantage, Madson said.

"I feel that (the new policy) will not necessarily have a significant impact on the number of spaces available in residence halls," said Joseph Zannini, director of Housing Administration.

"The residence halls are financially attractive, and we have a high satisfaction rate with students living in the residence halls," Zannini said.

"There are spaces available in the outside community," he said. "But most of them are some distance from campus and most students prefer to live closer to campus."

"We definitely won't have any empty beds," Zannini said.

Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Services, the division of the Office of Administration and Finance, which is in charge of Food Services for the University, is now working on a feasibility study to determine how the new proposal could affect the number of students subscribing to the meal plan.

Last week, Ganguli said he is reviewing data from both Housing and Food Services and it is too soon to know what the result of the study will be.

"My gut feeling is that it (the elimination of the requirement) will impact the board plan tremendously," Ganguli said. "I don't foresee lots of sophomores leaving campus. There is nowhere for them to go."

"What we are talking about here is everyone (in the dormitories) on a meal plan," Quarles said. "This might not be acceptable. We are not into antagonizing students, but we have not gauged student's feelings about the issue of the meal plan."

Town to open co-op house

Shelter to provide counseling

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Advocates of a 12-room "co-operative" home for single mothers expect to open the rooms in the old parsonage of Amherst's First Congregational Church by February.

The project—designed to alleviate the problems faced by single mothers with low income—will provide a refuge for up to six mothers and eight pre-school children. Candidates for the home are expected to be mostly young, high-school dropouts lacking the skills necessary to obtain sufficient income for themselves and their children.

"In this day of $500 a month rent, when you're getting $328 a month to live on, it's a frustrating situation," said Nancy Webb, a young parents counselor at Children's Aid and Family Services.

Webb is one of the principal supporters of the project, which has also received the sanction of the Amherst Clergy Association and the Council of Churches in Amherst. The home in Amherst will be the first in the area established only for young, single mothers, Webb said.

Supporters of the proposed home are waiting for final, written approval by the Amherst Zoning Board of Appeals, which has tentatively approved the group's request. When approval is granted, the group may be required to spend up to $12,000 to remove lead paint from some of the room to comply with state regulations, Webb said.

"We hope to hear form the Board of Appeals soon," she said, "we'll take any conditions and go form there."

According to the proposal submitted to the board last month, the shelter would coordinate programs to allow the mothers to become more self sufficient when they leave the shelter.

Some if the proposed programs include child care classes, instruction for attainment of high school equivalency diplomas and workshops on how to deal with bureaucracies.

"The effort is to help them (program participants) get on their feet," Webb said. "(It's) not just a shelter for runaways."

Webb said the home will not admit "substance abusers" who have drug or alcohol problems, but will aim to serve "a more mature clientele."

Boarders will be limited to a maximum stay of 18-24 months, zoning board member Julia Blake said.

During their stay at the home, mothers will be expected to pay $175-225 a month for rent, and contribute to food expenses under a cooperative system, Webb said.

"It's not a charity," she said, "we hope it's specially designed as a helping effort."

$60,000 available through loan

By ROB COHEN
Collegian Correspondent

A new loan program has been developed and is available to the families of students or to those students who are paying for their own education.

The Bank of Boston in cooperation with guaranteeing organizations, The Educational Resources Institute, and the Massachusetts Higher Education Assistance Corporation, have developed the loan.

The new loan program is issued without appraisal of family or independent income and will allot as much as $60,000 over a four-year program of higher education. The loan is designed to supplement other loans or to assist applicants who are not eligible for other loans.

Application for the "Alliance" loan which offers from $3,000 to $15,000 per school year, involves assessment of the applicant's "credit worthiness," or information about what that applicant owes to other organizations and information about borrowing conduct in the past.

The loan is granted at an interest rate of 11.5 percent. This is a combination of the Bank of Boston's base rate of 9.5 percent plus 2 percent. Interest is paid through periodic installments during the period when the borrower is in school. Complete repayment of the principal begins 45 days after graduation or separation from the accredited school or college.

According to Arthur Jackson, director of financial aid at UMass, the Alliance loan is designed to operate as a supplement to other loans such as the Parents' or "Plus" loan, or the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL). It is additional money available to assist financial needs that are not quite met by other forms of financial aid, he said.

Jackson mentioned the importance of staying aware of fiscal responsibilities when accumulating loans.

"Students have to look on educational debt as to how it will affect their lifestyles after graduation," said Jackson. "(They) should become indebted as little as possible so as not to jeopardize other types of consumer loans when they enter the work force."

continued on page 3

INSIDE:

Strike in Hartford.....2
Faculty gains Fulbrights.....3
Women's basketball wins.....12

"The effort is to help them get on their feet. (It's) not just a shelter for runaways."
—Nancy Webb, counselor at Children's Aid and Family Services, about a home for single mothers expected to open in Amherst by February.

WORLD/NATIONAL

AP Laserphoto

SPACE WORK—Space Shuttle Atlantis space walker Sherwood Spring works at the end of a robot arm yesterday, as he tries to attach a work platform to the robot.

Officer's death a mystery

BILLERICA, Mass. (AP)—A 21-year-old Carlisle police officer was found shot to death with the gun still in his hand in what police have called an accidental shooting.

But others, including the brother of Keith Gearin, believe the young policeman may have taken his own life Thanksgiving night.

Gearin, a 1982 graduate of Billerica Memorial High School, was scheduled to graduate near the top of his class at Somerville Police Academy in about two weeks.

Meanwhile, the Carlisle Police Department and that town's Board of Selectmen had planned to give him a commendation for helping arrest a man in conection with a murder in September, less than three months after he was hired by the force.

"It's an awful shock to all of us. How can things get so bad at age 21?" asked Billerica police Officer Thomas Hickey.

Gearin attended the Billerica High School football game Thanksgiving morning, then had turkey dinner at the home of his sister. Neither friends nor family members believed anything was wrong, the Boston Globe reported.

But a few hours later, at 7 p.m., Gearin's girlfriend, who was speaking with him over the telephone, heard a gunshot and, police said, the young man cried out, "Help me, I've just shot myself."

Machinists call strike

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Machinist union members called their first strike in 25 years against Pratt & Whitney Aircraft yesterday after defeating a three-year contract offer from the giant jet engine manufacturer.

Members of the International Association of Machinists from locals at three plants voted to begin their walkout at 12:01 a.m. today—23 days before Christmas—while workers from a fourth local narrowly missed the two-thirds vote required for a strike.

The hourly production and maintenance employees from plants in Southington, Middletown and North Haven voted by a 69 percent margin—4,659 to 2,097—for the strike after they refused in an earlier balott to accept terms of the company's final contract offer put forth on Friday.

However the workers from Local 1746 at the East Hartford plant failed on a 1,795 to 1,309 vote to gain the majority needed to call a walkout against the maker of commercial jet engines as well as engines that power the military's F15 and F-16 fighter planes.

George Almeida, a union representative from Washingto, D.C., said Local 1746 may be permitted to vote again in the next several days because some of its members were not admitted to the auditorium in the Hartford Civic Center before the doors closed at 1 p.m.

"We closed the door at 1 o'clock and several hundred from the East Hartford went to the North Haven door and were denied admittance," Almeida said. "That's just one of the rules of the union."

Almeida, a grand lodge representative who helped with negotiations for a contract, said union headquarters in Washington will be required for a second vote to be held for Local 1746. A decision can be expected in three to five days, he said.

Union officials said they did not have figures immediately on how many of their members would be on strike at the plants in North Haven, Middletown and Southington. Also unavailable were voting totals on rejecting the company's offer.

All four of the Pratt and Whitney locals comprise District 91 of the IAM. More than 14,300 hourly Pratt and Whitney workers are in the bargaining unit and some 10,200 are union members.

"I'm pleased with the results," said Doug Campbell, a member of the Local 700 at the Middletown plant. "We'll go out for as long as it takes. I'm prepared financially and mentally for a strike. The things we want in a contract are more retirement, cost-of-living adjustment, life insurance and job security. We'll stay out until we get them."

The current contract was set to expire at midnight yesterday. Negotiations reached an impasse and broke off Friday.

Today's Staff:

Night Editor Andrew Wolff
Copy Editor Kelly Sieger
Layout Technician Leslie Goldstein
Photo Technician Neil Beckerman
Production Supervisor BethAnne Moskov
Production: Nancy Rivers Mark Parker, Dave Boardman, Andy Diskes

MASS. APPROVED INSPECTION STATION

Gas Saving Tune-up

4 Cyl $34.95
6 Cyl $39.95
8 Cyl $44.95

Lube, Oil & Filter

$17.99

Includes up to 5 quarts of 10-30 oil and safety check.

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
Full Service Tire Store
78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA
Across from Watrous & Store
549-4704

UNWANTED HAIR?
Have it removed the Electronic Way!
Call NEW REFLECTIONS
586-8371
No Needles, No Pain, No Hair

James H. McManus eating place
• OPEN 6 A.M.-3 A.M. SUN.-THURS.
• OPEN 24 HOURS FRI. & SAT.
CAMPUS PLAZA
(NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP)
Rte. 9 • Hadley/Amherst
256-6899

Spring Break '86 in Ft. Lauderdale
HOLIDAY INN BEACH
$259.00 *

AUDITION NOTICE

Busch Gardens, The Dark Continent, could be the perfect showcase for your talents if you're a singer, dancer or musician — especially country fiddle, steel guitar or accordian — or if your abilities lie in specialty areas such as sound technician or show operator. There's only one way to find out. Plan to join us for:

AUDITIONS and INTERVIEWS
Thursday, December 5, 1985
8:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.
Boston Marriott Long Wharf
296 States Street

Auditions are limited to 5 minutes each and will be given on a first come basis. Dancers should be dressed to dance. Musicians should prepare selections demonstrating their versatility on their principle instrument as well as on any secondary instrument. Sound technicians will receive personal interviews and should bring a typed resume of related experience.

Accompaniment will be provided.

Good starting pay and full and part-time positions are available.

BUSCH GARDENS
THE DARK CONTINENT
TAMPA FLORIDA

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/H/V

HAYRIDE

PARTY ON OUR HAYWAGON
DAY OR NIGHT, BONFIRE
AND PICNIC AREA PROVIDED

For Information and Reservations CALL 247-9098

WEST HATFIELD STABLES
RTE. 5, West Hatfield, Ma
4 miles north of Northampton

UMass Ski Club Bush Bash
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
Jan. 19 - 24

YOU NEED A VACATION
SIGN-UP NOW
UMass Ski Club
430 Student Union
For more info
call 545-3437
Final payments due Dec. 15th

UMass faculty receive honors

The director of the Environmental Institute at the University of Massachusetts, Joseph Larson, has been named to the Wetlands Advisory Committee of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, headquartered in Gland, Switzerland.

The committee, composed of scientists from several nations, works to conserve wetlands that have international importance for flood control, water storage, fish and wildlife habitat and agriculture.

A UMass professor since 1969, Larson has specialized in evaluating the functions and values of wetlands. He is currently executive chairman for the National Wetlands Technical Council and is coordinating a series of scientific workshops on wetlands functions across the United States.

Larson received his bachelor's and master's degrees from UMass.

In another award, Roger Porter, a polymer science and engineering professor at the University of Massachusetts, has been named the 1985 Bingham Medalist of the Society of Rheology. The award is presented annually to an individual for outstanding contributions to rheology, the study of the flow of materials.

Porter developed one of the earliest experimental programs in the country on the flow properties of liquid crystals. His current research focuses on liquid crystals in polymer systems.

Earlier this year Porter was named to the Chrysler Corporation's Technology Advisory Council.

Associate Vice-Chancellor for academic affairs, Fern Johnson, recently returned from a conference on "Sexism, Language and Education" in West Berlin.

Johnson, a communications professor, conducted seminars on "Gender, Culture and Communications," during two days of the conference.

She has been a member of the faculty since 1974.

Collegian photo by Neil Beckerman

GLOWING HEAT—Students pour bronze, reaching temperatures of 2100 F during a casting class last Tuesday in the Conservation Building near Orchard Hill.

UM profs cited with Fulbrights for research

Seven members of the faculty and staff at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst have received Fulbright awards for their teaching and post-doctoral research abroad.

The Fulbright program, administered by the United States Information Agency, was established 38 years ago to "enable the government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries."

The following is a description of the recipients and their research projects.

Alfred S. Alschuler, professor in the human services and applied behavioral sciences division of the School of Education, will conduct research in Norway on "hearing voices" and "inner directives" as a contributor to successful behavior patterns of well-known or famous individuals. He plans to relate the work to his course on "trans-personal development" and study the implications for education or treatment of the mentally ill.

Larry G. Benedict, dean of academic support services and associate vice chancellor for student affairs, will do comparative research on enrollment at selected universities in the United Kingdom. The universities include those at Sussex, Bath, Lancaster, Surrey, Aston, and London.

Two professors in the department of landscape architecture and regional planning will be working in Portugal.

Julius Fabos will work for the Ministry of Environment in Lisbon. He will lecture and conduct research on computer-aided land-use planning and will work on the establishment of a computerized data bank for Portugal.

John R. Mullin will study at the University of Lisbon and research the role of Marquis Carvalhoy Mello Pobal in the re-design of Lisbon following the earthquake of 1755.

Bernard Rubinstein, professor of botany, is conducting research in Israel on cell membrane activity in plants.

Richard B. Saltman, associate professor of public health, will be working for the National Public Health Institute in Helsinki, Finland. He will study the relationship between Finland's primary care sector and hospital sector in order to determine the relationship between physicians' attitudes and budgets.

Jack S. Wolf, professor of marketing in the School of Management, will be a senior Fulbright lecturer at the University of Maribor in Yugoslavia and will work on marketing problems in some of the country's worker-managed businesses. He will also be assisting the American Embassy in its project to expand exports of the Yugoslavian government.

Program established for UMass dyslexics

By KARA MULLEN
Collegian Correspondent

For the more than 5 percent of University of Massachusetts students who have dyslexia, the Dyslexic Student Organization is available for group support and referral.

According to Judy Udes, the coordinator of the program, dyslexia may be caused by a structural difference in the brain. The right hemisphere is stronger than the left.

Dyslexia impedes the ability to read, spell, write and speak, Udes said. Problems may include not knowing left from right, not writing what is said, writing backward, confusing letters with ones that are similar, an inability to follow directions, reversal of digits, lack of coordination and difficulty with spelling and syntax.

The dyslexic student encounters many difficulties and has to work a great deal to overcome his or her learning disability, Udes said.

"If they've (dyslexic students) gotten to college, they're the cream of the crop," she said. "The dyslexic student has to work nine times as much as the regular student."

The student may become frustrated, angry or full of anxiety.

"A lot of people come here really upset," said Shawn Kilcommons, a staff member who is dyslexic. "They feel dumb or like failures because they've worked so hard and then are told they've been careless."

School is especially difficult for a dyslexic when he or she has a professor who doesn't understand, Udes said.

"The professors who are aware of what dyslexia is are sympathetic and supportive," she said. "Those who don't know or who are given an incorrect perception of what dyslexia is, feel the student is making excuses along the lines of 'the dragon ate my paper.'"

The organization, located in Bartlett Hall, has gained 50 new members this semester. Through the Communications Skills Center, it provides classes for dyslexic students.

Udes said the University has dropped three of the courses this semester. She said the organization is also facing understaffing problems as it tries to meet the needs of its increasing membership.

The organization will present a colloquim on dyslexia at 8 p.m. Thursday in Campus Center, room 165.

★ loan continued from page 1

At a time when federal regulations have become stricter about issuing many loans, the Alliance can be a great relief, Jackson said. A large majority of middle income families seeking to push their young through college are often exempt from other loans or forms of aid, he said.

In addition to its unique quality of easy accessibility, the loan has many other advantages which make it an attractive alternative.

Jackson said that the loan's interest rate is 6 or 7 percent lower than that of a personal loan and is also tax deductible. The loan's principle is paid back over as many as 15 years after graduation or separation.

Jackson said that students interested in applying for the loan should contact the Bank of Boston area branch office or the University's financial aid office this week when some applications will be available.

Collegian photo Derek Roberts

BAD BREATH—Tillson farm horse takes a breath of fresh air yesterday, but the animal will need a raincoat tomorrow, as morning rain is expected, giving way to wind and low temperatures.

UTOPIA SPAS
Student Special
1 HOUR TUB for ½ HOUR PRICE
an incredible savings
every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday
Call for reservations 253-SPAS
175 University Drive, Amherst MA
(next to Stadium Liquors in the Price Chopper Mall)

let us do your wash-dry-fold and hand pressing
10-5 P.M. MON-SAT
SELF SERVICE
7 DAYS-7A.M.-10 P.M.
549-1665
SPEEDWASH
Quality Laundry
11 Pray St.
Amherst, MA

Yesterday & Today Records
Grateful Dead Psychedelic
Grand Opening
Punk Jazz
Blues
Top CASH PAID for USED:
Records Tapes
Stereos Guitars
Videos CD's
An Alternative Record Store
98 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst 253-9209

Polly wants some Nachos!
It's MEXICAN FIESTA MONTH at Carbur's! Featuring BBQ Ribs, Chili, Nachos, Mexican Pizza, Tostadas, Chicken Chimichanga & Burrito Pie!
Sombreros...$1.25
Margueritas...$1.25
Santo Pablito Muchacha...$1.25
CARBUR'S
RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
At the Elmwood, Route 9, Hadley, MA (413) 586-1978

Congratulations
Tara & Paul
We love you both;
Chi Omega

UMASS SKI CLUB
Thanks everyone who helped make the 15th Annual Ski Snatch an unbelieveable success!
Get psyched for a wild ski season.
Think snow -
It's all downhill from here!!!

23 Shopping Days till Christmas and only
9 days till the
Collegian
Special Christmas Edition

DELANO'S
Fine Food & Spirits
Free Taco Bar 9 til it lasts
December Beer Special
KRONENBOURG
57 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

HIGH STYLE at Low Costs
Even college students can afford to look good at Marjon
also: Tanning and waxing
start at cuts..... $8.00
perm..... 38.00
foiling..... 45.00
shampoo/cut/dry.... 14.00
Marjon Hair Design
Mountain Farms Mall
Rt 9
Hadley, Ma
586-4551

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ED/OP

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Founded in 1870

Whose budget is it?

Randy Donant, director of Student Activities and Dennis Madson, vice chancellor for student affairs have attempted to make the biggest coup in this college's history.

Due to financial problems and deficits past and present in the Student Activities Trust Fund, Donant and Madson state that something must be done regarding the SGA budget. We couldn't agree more. The problem is with who assumes control over the SATF—students or the administration.

It is not the Director's Activity Trust Fund; rather it is the Student Activity Trust Fund.

According to Donant's own job description, the director of student activities' duty is to participate in developing, administering, and maintaining the goals, policies, procedures, and programs of the units of the student activites division.

The job description also states that it is the director's duty to facilitate and negotiate policies with student governance organizations—not despite them.

Do Donant and Madson's actions constitute maintenence or negotiation? The clear answer is no. Instead, their desire to seize the reins of the budget process (which cannot occur without the authorization of the ultimate authority, The University Board of Trustees) directly contradicts a policy of maintenence or negotiation.

According to trustee document T85-012, which describes the SATF budget policy and summary for fiscal year ending June 30, 1986, the Student Activity Fee, which funds the SATF, "...is allocated and disbursed by the chief legislative body of the SGA - the Student Senate. Allocations are made through a lengthy democratic process...The administration of the SAF and the SATF will be consistent with Trustee established formats, procedures, and policies."

Furthermore, the minutes of the May 7, 1980 trustee meeting approve Madson's own recommendations concerning the SATF budgeting process—recommendations which exclude any involvement by the director of student activities.

There is much more at stake than the SGA budget though. Under the letter issued two weeks ago by Donant and Madson, they will assume partial control over the SATF for FY '87—immediately taking that power away from students.

Simply put, Donant is out of his jurisdiction by implementing the new policies. It is up to Madson to follow trustee guidelines of established procedure and, at the very least, negotiate any new proposals with students.

We call on Donant and Madson to abandon this seizure of power from the students, and work with them in a more equitable and established manner.

Unsigned policy editorials reflect the majority opinion of the Collegian Board of Editors.

Name of game is justice?

Deborah Kutenplon

Last semester I spent a morning in city court watching the proceedings. I urge everyone to spend a morning becoming educated in this way. You will never again whole-heartedly believe in our legal system.

Don't bother bringing a book or a newspaper; you will not be permitted to read. Or to whisper. You must stand when the judge rises, and you must obey the court bailiffs in everything. In fact, ironically, you give over a lot of your freedom when you enter a court of law.

If you are a defendant, you must follow every court ritual, including drssing up to show "respect" or you will be punished. The fact that your willingness or unwillingness to play the game is no reflection on your guilt or innocence is a fact often overlooked by judges and juries alike.

Do you think I exaggerate? Ask a lawyer what juries will conclude about a defendant's character simply from seeing him wear patched jeans to trial. The day I watched, a defendant accidentally raised her left hand to swear by, instead of her right. The bailiffs and her own lawyer pounced on her immediately, as if she were trying to pull something over on them—as if they honestly believed that the right hand and the right hand only had some tangible link to truth.

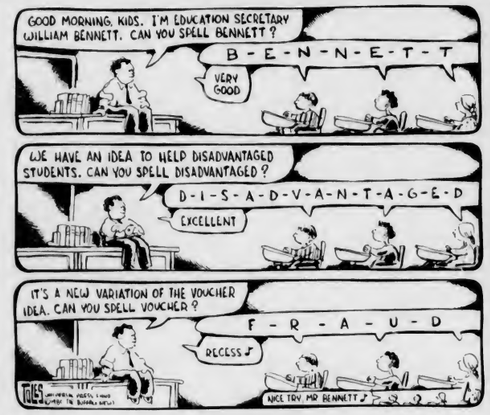
In another case, the bail of three teenagers accused of murder was increased by $100,000 each when a Boston judge decided they showed no remorse for their crime (the crime for which they had not yet been found guilty). He cited, as evidence of their remorselessness, that one defendant was chewing gum in court.

Court rituals are designed to reinforce the power of the court and the powerlessness of defendants. Every ritual is designed to show that the judge's time, life, values, and judgment are not only more important but more valid than the defendants'. Judges decide when others may speak and what they may say. They can rule "irrelevant" anything they choose. In such an atmosphere, can truth be found? Only if it fits into the court's preconceived understanding of reality.

Woe to the defendant whose reality is different! The judge assumes, for instance, that defendants have free will to make choices. Woe to the defendant whose background and life conditions offer a desperate dearth of choices; she will often be judged by even harsher standards that the white-collar criminal who presumably does have reasonable options. Woe, too, to the innocent defendant for whom the court process is so foreign that his truth cannot be heard there.

Drug addicts, prostitutes, alcoholics, the very poor, particularly people of color—we who are priviledged judge them harshly, socially and legally. Our harshness comes from our own unanswered guilt, our own unacknowledged suspicion that perhaps we share the blame for having so limited their choces that they can only lose, one way or another.

The law is a game, and one of the basic rules is that everyone must pretend that the rules are absolutely fair and equal. As I sat in court, I thought of R.D. Laing's statement:



"They are playing a game. They are playing at not playing a game. If I show them I see they are, I shall break the rules and they will punish me. I must play the game, of not seeing that I play the game."

A game continues only as long as the players allow. It's time to put the game away, to seek instead a system in which many truths can be heard, not just the truths of those controlling the game.

Deborah Kutenplon is a Collegian columnist.

Executive Board—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Peter Soderberg, Production Manager
Elizabeth Young, Business Manager
Sherry Sharfman, Business Manager

Board of Editors—Fall 1985
Dode B. Levenson, Editor in Chief
Anne McCrory, Managing Editor
Tom Middleton, News Editor
Larry Bouchie, Editorial Editor
Renee Bacher, Arts Editor
Peter Abraham, Sports Editor
Derek Roberts, Photo Editor
Bethanne Moskos, Women's Issue Editor
Kimberly Burge, Black Affairs Editor

Letters

Donant seeks to strip our rights

Students, raise your voices in unison! The Director of Student Activities, (from the office that is supposed to help students) Randy Donant, is attempting to usurp the ability of the Undergraduate Student Senate to represent the diversifications that this campus offers. He is proposing to do this by illegally taking control of the SATF (Student Activites Trust Fund).

Donant has claimed the authority to determine the budget for RSO's that employ full-time staff. Additionally, he has stated that there will be no "special" or dedicated reserves set aside from fiscal year '87 fee revenues, presumably until he deems appropriate. For all you students who look forward to and enjoy the spring concerts and events, Donant wants to prevent the senate from setting aside money every year especially for the spring events. Could this mean an end to the concerts?

Donant also wants to take away the rights of the student body to determine, via referendum, whether or not they favor a fee increase. This is a right that was specifically granted to students in the Student Government Constituion that was agreed to by the administration as well as the trustees.

Could this proposal be setting the stage for future acquisitions? Does the administration have their minds set on the complete takeover of the SATF, denying the rights of students to govern themselves, and the rights of RSO's to seek allocations from the SGA Budgets Committee or the Finance Committee? Will there even be a Budgets Committee or Finance Committee in the upcoming years? Will the wishes of students to have concerts be acknowledged?

If Donant gets his way, the voices and wishes of the student body will be put by the wayside. And we thought it was over with the incorporation of a dry campus!!

Don't take this lying down. This is how administrative takeover bids have happened at other universities, don't let it happen here.

Katherine Strickland
Hal Zawacki
SGA Finance Co-Chairs

Fault the college, not workers

Amherst College owns a 75 percent share of and operates the Lord Jeffery Inn as a gesture of hospitality to its guests and as a retreat for members of its community. The inn has always incurred expenses greater than its revenues. It is open for public use to help subsidize the cost of its operation.

This year the college decided that the inn's workers should help subsidize the cost of the inn's operation. For our new contract, citing the inn's losses, Kent Faerber, President of the Inn Corporation and Director of Development of Amherst College, demanded drastic cuts in wastes and benefits for new employes (a two-tier system), frozen wages for current employees, changed work rules, and altered scheduling practices. For him to justify his demands by bemoaning the economic plight of the inn, as if the inn were an independant enterprise, is grossly misleading. The inn is an Amherst College facility operating within constraints imposed by the college.

If the college wants the inn to be financialy successful, the inn must be run by business people, not bureaucrats. In a valley experiencing prosperity and growth, the Lord Jeffery Inn is in a position to awaken from its sleepy past and enjoy a vigorous future. But this would require expensive and aggressive marketing and development, a course which Amherst College has never chosen to pursue.

Amherst College must decide. If Amherst College intends to maintain the Lord Jeffery Inn as a semi-private country club it must be willing to accept its cost. If Amherst College wants it to be a viable business it must be willing to see beyond its shortsighted frugality and invest the money necessary to promote and develop the inn.

Faerber has chosen to defer this decision. Instead, he seeks to cut losses at the workers' expense. This is the source of our dispute. Faerber's intransigence has jeopardized the future of the inn and the reputation of the college.

So too, are our livelihoods jeopardized. We ask people, inside and outside the Amherst College community, to contact the President of Amherst College, Peter Pouncey, and encourage him to contribute to a rapid and equitable resolution of this dispute.

Raymond Saul, member
The Lord Jeffery Inn Workers' Editorial Comittee

BOARD
OF GOVERNORS

Attention Students
and Student Coops.
The Space Committee of the Board of Governors will be accepting requests for student coop space
in the CC/SU Complex.
Please pick up criteria sheets for proposals in room 817
Campus Center

GOLD
SALE

60% OFF
on 14k Gold Chains and Earrings
14k Gold Bracelet
Regular $42.00 NOW $16.00
14k Gold 18" Chain
Regular $80.00 NOW $29.00
14k Gold Earrings
Regular $28.00 NOW $12.00
Many other Fabulous
Savings Available
FOR ONE WEEK ONLY
Mon. Dec. 2 thru Sat. Dec 7

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!

Located in the Campus Center
Open
M-F 9-5
Sat 10-3
UNIVERSITY STORE

U-MASS & Coca-Cola

YOU COULD BE AN INSTANT WINNER!
WIN
A 'Coke Is It' Knit Cap,

Make a Selection at any of your Coke Vendors and you could become an Instant Winner!

Coke is it!

Redeem your winning coupon at -
University Store
Campus Center

Test yourself.

Which early pregnancy test is as easy to read as red, no–white, yes?

Which is a simple one-step test?

Which has a dramatic color change to make the results unmistakable?

Which is 98% accurate, as accurate as many hospital and lab tests?

Which is portable for convenience and privacy?

You're right.
You get a Plus!

ARTS

Glitzy Godzilla is unimpressive

Godzilla 1985
Starring Raymond Burr

By THOMAS HARRINGTON
Collegian Staff

Godzilla-1985 would have you believe that everybody's big bad lizard has come back, bigger and badder than ever. Well, the production values are certainly bigger, but Godzilla is not much better as a result.

The most interesting thing about this movie is that it proves that Japan also has a baby boom generation, many of whom have grown up loving the radioactive beast, and who now have children of their own. The producers hope to lure in these new families by making a big budget picture that returns the series to its roots.

Now, a generation after Godzilla's first appearence, he's on the move again, restoring his energy by "feeding" on nuclear power plants and submarines. At first, he just hangs around the pacific, but the scientists and politicians have a funny feeling he's headed straight for (gasp) Tokyo!

The part of Godzilla is now played by a complicated 15-foot tall robot, but it still looks like a man in a rubber suit. The most noticeable difference is that the new Godzilla moves a lot more slowly and ponderously than the old one. Oh, yes there are some improvements—his lips quiver, his mouth drools—but what good is that when his eyes still look like ping pong balls?

For the most part, the film's attempts to make the lizard's attack on Tokyo more exciting and realistic succeeds only in making it look like one of those overblown disaster movies of the seventies. Time is wasted depicting a young couple escape a half-destroyed building, and there's some lousy comedy relief supplied by a tramp.

Of course, it wouldn't be a Godzilla movie if we didn't have to edit in some American footage of Raymond Burr walking around, spouting platitudes about the monster. Too bad he doesn't actually take part in the film though, because then they could defeat Godzilla by having the rotund Raymond belly butt him back into the Pacific.

A couple of fun scenes, like Godzilla's battle with a silly military hovercraft, can't avoid giving the impression that this sequel has inherited little of the original series' charm. In fact, Godzilla 1985 would make a fine double bill with the 1976 version of "King Kong". They're both mediocre action films that are pale shadows of the originals they try to outdo.

23 Shopping Days till Christmas and only
9 days till the
Collegian
Special Christmas
Edition

STUDENTS
INTERSESSION
$5.00 PER HOUR
Work available
all over New England
in your home area during Christmas Break.
On campus information sessions to be held on
Dec. 4, 1985 at CC Room 904
Every hour, on the hour, at 9 AM, 10 AM, etc. up to and including 2 PM
RGIS Inventory Specialists, EOE

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CONCERT HALL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

JAZZ ALL STARS
Ray Brown, bass
Milt Jackson, vibes
Hank Jones, piano
Max Roach, drums
Stanley Turrentine, sax
Saturday, December 7, 8 pm.
Tickets $13.11

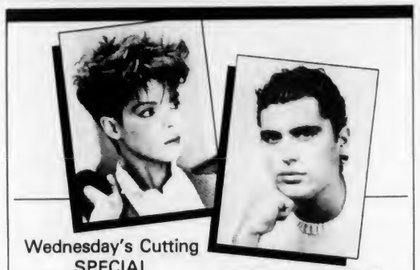
CLEVELAND ORCHESTRA
Christoph Von Dohnanyi,
Music Director

MOZART Symphony No 25
HARTMANN Symphony No 2
DVORAK Symphony No 7
Monday, December 9, 8 pm.
Tickets $20.18

• Gift Certificates Available •
Five College Students Half-Price Tickets available at Fine Arts Center Box Office, Springfield Civic Center and DATATIX Outlets
Call (413)545-2511 or 1-800-243-4842

National Student Exchange Program
Information Meetings
Students interested in participating in the National Student Exchange Program for Fall 1986 are encouraged to attend an information session.

For students applying to restricted schools, this is your LAST CHANCE to pick up an initial application form.



Restricted schools are: Univ. of Hawaii/Manoa & Hilo; Univ. of So. Florida; Cal State Chico, Northridge & Sonoma; and College of the Virgin Islands.

Tuesday, Dec. 3* CC 805 3-4 pm
Wednesday, Dec. 4* CC 901 3-4 pm
Tuesday, Dec. 9 CC 803 3-4 pm
Wednesday, Dec. 10 CC 805 3-4 pm
 Last days to pick up initial applications for restricted schools.

AMHERST CINEMA
Monday and Tuesday
Kiss Me Deadly 7:00
Spell Bound 9:00
Double Feature $3.00
30 AMITY ST. AMHERST 253-5426

Now's
the time
to call...
North Amherst
Motors
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs &
Reconditioning

Wednesday's Cutting SPECIAL
Women. $12
reg. $18
Men. $10
reg. $16
LORD'S & LADY'S HAIR SALONS SM
The Hampshire Mall • 586-7913

MONEY MOTIVATED?

If You Are Enthusiastic, Have A Strong Clear Speaking Voice and Have the Confidence to Prove What it Takes, Keep Reading This

We are a Major Industrial Tool Company Expanding a new office in Amherst, Mass. Telemarketing is the future successful road to sales in the 1980's, and we are growing rapidly. 3 shifts allow you to work around your schedule, and you can earn up to $10.00 per hour while training. There are still 25 positions available. Salary + Commissions + Bonuses. For an appointment, Call 7 AM-7 PM, Dave 413-256-4101

Spread some Holiday Cheer send a friend a Collegian Holiday Classified

Get your ad in the Special Holiday Edition on Dec. 11.
Come to the Campus Center Concourse from Dec. 2 to Dec. 6

Daily

— Collegian —

WELCOME BACK

Hope you had an enjoyable Thanksgiving and in case you over indulged, and need to get back into shape, we have some TIPS for you.

TAPED INFORMATION
PHONE SERVICE
545-1540

Call and ask for tapes by number
2453 Gym Schedule
2459 Pool Schedule
2471 Racquetball/Squash Court Schedule
2476 Weight Room Schedule
2685 Body Shop

For a complete listing of information tapes, come by our office today.

IDB-TIPS WHITMORE
IDB 545-1555
TIPS 545-1540
A Service of the Dean of Students Office

Pearl Street

Miller High Life Rock Series

99 THE 103 HOT SPOT FM WMUA FM 91.1

RUN DMC

Direct from the movie 'KRUSH GROOVE'
Tlx in advance available at UMass Fine Arts Center Box Office at Stop & Shop Datatix and in Northampton at Main St. Rec's.

Must be of legal drinking age.

10 PEARL STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA. 413 584-7771

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BLOOM COUNTY by Berke Breathed

The Freaker Patrol Dowe/O'Brien

Bat Brain By Bill Dearing

GORDY By Gorde

WEATHER

Today: Windy with rain in morning. Turning cold with partial clearing in the afternoon, with chance of snow showers. High 45 to 55 in the morning.
Tonight: Windy and cold. Low ranging from 10 to 20.
Tomorrow: Very cold and windy, mostly sunny. Highs in the 20s.

Attention Staff

There will be a homophobia workshop on Wednesday, Dec. 4 at 7 p.m. in Rm. 905 CC.

Correspondents: This counts towards staff status!

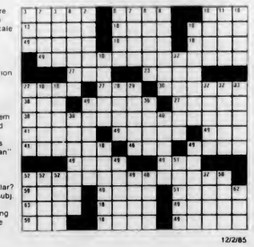
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ACROSS
1 Tubfuls
6 ——and-bull story
10 A crowd, in Roma
13 Doff one's lid
14 Glory
15 Signal to stop
16 Governor Cuomo
17 Surmounting
18 Humble abodes
19 Haitian
22 Snuggery
23 Rabbit's tail
24 Western pact, for short
27 Soho gumshoe
30 Mountain laurel
34 Coronado's gold
35 Another name for New Guinea
37 Lunchtimes
38 Taco
41 "Once upon ——"
42 Islands north of Tonga
43 Display contrition
44 Durable attire
46 Sun speech
47 Haymow locale
48 Account
50 Murray or Marsh
52 Obis
59 Stage direction
60 Star Prefix
61 Carries off
63 Flooring
64 Zilch
65 Chronicle item
66 Right-angled bend
67 Former ones
68 "I Am Woman" singer

DOWN
1 Roads scholar?
2 Art school subj.
3 Before way
4 Salon offering
5 Feed the fire
6 One of the Addams's
7 Swearing-in recital
8 Bumpkins
9 Ruble fraction
10 Hoodlum
11 "Goodbye, Columbus" author
12 One of the Oranges
15 ——grass (medicinal weed)
20 Within: Prefix
21 Angola's capital
24 Bedouin, for one
25 Alpine crest
26 Poison
28 One, in Bonn
29 Haciendas
31 One of the Shearers
32 Bring upon oneself
33 Whey-faced
35 Hockey player, in a sense
36 Designate
39 Be a copycat
40 Bellini work
45 Cheap, vulgar stuff
47 Act
49 Antique car
51 Garden bloomer
52 Ballet feat
53 Leaf-stem angle
54 Pain in the neck
55 Peut—— (perhaps)
56 Rialto pealings
57 —— out (got by)
58 Airmail
62 Barnyard sight

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	A	I	S			D	E	B	I		F	A	B	L	E
A	I	L		C	O	M	E	R		O	I	L	E	R
I	D	O		H	O	U	S	E	A	R	R	E	S	T
G	A	E	S	A	I	N		L	I	N	S	M	A	N
		A	D	J				S	O	A	K
	E	G	G		A	G	A	S		D	C	H	E	R
A	L	L		M	A	R	I			S	H	O	P	E
H	E	A	R	T	B	R	E	A	K	H	O	U	S	E
A	N	S	A	E		D	A	R	N			S	O	D
B	A	S	I	N		A	S	S	T		G	E	M
		H	E	E	D			G	M	I
W	H	O		M	E	T	A		K	I	E	N	N	E	L
H	O	U	S	E	M	A	S	T	E	R		A	D	D
O	R	S	O	N		L	I	A	R	S		I	N	S
A	M	E	N	T		L	A	P	S			F	A	T

12/2/85

12/2/85

ATTENTION STUDENTS

You can participate in the Molson Golden College Report, a national survey of over 1,500 students at 15 colleges across the country. The survey contains 37 questions and is designed to determine students' dreams, opinions, ideas, and goals.

If you would like to participate, there will be a Collegian staff member administering the survey from 2 to 4 p.m. today only in the Hatch. This is the second annual survey and copies of survey results will be published when they have been tallied. Stay tuned!

ATTENTION: ALL Collegian Staff and Associates: The following positions are open for the Spring Semester: Managing Editor, News Editor, Black Affairs Editor, Women's Issues Editor, Photo Editor and Arts Editor. You MUST be a Collegian staff member to apply for these jobs. These positions PAY $. For applications, see Anne McCrory. Deadline is THIS Wednesday! There is also a position open for recruitment manager.
ATTN: ALL ASSOCIATES: You must re-apply for your positions for the Spring semester.

ARTS

ARTS LINES

Lots of interesting things to do this week, many of them free.

At 8 p.m. tomorrow Violist Maureen Gallagher will appear with the Fine Arts Trio in a faculty recital in Bezanson Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Center. Faculty members of the trio include Gallagher, Michael Sussman on clarinet, and Nadine Shank on piano. The concert will include works by Mozart, Enesco, Hindemith and Bruch. Admission is free.

The University Dancers will appear at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Friday in the FAC concert hall. The concert is a prelude to the University Dancers 15th Anniversary January Tour. Previously the company has travelled throughout New England. The show promises the accompanyment of some upbeat jazz pieces by Charlie Parker, Count Basie and Oscar Peterson (performed by the UMass Jazz Ensemble and the Chapel Jazz Ensemble). Tickets are available through the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511.

Scenes from six operas will come to life on the stage of Bezanson Recital Hall when the University Opera Workshop presents its first concert of the season at 3 p.m., Saturday. The program will be sung in English and will include scenes from The Marriage of Figaro, Die Fledermaus, The Barber of Seville and The Magic Flute. Admission is free.

And for the visually inclined, Lost Niagara, a series of oil paintings by William Rathbun dealing with the consequences of physical and social change in our environment, will be on display in the Jones Library this month. A reception will be held for the artist at 2:30 p.m., Saturday in the Burnett Gallery of the library. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Violist Maureen Gallagher

American Travel Services presents

SPRING BREAK "86"

Ft Lauderdale
Hotel from $139.00
Air: New York $209. Rd Trip
Boston $228. Rd Trip
Holiday Inn Oceanside $209.

Nassau/Paradise Island
Hotel & Air from $329.
Pilot House Hotel $379.

All prices include Taxes and Gratuities
Don't be left out, sign up now!
Limited space available
For more information: call Rob 549-5303

Outside proposal forms are now available in the Distinguished Visitors Office in 415 Student Union.
Proposals discussed on Wed. Dec. 11 7 PM in CC 803 distinguished visitors program

SPORTSWEAR FACTORY OUTLET
Next to Super Stop & Shop
Route 9 Hadley, MA

WOOL SWEATERS
80% Rag Wool
20% Orlon
Value up to $40.
$11.99 each
2 for $19.99

All
N.F.L. Football
MLBB Baseball
50-75% OFF

The Christmas Collection at J • Rich
Leather + Cashmere = Love

Our Calfskin Mouton bomber with removeable standup collar is a sure way to say I love you this holiday season. It's chocolate brown and it's irresistable...like him. Underneath that is our all wool icelandic knit sweater. Turbo leather driving gloves in black or brown and cashmere scarf complete the picture. Perfect.
Make this Christmas special for him... especially from you.
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
22 Masonic St. • Northampton • 586-6336
Just around the corner from Bart's
Mon.-Sat. 10-6, Thurs. 'till 9, Sun. 12-5

SUPERIOR PIZZA
Simply Superior Pizza
FAST, FREE DELIVERY
17 Montague Rd.
North Amherst
549-0626
With any Large or Small Pizza, get second item
FREE
Expires Dec. 21, 1985

D.S.O.
The Dyslexic Student Organization
Room 69 Bartlett Hall
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Telephone 545-0018
(Registered Student Organization)
Credit Free COLLOQUIM
Presenters:
Dr. Shirley M. De Shields and Judith Udes Herrell
SUBJECT:
Learning Differences:
Dyslexia and the college student
DATE: Thursday, December 5, 1985
TIME: 8:00 p.m.
PLACE: Room 165 Campus Center

Get Radical! Tune In To ED/OP!

RENT-A-WRECK
New & Used Cars
Trucks & Vans Also Available
North Amherst
Rent-A-Wreck
Rt. 63 No. Amherst
549-2880

The Whately Inn
Quality Food Prepared To Order
Chestnut Plain Rd. Whately
1 mile 3044
Featuring Steve Kloc's Famous Broiled LIVE LOBSTER
Also Serving Louisiana Cajun Entrees
Also Steaks, Prime Rib, Seafood
DIRECTIONS: take 116 north to South Deerfield, south on route 5-10 1½ miles. Right on Christian Lane ½ mile from center of town.
Open: Mon-Sat 5-10 pm Sun 1-9

Come see our wide selection of fine Christmas Cards and Decorations!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 1 p.m.

SPORT Style
"Teddy" Sweatshirts
11.95
12.95

Located in the Campus Center
Open M-F 9-5
Sat 10-3
UNIVERSITY STORE

DOVE
Secretarial Services
Fast, Accurate Typing of
• Resumes
• Term Papers
• Dissertations
79 South Pleasant St.
Amherst, Mass 01002
256-1335
253-7480

Monday Night FOOTBALL at the TIME OUT

CHICAGO vs MIAMI
37 N. Pleasant
Proper ID Required

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Mon Thurs; 8:45 - 2:30 Fri • Deadline is 2 days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • Phone number FREE

ACTIVITIES

Jewish Caucus Meeting Tuesday December 3rd at 2:30-4:00 room 917 all welcome to attend

Create. . .

AUDIO

For sale Technics 35 watt Rec. $40 12 band graphic eq. $70 both $100 call 549-6391 - Brian for info.

AUTO FOR SALE

Audi 4977 100LS 4 dr AT AC SR FM & Tape FWD great winter car in excellent mech shape good radials 20* mpg on regular best $1500 German car around 665-8217

1973 Dodge Dart 350.00 1-527-8802

'77 MGB blue 68k BO good condition current inspection 665-4695

Is it true you can buy jeeps for $44 through the U.S. Government? Get the facts today! call 1-312-742-1142 ext 5931-A

ENTERTAINMENT

Rack-A-Diec Entertainment Agency for the best party this semester. DJ's, large screen video, rentals 549-7144

Do you need bands for your party. Professional bands that didn't just get together yesterday. You name the sound and songs you want. We'll set up the band. Different varieties from $150 call Steady Sounds 549-0085

Turn the Tables professional party/club D.J. 5 yr experience widest selection call 24 hr. 586-9691

FOR RENT

Sunderland, 1 bdrm apt. on busline 420/month, everything included. Avail immediately! 665-3440, leave message

Amherst Brandywine 2 bdrm apt busline 580/month available 1-1-86 549-1119

Lg 1 bdrm apt Squire Vill. avail Jan 665-4669 aft 6

Next to UMass. Share apartment with woman and son. $200 Call 549-0024

Single room available all inclusive rent! Available to female or male Jan 1 call Sheryl 256-1645

University Women Rooms available for Spring semester home cooked meals & close to campus call for more information 545-0627

FOR SALE

Guitar - Yamaha SE200 student electric brand new $200. very negotiable 546-5125

Ford LTD 75 runs well $550 or BO call 253-9998 evenings

Nikon Lens: Nikkor 135 MM F.3.5. A great Christmas gift. $75 John 256-8311

Stereo System: Onkyo TA-2033 cassette deck with dolby-C and Yamaha CR-450 receiver. Both in perfect condition. A great Christmas gift! $250 Call John 256-8311

New full-length women's winter coat 50 or BO and short winter jacket 40 or BO call Julie 546-4832

HAPPY 20th BIRTHDAY CATHY!!

Hope you have a wonderful day. Thanks for being there this semester. I'll really miss you next semester! Love Kym

HELP WANTED

Merchandiser 20 hours per week $4.41/hr call between 8-5 need car 584-2060

OVERSEAS JOBS Summer. yr. round. Europe, S. Amer., Australia, Asia. All fields, $900-2000 mo. Sightseeing. Free info. Write IJC, PO Bx 52-MA1 Corona Del Mar, CA 92625

WINTER VACATION JOBS
$176-$228/wk.

Help organize citizens to clean up Massachusetts' 1000 worst toxic waste dumpsites. Join the Holiday Season staff of MASSPIRG, the state's leading public interest group and work for passage of the Emergency Cleanup Bill in the state legislature. Rapid advancement opportunities. Will train. Walk-in interviews on campus: Mon 3 pm & 5 pm CC 902; Tues 3 pm & 5 pm, CC 801. Or call Rachel 256-6434

HOUSEMATE NEEDED FOR SPRING

Rm-mate: (upper classman or grad-stnt) N. Amherst 4 bdrm house, own rm. inclds king-sz bed, walk-in closet, prt. bath $250/ per mth Jan-may 1986. Call Joe or leave msg. 549-7597

INSTRUCTION

Private Guitar Lessons experienced and patient teacher. rock/pop/folk/blues improv., reading, theory, composition. Your home or my studio. Doug 549-4786

Intersession Bartending Courses 4 sections available sign up in Credit Free Workshops Room 111 Tower Library

LOST

Men's UMass Ring: Steven Sobeck inscribed. Lost in Townehouse area. Call 549-5924, for Kelley. REWARD!

Reward - Lost bracelet 14k gold link with latch. Lost near Gorman dormitory in Central. if found call Leon at 546-4774

Missing - Dark brown wool overcoat at "Femmes" concert. I'm cold. Please call Lisle 545-2870 days.

Lost a Nikon automatic camera outside Crabtree in Northeast reward no questions asked contact at 6-5198 or 6-9378

MOVER

'Round Town Movers fast reliable cheap call Michael anytime 323-6780

PERSONALS

Ski Sugarbush! Hotel $149 call Ski Club now 545-3457

THE PEACE CONCERT Bushnell Memorial Hall, Hartford, Dec. 5, 8:00 pm free by calling (203) 560-1610

Mike Reynolos I want my gloves back K S. 008 Pierpont 5160

Baaah Humbug!

Lamp #3 -Commit any bed crimes lately? Let's go do some crimes! Have a happy day! I love you! Lump #1

Happy Birthday Johnny - Love and respect, Race

Happy B-day Spaz - 4th floor VMN

Mary Jane Since I saved 40-70% on your bracelet and necklace, I would like to buy you a beautiful piece of diamond jewelry. I can get a necklace, earrings or even a ring - any preference? Meet me Thursday at Golden Opportunity 13 N Pleasant St at Lodestone Love, Bruno

Ski Sale Workers Att. all those who worked 10 hrs or more at sale - pick up invitations to party at Office - 450 Student Union

MEK-20? You sneak! Let's do white wine, Julie's again, no fluff, hot chocolate, snuggle in Arabic, foetus? Je t'aime, BMB

Chowderheads Master I could go for a tall glass of you with no lime. You're the object of my desire. R + DC

"Yah Yah She's The One" All I ever want is the best for my baby. Be strong. Ellen is strong. T & T

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Cases, papers, dissertations, theses, on-campus, dependable, outstanding quality, low rates, 584-7924

ROOM WANTED

Female looking for housing or sublet for Jan 1 thru May 86 call Lisa 256-1301

ROOMMATE WANTED

Apt to share pleasant reasonable ideally located in Amherst Ctr 774-2740

Female roommate to share 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt Spring semester call 256-6895 evenings

Female grad, senior or working for own room in furnished house. Close to bus route. 150/mo + util call 586-7815

Female roommate wanted Main St Amherst beginning January for Spring 253-3934

Huge double room, attached bath 300 * 7 minutes from campus; quiet clean. Call Mark 665-2529

Female roommate needed for townhouse apt call 549-7554

SERVICES

COINS 123/121 tutoring 5.00 per hr. former 123/121 grader Alex 256-1239

Escort Service available 8 pm - 2:30 am everyday any where on campus. Play it safe call 5-2123 for an escort ANYTIME

Editing, Consultation. Ex professor's specialty: dissertations, professional articles, books: 268 7772

Proofreading and Editing essays to theses. Rates vary 259-1276

TO SUBLET

2 bdrm apt busline avail Dec 25 price negro 253-2831

3 rooms available Jan 1 Swan Village $215/mo utils incl on bus line call 256-8225

Reward! Take our 1 bed apt. avail. for Spring semester. $365 includes utils. call 665-4563 evenings

Nice bedroom in two bedroom apt in house. Other roommate is quiet, non-smoking Graduate student. Available January/ August rent negotiable 668-8194

Two bedroom apt in Northwood call 256-0028

TYPING SERVICE

QUALITY TYPING. Long or short projects. Will correct grammar, spelling, & punctuation. Meticulous proofreading. New IBM typewriter. 549-0367

TYPING & WORD PROCESSING

Next Day Service. Type-Rite 253-5111

WANTED

One bedroom apartment needed for intersession. Preferably within walking distance of campus. Call 546-7034

Elementary Statistics text for Biometry 2111 call Keith 253-2132

WANTED TO RENT

Take over lease in Jan of 4 person house or apt call 546-6474 or 546-7199

Responsible male senior seeks room in quiet, clean apt or house Spring semester. Call 546-5145 anytime

One or two bedroom apartment for Spring semester call 546-4963

SPORTS

UMass rips Vermont, 85-64

Zullo's 19 leads Minutewomen in easy romp over Catamounts

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

For some reason, there are still those that don't believe women's basketball can be exciting.

Following the clinic of up-tempo hoop the University of Massachusetts put on Sunday afternoon at the Curry Hicks Cage, even a hardcore cynic would have to come around.

The Minutewomen, paced by 19 points and eight assists from freshman point guard Christel Zullo, raced past the University of Vermont, 85-64 to go to 2-1 on the season.

UMass, employing a ball-hawking press on defense that led to a fast-breaking offense, scored its most points in over a year. The Minutewomen were 35-of-67 from the field, 15-of-22 from the line and outrebounded the outclassed Catamounts, 45-32.

For third-year head coach Barbara Stevens, it was an indication of what her team is capable of.

"We did so many good things out there, it our best game in w a while," said the coach. "I don't expect Christel to lead us in scoring every game, but she is a great player with a lot of talent so this wasn't unexpected from her."

Zullo, a 5-4 product of Somerset, NJ who entered the game with three points in two games, ran the UMass offense to perfection in her 29 minutes of play. She shot nine-of-12 from the floor, made five steals and dished out several pretty passes to her teamates as the Minutewomen took advantage of their quickness.

"I like the up-tempo game a lot," said Zullo. "I just want to play my best and help us to win. It felt good to contribute."

UMass also got a strong effort from senior Juanita Matthews. The 5-10 forward scored 16 points and hauled in a game-high 13 rebounds while stealing five passes. Playing at the top of the UMass defense, Matthews created problems for the smaller Vermont guards, blocking the passing lanes and causing numerous turnovers.

"Juanita is known as an offensive player, but she is tough on defense too," said Stevens. "I like the way to played on defense, we were very aggressive and went after the ball. We also spread it around on offense and a lot of players saw minutes. I'd have to call this a good team effort."

UMass came out smoking, taking a 10-2 lead before Vermont called time out with 15:49 to go. Stevens, going with her starting five of Zullo, Matthews, Sue Burtoft, Jerrie Bernier and Barbara Hebel for the first eight minutes, saw her team hold Vermont without a field goal until the 13:25 mark.

UMass led 44-31 at the half, led by Zullo's 11 points and Matthews' eight.

The second half saw UMass keep up the pressure and with solid bench play, blow the game open quickly. Vermont closed the lead to six, 49-43, with 13:21 left, but a UM time out led to a six point run and UMass soon led 55-43 as Tara Lewis hit a layup after a great drive up the lane.

Lewis scored 12 points off the bench and played solid baseline defense, helping to shut off Vermont's 1-2 punch of Joann McKay (21 points) and Debbie Lewis (14 points) when it counted.

The Minutewomen increased their lead to 65-51 and it was officially garbage time with 8:51 left. A Zullo jumper from the top of the key (she was perfect on four shots in the second half) made it 67-51 and the lead became 20 when freshman Beth Wilbor (eight points in a good effort) hit a short jumper with 5:04 left.

For the game, UMass made 16 steals and caused 19 Vermont turnovers. The Catamounts, 1-2, shot 42 percent from the floor (Laura Thibodeau was the worst offender with a one-for-10 day) and 64 percent from the line. UMass was 52 percent from the field and 68 percent from the stripe.

Stevens emptied her bench with all 12 Minutewomen playing and 11 scoring. The Minutewomen next play on Tuesday, hosting Dartmouth at 7:30 in the Cage.

MINUTEWOMEN MUTTERINGS: Zullo, despite her size, entered the game third on the team in rebounding. . .UMass committed only 14 turnovers. . .both UMass and Vermont have lost to Maine this season. . .yesterday was UMass Alumni Day with several former players in attendance. . .the UMass game against Penn State scheduled for January 2 at the Cage has been changed to January 4 at 12:30. . .the UMass bench scored 32 points against Vermont. . .Matthews is 15-of-16 from the line this season. . .she is averaging a team-high 15 points-per-game. . .Burtoft is averaging 10 rebounds-per-game.

UMass (85) Christel Zullo 9-12 1-3 19, Juanita Matthews 5-12, 6-8 16, Tara Lewis 5-10 2-5 12, Barbara Hebel 4-9 0-0 8, Beth Wilbor 2-4 4-4 8, Susan Burtoft 3-6 0-0 6, Karen Damminger 3-5 0-0 6, Jerrie Bernier 2-5 0-0 4, Joann Dupuis 1-1 1-2 3, Rebecca Kucks 1-3 0-0 2, Mary Marquedant 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 35-67 15-22 85.

Vermont (64) Joann McKay 10-18 1-6 21, Debbie Lewis 4-9 6-7 14, Cherly Rich 5-11 2-2 12, Kris Gladu 5-9 0-0 10, Laura Thibodeau 1-10 1-2 3, Allison Kaigle 1-4 0-0 2, Andrea Hill 0-3, 2-2 2, Patty Heffernan 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 26-64 12-19 64.

UMass	41	44	85
Vermont	33	31	64

Fouled Out: Gladu. Total Fouls: UMass—18, Vermont—18. Rebounds: UMass—45 (Matthews 13), Vermont—32 (Gladu 10). Assists: UMass—23 (Zullo 8), Vermont 15 (Lewis 6). Technicals: none. Attendance: 150.

Collegian photo by Derek Roberts

Senior forward Karen Damminger (22) goes high over Vermont's Kris Gladu in action Sunday at the Cage. The Minutewomen rolled, 85-64.

Platek, McKeown selected all-NE

Univesity of Massachusetts senior co-captain Paul Platek and freshman linebacker John McKeown were named to the all-New England football team.

Platek, a two-year starter at strong safety for the Minutemen, recorded 97 tackles this past season, intercepted a team-high four passes and recovered two fumbles. He also returned 20 punts for a 6.5 yard average and made a game-saving interception in UM's final game, a 21-17 win at New Hampshire that gave UMass a 7-4 record.

McKeown, a red-shirt freshman that was moved to inside linebacker from fullback, made a team-high 136 tackles to lead a stingy UMass defense that allowed only 11.5 points-per-game. He also recovered four fumbles, had one interception, broke up three passes and made six tackles for a loss.

All New England collegiate teams were eligible to nominate players, including Boston College and the Ivy League schools. Platek and McKeown were named to the team ahead of players that were named first-team Yankee Conference by the league's coaches. All of the YC schools are in New England.

—PETER ABRAHAM

UMass hits the road

Minutemen to battle Terriers

By PETER ABRAHAM
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, still smarting from Thursday's loss to New Hampshire, take on Boston University tonight in Boston.

The Minutemen, 1-1, fell to the Wildcats 57-54 at the Cage, losing a nine point lead in the process. Against the Terriers tonight (8 p.m. in the Walter Brown Arena), UMass will contend with the best team it has faced this season.

BU, 1-0, is under first-year head coach Mike Jarvis, Pat Ewing's high school mentor at Cambridge, Ringe and Latin. The Terriers, 15-15 last season, easily defeated Lowell in their opener.

"BU's a good team, we can't afford to play against them like we did tonight," said UMass coach Ron Gerlufsen after the loss to UNH. "They have a new coach, some strong players and have given us trouble sience I've been here. It'll be a tough game."

The Terriers beat UMass in Springfield last season, 71-70 in triple overtime. The year prior, BU was a 91-65 winner. UMass leads the season series 31-26, but hasn't won since 1977.

The Terriers are led by Paul Hendricks (16 points-per-game last season) and Tom Ivey (8.4 ppg in 84-85).

UMass, after looking tentative against Merrimack in its opener (a 59-56 win), came out aggressive against UNH and took a 27-19 halftime lead. But the Minutemen lost their rhythm in the second half and were felled by the balanced Wildcats.

Sophomore guard Lorenzo Sutton was the only Minuteman in double figures with 22 points on nine-of-12 shooting from the floor. He is averaging 18.5 points this season.

Sutton will team with junior captain Carl Smith (8.5 ppg and 5.5 assists-per-game) in the UMass backcourt. The frontcourt will see a variety of the players seeing action with senior center Tom Emerson and freshman forwards Duane Chase and David Brown expected to start.

Freshman Sean Mosby and junior Ben Jones have played well for UMass off the bench. Against New Hampshire, Gerlufsen played most of his young players as nine players saw at least 12 minutes of action.

Sports at a glance

UMass Schedule:
Today:
Men's Basketball: at Boston University (Walter Brown Arena), 7:30 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily A REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATION NEW ENGLAND S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXV, Issue 60 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST (545-3500) Tuesday, December 3, 1985

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

LONG HOURS BEGIN — With finals exams under two weeks away, students, like these yesterday in Goodell Library, are starting to study as the semester draws to a close.

Student regent bill approved by House

By STEVE HIGGINS
Collegian Staff

Representatives yesterday passed a bill calling for placement of a student trustee on the state Board of Regents of Higher Education.

The bill, which also recognizes state school student governments as official representives of the student body, is expected to be signed by Governor Michael Dukakis by the end of the week.

Because of an "emergency preamble" attatched to the bill, which eliminates the usual 90 day interim before a signed bill becomes effective, state students would begin selecting candidates for the board immediately after its signing by Dukakis. If the candidate selection goes as planned, a student trustee could be placed on the board July 1.

"It (the bill) is well written, it does exactly what we want it to do," bill co-sponsor and University of Massachusetts student senate member Clare Bouzan said.

A provision in the bill calls for the establishment of a student advisory committee, consisting of one student trustee from each of the 28 state schools of higher education. The committee would be charged with forwarding three candidate recommendations to the Governor, who would make final selection of the board member.

Under the bill, the student regent would serve a one-year term. The regent for the first one-year term must be selected from a state community college. The state colleges and state university's would be represented, respectively, to the following year-long terms.

The House dropped a third part of the bill, which was approved by the state senate on Oct. 22, allowing student governments to organize collectively to lobby the state without registering as official lobbyists with the state.

That part of the bill would have made "it very clear that it is within the law for a student government or school trustees to approve funding of state student organizations," State Student Association of Massachusetts (SSAM) President Mike Ferrigno said. Ferrigno is a principal supporter of that provision.

But the proposal was held back by the co-chairman of the Joint Committee on Education, Rep. Nicholas Paleologas, D-Woburn, because it was added to bill before receiving approval by the education committee, Bouzan said.

Ferrigno said that he is "very confident that section three will be passed early next session" after approval by the education committee.

Administration controls fund

By JOEL P. COFFIDIS
Collegian Staff

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson said yesterday that it is clear to him that the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees hold Chancellor Joseph Duffey and himself accountable for the Student Activity Trust Fund.

Madson said that because of this, he thinks there is no conflict with any existing trustee documents which outline fiscal control of the trust fund.

Madson's statement follows much controversy that has arisen since he and Student Activities Director Randy Donant issued a memorandum Nov. 19, giving Donant and Madson more student budgetary responsibilty.

Student Government officials have unanimously opposed the memo's actions, and a rally protesting the administration's attempt at gaining more responsibility has been scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Thursday in front of the Student Union Building.

The trust fund, to which each student pays $88 per year, is a resource for the SGA to provide services, activities, and advocacy to the student community. Since the fund is comprised of student funds, SGA officials said, the administration's actions are "a direct violation of students' rights."

Madson, citing the SGA's reaction, said "it's obviously an emotional issue and that's unfortunate." He said he would like to get to managing the budget instead of arguing over the authority issue.

"People have to accept the fact of the matter that a mandatory fee has to be administered through the campus administration to the trustees," Madson said. "I hope we can get beyond that and work on doing what the fee has been established to do."

Madson said if the students don't accept his and Donant's prescribed guidelines, there could always be the option of students changing the SGA system. He referred to a system used in some California colleges where the student government is a separate incorporated entity.

The student government under that plan, Madson said, would be fiscally independent of the administration. However, he said he would prefer that the SGA cooperate now "in managing the trust fund in a postive and responsible way."

INSIDE

UMass professor off to Africa...3
Nursing is needed.....5
BU holds off Minutemen.....12

"If it hadn't been for the snow, we would've lost by more."
—Tampa Bay coach Leeman Bennett Sunday after Green Bay beat the Bucs 21-0 in 15 inches of snow in a near-blizzard in Green Bay.

Student group calls MASSPIRG fee unfair

Mounts a petition drive to abolish fee

By BETHANNE MOSKOV
Collegian Staff

A new campus group maintains an optional $2 fee that appears on each semester's bill is unfair recognition of a student organization and is mounting a petition drive to abolish the fee.

The two-week old group, Students for Participatory Democracy, is calling for a petition that they hope will lead to the formation of equivalent channels of funding for all student organizations by removing the fee.

The group is looking to eliminate the $2 fee that supports Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) and the optional fees for the State Student Senate Association of Massachusetts.

A petition has been circulated by Students for Participatory Democracy asking for the removal of both fees from the tuition bill. The group has already obtained 1000 signatures, which will enable the fee question to appear on a referendum on Dec. 11 and 12.

The targeted $2 fee supports the University chapter of MASSPIRG, which works on consumer and environmental issues and is one of many national public interest groups. MASSPIRG said that approximately 80 percent of the students have voted by referendum, over the past four years, in support of the organization and the optional fee.

"The fee was established as a result of students signing a referendum in support of MASSPIRG. It wasn't because the organization wanted special means to obtain our funding", Rayna Sargent, campus chairwoman of the organization said.

However, Students for Participatory Democracy (SPD) said it is not fair for the other 58 student organizations to have to go through the Student Government Association for funding, while MASSPIRG is funded separately.

"We are not attacking the organization or what it stands for but we are questioning their method of funding," Tony Rudy, SPD member said. "We feel that it is not right for the students to shoulder the responsibility of paying this added fee when no other organization gets the priviledge of separate funding", he said.

According to Richele Sargent, student member of MASSPIRG, an attack on funding is an attack on the issues. "Without the money we receive we wouldn't be able to address issues like world hunger and acid rain. We are a non-partician, public interest group hoping to keep stable funding. We aren't looking for a partician fight", she said.

"We have already shown that the students support us by the large percentage of voter response on our referendum vote which takes place every two to four years", Richele said.

Students for Participatory Democracy is also seeking to have the optional State Student Association of Massachusetts (SSAM) fee removed from the semester bill. The fee, which was approved by the Board of Trustees at their last meeting, is $2 for the spring semester and $1 dollar for following semesters.

The SSAM fee, which would take effect this spring, helps pay for state students lobbying in Boston on behalf of the students.

"I want to question the qualifications of Students for Participatory Democracy. They are very small and are not an officially registered student organization", Rayna said adding that this is not the first time the funding for MASSPIRG has been questioned.

If the students vote on the referendum to abolish the fees, a recomendation will go to the Trustees in April to have the fees removed from the bill beginning in fall of 1986.

Digest
By Associated Press

AP Laserphoto

ALL THAT SNOW — Midwest citizens have been shoveling themselves out of a weekend blizzard like this one that dumped 11 inches in Central Iowa. The strorm stranded travelers and closed businesses and that cold air is headed East. Weather, page 9.

Ver reinstated as chief

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos reinstated Fabian C. Ver as armed forces chief yesterday, hours after a court acquitted the general, 24 other soldiers and a civilian of assassinating opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

In their 90-page decision, the three civilian judges accepted a version Marcos gave a day after Aquino was killed Aug. 21, 1983, while stepping off a commercial airliner that brought him home from a voluntary exile in the United States- that the assassin was Rolando Galman.

Galman, a purported communist, was killed by soldiers immediately after Aquino was shot.

Ver, an old friend and confidant of the president, was on leave of absence pending the court verdict.

Marcos signed a law today setting a special presidential election for Feb. 7 that may be a contest between him and Aquino's widow, Corazon.

Mrs. Aquino called a news conference for later today, and supporters expect her to accept the opposition's nomination.

The president's foes had predicted the acquittal, but there had been rumors some defendants might be found guilty of negligence, a minor offense.

Mrs. Aquino said the verdict did not matter because Marcos was her "No. 1 suspect" in the death of her husband, who was Marcos' main political foe.

Peres apology ends threat

JERUSALEM (AP)— Prime Minister Shimon Peres said yesterday that his government's apology to Washington ended the threat to relations caused by the arrest of a U.S. Navy analyst accused of spying for Israel.

Peres told a closed meeting with visiting American Jewish leaders that he coordinated the apology in advance with Secretary of State George P. Shultz during a lengthy telephone conversation Sunday morning, Israel officials said.

They said the prime minister reported that he and Shultz "reached complete agreement and understanding" about the case of Jonathan J. Pollard, arrested Nov. 21 and charged with selling secret documents to Israel.

Today's Staff

Night Editor Gerry deSimas
Copy Editor Kathy Hart
Layout Technician Peter Soderberg
Photo Technician Maria Bull
Production Supervisor Matkins
Production: Leslie Nakajima, Conor Plunkett, Danielle Carbonneau, Kelly Sieger

HOLIDAY TRAVELERS COLLEGE STUDENTS...

RENT A CAR WITH CASH!

Try Our WEEKEND SPECIALS
Credit Cards Accepted
Daily Rate $18.95
Unlimited Miles

FRI.-MON. NOON 700 MILES FREE... $50.00
FRI.-TUES. NOON 900 MILES FREE... $65.00
FRI.-WED. NOON 1,000 MILES FREE $80.00

CALL THE OFFICE NEAREST YOU:
★PAYLESS CAR RENTAL CORP. OF MASS. 782-7191
180 BOSTON RD., SPRINGFIELD, MA
★ECONO CAR OF LATHAM, 875 Albany-Shaker Rd., Latham, N.Y. (518) 783-1384
★ECONO CAR OF ALBANY, 666 Central Ave., Albany, N.Y. (518) 438-3601
★ECONO CAR OF SCHENECTADY, 1220 Sixth St., Schenectady, N.Y. (518) 372-0471
★PAYLESS CARS RENTALS OF SYRACUSE, 58 So. Bay Rd., Syracuse, N.Y. (315) 455-5821
Also Passenger Vans, Cargo Vans, Mini Vans. Call Today

America Needs A Hero For Every Age.

From the Revolutionary War to the War in Viet Nam, in national crises and natural disasters, the National Guard has always been ready when America called.

Today is no different. The Guard still needs the kind of people who know peace and freedom don't come cheap. Who are willing to stand up and be counted when the chips are down.

If you're one of them — and you've got two days a month and two weeks a year to invest in something important — we've got a job, a pay check, and some pretty attractive benefits waiting for you.

Talk to your local Army Guard recruiter today.

Because "hero" doesn't have to be just a word. It can be the face you see when you look in the mirror.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 586-4110
100%
FREE TUITION
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY National Guard
To any Massachusetts Funded College or University

Incredible Price Reduction on THE COMMODORE PLUS/4

HERE'S WHAT'S BUILT INTO THE COMMODORE PLUS/4.

Word processing, electronic spreadsheet, graphic plotting and file management certainly need no introduction. But a computer that has them all built-in certainly does.

With 64K of memory, 60K fully usable, full size typewriter keyboard, four separate cursor keys, high resolution color graphics, extended BASIC, split screen and windowing capabilities.

Write and edit letters, reports, papers and novels with the built-in word processor. Do the books, the budgets, the projections, profit/loss statements with the built-in spread sheet. Draw circles, boxes, complex shapes, images and combine them with text with the graphics program. Collect, store, organize and retrieve information such as mailing lists, inventories, personal files, business files and recipes with the file management program.

The Commodore PLUS/4. The first new computer that doesn't have one new thing about it. It has four.

CREDIT CARD ORDERS CALL
1-800-331-1750

COMMODORE PLUS 4 ORDER FORM (PLEASE PRINT)
ORDER DATE:
NAME:
ADDRESS:
CITY, STATE, ZIP:
DAYTIME PHONE: ( )
TO CHARGE ORDER:
American Express MasterCard Visa Diners Club
ACC NUMBER
EXP. DATE SIGNATURE
I HAVE ENCLOSED CHECK OR MONEY ORDER FOR $99.95 PLUS $10.00 FOR SHIPPING AND HANDLING
URBAN GENERAL CORP.
P.O. Box 3500, Dept. P4 W. Caldwell, NJ 07006

URBAN GENERAL CORPORATION

Ceiling tiles torn from tunnel

Car vandalized at Alumni stadium

The tunnel which runs between Bartlett and Herter Hall received over $200 in damages when ceiling tiles were ripped out and some of the insulation was removed. It was reported late Sunday night, University of Massachusetts police said.

In other police reports:

A car received $500 in damages when it was reported vandalized Monday morning in the Warren McGuirk alumni stadium, police said.

A water pipe (bong) containing marijuana residue was discovered Thursday in the dirt outside of Pierpont House, police said.

A wallet containing $216 was reported stolen Wednesday from the Textbook Annex. It had been stolen on Sept. 6 and was returned Wednesday from Goodell Library's lost and found, without the money, police said.

A walkman valued at $110 was reported stolen Wednesday afternoon from a room on the 15th floor of Kennedy Tower, police said.

Four hubcaps valued at $60 were reported stolen Wednesday afternoon from a 1967 Ford which was parked in the McGuirk Alumni stadium P lot, police said.

—JEANETTE DeFORGE

Collegian photo by Scott Maguire

LONELY VIGIL — Sheeba sits in the Student Union outside of Earthfoods waiting patiently for her owner to finish lunch, yesterday afternoon.

UMass dean goes to Africa

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

Larry Benedict, dean of Academic Support Services at the University of Massachusetts, is traveling to Africa this week as part of a four-man team which will be conducting workshops at the Somalia International University in Mogadishu, the capital of Somalia.

Benedict is one of four university administrators nationwide chosen by Creative Associates, Inc., a Washington, D.C. consulting firm which specializes in high education administration.

The workshops, conducted in the areas of enrollment management and current administrative practices in student affairs at colleges and universities in the U.S., are sponsored by the African bureau of the Agency for International Development (AID).

